

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH RAILROAD CASES.

A complete collection of all the railroad law as decided by the American, English and Canadian courts of last resort.

Elaborate notes to the more important cases. As a means of giving the working lawyer a full collection of all the cases on the subjects treated, together with able and judicious criticism upon the points presented, they are simply invaluable.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CORPORATION CASES.

This series presents a full collection of the cases in all the courts of last resort, both in America and England, on the law of private and municipal corporations other than railroad companies.

1.—SCOPE. Among the topics treated of will be the following:

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—Agency, Assessments, Building Associations, Dissolution of Corporations, Dividends and Earnings, Ecclesiastical and Religious Corporations, Elections, Mandamus, Officers, Organization, Powers, Stock and Stockholders, Taxation.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Assessments, Bonds, Powers, Ordinances, Poor Laws, Streets, Taxes, Intoxicating Liquors, Injuries to Person and Property, etc., etc.

2.—NOTES. The annotations are a special feature, being very full and exhaustive.

These works are issued in monthly Parts, each Part containing not less than 224 pages. Three Parts make a complete volume. When Part 3 is published, the Parts are returned to the publisher by the subscriber, and are bound in best law sheep and returned by mail WITHOUT CHARGE FOR BINDING. The subscription price is $4.50 per volume, including NOTES OF CASES.

EDWARD THOMPSON CO., Publishers,
Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

THE
AMERICAN AND ENGLISH
ENCYCLOPÆDIA
OF LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF CHARLES F. WILLIAMS, ASSISTED BY THOMAS J. MICHIE.

VOLUME XXIII.

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON COMPANY, LAW PUBLISHERS, 1893.

COPYRIGHT 1893,

BY EDWARD THOMPSON CO.

All Rights Reserved.

L 5368

FEB 29 1932

Y20001 0907

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOL. XXIII.

Stare Decisis,	JAMES H. FLINT, of the Boston Bar.
State Lands,	W. MEADE FLETCHER, of the Montana Bar.
States,	DAVID S. GARLAND, of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Stations,	H. DENT MINOR, of the Memphis Bar.
Statutes,	EDITORIAL STAFF of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Stay of Proceedings,	W. H. MICHAEL, of the St. Paul Bar; and of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Stock,	CHARLES S. LOBINGIER, of the Omaha Bar.
Stock-Brokers,	W. H. MICHAEL, of the St. Paul Bar; and of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Stock Exchange,	W. H. MICHAEL, of the St. Paul Bar; and of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Stockholders.	CHARLES S. LOBINGIER, of the Omaha Bar.
Stoppage in Transitu,	E. T. BOGGS, of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Street Railways,	H. DENT MINOR, of the Memphis Bar.
Words and Phrases,	THOMAS J. MICHIE, of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

- SPELLING, 1
SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS, 5
 Spile, 15
SPIRITS; SPIRITUOUS. See Fermented; Intoxicating Liquors, Searches and Seizures.
SPIRITUALISM. See False Pretences; Testamentary Capacity; Undue Influence.
SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION. See Actions; Justice of the Peace.
SPOILATION. See Alteration.
 Spring, 15
SPRINGING USE. See Uses.
 Spurious, 16
 Square, 16
 Squatter, 16
SQUIRE. See Esquire.
 Stab, 17
 Stable, 17
 Stack, 17
STAGE. See Theaters.
 Stage Coach, 17
 Stakeholder, 18
 Stale Demand, 18
STALL. See Markets.
 Stamps, 18
 Stand, Standing, 18
STANDING ASIDE. See Jury and Jury Trial.
 Standing By, 19
STARE DECISIS, 19
 Start, 41
STATE COURTS. See Courts; Jurisdiction; Municipal Courts; Surrogate; United States Courts.
STATED ACCOUNT. See Account.
STATE LANDS, 42
 Stateiment, 72
STATE PRISON. See Prisons.
STATES, 72
 Stationary, 113
 Stationery, 113
STATIONS (RAILROAD), 114
STATUTE MILE. See Mile.
STATUTE OF DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION. See Succession.
STATUTE OF FRAUDS. See Frauds (Statute of).
STATUTE OF JEOPAILS. See Amendment; Jeofails; Pleading.
STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. See Limitation of Actions.
STATUTE OF USES. See Real Property; Trusts; Uses.
STATUTE OF WILLS. See Wills.
STATUTES, 140
 Stay Law, 519
STAY OF PROCEEDINGS, 520
 Steal, 555
 Steamship, 555
 Steer, 555
STENOGRAPHERS, 556
STEP-CHILDREN. See Child; Grandchild; Issue.
STIPULATED DAMAGES. See Liquidated Damages.
STIPULATION (IN ADMIRALTY), 567
STIRPES. See Per; Succession; Title.
STOCK, 582
STOCK-BROKERS, 699
STOCK EXCHANGE, 748
STOCKHOLDERS, 776
 Stock in Trade, 899
STOCK YARDS, 900
 Stone, 902
 Stoppage, 903
STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU, 903
STOPPING PLACE. See Stations; Usual.
 Store, 934
STORE ORDER ACTS, 935
 Storm, 937
 Story, 938
STOWAGE. See Ships and Shipping.
STRADDLE. See Gambling Contracts.
 Stranding, 938
 Stranger, 939
 Strategy, 939
 Straw Bail, 939
 Stray, 939
 Stream, 939
STREET RAILWAYS, 940

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

SPELLING—(See also INDICTMENT, vol. 10, p. 548; NAME, vol. 16, p. 122).—The formation of words by letters; orthography.

Incorrect spelling does not vitiate a written instrument, if the intention clearly appears.¹ This rule applies with full force to the written verdict of a jury, it having been frequently held that when the sense is clear, neither bad spelling nor ungrammatical findings avoid the verdict.²

1. Black's L. Dict.; Bouv. L. Dict.; State v. Hedge, 6 Ind. 330.

Incorrect Spelling Disregarded.—Incorrect spelling was disregarded in the following cases: "Octagenta," "Septemgentia," "Sewtene Pounds," cited James Osborn's Case, 10 Rep. 133a; "quadrans," Cromwell v. Grunsden, Salk. 462; 1 Ld. Ray. 335; 5 Mod. 278; "Tenerie and Obligarie," Dodson v. Kayes, Yelv. 193; "nobules" for "nobilibus," Matthew v. Purchins, Cro. Jac. 203; "threty-two ponds," for thirty-two pounds, Hulbert v. Long, Cro. Jac. 607; "Joaem," without any dash over it, for "Johannem," "quinginta," Downs v. Hathwaite, Cro. Car. 418; "Terdecem," Hopehill v. Searle, Cro. Car. 386; "Septuagintis" for "Septingentis," Walter v. Pigot, Moore 645; see also Cro. El. 896; "Octogessim," Moore 864; see other cases collected, 2 Rolle Abr., p. 146 et seq., tit. "Obligation."

In Hogans v. Carruth, 19 Fla. 90, the court, by Westcott, J., said: "As to the mistake in spelling the word presence, it is entirely immaterial. . . . The law fortunately is far from being strict in requiring any great accuracy or precision in respect to what is written, so far as the rules of grammar or orthography are concerned, or as to the chirography or evenness of the page or the straightness of the lines."

In Watters v. Bredin, 70 Pa. St. 237, after reciting a deed the court said: "I have omitted the inaccuracies in spelling, for mala grammatica non vitiat chartam."

Cases Where the Badly Spelled Word Was Held to Avoid the Deed.—"Teneri in terengentate liberis," Hills v. Cooper, Cro. Jac. 603; "Octigent," Fitzhughe's Case, Hob. 19; "Quinquagant," Parry v. Dale, Yelv. 95.

See as to the effect of bad spelling, whereby it is doubtful what is meant, Fielder v. Troy, Sty. 257.

2. Snyder v. U. S., 112 U. S. 216; Koontz v. State, 41 Tex. 570; Haney v. State, 2 Tex. App. 504; Krebs v. State, 3 Tex. App. 349; Taylor v. State, 5 Tex. App. 569; McCoy v. State, 7 Tex. App. 379; Pepper v. Harris, 78 N. Car. 71.

Thus in Hoy v. State, 11 Tex. App. 32, where a verdict of guilty was found, the jury assessed the defendant's punishment at "two years in the State penitentiary." The court, by White, J., said: "As to the verdict, the misspelling of the word 'penitentiary' is upon a par with the spelling of the same word in the verdict in the case of McMillan v. State, 7 Tex. App. 100, in which it was held that misspelling does not vitiate a verdict, when no doubt can be entertained as to the words intended, or as to their meaning."

In McCoy v. State, 7 Tex. App. 379, the verdict assessed the prisoner's

The rule of idem sonans has received exhaustive treatment in another article.¹ In addition to the numerous cases there cited as illustrative of the doctrine, the following lists are appended.²

punishment at "a five years in the State prison." This was held a sufficient verdict.

In Wooldridge v. State, 13 Tex. App. 443; 44 Am. Rep. 708, it was held that a verdict in a murder case which read, "We the jury find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree," was insufficient, illegal, and would not support a judgment of conviction. The case has been much criticised. See 27 Alb. Law J., pp. 341, 381, 422; 16 Cent. L. J. 361, 378, 415.

In Walker v. State, 13 Tex. App. 618, the court held the verdict of "guilty of mrder in the first degree" to be valid. The court recalls this decision with its decision in the case just cited as follows: "By the ninth assignment of error the sufficiency of the verdict as returned into court, and upon which the judgment of conviction is based, is called in question. This verdict as we copy it from the judgment entry, the original not having been sent up with the record, reads as follows: 'We the jurors finde the defendant guilty and of mrder in the first degree, and assess his confinement in the penitentiary for life.' It is objected to this verdict, (1) that it finds defendant guilty of no offense known to the law; and (2) that it does not assess the punishment as required by law. It will be perceived that in the verdict the defendant is found guilty of 'mrder,' the letter 'u' being left out of the word which the jury evidently intended to use. In the Wooldridge case, decided by this court at the present term, ante, 443, the rules governing verdicts in murder cases were elaborately discussed, and it is unnecessary for us to reiterate them. In that case the word 'fist' was used in the verdict, instead of the word 'first,' in finding the degree of the murder. It was held that these two words were well known and commonly used words, having entirely different meanings, and not sounding alike, and that the one could not be substituted for the other, or construed to mean the other, and that the verdict was insufficient. It was, however, expressly stated in the opinion in that case, that as the word 'fist' used in the verdict did not have the sound of the word 'first,' which should have been used, the question of idem sonans was eliminated from the case, and was not considered. In the case before us the question of idem sonans does arise, and directly affects the verdict. If the word 'mrder' used in the verdict is not idem sonans with the word 'murder,' then manifestly this verdict is insufficient and must be set aside. But if the words are idem sonans, then the verdict must be sustained, notwithstanding the bad spelling of the word in the verdict, for it is well settled that incorrect orthography or ungrammatical language will not vitiate a verdict. Taylor v. State, 5 Tex. App. 569; Koontz v. State, 41 Tex. 570; McMillan v. State, 7 Tex. App. 100; Curry v. State, 7 Tex. App. 91. In applying the doctrine of idem sonans, the rule is that if the words may be sounded alike without doing violence to the power of the letters found in the variant orthography, then the words are idem sonans, and the variance is immaterial. Henry v. State, 7 Tex. App. 388; Ward v. State, 28 Ala. 53; Gresham v. Walker, 10 Ala. 370; Gahan v. People, 58 Ill. 160. Applying this rule to the word 'mrder,' used in the verdict, we hold it to be idem sonans with the word 'murder,' as properly spelled, and that the variance in the orthography of the two is not a material one, but that their sound is so nearly the same, when pronounced, that there is scarcely, if in fact, any difference. They are not different words correctly spelled and not sounding alike, as in the Wooldridge case, before referred to, but are in fact the same word differently spelled, but sounding alike. We think also that the doctrine of idem sonans applies to and governs verdicts in the same manner, and to the same extent, that it does in other matters. Haney v. State, 2 Tex. App. 504; Taylor v. State, 5 Tex. App. 569; Huffman v. Com., 6 Rand. (Va.) 685; Williams v. State, 5 Tex. App. 226; State v. Smith, 33 La. Ann. 1414." See also NAME, vol. 16, p. 122.

Indictments.—The effect of misspelling in an indictment is fully treated under the title INDICTMENT, vol. 10, p. 548.

1. See NAME, vol. 16, p. 122.

2. Idem Sonans.—Abbotsan and Abbasan, Cotton's Case, Cro. Eliz. 258;

Adderson and Anderson, Van Pelt v. Pugh, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 210; Augustine and Augustina, Com. v. Desmarteau, 16 Gray (Mass.) 15; Aramanti and Amaranti, Musquez v. State, 41 Tex. 226; Bagswell and Bagwell, Case v. Bartholow, 21 Kan. 300; Baswell and Basil, Hyde v. Watson, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 670; Berry and Barry, Rateree v. State, 53 Ga. 570; Beton and Belton, Belton v. Fisher, 44 Ill. 32; Biddulph and Puthuff, Pillsbury v. Dugan, 9 Ohio 120; 34 Am. Dec. 427; Blackman and Blackburn, Miller v. State, 53 Miss. 403; Boswell and Roswell, Brookings v. Dearmond, 27 Ga. 58; Braddy and Brady, Dickerson v. Brady, 23 Ga. 161; Buter and Butler, Reeves v. State, 20 Ala. 33; Byles and Bayles, Hoagland v. Culvert, Spenc. 288; Byrne and Burns, State v. Burns, 8 Nev. 251; Cahew and Cahill, State v. Thompson, 20 N. H. 250; Corrigan and Corgan, Prince v. McLean, 17 U. C. Q. B. 463; Coonrod and Conrad, Carpenter v. State, 8 Mo. 291; Currier and Kiah, Tibbets v. Kiah, 2 N. H. 557; Daniel and David, Jackson v. Stanley, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 133; David and David, Com. v. Riggs, 14 Gray (Mass.) 376; 77 Am. Dec. 333; Davies v. Pratt, 16 C. B. 586; 81 E. C. L. 586; and Davids, Taylor v. Com., 20 (Va.) 825; Danden and Darden, v. Turner, 25 La. Ann. 573; De and De Hurst, Mortimer v. Oger, Eliz. 258; Domick and Domeck, v. Com., 5 Bush (Ky.) 376; Douglas and Dugald, Barnes v. People, 18 Ill. 52; Edward Charles and Charles Edward, Hands v. Clement, 11 M. & W. 816; Edward E. T. and E. E. T., Union Bank v. Tillard, 26 Md. 446; Edward and Edwin, Mann v. Birchard, 40 Vt. 326; Grant v. Clapp, 106 Mass. 453; Elbertson and Elbertson, Elbertson v. Richards, 42 N. J. L. 70; Ellen and Helen, Taylor v. Com., 20 Gratt. (Va.) 829; Erlin and Erlwin, Cromwell v. Grundsen, Salk. 462; Farely and Farley, Leonard v. Wilson, 2 C. & M. 589; Flory and Florez, State v. Florez, 5 La. Ann. 429; Foster and Forster, Rutland v. Forster, Cro. Jac. 77; Franciscus and Francis, Griffith v. Middleton, Cro. Jac. 425; Garret and Jared, Graham v. Roberts, 1 Head (Tenn.) 56; Gigger and Jiger, Com. v. Jennings, 121 Mass. 47; 23 Am. Rep. 249; Gardiner and Gardner, and Gravaier and Gravier, Rector v. Taylor, 12 Ark. 128; Harman and Herman, Kahn v. Herman, 3 Ga. 266; Hopper and Harper, Jester v.

Hopper, 13 Ark. 43; Harris and Harrison, State v. France, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 434; Henderson and Henry, Henry v. Curry, 1 Abb. Adm. 433; Hubble and Hubbles, Cotton v. State, 4 Tex. 260; Hudson and Hutson, Chapman v. State, 18 Ga. 736; Hutchinson and Hutcheson, State v. Stedman, 7 Port. (Ala.) 495; Janes and James, Janes v. Whitbread, 11 C. B. 406; 73 E. C. L. 406; Jna. and Jno., U. S. v. Hinman, Baldw. (U. S.) 292; Joan and Jane, Griffith v. Middleton, Cro. Jac. 425; Keeland and Kneeland, Hammond v. Reddin, Dudley (Ga.) 177; Land and Lance, Davenport v. State, 38 Ga. 184; Lington and Lincoln, Armstrong v. Colby, 47 Vt. 359; Litherbarrow and Letherbarrow, Letherbarrow v. Ward, 5 Jur. 388; Little and Lytle, Lytle v. People, 47 Ill. 422; Littlemore and Lidamore, Parker v. People, 97 Ill. 32; Loyons and Lyons, Roe v. Doe, 32 Ga. 39; Lutle and Little, O'Neil v. State, 48 Ga. 66; McConnellsburg and Connelsburg, Gibson v. Gibson, 20 Pa. St. 9; Margaret N. and Margaret Ann, Dilts v. Kinney, 15 N. J. L. 130; Malay and Mealy, Com. v. Donovan, 13 Allen (Mass.) 571; May and Mayo, Mayo v. State, 7 Tex. App. 342; Mawre and Moore, Countess of Rutland's Case, 5 Co. 42; Montague and Montague, State v. Montague, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 257; Mordern and Modern, Langdale v. People, 100 Ill. 263; Moss and Morse, Litchfield v. Farmington, 7 Conn. 108; Ogilbee and Ogilbee, Hamilton v. Langley, 1 McMull. (S. Car.) 498; O'Mara and O'Meara, O'Meara v. North America Min. Co., 2 Nev. 112; Palus Cheal and Paulus Cheale, Codwell's Case, 5 Co. 42; Peirs and Peter, Griffith v. Middleton, Cro. Jac. 425; Peregran and Peregrine, Dunn v. Clements, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 58; Pettis and Pittis, Hutto v. State, 7 Tex. App. 44; Pillsby and Pillsbury, Pillsbury v. Dugan, 9 Ohio 117; 34 Am. Dec. 427; Redus and Reder, Hunter v. State, 8 Tex. App. 75; Robert Rodger Strang and Robert Roger Strong, In re Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 344; 100 E. C. L. 342; Roffenberg and Rifenberg, Whitaker v. Wheeler, 44 Ill. 440; Samul and Samuel, Fenn v. Alston, 11 Mod. 284; Seam and Couture, Augur v. Couture, 68 Me. 427; Sarmin and Sarmin, Cull v. Sarmin, 3 Lev. 66; Seden and Soden, Wyatt v. Barwell, 19 Ves. 435; Shipcott and Shapcott, Bowen v. Shapcott, 1 East 542; Sin Groon and Lin Goon, People v. McNealy, 17 Cal.

332; Spangle and Spangler, In re Spangler, 11 Mich. 298; Stoydell and Stogdell, Dyer v. People, 84 Ill. 624; Stormer and Stermer, Sample v. Robb, 16 Pa. St. 305; Symons and Symonds, Allen v. Symonds, 4 Mod. 347; Townsen and Townsend, Townsend v. Ratcliff, 50 Tex. 148; Watford and Watford, Hayes v. State, 58 Ga. 35; West Route and Western Route, Huddleson v. Reynolds, 8 Gill (Md.) 332; 1 Am. Dec. 702; Westley and Wesley, Proudfoot v. Lount, 9 Grant's Ch. 70; Weston and Wason, Symmers v. Wason, 1 B. & P. 105; Watson and Watson, Toole v. Peterson, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 180; William and Wendelin, Hommel v. Devinney, 39 Mich. 522; William Hamilton M. and William Henry M., Newton v. Maxwell, 2 C. & J. 215; Witter and Witte, Witte v. Meyer, 11 Wis. 295.

Not Idem Sonans.—Asher and Ashley, Bates v. State Bank, 7 Ark. 394; 46 Am. Dec. 293; Agnes and Anne, 2 Roll. Abr. 135; Adderley and Adderby, Adderby v. Bouthby, Mo. 407; Alvers and Albers, Albers v. Whitney, 1 Story (U. S.) 319; Aaron and Lamont, Barnes v. Simms, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 392; 49 Am. Dec. 435; Absolem Baxter and Absalom Backus, Final v. Backus, 18 Mich. 218; Alexander and Andrew, Henderson v. Ballantine, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 549; Ammon and Amann, Amann v. State, 76 Ill. 188; Ap Pell and Ap Bell, Floyd v. Bethell, Danv. Abr. 331; Barent and Barnard, Duncommun v. Hysingen, 14 Ill. 249; Barham and Barnham, Kirk v. Suttle, 6 Ala. 681; Baskervill and Baskerfield, Macduncon v. Stafford, 2 Roll. Abr. 168; Bernard and Berend, Wilks v. Lorck, 2 Taunt. 399; Bill and Bull, Bull v. Traynham, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 433; Bolling and Bowling, Com. v. Kearns, 1 Va. Cas. 109; Brow and Brown, Brown v. Marqueze, 30 Tex. 77; Byrly and Byerly, U. S. v. Wilson, Baldw. (U. S.) 83; Carlton and Colton, Colton v. Stanwood, 67 Me. 25; Carrigan and Kerriken, Kerriken v. Copeland, 3 Kerr 567; Cocker and Cocken, Finch v. Cocken, 2 C. M. & R. 196; Cousin and Cozen, Mariot v. Mascoll, And. 212; Crouch and Couch, Whitwell v. Bennett, 3 B. & P. 559; Dunlair and Dunbar, Breyfogle v. Beckley, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 264; Ebenezer and Edward, Slasson v. Brown, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 416; Edward and Edmund, Watkins v. Oliver, Cro. Jac. 558; Latham's Case, 1 P. R.

(Can.) 91; but see Flood v. Randall, 72 Me. 439; Middleton v. Findla, 25 Cal. 76; Elisha and Ezra, Doughty v. Conover, 42 N. J. L. 197; Elisha Davidson and Elijah B. Davison, Mead v. State, 26 Ohio St. 505; Emeline and Evelina, Scott v. Ely, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 557; Elizabeth and Isabel, 1 And. 212; Farrow and Farrar, Farrar v. Fairbanks, 53 Me. 143; Favers and Faver, Faver v. Robinson, 46 Tex. 204; Flory and Fleurer, Imhoff v. Fleurer, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 35; Frances and Francis, Anonymous, 1 Moore 126; Gabriel Carter and Carter Gabriel, Collins v. State, 43 Tex. 577; see Reg. v. James, 2 Cox C. C. 227; Goodwright and Goodnight, Cherry v. Fergeson, 2 McMull. (S. Car.) 15; Grimanda and Grimalda, Hayney v. State, 5 Ark. 72; Hudgins and Hudgson, McClellan v. State, 32 Ark. 609; Hudson and Jones, and Hudson and James, Gayle v. Hudson, 10 Ala. 116; Humphreys and Humphrey, Humphrey v. Whitten, 17 Ala. 30; Johua and Joshua, Boren v. State Bank, 8 Ark. 500; Jonathan McCraver and John McCravey, McCravey v. Cox, 24 Ark. 574; J. Sheppherd Diggs and James Shepard Diggs, Diggs v. State, 49 Ala. 311; John Thomas and James Thomas, Coles v. Gum, 8 Moore 526; see Garner v. Weller, 11 Moore 457; John Henry Oviatt and John Hilder Oviatt, Thompson v. Oviatt, 2 Allen (N. B.) 118; Josias and Josiah, Johnson v. Cooper, 5 Moore 472; King and Ring, Anonymous, 1 East. 180 n.; Lemuel and Samuel, State v. Moffit, 5 Ohio 358; Jennings v. Wood, 20 Ohio 261; McGlenn and Glenn, Martin v. State, 16 Tex. 240; McMickle and Mickle, Fenton v. Perkins, 3 Mo. 144; McKee and McRee, McRee v. Brown, 45 Tex. 503; Mayo and Mayhew, Merrick v. Mayhue, 40 Mich. 196; Melvil and Melvin, Melvin v. Fisher, 8 N. H. 406; Michael and Mitchell, McGuire v. State, 35 Miss. 366; Pike and Pite, Barnes v. Simms, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 392; 49 Am. Dec. 435; Prison and Brison, State v. Huffman, Add. (Pa.) 141; Quartus and Gerardus, Mann v. Carley, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 148; Richard James and James Richard, Jones v. Macquillin, 5 T. R. 195; see In re Crawford, 1 M. & C. 240; Robert and Robinson, Dulany v. Norwood, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 496; Rodgers and Rodger, McDonald v. Rodger, 9 Grant's Ch. 75; Rufus and Russell, Pitts v. Brown 49 Vt. 86; 24 Am.

SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS.—(See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 518; TRUSTS.)

- | | |
|--|---|
| I. Definition, 5.
 II. Jurisdictions Allowing, 5.
 III. Jurisdictions Disallowing, 10.
 1. Generally, 10.
 2. For the Benefit of Several, 11.
 3. Arbitrary Power of Application in Trustees, 11. | IV. Jurisdictions in Which Statutory Regulations Exist, 12.
 V. Jurisdictions in Which the Status Is Undetermined, 14.
 VI. Restraint on Alienation, How Far Allowable—Principles Governing, 14. |
|--|---|

I. DEFINITION.—Spendthrift trust is the term commonly applied to those trusts that are created with a view of providing a fund for the maintenance of another, and at the same time securing it against his own improvidence or incapacity for self-protection. Provisions against alienation of the trust fund by the voluntary act of the beneficiary, or in invitum, by his creditors, are the usual incidents of such trusts.¹

II. JURISDICTIONS ALLOWING.—There is authority in the United States for the doctrine that the power of alienation is not an essential incident to an equitable estate for life, and that the owner of property, in the free exercise of his will in disposing of it, may do so in such a manner as to secure its enjoyment to the beneficiary without making it alienable by him, or chargeable with his debts, and that when this clearly appears to be the intention of the author of the trust, it must be effectuated by the courts.² And, generally speaking, such intent need not be

Rep. 114; Samuel and Stephen, People v. Hughes, 41 Cal. 234; Samuel S. G. and Daniel S. G., Griswold v. Sedgwick, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 456; see Roe v. Derys, Cro. Car. 563; Semons and Semon v. Hill, 7 Ark. 70; Seymour and Seigmund, Scholes v. Ackerland, 13 Ill. 650; Sophia Sherr and Albertine Scheer, Scheer v. Keown, 29 Wis. 586; Sylvius and Sylvanus, Butterfield v. Johnson, 46 Ill. 68; Thomas B. Han and Thomas B. Hanly, Hanly v. Campbell, 4 Ark. 562; Uterburgh and Hudiburgh, Uterburgh v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 202; Yoest and Joest, Heil's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 453; Gdema Carty and Gustave de ma Carty, Moulton v. de ma Carty, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 470.

1. Stambaugh's Appeal, 135 Pa. St. 586.

2. Federal Courts—U. S. Supreme Court.—In Nichol v. Levy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 441, Mr. Justice Swayne, delivering the opinion of the court, used language which indicated clearly that the views of that court on the subject of spendthrift trusts were in accord with those of the English courts. He said: "It is a settled rule of law that the beneficial interest of the cestui que trust, whatever it may be, is liable for the payment of his debts. It cannot be so fenced about by inhibitions and restrictions as to secure to it the inconsistent characteristics of right and enjoyment to the beneficiary and immunity from his creditors. A condition precedent that the provision shall not vest until his debts are paid, and a condition subsequent that it shall be divested and forfeited by his insolvency, with a limitation over to another person, are valid and the law will give them full effect. Beyond this, protection from the claims of creditors is not allowed to go."

In Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 725, it was held that a devise of the income of a fund is not invalid as being against public policy or against the policy of the law of bankruptcy, although on condition that if the devisee become bankrupt the trustees shall pay it to his wife and children, if he have any, otherwise invest, or, at their absolute discretion, transfer to the devisee any portion of the fund not exceeding half. While that part of the opinion of the court in this case which is the main reliance of the supporters of spendthrift trusts, was obiter, yet it is in such unmistakable terms, as to leave no room for doubt of the unqualified dissent of that tribunal from the rule of the English courts, and the observation of Mr. Justice Swayne just quoted. Indeed, in Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523, the court expresses its continued approval of Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 725, and decides that a stock board may make membership therein subject to the rule that if a member becomes insolvent his seat may be sold for the benefit of his creditors among the other members of the board, and the payment of the proceeds of such sale to the members is not void under the bankrupt law. See also Spindle v. Shreve, 111 U. S. 542.

U. S. Circuit Courts.—In Sanford v. Lackland, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 6, it is held that the testator cannot give the beneficial interest and annex thereto the inconsistent condition that it shall not be liable for the debts of the devisee. But in Spindle v. Shreve, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 199, the dicta in Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 725, are followed.

State Courts—Illinois.—In Steib v. Whitehead, 111 Ill. 247, a testator devised all his lands to trustees in trust for his daughter, declaring it to be their duty to keep such lands well rented, make reasonable repairs, pay taxes, etc., and to pay over all remaining rents and income in cash into the hands of his daughter in person, and not upon any written or verbal order, nor upon any assignment or transfer by her, the trust to cease at her death, and the estate to vest in her heirs. It was held that the intention was to place the net income of the property beyond the control of the daughter and her creditors while in the hands of the trustees, and that such income was not liable to garnishment for her debts.

Maryland.—In Warner v. Rice, 66 Md. 440, it is held to be wholly against the policy of the law to permit property, whether legal or equitable, to be fettered by restraints upon alienation, and generally, whenever property is subject to alienation by the owner, it is subject to his debts. But in Smith v. Towers, 69 Md. 77; 9 Am. St. Rep. 398, it was held that where a testator devises real estate in trust, the trustee to collect the rents and profits, and to pay the same to testator's son, "into his own hands and not into another, whether claiming by his authority or otherwise," the intention of the testator is that the income shall be paid into the hands of his son to the exclusion of all other persons, whether claiming as alienees or creditors, and such rents and profits while in the hands of the trustee cannot be reached by the creditors of the cestui que trust by any proceeding either at law or in equity.

And where the testatrix declared that no part of the land devised should in any event be liable for the debts or contracts of the devisees, it was held that the crops growing on the land were likewise exempt from liability. Maryland Grange Agency v. Lee, 72 Md. 161. But under a bequest "in trust for the benefit of L during her life, receiving her annual interest and income therefrom, the said share to be securely invested as soon as declared, and after her death to be equally divided between her children," it was held that there was no limitation on the power of the life tenant to assign the income, and it was therefore subject to garnishment by her creditors. Baker v. Keiser (Md. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 735.

Missouri.—The dicta in the earlier cases of McIlvaine v. Smith, 42 Mo. 45; 97 Am. Dec. 295; Lackland v. Smith, 5 Mo. App. 153, were opposed to the doctrine of spendthrift trusts. Contra, in Montague v. Crane, 12 Mo. App. 582. In Pickens v. Dorris, 20 Mo. App. 1, there is a strong dictum in favor of such trusts.

The question was not finally settled until 1888 in Lampert v. Haydel, 96 Mo. 439; 9 Am. St. Rep. 358, which decided that where a testator devised lands to a trustee for the use of his three sons "with power in my three sons to use and enjoy equally the rents, issues, and profits thereof during their natural lives," the object being "to secure to my children a certain annual income beyond the accident of fortune and bad management on their part; and with this end in view to take away from them the power of disposing of the same, or of creating any liens thereon, or of making the same liable in any way for their debts," there was vested in the devisees an interest in the income of the realty which was inalienable by them or either of them. And in Partridge v. Cavender, 96 Mo.

452. it was held, under a devise of property in trust for the testator's son for life, with a direction to trustees to pay the income semi-annually "on his personal receipt, without his son having any power to sell, assign, or pledge the same previous to the payment thereof to him," which receipt should be the trustee's acquittance, that neither the accrued income in the possession of the trustees, nor the accruing income, could be reached by the son's creditors or be assigned by him.

But a husband who releases his curtesy in his wife's estate, accepting in lieu thereof an income given him by her will, will be regarded as a purchaser of such income and not a mere recipient of his wife's bounty, and the income will be subject to the claims of his creditors, notwithstanding the provisions of the will exempt it from such claims. Bank of Commerce v. Chambers, 96 Mo. 459, the court, by Sherwood, J., making the following distinction: "That decision (namely in Lampert v. Haydel, 96 Mo. 439; 3 Am. St. Rep. 358), and the class to which it belongs, rest in a large part upon the distinct ground that a creditor is not defrauded, and therefore has no cause of complaint, because the owner of property in the free exercise of his will so disposes of it that the object of his bounty, who parts with nothing in return, has a sufficient income provided for and applied to his life support. In the case at bar the beneficiary did part with something in return. But for his compliance with the express condition in the will by the surrender of his curtesy in his wife's estate by deed, as the petition recites, duly recorded, the income provided for his use would never have become his. This stands confessed by the demurrer. He therefore occupies the attitude of a purchaser of that income, as much so as does a wife who receives a conveyance of land in consideration of the relinquishment of her dower in other property of her husband. . . . Regarding then the defendant in the light of a purchaser of the income bestowed upon him by the will of his wife, and not as the mere recipient of her bounty, it must be ruled that such income is subject to the claims of his creditors, and subject in this proceeding."

Virginia.—In the following cases the trusts were held to be blended and no one beneficiary had an interest separable from that of the others, and therefore no interest that could be alienated voluntarily or involuntarily. Perkins v. Dickinson, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 335; Nickell v. Handly, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 336; Johnston v. Zane, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 552; Markham v. Guerrant, 4 Leigh (Va.) 279; Doswell v. Anderson, 1 P. & H. (Va.) 185.

In Nixon v. Rose, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 485, it is simply decided that a married woman may be restrained from anticipation.

In Armstrong v. Pitts, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 235, it was decided that a creditor of the cestui que trust could not proceed against the trust fund without first getting judgment. Whether judgment creditors could have any remedy was expressly left undecided.

In Camp v. Cleary, 76 Va. 140, the question was raised, but the court expressly declined to pass upon it, as it was not involved in the case.

The precise question whether interests of the character under consideration may be deprived of the incidents of alienability and liability for the debts of the owner, was not decided until the recent case of Garland v. Garland, 87 Va. 758; 24 Am. St. Rep. 682, where it was held that if a testator sets apart property in the hands of his executor to be held by him in trust for the testator's brother, declaring that "the profits are set apart under the superintendence of the executor for his brother's use, but neither the estate nor profits shall be bound for his past debts or future debts or liabilities other than a decent and comfortable support, and at his death all the said property to pass to a trustee in trust for" certain other persons named, the beneficiary does not take an absolute property in the profits of the estate which he might assign or alien, nor can such profits be reached by a creditor's bill against him.

Pennsylvania.—Mr. Gray has shown in his work on Restraints on Alienation, §§ 214-235, that the doctrine of spendthrift trusts in Pennsylvania has been built up entirely on obiter dicta, and he thinks that it is doubtless, owing to the very great importance of the bench and bar of this State, that this doctrine spread to other jurisdictions. And in 3 Lewin on Trusts, § 124, it is said that "the only case where the purely abstract doctrine of spendthrift trusts has been strictly employed is Overman's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 276, with probably the exception of Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 113, where the supreme court of Pennsylvania for the first time made an actual decision in favor of this class of trusts." That it is now the well-settled law in that State is undoubted. Fisher v. Taylor, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 33; Holdship v. Patterson, 7 Watts (Pa.) 547; Ashhurst v. Given, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 323; Vaux v. Parke, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 19; Norris v. Johnston, 5 Pa. St. 287; Eyrick v. Hetrick, 13 Pa. St. 491; Brown v. Williamson, 36 Pa. St. 338; Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 113; Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 393; 98 Am. Dec. 351; Keyser v. Mitchell, 67 Pa. St. 473; Huber's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 357; Overman's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 276; Patterson v. Caldwell, 124 Pa. St. 454; Mannerback's Estate, 133 Pa. St. 342; Merriman v. Munson, 134 Pa. St. 114; Hibb's Estate, 143 Pa. St. 217; In re Plank's Estate (Pa. Orph. Ct.), 9 Lanc. L. Rev. 249; In re Root's Estate (Pa. Orph. Ct.), 8 Lanc. L. Rev. 153.

A provision that G. "shall act as committee for I. to take charge of all his money and pay him the interest and so much of the principal as will give him a comfortable support," was held to create a spendthrift trust. Smith v. Savage, 4 Penny (Pa.) 320. So, a direction to pay to the son or such persons as he may direct, does not enable him to transfer his right to another or dispose of the income by anticipation. Mehaffey's Estate, 27 W. N. C. (Pa.) 191. See Decker v. Poor Directors, 120 Pa. St. 272. But when nothing is said in the instrument about creditors or involuntary alienation, the income may be attached in the hands of the trustees. Girard L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Chambers, 46 Pa. St. 485. And a prohibition against the payment of any part of the income to the collateral relations of the cestui que trust and against their entering the testator's house, is not sufficient to create a spendthrift trust. King's Estate, 29 W. N. C. (Pa.) 426.

A spendthrift trust may be created for a term of years with the remainder to the cestui que trust in fee. Ward's Estate, 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 282. So a trust in favor of a daughter during the widow's life, not to be liable for the daughter's debts, the principal to be paid to the daughter after the widow's death, is a good spendthrift trust. Wayne's Estate, 47 L. J. 465; 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 124. But inalienable equitable fees are not allowed. Keyser's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 236.

The creation of a spendthrift trust in due and legal form will exempt the income of the beneficiary in the hands of the trustee from attachment to enforce the payment of alimony, decreed against the beneficiary in divorce proceedings. Thackara v. Mintzer, 100 Pa. St. 151.

Where a legacy is given with direction that it cannot be "seized upon or levied upon for any debt or claim whatever" against the legatee, it cannot be attached in the hands of the executor. Monongahela Nat. Bank's Appeal, 146 Pa. St. 431; Beck's Estate, 133 Pa. St. 51; 19 Am. St. Rep. 623.

Vermont. — Where a testator bequeathed a sum of money to his son "for the support of himself and family and for no other purpose," and the testator's executors paid this legacy to the son's attorney, it was held that this money constituted a trust fund for the purposes set forth in the will, and that it could not be attached for the son's debts while in the attorney's hands. White v. White, 30 Vt. 338.

Where a testatrix devised her estate in trust for B., who was then insolvent, he to have "the use and occupation" thereof during his life, and at his death "the said estate to be conveyed by" the trustee "to whom and in the manner the said" B. "shall direct," and B. appointed the estate to his wife, and it was conveyed to her on his death, it was held that the estate was not liable to the claims of his creditors who were such before the creation of the power. Wales v. Bowdish, 61 Vt. 23.

In Barnes v. Dow, 59 Vt. 530, the substance of a will was as follows: "Second: I give, devise, and dispose to my nephew L., and his heirs, all my effects, estate, both personal and real, except the support of my sister H. during her lifetime; and I give my estate in trust to my executor." "Third: I give to my sister H., her support during her natural life out of my estate." And it was held that this language imported an unmistakable intention of a permanent and indefeasible provision for a life support for H. out of the estate, which was not subject to alienation on her part.

Texas. — Land, the legal title to which is in a trustee, whose duty it is to apply its income for the use and benefit of the cestui que trust, the terms of the trust expressly declaring declared in express terms, but it will be sufficient, if it may be gathered from the instrument, when construed in the light of contemporaneous circumstances.¹ It has been held that one that the trust estate should not be subject to debts of the latter, cannot be attached on execution against him. Wallace v. Campbell, 53 Tex. 229.

Maine.—In Roberts v. Stevens, 84 Me. 325, it is held that a testator may so give to his son for life the annual income of a trust estate that the life tenant cannot alienate or his creditors reach it.

Massachusetts.—Until quite recently the question had not been directly adjudged in this commonwealth, though the tendency of the decisions had been in favor of such a power in the author of the trust. Braman v. Stiles, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 460; 13 Am. Dec. 445; Perkins v. Hays, 3 Gray (Mass.) 405; Russell v. Grinnell, 105 Mass. 425; Hall v. Williams, 120 Mass. 344; Sparhawk v. Cloon, 125 Mass. 263.

Broadway Nat. Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170; 43 Am. Rep. 504, decides that a trust may be created for life inalienable and free from interference on the part of the creditors of the cestui que trust, and the court considers that the only ground upon which such a trust could be claimed to be violative of public policy is that the creditors of the beneficiary may be defrauded, and answers this objection by saying that creditors have no right to rely upon property thus held, and that by the exercise of diligence they can ascertain from the public records the nature and extent of the estate.

But where a testator by his will gave to his wife during her life the income of all his estate "to be for her comfort and support," expressing a wish that she provide for an unmarried daughter, and that a "house and grounds" be kept "as a home for them," it was held that after the daughter's death the wife had the absolute disposal of the income during her life and that it might be reached by her creditors. Maynard v. Cleaves, 149 Mass. 307.

And so a gift of the entire beneficial interest without any limitation of the power of alienation or of the power to seize it under execution being directly expressed or necessarily implied, the interest of the beneficiary is absolute and subject to alienation either by the voluntary act of himself or in invitum by his creditors. Sears v. Choate, 146 Mass. 395; 4 Am. St. Rep. 320.

Tennessee.—In Jouralman v. Massingill, 86 Tenn. 81, the court, following Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, held that trusts of the character under consideration are not contrary to public policy, violate no law of property and are approved by justice and humanity. Thus overruling Turley v. Massingill, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 353, and Hooberry v. Harding, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 392, in which they were adjudged void because contrary to sound public policy.

1. Thus, where property was given to the daughters of the testatrix, subject to the condition that they support their father during his life, the latter has no interest that can be reached by his creditors. Baker v. Brown, 146 Mass. 369. And where a testator by his will gave certain stocks in trust, the income to be paid to his son during his life, and at his death the principal to go "to his child or children who shall survive him, provided that if my son shall leave his wife surviving him, then his said wife shall be entitled to her support out of the same so long as she shall remain his widow," and the son died leaving a widow, who did not marry again, and a son, to whom the trustees paid over the trust fund; it was held that the widow had no interest under the will which a creditor could reach by a bill in equity under the Massachusetts Pub. Stats., ch. 151, § 1, cl. 11. Slattery v. Wason, 151 Mass. 266; 21 Am. St. Rep. 448. See also Foster v. Foster, 133 Mass. 179. And when the intent is so gathered, the court will not allow it to be defeated because not clearly expressed by the scrivener, at least as between the trustee and cestui que trust. Stambaugh's Estate, 135 Pa. St. 585.

But in Pickens v. Doris, 20 Mo. App. 1, it was decided that a devisors intention to withdraw his gift from the devisees creditors will not be presumed from surrounding circumstances of which the creditors have no record notice, where such intention is not expressed in, nor necessarily implied from, the terms of the instrument creating the trust.

cannot settle his property in trust for his own benefit or support so as to prevent his creditors from attaching it.¹

III. JURISDICTIONS DISALLOWING—1. Generally.—In England,² and in some of the United States,³ trusts may not be created with

1. Mackason's Appeal, 42 Pa. St. 330; Ghormley v. Smith, 139 Pa. St. 584; 23 Am. St. Rep. 215. See also Pacific Nat. Bank v. Windram, 133 Mass. 175. Chancellor Kent, in vol. 4, p. 311 of his Commentaries, states the law of such an attempt thus: "The policy of the law will not permit property to be so limited as to remain in the grantor for life free from the incidents of property and not subject to his debts."

2. Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 329; In re Dugdale, 38 Ch. Div. 176; In re Mabbett (1891), 1 Ch. Div. 707; In re Wolstenholme, 29 W. R. 414.

Thus a trust for a person's "support, clothing and maintenance," Younghusband v. Gisborne, 1 Coll. 400; or to pay the interest of a fund to one for life "at such times and in such manner as the trustees may think proper," Green v. Spicer, 1 R. & M. 395; or "from time to time as and when it shall become due and payable," Graves v. Dolphin, 1 Sim. 66; or "in such smaller or larger portions, at such times immediate or remote, and in such way and manner as the trustees shall think best," Piercy v. Roberts, 1 Myl. & K. 4; may be exercised according to the discretion of the trustees until the bankruptcy of the cestui que trust, but upon that occurrence the discretion of the trustees is determined, and the entire interest passes to the assignees.

And even where the trustees were directed to pay the interest of a fund to a person "for life, or during such part thereof as the trustees should think proper, and at their will and pleasure, but not otherwise," so that the cestui que trust should not have any right, title, claim, or demand, other than the trustees should think proper; and after the cestui que trust's decease to pay the interest to his widow for her life, and after her death to assign the principal and "all savings and accumulations of interest, if any," to the children, the court thought that, taking the whole instrument together, the trustees had no power to withhold and accumulate any part of the interest during the life of the cestui que trust, and therefore upon his bankruptcy the assignees became absolutely entitled. Snowdon v. Dales, 6 Sim. 524.

3. Alabama.—Rugely v. Robinson, 10 Ala. 702; Robertson v. Johnston, 36 Ala. 197; Smith v. Moore, 37 Ala. 327; Taylor v. Harwell, 65 Ala. 1; Jones v. Reese, 65 Ala. 134. In this case Hill v. McRea, 27 Ala. 175, was distinguished on the ground that the interest of the debtor in that case was not separable from that of the other beneficiaries of the trust.

Georgia.—Kempton v. Hallowell, 24 Ga. 52; 71 Am. Dec. 112; Bailie v. McWhorter, 56 Ga. 183. See also Kupferman v. McGehee, 63 Ga. 257; Hatcher v. Massey, 71 Ga. 793; Wingfield v. Rhea, 73 Ga. 477; Matthews v. Paradise, 74 Ga. 523; Cruger v. Coleman, 75 Ga. 695; Patterson v. Lawrence, 83 Ga. 703.

North Carolina.—Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480; Mebane v. Mebane, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 131; 44 Am. Dec. 102; Forbes v. Smith, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 30; Pace v. Pace, 73 N. Car. 119.

Rhode Island.—In Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R. I. 205, there was a devise in trust to pay the income for life, the payments to be made from time to time, not in the way of anticipation, nor to assigns, and to be for the sole and separate use of the beneficiary, and the latter assigned all his estate for the benefit of creditors. It was held that the assignee was entitled to have the income paid him during the beneficiary's life. The court, by Ames, C. J., said: "This has been the settled doctrine of a court of chancery at least since Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429, and in application to such a case as this is so honest and just that we would not change it if we could. Certainly no man should have an estate to live on, but not an estate to pay his debts with. Certainly property available for the purposes of pleasure or profit should also be amenable to the demands of justice."

South Carolina.—It was held in Heath v. Bishop, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 46; 55 Am. Dec. 654, that where property was conveyed in trust to pay the a proviso that the estate of the cestui que trust shall not be alienated or subject to the claims of creditors, except in the case of separate estates for married women; and if it is ascertained that the cestui que trust has a vested interest, the mode in which, or the time when, he is to reap the benefit is altogether immaterial, and the entire interest may either be disposed of by his own act, or may inure for the benefit of his creditors by operation of law, in the event of his bankruptcy. The test to be applied in these cases is: Would the executor of the cestui que trust have a right to call upon the trustee for arrears;—if he would, then the creditors would be entitled to call for the future interest or income.¹ It is contended by the courts opposed to the foregoing view that the only objection that can be taken to the inalienability and non-liability for debts, of equitable life estates, is that the creditors of the beneficiary may be defrauded, and attempts are made, with more or less success, to show that they are not defrauded.² But the real ground upon which such estates have been declared alienable and liable for debts is, that inalienable rights of property are opposed to the fundamental principles of the common law, and that it is against public policy that a man should have an estate to live on, but not an estate to pay his debts with,—should have the benefits of wealth without the responsibilities.³

2. For the Benefit of Several.—Where there are several cestuis que trustent, creditors of any one of them can take only so much as was intended for that particular beneficiary;⁴ and if the interests of the several are inseparable, nothing can be reached.⁵

3. Arbitrary Power of Application in Trustees.—If the trustees have an arbitrary power of applying or not applying a fund for the benefit of the beneficiary, or of applying the fund in the alternative either for his benefit or that of another person, nothing will pass to his assignees, nor can anything be subjected to the net income "for the better support and maintenance" of the beneficiary, the latter's interest was liable in equity for his debts.

Ohio.—Wallace v. Smith, 2 Handy (Ohio) 78; Hobbs v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 419. In this case it was held that a provision that a term of ninety-nine years should not be liable for the lessee's debts was void.

1. In re Sanderson's Trust, 3 K. & J. 497.

2. Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U.S. 725, and cases cited under Jurisdictions Allow- ing.

3. Gray's Restraints on Alienation, § 358, and cases cited under Jurisdictions Disallowing.

4. Page v. Way, 3 Beav. 20; Kearsley v. Woodcock, 3 Hare 185.

5. Godden v. Crowhurst, 10 Sim. 642. In this case there was a devise to trustees in trust to apply the income for the support and maintenance of A. and any wife and child or children he might have, and for the education of such issue, or any of them, as the trustees in their discretion should think fit; and on the death of A. and his wife, then over. A. was adjudged a bankrupt. Shadwell, V. G., held that the assignees in bankruptcy took nothing.

To the same effect are Holmes v. Penny, 3 K. & J. 90; In re Landon's Trusts, 40 L. J., Ch. 370. See also the cases cited under *Jurisdictions Allow-*ing, note 2, Virginia, supra, this title; and those cited under Jurisdictions in which the Status is Undetermined, note 1, Connecticut, infra, this title.

claims of his creditors.¹ But if the power is not arbitrary, but imperative to apply for the benefit of the bankrupt and another, and the trustees refuse to exercise the power, so that a simple trust arises, the creditors will take a moiety, and if by the death of the other person the bankrupt becomes the only object of the power, the creditors will take the whole.²

IV. JURISDICTIONS IN WHICH STATUTORY REGULATIONS EXIST.—In some of the States the validity of spendthrift trusts is sanctioned by express legislation. Thus, in New York, there is a statute which excludes from proceedings in equity to reach beneficial interests, all cases of trusts for maintenance and support, where the trust has been created by, or the trust fund has proceeded from, some person other than the debtor, but makes available to the creditor any surplus beyond what may be necessary for the maintenance, support, etc., of the beneficiary.³ This legislation

1. Thus, where a fund was given to trustees upon trust, to apply the whole or such part of the income as they should think fit, during the life of A., for his support and maintenance, and for no other purpose, it was held that nothing passed to the assignees. Two-penny v. Peyton, 10 Sim. 487.

And in Chambers v. Smith, L. R., 3 App. Cas. 795, Lord O'Hagan observed: "If the debtor have a vested property and an absolute claim, they will, of course, pass from him. But if the property and the claim are subject to conditions liable to be affected by the discretionary action of other people, the creditor cannot escape the fulfillment of the condition or deny the effect of that exercise of the discretion which would have bound the debtor."

Where freehold and leasehold property was vested in trustees upon trust for A. B. for life, but if he became bankrupt or insolvent, the trustees were during his life to apply the annual produce "in and towards the maintenance, clothing, lodging, and support of A. B. and his then present or any future wife, and his children, or any of them, as the trustees should at their discretion think proper," and A. B. became insolvent, having a wife and children, it was argued that the power in the trustees was destroyed by the insolvency and that the life estate vested in the assignee. But Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce held that the trustees had a right under the power to appoint in favor of the insolvent, his wife and children, or any of them, in exclusion of any other of them, but that any benefit the insolvent might take would belong to the assignee. Lord v. Bunn, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 98.

See also 1 Lewin on Trusts, p. 189; In re Sanderson's Trust, 3 K. & J. 497; Holmes v. Penney, 3 K. & J. 90; Keyser v. Mitchell, 67 Pa. St. 473; Hall v. Williams, 120 Mass. 344; Davidson v. Kemper, 79 Ky. 5; Leavitt v. Beirne, 21 Conn. 9; Banfield v. Wiggins, 58 N. H. 155.

2. Rippon v. Norton, 2 Beav. 63; Wallace v. Anderson, 16 Beav. 533.

3. New York.—Sillick v. Mason, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 79; Graff v. Bonnett, 31 N. Y. 9; 88 Am. Dec. 236; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 41; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Tolles v. Wood, 16 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; McEvoy v. Appleby, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 44; Williams v. Thorn, 70 N. Y. 270.

The creditor of such a beneficiary acquires a lien upon the accrued and unexpended surplus income, or that subsequently arising from such fund, superior to the claims of the general creditors or assignee of the cestui que trust by the commencement of an action in equity to reach and appropriate it to the satisfaction of his judgment. Williams v. Thorn, 70 N. Y. 270; Tolles v. Wood, 16 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; 99 N. Y. 618.

The court in determining what is the proper amount to be allowed for the expenditures of the cestui que trust, will consider the manner in which he has been brought up, the habits acquired by him, and his ability to take care of his property. Kilroy v. Wood, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 636. As to other considerations which enter into fixing the amount, see Tolles v. Wood, 16 Abb.

has been copied in whole or in part, by other States, in some of which, however, there have been no decisions thereunder.¹

But, by the statutes of some States one cannot vest property or funds in trustees for the use of another without subjecting it to the debts of the cestui que trust.²

N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; 99 N. Y. 618; Genet v. Beekman, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 382; Clute v. Bool, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 83; Scott v. Nevins, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 672; Campbell v. Foster, 35 N. Y. 361; Moulton v. De Macarty, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 533; Hann v. Van Voorhise, 1 Month. L. Bull. 56; Sillick v. Mason, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 79.

An allegation by the creditor of the fact of such a surplus existing, made merely upon information and belief without setting forth the facts on which the conclusion is based, is not sufficient. Stowe v. Chapin, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 640. The creditors must show the existence of a surplus. Graff v. Bonnett, 31 N. Y. 9; 88 Am. Dec. 236.

Whether, under the statute, an annuity is alienable and liable for debts, or whether it is inalienable and not liable for debts, is left so very doubtful on the authorities, that a mere reference to the cases in which the question is involved is made: Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 61; 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318; Degrau v. Clason, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 136; Gott v. Cook, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 521; Clute v. Bool, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 83; Rider v. Mason, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 351; Stewart v. McMartin, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 438; Lang v. Ropke, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 363; Griffin v. Ford, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 123. See also ANNUITY, vol. 1, p. 596.

Prior to the Revised Statutes the decisions in this commonwealth were in harmony with the English doctrine. Bryan v. Knickerbacker, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 409; Hallett v. Thompson, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 583. See also the dicta in Havens v. Healy, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 296; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 44; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Rome Exchange Bank v. Eames, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 99. Compare Campbell v. Foster, 35 N. Y. 361.

For a general review of the New York decisions on this subject, see note to Tolles v. Wood, 16 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; Gray's Restraints on Alienation, §§ 180-181, 280-295.

1. New Jersey. — Hunterdon Co. Freeholders v. Henry, 41 N. J. Eq. 388; Halstead v. Westervelt, 41 N. J.

Eq. 100; Lippincott v. Evens, 35 N. J. Eq. 553.

In Hardenburgh v. Blair, 30 N. J. Eq. 42, property was given by will to executors in trust to pay to B. the income during his life "in such manner and in such amounts as the executors should deem most prudent," and the chancellor held that the statute did not apply to the case, and that upon general principles B.'s interest could be reached by his judgment creditors. The opinion of the chancellor was, that, apart from the statute, the English rule was in force in New Jersey. But upon appeal it was held that the statute was applicable to the case, though the general question was not considered. Hardenburgh v. Blair, 30 N. J. Eq. 645.

Minnesota Gen. Stats. (1891), §§ 4019, 4020. As to restraints on power of alienation, see Atwater v. Russell (Minn. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 629; Simpson v. Cook, 24 Minn. 180.

California Civ. Code (1885), §§ 859, 867.

How. Stats. (Mich.), §§ 5575, 5581, 6614. See Cummings v. Corey, 58 Mich. 494. See also the opinion in Mandelbaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78; 18 Am. Rep. 61.

Wisconsin Rev. Stats., §§ 2083, 2089, 3029. See Bridge v. Ward, 35 Wis. 687; Arzbacher v. Mayer, 53 Wis. 380.

2. By Kentucky Gen. Stats., § 21, art. 1, ch. 63, it is provided: "Estates of every kind held or possessed in trust shall be subject to the debts or charges of the person to whose use or for whose benefit they shall be respectively held or possessed, as they would be subject if those persons owned the like interest in the property held or possessed as they own or shall own in the use or trust thereof." The following cases have arisen under this statute: Anderson v. Briscoe, 12 Bush (Ky.) 344; Cosby v. Ferguson, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 264; Jones v. Langhorne, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 453; Eastland v. Jordan, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 186; Flournoy v. Johnson, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 693; Samuel v. Ellis, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 479; Samuel v. Salter, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 259; Knefler v. Shreve, 78

V. JURISDICTIONS IN WHICH THE STATUS IS UNDETERMINED.—In several of the States there has been no direct decision upon the validity of spendthrift trusts, though there are dicta inclining to one side or the other, and consequently in these jurisdictions the status of such trusts may be said to be undetermined.¹

VI. RESTRAINT ON ALIENATION, HOW FAR ALLOWABLE—PRINCIPLES GOVERNING.—However the authorities may differ upon the question of one's power to put a restraint upon alienation, or exclude the rights of creditors, it is well established that one may settle property upon another in such a way as not to be alienated, or available to his creditors or assignees. But in such a case the Ky. 297; Parsons v. Spencer, 83 Ky. 306; Rudd v. Hagan, 86 Ky. 159; Marshall v. Rash, 87 Ky. 116; Dickison v. Ogden, 89 Ky. 162; Bull v. Kentucky Nat. Bank (Tex. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 425; Bland v. Bland (Ky. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 423.

In Pope v. Elliott, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 56, it was held that the bequest in that case was, by the terms of the will, different from a devise of property or money for the use and benefit of an individual, and from a devise of specific property in trust, to apply the proceeds or profits to his support, and, therefore, only such interest on the fund as had accumulated and was in the hands of the trustee could be subjected.

In White v. Thomas, 8 Bush (Ky.) 661, it was held that a dwelling house and land devised were not liable by reason of a proviso in the will that the property should not be subject to alienation or sale by the cestui que trust or to her debts, and any attempt to do so should terminate her right to use and enjoy the property.

In Kean v. Kean (Ky. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 1032, a limited restriction on the power of alienation was upheld.

1. Connecticut.—In Leavitt v. Beirne, 21 Conn. 1, there is a dictum in favor of the validity of spendthrift trusts, but in Easterly v. Keney, 36 Conn. 18, there is a dictum to the contrary. In Tolland Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 50 Conn. 493, the testator left his wife all the income of his estate, and so much of the principal as might be necessary for her support and the maintenance and education of his daughters, during her natural life, and it was held that she took a life estate in trust, and that her interest being inseparable from that of her daughters, and all the property being needed for her and their support, could not be taken upon a judgment against her. The court, by Carpenter, J., said: "The general rule is that all one's property is liable for his debts, but to that rule there are many exceptions. All property exempt by statute is within the exception, so is ordinary trust property designed to secure a maintenance for some unfortunate debtor, so also the income of trust property where it is payable to the beneficiary at the discretion of the trustee. The exceptions indicate unmistakably that it is the policy of the law not to take from the debtor his means of subsistence—not to take from him his necessary daily food and clothing. . . . We are therefore disposed to approve the principle enunciated in Ontario Bank v. Root, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 482, so far at least as to apply it to a case in which the trust fund is as small as it is in the present case, that 'the interest of a judgment debtor in a trust created partly for his benefit and partly for the benefit of another, cannot be taken on execution.'"

Arkansas.—There has been no direct decision on the point, but it was said in Lindsay v. Harrison, 8 Ark. 302: "It is impossible to tie up the use and enjoyment of a personal chattel so as to create in the donee an unlimited estate which he may not alien. Even a life estate cannot be so limited and restricted. . . . Such fetters may be imposed upon the estates of married females, or estates settled on females in contemplation of marriage, during coverture, but they cease upon the determination of the coverture."

Indiana.—The question has been raised but not decided. Martin v. Davis, 82 Ind. 38; Caldwell v. Boyd, 109 Ind. 447.

New Hampshire.—There has been no direct decision on the point in question, though the general principle that beneficiary will lose the use of the property, upon the happening of the event upon which it is limited. Thus one may settle property upon A. until alienation, insolvency, or bankruptcy, with a limitation over to B. on the happening of any one of those events; or one may give real or personal estate to A. for life, with a proviso that on alienation, insolvency, or bankruptcy, it shall shift over to B.¹ But no one can settle property on himself with such a limitation.²

SPILE.—See note 3.

SPIRITS; SPIRITUOUS.—See FERMENTED, vol. 7, p. 940; INTOXICATING LIQUORS, vol. 11, p. 570; SEARCHES AND SEIZURES, vol. 21, p. 955.

SPIRITUALISM.—(See also FALSE PRETENCES, vol. 7, p. 716; TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY; UNDUE INFLUENCE.)

SPLITTING A CAUSE OF ACTION.—See ACTIONS, vol. 1, p. 178; JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, vol. 12, p. 428.

SPOILIATION.—See ALTERATION, vol. 1, p. 497.

SPRING.—(See SUBTERRANEAN WATERS; WATERCOURSES).—A spring of water is a place where water by natural forces usually issues from the ground.⁴

where the trustee has discretion to expend the sum bequeathed in such a manner and at such times as he shall deem proper for the benefit of A., the creditors of A. cannot attach such sum in an action against the trustee—has been asserted. Banfield v. Wigin, 58 N. H. 155.

1. Lewin on Trusts 190; Lockyer v. Savage, 2 Stra. 947; Ex parte Hinton, 14 Ves. 598; Hatton v. May, 3 Ch. Div. 148; Joel v. Mills, 3 K. & J. 458; Shee v. Hale, 13 Ves. 404; In re Bedson's Trusts, 28 Ch. Div. 523; McKinsterv. Smith, 27 Conn. 628; Bridge v. Ward, 35 Wis. 687; Stewart v. Brady, 3 Bush (Ky.) 623; Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R. I. 212; Camp v. Cleary, 76 Va. 140. And a trust to pay the income to a son until he became bankrupt, etc., and in that case to "pay to him or apply for his benefit during the remainder of his life," either the whole or so much of the income as the trustees should think fit, was held valid though the discretionary trust did not extend to benefiting any wife or children of the cestui que trust. In re Bullock, 64 L. T. N. S. 736.

2. Higginbotham v. Holme, 19 Ves. 88; Ex parte Stephens, 3 Ch. Div. 807. Though a person on marriage may do this with limitation to his wife and children, as they are purchasers for value. Ex parte Cooke, 8 Ves. 353; In re Callan's Estate, L. R., 7 Ir. 102; Knight v. Browne, 7 Jur. N. S. 894; In re Detmold, 40 Ch. Div. 585.

3. "In The Chase, Young Adm. Dec. 113, this word is used, as is common in America, in the sense of stake or post. The decree was affirmed by the privy council, and of this the American Law Review said: 'Their lordships were good enough to say in their opinion, "Nothing need be said about the word spile. It may be the word used there. It means a post." There is an undefinable charm in this supercilious reflection upon colonial etymology. We find that Worcester speaks respectfully enough of the word; and if we thought as much of the matter as did the judicial committee, we would examine other dictionaries, which we venture to believe they did not.' Webster also speaks 'respectfully of it.'" Bro. Jud. Intrep., p. 435.

4. Magoon v. Harris, 46 Vt. 264. And in that case it was held that the grant of the privilege of taking water from "springs" in a certain locality conveyed no right to take it where it does not thus issue from the ground.

But in Proprietors of Mills, etc. v. Baintree Water Supply Co., 149 Mass. 478, it was said: "'Springs,' as the word is generally used, means the

SPRINGING USE.—See USES.

SPURIOUS.—See note 1.

SQUARE.—(See also PARKS AND PUBLIC SQUARES, vol. 17, p. 407).—The terms "square" and "block" are convertible, and are used synonymously.²

SQUATTER.—A squatter may be defined to be a person who settles or locates on land without obtaining a legal title.³

source of supply issuing from the earth, or found therein by digging, or otherwise opening it."

"A spring of water, both in law and ordinary language, is, as I understand it, a definite source of water. When we talk of a spring of water we mean a source of water of a definite or nearly definite area, the word 'spring' coming from the water springing or bubbling up. It may be an underground spring which supplies a well, and we say that water 'wells up.' It may be the ordinary spring from which a small stream or rivulet runs above the ground. But those are definite things. A spring of water means a natural source of water of a definite and well-marked extent." Taylor v. Corporation of St. Helens, 6 Ch. Div. 272; 22 Moak's Rep. 272.

1. Spurious Bill.—"A spurious bill may be a legitimate impression from the genuine plate, but it must have the signatures of persons not the officers of the bank whence it purports to have issued, or else the names of fictitious persons. A spurious bill, also, may be an illegitimate impression from the genuine plate, or an impression from a counterfeit plate, but it must have such signatures or names as we have just indicated." Kirby v. State, 1 Ohio St. 187. See generally COUNTERFEITING, vol. 4, p. 333.

2. State v. Deffes (La. 1892), 10 So. Rep. 597; State v. Natal, 2 La. Ann. 612; Olsson v. Topeka, 42 Kan. 713. In the latter case the court, by Holt, C., said: "In the case of Ottawa v. Barney, 10 Kan. 270, Judge Brewer, in rendering the opinion of the court, says: 'A block is defined by Webster as "a square or portion of a city inclosed by streets, whether occupied by buildings or composed of vacant lots." It is a portion of ground surrounded by streets.' We are well satisfied with the definition, and taking it as our guide in this decision, it follows as a matter of course that the word square, used by plaintiffs, is synonymous with block."

"Square" as used in a city charter

providing that street improvements shall be made "at the exclusive cost of the owners of the lots in each fourth of a square," means each subdivision of territory bounded on all sides by principal streets. Caldwell v. Rupert, 10 Bush (Ky.) 179.

An English statute imposed a duty on all cast-plate glass which was to be "squared into plates of a superficies not less than 1,485 inches." In Atorney Gen'l v. Cast-Plate Glass Co., Anstr. 39, the court, by Eyre, C. B., said of the term, as used in this statute: "I have no doubt in saying, that the legislature used the word 'square' not in the strict, but in the common acceptance, confining it to rectangular, but not to equilateral figures." And in Robinson v. Day, 5 App. Cas. 63, it was held that the terms "one square mile" and "five miles square," as used in a public-land statute, meant areas of those dimensions, and not land geometrically square.

Square Yard.—A contract stipulating for the payment of a certain rate "per square yard" for the removal of dirt, means cubic yard. Louisville v. Hyatt, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 177.

A Louisiana Statute provides that "no private market shall be established within a walking distance of six blocks from any public market; the said distance to be interpreted as meaning that represented by six blocks in a walk from the public market to a private market." It was held that the words "six blocks" in this act have the same meaning as "six squares" in the former act of 1878; and that they mean standard squares or blocks of 300 feet each, with the addition of 50 feet for each intervening street, making 2,100 feet by the nearest walking route, regardless of the number of actual squares short or long. State v. Deffes (La. 1892), 10 So. Rep. 597. See also State v. Berard, 40 La. Ann. 172; State v. Barthe, 41 La. Ann. 46; State v. Schmidt, 41 La. Ann. 27; State v. Natal, 42 La. Ann. 612.

3. McAdams Land & T., § 283, fol.

SQUIRE.—See ESQUIRE, vol. 6, p. 872.

STAB.—The word “stab” imports a wound made with a pointed instrument.¹

STABLE.—(See also LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS, vol. 13, p. 935).—See note 2.

STACK.—(See also SHOCK, vol. 22, p. 777).—See note 3.

STAGE.—See THEATERS.

STAGE COACH.—(See also CARRIAGE, vol. 2, p. 735; COACH, vol. 3, p. 287, n.).—A stage coach or stage wagon is defined to be a coach or other carriage running regularly from one place to another for the conveyance of passengers.⁴

lowed in O'Donnell v. McIntyre, 16 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 86.

A better definition, perhaps, is a person who settles or locates on land, without any claim or color of title. See Sykes v. Hayes, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 530.

1. State v. Patza, 3 La. Ann. 514; State v. Lowry, 33 La. Ann. 1224. See also Ruby v. State, 7 Mo. 206.

To constitute stabbing, the knife need not enter any further than to penetrate the skin and draw blood—certainly half an inch or even one-eighth of an inch, would be deep enough. Ward v. State, 56 Ga. 408.

Distinguished from Cut.—“Stab” differs from “cut,” the latter word importing a wound made with an instrument having an edge. State v. Patza, 3 La. Ann. 514; Cut, vol. 4, p. 970.

2. A stable has been held a “building” within a statute against burglary. See BURGLARY, vol. 2, p. 676.

So it has been held an “outhouse” within statutes against arson. See ARSON, vol. 1, p. 766 et seq.

Feed Stable.—See LIVERY STABLE KEEPERS, vol. 13, p. 935.

As to when a stable is a nuisance, see NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 954.

3. A cock of hay differs from a stack of hay. The former is a small conical heap into which hay is formed temporarily in the field to protect it from the rain; the latter, on the contrary, means a large heap of hay saved and made up and protected from the weather. “Webster defines a cock of hay to be a ‘small conical pile, so shaped for shedding the rain, and called in England a cop; whilst a stack is a large conical pile sometimes covered with thatch.’” Reg. v. McKeever, Ir. R., 5 C. L. 90.

A quantity of straw packed on a lorry (a small cart or wagon), in course of transmission to market, and left for the night in the yard of an inn is not a stack of straw. Reg. v. Satchwell, L. R., 2 C. C. 21. A stack is not necessarily something erected out of doors. Reg. v. Munson, 2 Cox C. C. 186.

4. Talcott Mountain Turnpike Co. v. Marshall, 11 Conn. 199.

“A stage is any carriage that travels by set stages.” Middlesex Turnpike Co. v. Wentworth, 9 Conn. 374.

A street railway franchise was granted on condition of the payment of “the annual license fee for each car now allowed by law.” An old ordinance at that time required license fees for each “accommodation coach” or “stage coach.” It was held that under this stipulation the city was entitled to the same license fee on a car as was fixed by the old ordinance on a stage coach. The defendants contended that as the word car was not mentioned in the old ordinance, it did not apply to their cars. The court, by Danforth, J., said: “But the contention of the defendant is that it enumerates as its subjects ‘a stage,’ ‘an accommodation coach,’ ‘a stage coach,’ and is altogether silent as to ‘railroad car,’ or even ‘car.’ We are unable to see the force of the observation. In definition, a ‘car’ or ‘coach’ or ‘stage’ or a ‘stage coach’ is the same. They are vehicles that turn, or that run by turning on wheels. Place boards over or between wheels, and we have a platform car, adapted to freight; place benches or chairs upon the platform, and we still have a car, but adapted to passengers, and then easily termed ‘a carriage.’ Instead of benches or chairs, put on the platform the body of a ‘stage

Definition. STAKEHOLDER—STANDING ASIDE. Definition.

STAKEHOLDER—(See also GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 999).—A stakeholder is a depository for both parties of the money advanced by them, respectively, with a naked authority to deliver it over upon the proposed contingency. He is not regarded as a party to the illegal contract.¹

STALE DEMAND—(See also LACHES, vol. 12, p. 533).—A demand which, owing to the lapse of time and the laches of the complainant, a court of equity or admiralty will not entertain.

STALL.—See MARKETS, vol. 14, p. 465.

STAMPS—(See also REVENUE LAWS, vol. 20, p. 242).—Under former United States revenue laws, requiring bank checks, drafts, and other documents to be stamped, many interesting questions arose as to the validity, admissibility in evidence, etc., of such documents when not stamped as provided by law. These statutes having all been repealed, it has not been thought necessary to treat here this branch of the law.²

STAND, STANDING.—See note 3.

STANDING ASIDE.—See JURY and JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 348.

coach,' and we have such a 'railroad car' as served at the inauguration of the earliest railroad in our state. It is plain that by adaptation and improvement 'the modern railway car has been evolved from the old-fashioned stage coach.' The American Railway, p. 231. In common language a railroad carriage designed for passengers is called indifferently a 'coach' or 'car.' In every collection of words arranged according to the ideas which they express, these, and others with them, will be found classed together as having the same signification. Neither the word 'coach,' 'stage,' nor 'car' can be said to be words of art, or to have any legal or fixed meaning distinguishing one from the other, or any one of them from several other terms implying a vehicle or conveyance." Mayor, etc., of N. Y. v. Third Avenue R. Co., 117 N. Y. 404.

Stage Driver.—See DRIVE, vol. 6, p. 31; EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 6, p. 462.

1. Fisher v. Hildreth, 117 Mass. 562.

2. As to Postage Stamps.—See MAIL, vol. 13, p. 1200; POSTAL LAWS, vol. 18, p. 843.

3. In Bon v. Railway Passenger Ins. Co., 56 Iowa 666; 41 Am. Rep. 127, it was held that one who passes from one car to another does not "stand" on the platform. See also Sawtelle v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co.,

15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 216; Buel v. New York Cent. R. Co., 31 N. Y. 314; 88 Am. Dec. 271.

An ordinance of the city of Boston provided that no hack driver should "stand with such carriage to solicit passengers in any street." Held, that a driver who left his carriage standing in the street, and solicited passengers inside a railroad station out of sight of the carriage, was within the ordinance. Com. v. Matthews, 122 Mass. 62.

Standing Timber, Trees, Wood.—See LIMITATION IN INSTRUMENTS, vol. 13, p. 790; WOODS AND FORESTS.

Stand Committed.—Where an order directed that a defendant should "stand committed" instead of using the statute phrase "be committed," it was held, that the difference of phraseology was unimportant. Young v. Makepeace, 103 Mass. 50.

"Good standing in a society, not only implies that a party is a member of the society, but that he has a good reputation therein. In the present instance, the words are to be construed with reference to the language of the certificate, and when this is done, they manifestly mean not only good reputation, but good conduct—i. e., freedom from a violation of the pledge of total abstinence." Smith v. Mathew, 36 Mo. App. 192; Royal Templars v. Curd, 111 Ill. 284.

STANDING BY—(See also ESTOPPEL, vol. 7, p. 12).—The term "standing by," so often used in the books and reports in discussing cases of estoppel, does not mean actual presence or actual participation in the transaction, but it means silence where there is knowledge and a duty to make a disclosure.¹

STARE DECISIS.—(See also DICTA, vol. 5, p. 661; RES JUDICATA, vol. 21, p. 127; UNITED STATES COURTS.)

- | | |
|---|--|
| I. Definition; Obiter Dicta, 19. II. The Law of Precedent, 21. 1. In General, 21. 2. Interpretation of Language of Court, 23. 3. A Divided Court, 23. 4. Single Decision and Decisions in Series, 24. 5. Adopted Statutes, 25. 6. Recent English Decisions, 25. 7. Statutes Offered in Evidence, 26. 8. Executive Departments of Government, 27. III. Erroneous Precedents as Rules of Property, 28. | 1. In General, 28. 2. Decisions of Inferior Courts, 30. 3. Claim to an Office, 30. IV. Decisions Construing Constitutions and Statutes, 31. V. The Law of the Case, 33. 1. General Principles; Extent of Rule, 33. 2. Matters of Fact; Change of Evidence, 34. 3. Questions of Jurisdiction, 36. VI. Limitations of the Rule, 36. VII. The Rule as Between State and Federal Courts, 37. |
|---|--|

1. DEFINITION ; OBITER DICTA.—The doctrine of stare decisis is in no way affected by dicta, nor does the doctrine change or control the dicta in any way. Dicta are casual or incidental comments by the court, which are neither binding nor conclusive. The mind or general tendency of the court is shown by them, perhaps, and an inkling is given as to what the decision would be if the court should be called upon to make it. This doctrine has to do only with direct decisions upon important and vital issues. Any positions or utterances of the court upon the issues necessarily to be decided in a case cannot be dicta, but are direct and controlling decisions establishing precedents for future cases involving the same or similar issues. The very name of the doctrine shows that it has to do only with real decisions; and chance or collateral hints are of no binding force, and establish nothing to be relied upon subsequently.² It is not material whether the

1. Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 573; 47 Ark. 394; Gatling v. Rodman, 6 Ind. 289; Catherwood v. Watson, 65 Ind. 576; Richardson v. Chickering, 41 N. H. 380; 77 Am. Dec. 769.

2. Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. (U. S.) 612; Ex parte City Bank, 3 How. (U. S.) 292; Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 488; Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 261; 90 Am. Dec. 106.

In Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 399, the court, by Chief Justice Marshall, said: "It is a maxim not to be disregarded that general expressions in every opinion are to be taken in connection with the case in which those expressions are used. If they go beyond the case, they may be respected, but ought not to control the judgment in a subsequent suit when the very point is presented. The reason of this maxim is obvious. The question actually before the court is investigated with care and considered in its full extent; other principles, which may serve to illustrate, are considered in their relation to the case decided, but their possible bearing on all other cases is seldom completely investigated."

In Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. (U decision rests upon principles of the common law or upon the interpretation of a statute. If it settles directly a question in issue, it is a matter decided, and will have a bearing in future cases raising the same issues. A matter, though of secondary importance, if decided, is as completely subject to this doctrine as the principal question in issue. There may be two or more issues, independent each of the other, and the doctrine applies equally to them all, even though they are all embodied in the same case. A trifling or seemingly insignificant issue may have its legal status fixed. The doctrine applies to all decisions, the question being whether the court has really rendered a decision upon the point.¹ Dicta, while not binding in themselves, may become finally a part of the recognized law of the land. Even though they have not the merit of having regarded legal principles accurately, yet, having by frequent repetition and approval obtained a familiar place in the current decisions, they may ultimately be clothed with, or substantially with, the strength and importance attached to precedents.² Both dicta and decisions are subject to reversal or confirmation by the courts, and the latest position taken regarding them will become the binding one in

S.) 287, the court, by Curtis, J., said: "If the construction put by the court of a State upon one of its statutes was not a matter in judgment, if it might have been decided either way, without affecting any right brought into question, then according to the principles of the common law an opinion on such a question is not a decision. To make it so, there must have been an application of the judicial mind to the precise question necessary to be determined to fix the rights of the parties and decide to whom the property in contestation belongs. And, therefore, this court (and other courts organized under the common law) has never held itself bound by any part of an opinion, in any case, which was not needful to the ascertainment of the right or title in question between the parties."

1. Crogg v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., 77 Ga. 202; 4 Am. St. Rep. 79; Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 143; Levy v. Hitche, 40 La. Ann. 500; School Trustees v. Stocker, 42 N. J. L. 117; Forepaugh v. Delaware R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 672; Bates v. Taylor, 87 Tenn. 325; Porter v. Lee, 88 Tenn. 783; Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. (U. S.) 287; Weare v. Deering, 60 N. H. 56.

2. Ocean Beach Assoc. v. Brinley, 34 N. J. Eq. 439. In Groesbeck v. Golden (Tex. 1887), 7 S.W. Rep. 363, the court, by Maltbie, J., says: "The doctrine is, without doubt, a wise and useful one, and should be upheld with a firm hand and unshaken purpose on all proper occasions. There are a few general rules of almost universal application underlying and supporting this doctrine. For instance, where a decision has been made, adhered to, and followed for a series of years, it will not be disturbed except on the most cogent reasons, and it must be shown in such case that the former decisions are clearly erroneous; and where property rights have grown up under the decision, the rule will not be changed for any reason. But if the decision is of recent origin and the error plain, the court will usually declare the law as it really is. The supreme court in this State, in a number of cases, has changed the rule on the second appeal of said cases. We do not think that any court has ever held that when there has been an erroneous decision in one case only, and when the doctrine of all cases that have preceded and followed it in reference to the matters decided is contrary to the doctrine of that case, it will be upheld as stare decisis, although never having been expressly overruled for the sole purpose of taking a piece of property from one man and giving it to another."

future cases involving the same issues.¹ Where the decision of any tribunal is subject to appeal to a higher court, such decision is not affected by the doctrine of stare decisis until passed upon by the higher tribunal of last resort.²

It may be difficult sometimes to determine what are dicta and what are not. It need not be that points decided must have been fully and completely considered in every detail, in order that they may be regarded as decisions and not merely as dicta. The determining point is rather whether the issue is directly involved in the case than whether it has been exhaustively considered.³ In some courts it is held that points treated, which are outside the record, are not really decided, but that the language of the court regarding them is and can be only dicta; while in other States, this has nothing to do with determining the status, it depending upon the directness of the issue and the elaborateness of treatment by the court.⁴

II. THE LAW OF PRECEDENT—1. In General.—There is a marked distinction between dicta and decisions. The former simply indicate, as it were, the sympathies of the court, while the latter are conclusive in the higher tribunals from the decision of which there is no appeal. Matters outside the record are generally considered as merely incidental or collateral to the direct decision upon the principal issues in a case. Sometimes analogies are given, sometimes illustrations only, and none of these are intended as decisions to be in any way binding in the rendering of subsequent decisions. Decisions are precedents, dicta are not.⁵ In the con-

1. Paul v. Davis, 100 Ind. 422; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 695; People v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 256; 35 Am. Dec. 669.

2. Allen v. Allen (Cal. 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 30; Lucas v. Tippecanoe County, 44 Ind. 541; Bridge v. Johnson, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 372.

3. Michael v. Morey, 26 Md. 261; 90 Am. Dec. 106; People v. Winkler, 9 Cal. 236; Pass v. McRae, 36 Miss. 148; Holcomb v. Bonnell, 32 Mich. 8.

4. Buchner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Wis. 264; Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 488; State v. Baughman, 38 Ohio St. 455; Etting v. Bank of U. S., 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 59; Morse v. Goold, 11 N. Y. 285; 62 Am. Dec. 103.

5. In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 695, the court, by Caruthers, J., said: "It may not be out of place here to remark, as the subject seems to be so often and by so many misunderstood, that the generality of the language used in an opinion is always to be restricted to the case before the court, and it is only authority to that extent. The reasoning, illustrations, or references, contained in the opinion of a court, are not authority, not precedent, but only the points in judgment arising in the particular case before the court. The reason of this is manifest. The members of a court may often agree in a decision—the final result in a case—but differ widely as to the reasons and principles conducting their minds to the same conclusion. It is then the conclusion only, and not the process by which it is reached, which is the opinion of the court, and authority in other cases. The law is thus far settled, but no farther. The reasoning adopted, the analogies and illustrations presented, in real or supposed cases, in an opinion, may be used as argument in other cases, but not as authority. In these the whole court may concur, or they may not. So of the principles concurred in and laid down as governing the point in judgment, so far as it goes, or seems to go, beyond the case under consideration. If this were not so, the writer of an opinion would be sideration of the doctrine of stare decisis the interpretation is to be broader than is generally given to decisions, or rather the effect of prior decisions is more comprehensive and wider reaching. For not only are actual decisions followed, but it is even claimed that any subsequent allegations as to what is determined under the necessity in each case, though his mind is concentrated upon the case in hand and the principles announced directed to that, to protract and uselessly encumber his opinion with all the restrictions, exceptions, limitations, and qualifications which every variety of facts and change of phase in cases might render necessary." The foregoing language was adopted with approval by the Indiana court in Lucas v. Tippecanoe County, 44 Ind. 541.

In People v. Mayor, etc., of Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 544, the court said: "We look into these opinions in vain for the evidence of that solemn argument and mature deliberation which, upon the doctrine of stare decisis, should give to this case the weight of authority sufficient to foreclose the judgment of all other tribunals upon the same question."

In Harris v. Clark, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 94, the court, by Gridley, J., when pressed with a former decision, responded as follows: "In opposition to this doctrine, however, the case of Wright v. Wright (1 Cow. (N. Y.) 598) is pressed upon us as an authoritative adjudication which we are bound to follow. We believe in a rigid adherence to the doctrine of stare decisis. We regard it as necessary to preserve the stability, the certainty, and the symmetry of any system of jurisprudence; and, therefore, if we had any reason to believe that the decision in this case was made upon deliberate consideration, and that the adoption of the reasons assigned by the judge was necessary to the decision of the questions before the court, we should certainly regard it as an authority binding upon us, and leave the error, if any there were, to be corrected in the court of the last resort. But we do not think the case of Wright v. Wright entitled to the authority of judgment upon the point in question. The case itself was a non-enumerated motion. The disposition of this class of cases is constantly made upon equitable considerations, which address themselves to the discretion of the court; and relief is frequently granted on equitable terms against the strict legal rights of the parties. The judgment in this case was merely a refusal to stay the proceedings in a cause after verdict, to enable the applicant to move for a new trial upon newly discovered evidence; and the decision might well have been placed upon the ground assumed by the circuit judge in refusing to grant the same order which, in no respect, involved the principle now under consideration. It is manifest from the report of that case that it did not receive a deliberate examination either by the counsel or the court. No one of the cases upon the subject of gifts causa mortis appears to have been brought to the notice of the court, and none of the objections which in other cases have been held fatal, were alluded to by the judges in the brief remarks that fell from them in disposing of the motion. For these reasons, we consider ourselves at liberty to dispose of this interesting and important question, unembarrassed by the authority in the decision in Wright v. Wright. We may also add that that case has been reviewed and its conclusions disapproved by the courts of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Vermont."

Greenbaum v. Stein, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 226; Holcomb v. Bonnell, 32 Mich. 8. Decisions long acquiesced in should not be changed if incorrect. State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 594.

The effect of decisions as precedents is not changed by the setting off of new States or varying the boundaries so that it might seem that an old decision would not be a precedent in a different State. Pyles v. Riverside Furniture Co., 30 W. Va. 123; Wilson v. Perry, 29 W. Va. 169.

The decisions of the full bench will control the opinion of a single justice, unless there has been some flagrant error committed, sufficient to justify a change. Bentley v. Goodwin, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 640; Loring v. U. S. Vulcanized Gutta Percha Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 646; Adams v. Bush, 2 Abb.

in any case is to be respected, so that not only the particular case but any subsequent interpretation or explanation of its meaning is to be regarded as coming within the doctrine and final.¹

the Interpretation of Language of Court.—The language used in the opinions of the court must be construed in the light of the circumstances connected with each case. Its influence and weight as a precedent is also largely dependent upon them. The language in argument, or findings, may have a restricted or enlarged interpretation by reason of its connection with a specific statement of facts.²

3. A Divided Court.—A decision rendered by a court equally divided in opinion, while binding in the particular case as fully as a decision rendered by a unanimous court, is not binding as a

Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 118; People v. Mayor, etc., of Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 544; Harris v. Clark, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 101.

A decision of the supreme court becomes the law of the case upon the points involved, even though erroneous. Lindsay v. People, 1 Idaho N. S. 438; Barton v. Thompson, 56 Iowa 571; 41 Am. Rep. 119. Yet if the decision is overruled before the final trial of the case in the court below, it is the duty of that court on the trial to follow the rule last established by the supreme court. Barton v. Thompson, 56 Iowa 571; 41 Am. Rep. 119.

The principle of stare decisis applies equally on appeal. Adams County v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 55 Iowa 94. Decisions of long standing, which have been frequently relied upon, should be leniently considered and reversed only where their inaccuracy is plain. Davidson v. Biggs, 61 Iowa 309; Henry v. Quackenbush, 48 Mich. 415.

There is no vested right to claim the benefit of any particular decision of a court. Taliaferro v. Barnett, 47 Ark. 359.

The rule of stare decisis will not prevent the overruling of a previous decision ascertained to be wrong. Paul v. Davis, 100 Ind. 422.

1. Bennett v. Bennett, 34 Ala. 53; Matheson v. Hearin, 29 Ala. 210; People v. Benzie County, 34 Mich. 211; Baker v. Lorillard, 4 N. Y. 261; Davidson v. Allen, 36 Miss. 421; Richmond St. Railway Co. v. Reed, 83 Ind. 9.

2. Where there was an indictment against a bailee for the larceny of money it was held that all the particulars should be set forth including the allegation that it was lawful money of the United States. People v. Cohen, 8 Cal. 42.

This was afterwards followed in a case of larceny of cattle, in which the indictment stated the value of the cattle without adding the words "lawful money of the United States." Upon this, the court, by Burnett, J., said: "It is true that the language of that opinion, taken without reference to the circumstances of the case, would bear the construction contended for; but the rule is well settled that the language of an opinion in general must be held as referring to the particular case decided. In that case, Cohen was indicted for converting money to his own use whilst he was the bailee of another. The defect was in describing the thing converted. The thing stolen must be correctly described, for the purpose of identification. And when a party is indicted for stealing coin, the kind of coin must be specified. But in this case, the indictment was for stealing cattle, and the value of the animals stolen was alleged in the language of the statute. The statute defining the offense does not use the words 'lawful money of the United States.' The allegation of the value was sufficient, being as certain as the language of the statute." People v. Winkler, 9 Cal. 236; Mellinger v. Von Behren, 53 Iowa 374.

In Pass v. McRae, 36 Miss. 148, the court, by Harris, J., said: "Such is the flexibility of language, and even of sentences disconnected from their context, as well as the special state of facts to which they have been applied, that in courts it has become a settled rule that all adjudications are to be considered only in connection with, and as explained by, and limited to, the state of circumstances appearing in the record."

precedent in subsequent cases. The rule that where the court is divided the judgment below is affirmed, is one of convenience rather, in order that an end may be made to the particular litigation. When the same question arises in a subsequent case between other parties, it is treated as an open one and the former decision is not to be invoked as stare decisis.¹

4. Single Decision and Decisions in Series.—While a number of decisions seemingly corroborative of a previous one add strength to it and make it the more difficult to overrule or reverse it, mere numbers of cases upon the issue will not make the decision conclusive. Much more depends upon the opinion of the court and the emphasis placed upon the decision than upon the fact that any case has been followed subsequently. For a variety of reasons, several cases similarly decided are stronger than one. There is less likelihood of error; any points, decisions, or statutes overlooked in the one may be considered in subsequent cases; and the ease of reversing one decision is greater than the overthrow of a series. If there is but one case upon a point, and there seems no good reason for a reversal, that will ordinarily be taken as a fixed precedent. It is where there is a conflict of opinions or an evident error in the decision that a court will overrule one case, when it would hesitate more about condemning several. Much depends upon the importance of the decision and the weight to be attached to it. Whether the court is emphatic in its approval, whether the decision is one affecting or changing important interests, and whether it is expedient or good policy to sustain or overrule a particular decision, are questions which have much influence upon the court.²

¹ 1. "The effect of such judgment of affirmance rendered by a divided court is as conclusive upon the rights of the parties to the judgment as any other, although it is not considered as settling the question of law as to cases which may arise between other parties." Morse v. Goold, 11 N. Y. 285; 62 Am. Dec. 103.

In Etting v. Bank of U. S., 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 59, the court was evenly divided, and Marshall, C. J., said: "In the very elaborate arguments which have been made at the bar, several cases have been cited, which have been attentively considered. No attempt will be made to analyze them or decide on their application to the case before us, because the judges are divided respecting it. Consequently, the principles of law which have been argued cannot be settled, but the judgment is affirmed, the court being divided in opinion upon it." See also People v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 256;

35 Am. Dec. 669; Bridge v. Johnson, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 342; McCutcheon v. Homer, 43 Mich. 483; 38 Am. Rep. 212. Where a court is equally divided no original relief can be granted. Madlem's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 584.

2. In Woolsey v. Judd, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 389, which involved the right of property in manuscripts, the court, by Duer, J., said: "In proceeding to examine, as we now propose, whether it is possible to reconcile this opinion of the late chancellor with the law as settled by prior decisions, and among these the very cases to which he has himself referred, we must not be understood as meaning to detract in any degree from the weight and authority to which his decisions as those of a very able, learned, and laborious judge are generally and justly entitled. The judges of this court have frequently manifested the high sense which they entertain of his judicial merits; and it is with reluctance that we dissent on any occasion from any deliberate judg-

5. Adopted Statutes.—Where the legislature of one State adopts by enactment the statute of another State, it may be said, as a general rule, that the courts adopt the construction put upon such statute by the courts of the State from which it was taken; this, upon the presumption that the legislature was familiar with the construction put upon the statute in the State from which it was taken.¹

6. Recent English Decisions.—The rule last stated is not followed to the extent of making the decisions of the courts of Great Britain since the American Revolution binding upon the courts of the States of the Union in reference to English statutes adopted by the States at that time, even though such statutes are founded upon the common law.²

ment which he has pronounced. But we deny that a recent and solitary decision of any judge, however eminent, ought to be regarded by us as conclusive evidence of the existing law, and we deny that we are bound by the decisions of the chancellor in the same sense in which we are "bound by those of the court of ultimate resort. We stand now in the same relation to the court of appeals as that in which he stood to the court of errors, and in the cases in which we exercise an equitable jurisdiction have succeeded to all the powers which he possessed in similar cases. We have, therefore, exactly the same right to review, and when convinced that errors have intervened that ought not to be perpetuated, to overrule his decisions that he himself and his successors in office, had not the court of chancery been abolished, might and would have exercised. It is known to us all that the cases are numerous in courts of equity as well as of law, in which judges have felt it their duty to reconsider and reverse their own decisions and those of their predecessors; and deplorable, indeed, would be the actual state of the law (as none who has examined the valuable treatise of Mr. Greenleaf on overruled cases will doubt) had not these powers of revision and correction been frequently and firmly exercised. We must all remember that the judgment in Hoyt v. McKenzie (3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 324), from the sanction which it apparently gave to a very dishonorable proceeding, excited general surprise and regret, so that even those who admitted its legality were anxious to relieve the law from the reproach which it occasioned. We are convinced that this reproach of giving a sanction to immorality is one to which the law was never justly liable, and from the continuance of which it ought therefore to be freed."

See also Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 382; Sauer v. Steinbauer, 10 Wis. 370.

A question of no light weight is whether a single decision is a reversal or overruling of any prior case. A case simply establishing a point without in any way interfering or contradicting any previous case would have more weight, of course, than one which was in conflict with previous decisions or dicta. People v. Mayor, etc., of Brooklyn, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 543; Oglesby v. Attrill, 14 Fed. Rep. 214.

In Butler v. Van Wyck, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 438, Bronson, J., in a dissenting opinion, said: "It is going quite too far to say that a single decision of any court is absolutely conclusive as a precedent. It is an elementary principle that an erroneous decision is not bad law; it is no law at all. It may be final upon the parties then before the court, but it does not conclude other parties having rights depending upon the same question."

1. Bemis v. Becker, 1 Kan. 226; Johnson v. Fall, 6 Cal. 361; 65 Am. Dec. 518; Woolsey v. Judd, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 389; Howe v. Welch, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 180; Forepaugh v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 672; Crocker v. Pearson, 41 Kan. 410; Lane v. Watson, 51 N. J. L. 186; McIntyre v. Kamm, 12 Oregon 253; Goodnow v. Wells, 67 Iowa 654; Lord v. Cannon, 75 Ga. 300; Hancock Inspirator Co. v. Register, 35 Fed. Rep. 61.

2. In Caldwell v. Gale, 11 Mich. 77, the court by Manning, J., said: "The

7. Statutes Offered in Evidence.—If a statute is not adopted from another State, any decisions under the statutes of other States will only be considered for the purpose of determining, if possible, what interpretation is the correct one; but such foreign first proposition is sustained by adjudged cases both in England and in this country. It appears to have had its origin as a rule of law in Penraddock's Case, 5 Coke 100. It has antiquity on its side, and is, therefore, entitled to all the consideration and weight that time can give to an adjudication, as precedent for other courts to follow. We are not, however, aware that the question has ever before arisen in our courts, and we do not feel ourselves bound to follow, as precedents, adjudications outside of our own State—save adjudications in the Federal courts on questions arising under the constitution and laws of the Federal government—any further than they appear to us to be warranted by the fundamental principles of the common law."

In Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 280, the United States Supreme Court, by Marshall, C. J., said: "The rule which has been uniformly observed by this court in construing statutes is, to adopt the construction made by the courts of the country by whose legislature the statute was enacted. This rule may be susceptible of some modification when applied to British statutes. By adopting them, they become our own as entirely as if they had been enacted by the legislature of the State. The received construction in England at the time they are admitted to operate in this country, indeed to the time of our separation from the British empire, may very properly be considered as accompanying the statutes themselves and forming an integral part of them. But however we may respect subsequent decisions—and, certainly, they are entitled to great respect—we do not admit their absolute authority. If the English courts vary their construction of a statute which is common to both countries, we do not hold ourselves bound to fluctuate with them."

In Mayor, etc., of Baltimore v. Williams, 6 Md. 235, the court in construing the statute of 27 Eliz., ch. 4, after stating the construction put upon the statute by the English courts, said: "This question has been the fruitful source of much controversy, and has produced many conflicting decisions; but the better American doctrine seems not to be in unison with the established construction at Westminster Hall. . . . And with a view to avoid the influence of American decisions, the appellant's counsel insist that in this State the English doctrine must prevail, because of the provision in our constitution in reference to the adoption of the common law, and the statutes which were in force here at the beginning of the American Revolution. This is a correct position, if by the English doctrine which is to prevail here, is meant such as was settled by judicial decisions previous to our separation from the British empire. And this renders it necessary to ascertain whether, at that time, the construction of the statute had been settled according to the views entertained by the appellant. This subject was examined by the distinguished Chief Justice Marshall in Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 280. He concedes that the received construction of the English statutes, at the time of the Revolution, may very properly be considered as accompanying the statutes themselves, and forming an integral part of them. But subsequent decisions, although entitled to great respect, are not to be received as absolute authority. It is the opinion of the court, as expressed by the chief justice, that the construction of the statute of 27th Elizabeth was not settled in England before, but subsequent to, the year 1776. After speaking of contrariety and ambiguity in the old cases, it is said: 'But this court conceives that the modern decisions, establishing the absolute conclusiveness of a subsequent sale, to fix fraud on a family settlement made without valuable consideration—fraud not to be repelled by any circumstances whatever—go beyond the construction which prevailed at the American Revolution, and ought not to be followed.'"

The language of the Maryland court in the foregoing case was approved and adopted in Koontz v. Nabb, 16 Md. 549, and it was said that English decisions made subsequent to the period of the separation of the States of the decisions are considered in no sense binding or controlling, and the court will, in the light of such assistance as it can obtain, place its own construction upon the law relating to the case.¹

8. Executive Departments of Government.—Sometimes matters of a kindred nature are passed upon by the executive or other department of a government. Courts need not consider and certainly are not bound by any department other than the judicial of any government. They may consider or not, as they please, the action of any other department. The judicial department is separate from and independent of, in a certain sense, all other branches of the government. Each department, in its decisions, furnishes a precedent unto itself, but for no other branch of government.²

Union from the British empire, though entitled to great respect, were not to be received as absolute authority.

1. Nelson v. Goree, 34 Ala. 565; Lownsdale v. Portland, 1 Oregon 390; Heinlen v. Martin, 59 Cal. 181; McIntyre v. Kamm, 12 Oregon 253; Lord v. Cannon, 75 Ga. 300; Goodnow v. Wells, 67 Iowa 654; Levy v. Hitsche, 40 La. Ann. 500; Croocker v. Pearson, 41 Kan. 410; Forepaugh v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 672; Lane v. Watson, 51 N. J. L. 186; Howe v. Welch, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 80; Bressler v. Wayne County, 25 Neb. 468; The Chelmsford, 34 Fed. Rep. 399; Norton v. Taxing Dist. of Brownsville, 36 Fed. Rep. 99; Lord v. Cannon, 75 Ga. 300; Goodnow v. Wells, 67 Iowa 654.

2. In Lownsdale v. Portland, 1 Oregon 390, the court, by Deady, J., says: "When Congress, by the act of 1848, organizing the Territory of Oregon, said that the laws of the United States should be in force in said Territory, 'so far as the same, or any provision thereof, may be applicable,' they did not mean that any particular law of the United States should be in force here, but only such as should be determined 'to be applicable.' Under this state of things, authority is necessarily given to the courts of the country, and it becomes their duty, whenever the question arises, to decide what laws were in force and what were not. Doubtless any administrative department of the government,—the land office, for instance—charged with the duty of disposing of the public lands in this Territory, may be called upon to decide the same questions; but I respectfully submit that while their decision may operate to pass the title out of the United States, it does not conclude the courts in a proper case when parties are before the court claiming under conflicting laws of the United States, or any law of the United States, from deciding what laws were applicable, and, consequently, in force, and what were not, at a particular time, independently of the decision of said department, or even adversely to it."

Decisions of Land Office.—In Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, it was laid down that courts could not exercise a direct appellate jurisdiction over the rulings of the officers of the land department, nor reverse or correct them in a suit between private parties; that it was only where such officers had misconstrued the law, or where their judgment had been affected by misrepresentation or fraud, that, in a proper proceeding, courts could interfere and refuse to give effect to the action of such officers; and that the misconstruction of the law must be made manifest.

In Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 72, it was said that where the law confided to a special tribunal authority to hear and determine certain matters, the decision of such tribunal was in general conclusive, but that, though this was so, a decision of the United States land office did not oust courts of equity of their ordinary jurisdiction, whether in matters of trust or of fraud or mistake. And see generally Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. (U. S.) 314; Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. (U. S.) 43; Minnesota v. Bacheider, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 109; Lindsay v. Hawes, 2 Black (U. S.) 554; Rector v. Gibbon, 111 U. S. 276; Cox v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 208; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 646; Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U.

III. ERRONEOUS PRECEDENTS AS RULES OF PROPERTY—1. In General.—The law in regard to titles to real estate especially requires stability. As injurious as are frequent changes in the law, no decisions as to personal property or damages require such permanency as those relating to realty. Even one decision in the latter case will be scrupulously guarded and preserved, for titles are for all time and should stand as passed upon if possible. Courts are always reluctant to overrule or reverse any decision unless it is manifestly unjust and inaccurate. Titles may be largely or wholly dependent upon previous decisions, and landed interests would be jeopardized by sudden or frequent changes in interpretation or construction of legal principles.¹

S. 463; Haydel v. Dufresne, 17 How. (U. S.) 23. See also UNITED STATES COURTS.

1. Rockhill v. Nelson, 24 Ind. 424; Harrow v. Myers, 29 Ind. 470; Reed v. Ownby, 44 Mo. 206; Kearny v. Buttles, 1 Ohio St. 366; Lion v. Burtiss, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 487; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 382; Hihn v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 402; Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 110; People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; 97 Am. Dec. 141; Davidson v. Allen, 36 Miss. 421; Matheson v. Hearin, 29 Ala. 210; Bennett v. Bennett, 34 Ala. 53; Baker v. Lorillard, 4 N. Y. 261; State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 594; Pond v. Irwin, 113 Ind. 243; Snydor v. Gascoigne, 11 Tex. 455; Lemp v. Hastings, 4 Greene (Iowa) 449; Pond v. Irwin, 113 Ind. 243; Pawson v. Portland, 16 Oregon 450; Stryker v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 527; Chapman v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 540; Litchfield v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 549; Plumb v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 560; Des Moines Nav., etc., Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co., 123 U. S. 552. Uniformity is of great importance. The Chelmsford, 34 Fed. Rep. 399; Norton v. Taxing Dist. of Brownsville, 36 Fed. Rep. 99; Pickle v. People, 88 Tenn. 380; The Madrid, 40 Fed. Rep. 677.

In Giblin v. Jordan, 6 Cal. 418, the court, by Murray, C. J., said: "This case may be a hard one, but it forms no reason why the former decisions should be disregarded. The frequent instances in which courts have relaxed rules to avoid the consequences of cases like this have done more to confuse and complicate the law than all other causes put together. A rule once established and firmly adhered to may work apparent hardship in a few cases, but in the end will have more beneficial effect than if constantly deviated from."

The same court, in Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 188, said: "Courts are permitted to exercise a wide discretion, and judges are not expected or required to overturn principles which have been considered and acted upon as correct, thereby disturbing contracts and property, and involving everything in inextricable confusion, simply because some abstract principle of law has been incorrectly established in the outset. The books are full of cases in which learned judges have acknowledged the errors committed by themselves or their predecessors, and at the same time refused to overthrow the rule established. That judge, who, from petty vanity and for the sake of showing himself more wise and learned than his predecessors, would overturn a rule which for years had settled the rights of property, should be regarded as the common enemy of mankind, and unworthy of the high trust that had been confided to him."

In Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. (U. S.) 343, the court, by Baldwin, J., said: "We do not deem it necessary now or hereafter, to retrace the reasons or the authorities on which the decisions of this court in that or the cases which preceded it, rested; they are founded on the oldest and most sacred principles of the common law. Time has consecrated them; the courts of the States have followed, and this court has never departed from them. They are rules of property on which the repose of the country depends; titles acquired under the proceedings of courts of competent jurisdiction must be deemed inviolable in collateral action, or none can know what is his own; and there are no judicial sales around which greater sanctity ought to be placed than those made of the estates of decedents by order of those courts to whom the laws of the States confide full jurisdiction over the subject."

In Bates v. Relyea, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 340, the court, by Cowen, J., said: "The decisions of this court, while unreversed, always form the absolute law of the cases, and enter with very decisive effect into the body of precedents. They must, from the nature of our legal system, be the same to the science of law as a convincing series of experiments is to any other branch of inductive philosophy. They are, upon being promulgated, immediately relied upon as to their character, either as confirming an old or forming a new principle of action which, perhaps, is at once applied to thousands of cases. These are continually multiplying throughout the whole extent of our jurisdiction. Numerous and valuable rights, offensive and defensive, may be claimed under them. And no doubt this remark is peculiarly true of the decision in Clark v. Luce (15 Wend. (N. Y.) 479). That decision, moreover, like all others made upon the subject of statute construction, even should it be reversed by the court of dernier resort, would still, by force of another statute, be itself equal to a legislative enactment concerning the particular case for the purpose of protecting all persons who may have in the meantime acted under it in good faith, against any penalty or forfeiture. Independent of this statute, Sir William Jones has written an excellent commentary on the maxim stare decisis, etc., by way of reply to a remark of Powell, J., who said: 'Nothing is law that is not reason.' 'This is a maxim,' says Jones, 'in theory, excellent; but in practice, dangerous; as many rules true in the abstract are false in the concrete. For, since the reason of Titius may and frequently does differ from the reasoning of Septimius, no man who is not a lawyer would ever know how to advise unless courts were bound by authority as firmly as pagan deities were supposed to be bound by the decrees of fate.' Jones on Bailment 60. The court almost always, in deciding any question, creates a moral power, above itself. And now, when the decision construes a statute, it is legally bound for certain purposes to follow it as a decree emanating from a paramount authority according to its various applications in and out of the immediate case. This would be so of such a constructive decision, even were we to rule it as erroneous by a subsequent one."

Said the Texas court by Lipscomb, J.: "The rule of stare decisis, so far as it applies to the decisions of our own court, should not be disregarded but on the fullest conviction that the law has been settled wrong; and even then we should pause and consider how far the reversal would affect transactions entered into and acted upon under the law of the court." Sydnor v. Gascoigne, 11 Tex. 455.

It should require the best of reasons to change any legal principles relating to titles, otherwise the injustice, to be avoided, may be only just begun. Such law and principles should be fixed and stable, and generally, if the law is known in advance, owners and purchasers will receive that fairness and justice which would otherwise be impossible. Boon v. Bowers, 30 Miss. 256; 64 Am. Dec. 159; Lindsay v. Lindsay, 47 Ind. 286; Hogatt v. Bingham, 7 How. (Miss.) 569; Ewing v. Ewing, 24 Ind. 470; Emerson v. Atwater, 7 Mich. 23; Lemp v. Hastings, 4 Greene (Iowa) 449.

Where there is already a variance or disagreement among the decisions upon any particular point, the court may decide regardless almost of previous cases, as it must decide differently from some, at least, of the prior cases. Frane v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., 111 Ind. 132; The Madrid, 40 Fed. Rep. 677.

When legislative or statutory changes are made, they are imperative, and any annoyance or inconvenience arising therefrom must be endured. Laws can be enacted and repealed, and the courts and individuals must submit. Morse v. Goold, 11 N. Y. 292; 62 Am. Dec. 103; Freibroth v. Mann, 70 Ill. 523.

Titles to Real Estate.—In Harrow v. Myers, 29 Ind. 470, the court, speaking of real estate titles, said: "The question at the threshold is, whether a rule of property thus repeatedly declared by the court of last resort, after earnest contest, and, it must be supposed, upon the most careful deliberation, should be deemed open to further controversy. The repose of titles is important to the public. Upon the faith of these decisions our people have for a considerable period of years invested their money in real estate, the titles to which they were thus again and again assured were not liable to be disturbed. There must be a just basis of confidence in the stability of judicial decision somewhere in the history of a controverted legal question, when it may be confidently relied on that the question is settled. It is not always that the courts may freely inquire, in determining a case before them, what is the law? Sometimes investigation should stop when it has been ascertained what has been decided on the subject. The doctrine of stare decisis should be applied to the question now presented. Such is its relation to the interests of our people among whom real estate is so much an article of traffic that it is not possible to estimate the extent of the evil which would follow a decision of this court now overruling Strong v. Clem (12 Ind. 37), and the cases which followed it. If the doctrine of those cases be admitted to be wrong, it is yet quite obvious that it has already accomplished most of the harm that ever can result from it, while a change now would sow a wide crop of serious evils to the injury of those who are innocent, and who have purchased and sold real estate upon the faith of a doctrine declared by this court no less than half a dozen times within the last ten years." Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. (U. S.) 343; Ewing v. Ewing, 24 Ind. 470; Emerson v. Atwater, 7 Mich. 23.

2. Decisions of Inferior Courts.—Ordinarily a higher court may reverse or disregard the decision of an inferior court. But this is not universally true; there are many instances where the decision of an inferior court is practically final, and binding.¹

3. Claim to an Office.—Where decisions have been rendered regarding the legality of a vote whereby a person is chosen to fill an official position, it is largely within the power of any court to decide whether it will maintain a decision, or follow an established precedent. This is a question which does not lie entirely with the judiciary to determine. The legislative department may take such action in the premises as will conclude the courts from further decision and bind them by its legislation.

Descent.—In Rockhill v. Nelson, 24 Ind. 424, the court by Gregory, J., speaking of a rule of descent which had been assailed by argument, said: "This position, so forcibly addressed to this court before the decision in the case of Martindale v. Martindale

(10 Ind. 566), would have been entitled to grave consideration, and it is, indeed, difficult to see how it could have been met by legal argument. But there are some questions in law, the final settlement of which is vastly more important than how they are settled; and among these are rules of property long recognized and acted upon and under which rights have vested. It must be admitted that our law of descents, among the most important on our statute book, is not remarkable for precision and clearness, and that vexatious questions are often occurring requiring judicial interpretation of this statute. We cannot change a decision without producing confusion in titles, as the ruling would necessarily relate back to the time the law came in force. But if the canon of descent, as settled by the determination of the court of last resort, is unjust or even distasteful, the legislature can change the rule by a new statute without interfering with vested rights. As now constituted, however much we may differ from the opinions of our predecessors, we shall not introduce doubt and confusion into questions of property by overruling the previous decisions of this court. We have had occasion in the last few months to overrule a number of cases, but only in that class in which the rulings operate upon the future and not upon the past, and which in our opinion will be attended by unmixed good."

1. Attorney Gen'l v. Lake County, 33 Mich. 290; 34 Mich. 211; Morse v. Gould, 11 N. Y. 292; 62 Am. Dec. 103; Freibroth v. Mann, 70 Ill. 523; Rockhill v. Nelson, 24 Ind. 424; Reed v. Ownby, 44 Mo. 206; Harrow v. Myers, 29 Ind. 470; Reed v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 283.

Still, when there is any doubt as to the construction to be put upon legislative language, it is very properly brought before the courts for interpretation.¹

IV. DECISIONS CONSTRUING CONSTITUTIONS AND STATUTES.—The same or similar principles control in the construction of constitutions and statutes as apply in following precedents or any special or general principles of the common law.²

It is generally held that the doctrine of stare decisis applies equally to cases of interpretation and construction of constitutions and of statutes. There is seemingly no difference, but in either class of cases, if a palpable wrong or injustice would be done, the doctrine would be so modified as to adapt it wisely to the particular case.³ If there have been many decisions, or if the business relations of parties or the titles to real estate are to be affected, the courts will, if possible, avoid passing upon the con-

1. People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; 97 Am. Dec. 141; Duff v. Fisher, 15 Cal. 382; Lion v. Burtiss, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 487; Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 110; Kearny v. Buttles, 1 Ohio St. 366; Hihn v. Courtis, 31 Cal. 402.

2. Levy v. Hitsche, 40 La. Ann. 500; Forepaugh v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 672; Crocker v. Pearson, 41 Kan. 410; Lane v. Watson, 51 N. J. L. 186; Goodnow v. Wells, 67 Iowa 654.

In Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 403, where the question was as to whether a court should be considered one of inferior or superior jurisdiction, it was held that the question was not an open one after it had acted as the latter for more than five years. The supreme court, by Heydenfeldt, J., said the question was not an open one, since it had "remained as an exposition, by the tribunal of last resort, of the character of the court in question, for nearly five years. The community to be affected by it had acted upon it in a vast number of judicial relations; rights of property had grown up under it, had changed hands and passed through numerous ramifications, until it had become imperative to regard it as a rule of property which no power could disturb." The court further remarked: "What our present opinion may be as to the merits of the decision in that case is now of no consequence whatever. In construing statutes and the constitution, the rule is almost universal to adhere to the doctrine of stare decisis. This is an adjudicated question, and the subject of its correctness is to us a sealed book."

3. Paul v. Davis, 100 Ind. 424; Paulson v. Portland, 16 Oregon 450; Henry v. Quackenbush, 48 Mich. 415; Heinlen v. Martin, 59 Cal. 181; Davidson v. Biggs, 61 Iowa 309.

In Willis v. Owen, 43 Tex. 48, the constitutionality and validity of a tax act came before the court, which by Moore, J., said: "The constitutionality of this law and the liability of the taxpayers for these taxes have been sustained by this court. . . . It may be, therefore, thought that the question should be regarded by us as now open for discussion—that whatever might be our views in respect to it, upon the principle of stare decisis, we should hold it as definitely settled and concluded. We cannot, however, regard the rule as having any just application to questions of the character involved in these cases. This doctrine grows out of the necessity for a uniform and settled rule of property and a definite basis for contracts and business transactions. If a decision is wrong, it is only when it has been so long the rule of action as that time and its continued application as the rule of right between parties demand sanction of its error. Because when a decision has been recognized as the law of property and conflicted demands have been adjusted, and contracts have been made with reference to, and on faith of it, greater injustice must be done to individuals and more injury result to society by a reversal of such decision, though erroneous, than to observe and follow it. But where a decision is not of this character, upon no sound principle do we feel at liberty to perpetustitutionality of any statute. That is to say, they will be equally or more reluctant than they would be in overruling or reversing any decisions or precedents.¹ Courts will be extremely reluctant to pass upon any laws which have in any way received, since their enactment, any legislative sanction. All the reasons for not doing it will be raised, the length of time the law has been in force, the numerous decisions under it, and the hardship and injustice likely to arise from any change, the good resulting being more than counteracted by the mischief and harm which would follow.²

ate an error into which either our predecessors or ourselves may have unadvisedly fallen merely upon the ground of such erroneous decision having been previously rendered.

"The questions to be considered in these cases have no application whatever to the title or transfer of property; or to matters of contract. They involve the construction and interpretation of the organic law, and present for consideration the structure of the government, the limitations upon executive and legislative power as safeguards against tyranny and oppression. Certainly it cannot be seriously insisted that questions of this character can be disposed of by the doctrine of stare decisis. The former decisions of the court in such cases are unquestionably entitled to most respectful consideration, and should not be lightly disregarded or overruled. And in case of doubtful interpretation a long settled and well recognized judicial interpretation or even legislative or executive construction within the sphere of their respective functions, might be sufficient to turn the balanced scale. But in such case the former decision or previous construction is received and weighed merely as an authority tending to convince the judgment of the correctness of the particular conclusion, and not as a rule to be followed without inquiry into its correctness."

In Kneeland v. Milwaukee, 15 Wis. 454, the subject of stare decisis in the case of a statute attacked for unconstitutionality underwent a lengthy discussion.

1. In Fisher v. Horicon Iron, etc., Co., 10 Wis. 355, the constitutionality of a mill-dam act had been sustained. The decision sustaining it stood for a considerable length of time, and was followed by two or three others. The matter coming up again, the court, by Cole, J., confessed that were the matter of constitutionality available for consideration as a new question, the decision would doubtless be the other way, but yet refused to open the investigation, saying: "We are now asked to depart from that decision; ought we to do it? It is the duty of this branch of the government to pass finally upon the construction of a law and determine whether the legislature in its action has transcended its constitutional limits; and the community has a right to expect with confidence that we will adhere to decisions made after full argument and upon due consideration. The members of the court may change totally every six years, and if each change in the organization produces a change in the decisions and a different construction of laws under which important rights and interests have become vested, it is easy to see that the consequences will be most pernicious. For these and other reasons, we decline to reconsider the constitutionality of the mill-dam law." See also Bibb v. Bibb, 79 Ala. 437; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 668; Grubbs v. State, 24 Ind. 296.

2. In Grubbs v. State, 24 Ind. 296, an act was declared unconstitutional because it embraced more than one subject. After some time had elapsed and three sessions of the legislature had intervened, the court said: "This very question was decided by this court against the validity of the enactment more than five years ago. Three legislatures have since held their sessions and adjourned, we believe, without even attempting to enact the provisions thus held void in a form which would be free from the constitutional objections then adjudged to exist. Our citizens, upon the faith of that decision standing unquestioned so long, have unsuspectingly acted as agents for foreign insurance companies without comply-

V. THE LAW OF THE CASE—1. General Principles ; Extent of Rule.

—Where a decision is given by a court of ultimate appeal in any case, that decision must be regarded as conclusive in that particular case. Where a question arises in a case similar to one already adjudicated in a prior case, while the force of precedent is strong, the court may overrule, affirm, or modify any previous decision. In the same case any ruling is final, in a different one it is only the precedent established, and, while courts are reluctant to disregard previous decisions in similar cases, there may be a variety of reasons which will cause them to do it. This general distinction exists and must be recognized, no matter how palpable the error or unfortunate the circumstances. It is one over which the court itself has no control.¹

ing with an act supposed in good faith to be void and so pronounced by the solemn judgment of the court of last resort. All classes have, upon the like faith, purchased and paid for indemnity covering in the aggregate probably millions in value. We ought, in any case, to proceed with great caution in reversing opinions heretofore pronounced by this court and received and acted upon as settling the law, and especially when a rule of property would be overturned and that would be made criminal which had before been adjudged lawful. In such cases, it were often better that what is settled should not be disturbed by judicial action though it be wrong. This principle has so often received the sanction of appellate courts that it has become a maxim for their guidance; and it is especially important that it should not be forgotten here where the judges hold for short terms, and where, unfortunately, the entire court may be changed at once. If it be also remembered that the validity of every contract of insurance and every policy issued in this State by foreign insurance companies would be brought in question, it would seem quite unfortunate at least if we shall feel compelled to do so." Romaine v. Kinshimer, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 521; Fisher v. Horicon Iron, etc., Co., 10 Wis. 355.

Or a simple question of jurisdiction, may easily be, and should be, corrected. Romaine v. Kinshimer, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 521.

Some really erroneous decisions are left undisturbed because of the length of time they have been in force. Van Wrinkle v. Constantine, 10 N. Y. 425. And see on the general subject, Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Davidson County Ct., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 668; Willis v. Owen, 43 Tex. 48; Levy v. Hitsche, 40 La. Ann. 500; Boon v. Bowers, 30 Miss. 256; 64 Am. Dec. 159.

1. Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 685; Gunter v. Laffan, 7 Cal. 588; Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 75; Lucas v. San Francisco, 28 Cal. 591; Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 635; Booth v. Com., 7 Met. (Mass.) 285; Stiver v. Stiver, 3 Ohio 19; Hosack v. Rogers, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 313; Sibbald v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 488; The Santa Maria, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 431; Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 3 How. (U. S.) 425; Phelan v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 39; Richmond St. R. Co. v. Reed, 83 Ind. 9; Rector v. Danley, 15 Ark. 307; Romaine v. Kinshimer, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 521; Bell v. Lamprey, 58 N. H. 124; Plaisted v. Holmes, 58 N. H. 619; Frankland v. Cassidy, 62 Tex. 418; Langford v. Wilkinson County, 75 Ga. 502.

In Stacy v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 32 Vt. 552, the court, by Pierpont, J., explained the importance of the rule thus: "The question is, will this court revise a former decision made by the same court in the same cause and on substantially the same state of facts? Such a decision presses itself upon the consideration of the court with a twofold force; first, as an authority, as though it was a decision made in any other case; second, as an adjudication between the parties, not as one that is conclusive as a matter of law, for the court may revise and reverse it, but as an adjudication that practically is to be regarded as having much the same effect. The rule has been long established in this State, often declared from the bench, and we believe uniformly adhered to, that in the same cause this court will not revise or reverse their former decisions. It is urged, and there is force in the argument, that if there is error in the decision and it is ever to be reversed, it should be done in the same court. Although this position may be sound in theory as applicable to a single case, yet as a rule to be acted on in all cases it would lead to incalculable mischief. If all questions that have been determined by this court are to be regarded as still open for discussion and revision in the same cause, there would be no end to their litigation until the ability of the parties or the ingenuity of their counsel were exhausted. A rule that has been so long established and acted upon and that is so important to the practical administration of justice in our courts, we think should not be departed from. And whatever views the different members of this court may entertain as to the soundness of the former decision, we all agree that the doctrine there enunciated is to be regarded as the law of this case."

2. Matters of Fact; Change of Evidence.—In case of appeal where the court finds certain facts from the evidence, and requires certain findings of fact by the lower court and remands the case for that purpose, there can be no investigation upon a second writ of error. All the facts and rulings, so far as consistently may be, will be adhered to in all subsequent consideration of the case. If new

No new matter or points come before a court beyond what came before the inferior court in cases of appeal. The record, the pleadings and evidence as previously submitted only will be considered, except in some instances where the hearing takes place de novo. The Santa Maria, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 431. See also Hayes v. Collins, 114 Mass. 54; Himely v. Rose, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 313; Skillern v. May, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 267; Matthews v. Sands, 29 Ala. 136; Huffman v. State, 30 Ala. 532; Ogden v. Lanabee, 70 Ill. 510; Rising v. Carr, 70 Ill. 596; Hawley v. Smith, 45 Ind. 183; Kibler v. Bridges, 5 S. Car. 336; Parker v. Pomeroy, 2 Wis. 122.

In Attorney-Gen'l v. Lum, 2 Wis. 514, the court, by Smith, J., said: "This opinion of the supreme court, pronounced by the chief justice, would seem to be conclusive as to the right here sought to be enforced. But it is contended that the opinions pronounced by the supreme court are not of binding authority upon the circuit court, and it is intimated that though inferior courts may treat such opinions never so contemptuously, yet the mere remittitur certified and transmitted by our clerk is the only authoritative direction to the court below. This is not the correct view of the law. It is not intended to be declared that all the reasoning and instances of illustration introduced into an opinion of this court are to be adopted by inferior tribunals from which cases or matters may come here by appeal, writ of error, or otherwise; but it is insisted and declared that the opinion of this court upon the points in judgment presented and passed upon in cases brought here for adjudication, are the law of the land until overruled or otherwise annulled, and that inferior courts and tribunals must yield obedience to the law thus declared. We should be unfaithful to the high trust committed to us should we fail to discharge this solemn duty of enforcing the law in this respect, upon the faithful and complete execution of which the most sacred and vital rights of the citizen must frequently depend; and every inferior officer, judicial or ministerial, must know and be informed that such acquiescence and obedience will be rigidly exacted, and resistance will be most effectually subdued."

See also Thomason v. Dill, 34 Ala. 177; Frankland v. Cassaday, 62 Tex. 418; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Houser, 111 Ind. 266; Davis v. Curtis, 70 Iowa 398; Mix v. People, 122 Ill. 641; Smyth v. Neff, 123 Ill. 310. Wood v. Wheeler, 9 Tex. 128; Davidson v. Dallas, 15 Cal. 82; Stacy v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 32 Vt. 552; Rector v. Danley, 14 Ark. 307; Attorney Gen'l v. Lum, 2 Wis. 514; Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 3 How. (U. S.) 425.

Where the appellate court declared a deed of trust to be void, that decision was held to be the immutable law of the case to govern all subsequent proceedings therein, notwithstanding that afterwards in another case a different decision was made on a similar deed. Thomson v. Albert, 15 Md. 285.

Where a will was construed in refer-evidence is produced at a subsequent trial, it may so change the whole case as to render a different and entirely independent decision imperative, and the previous rulings will be lightly regarded. But in appellate or any subsequent consideration of a case, the limits within which the evidence has been kept, and the issues involved, will be kept directly in view, and no indirect, collateral, or immaterial evidence or issues will be entitled to any consideration. In cases of title to real estate, the courts will be especially particular to avoid interference, and no evidence or facts will be admitted to show anything having a tendency to vitiate a previous decision if it can be prevented. In fine, all parties will be protected in their property interests, and no question will be passed upon in a way to upset prior decisions and invalidate titles, if there is any way to avoid it.¹

ence to a certain title and the same will in regard to the same property was again brought up for construction on the same question in another suit, it was held that the former decision would be sustained whether technically conclusive or not. Here the court put it in the proviso, "unless manifestly erroneous." But the rule does not usually admit such a reservation. Dugan v. Hollins, 13 Md. 162. Here the court, by Eccleston, J., said: "We have not been able to discover a sufficient reason for making this an exception to the almost uninterrupted practice of all courts of receiving their own decisions as of binding force."

Relation of Landlord and Tenant.—Where a decision was given that if a landlord, without the consent of the tenant, should enter upon the premises before the termination of the lease and relet them to another, these acts would release the tenant from his covenant, except as to such part of the rent as had accrued when the entry was made, and afterwards the case again came before the court, when the exception above noted was adjudged palpably erroneous and unjust, the court by Heydenfeldt, J., refused to disturb the decision because it was the law of the case, and said: "The latter portion of that decision is in abrogation of one of the plainest principles of the law, and if this case was a new one I would not hesitate to overrule it. But legal rules deprive us of the power to do so. The decision having been made in this case, it has become the law of the case, and is not now the subject of revision." Dewey v. Gray, 2 Cal. 377.

The same reasons were held in proceedings for divorce, sufficient for allowing the decision to stand. Hopkins v. Hopkins, 40 Wis. 462. But not in a case in equity where the ruling was clearly erroneous, and the same was brought directly to the attention of the court. Bane v. Wick, 6 Ohio St. 13.

1. Dodge v. Gaylord, 53 and. 365; Tuttle v. Garrett, 74 Ill. 444; Matthews v. Sands, 29 Ala. 140; Huffman v. State, 30 Ala. 534; Thomason v. Dill, 34 Ala. 177; Ogden v. Larrabee, 70 Ill. 510; Parker v. Pomeroy, 2 Wis. 122; Com. v. Stevens, 142 Mass. 457; Taliaferro v. Barnett, 47 Ark. 359; State v. Baughman, 38 Ohio St. 455; Richmond St. R. Co. v. Reed, 83 Ind. 9; Heinlen v. Martin, 59 Cal. 181; Reed v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 283; Pond v. Irwin, 113 Ind. 243; Weare v. Deering, 60 N. H. 56; Frankland v. Cassady, 62 Tex. 418; Langford v. Wilkinson County, 75 Ga. 502; Feurt v. Ambrose, 34 Mo. App. 360; Hombs v. Corbin, 34 Mo. App. 393.

In Donner v. Palmer, 51 Cal. 629, the court, by Wallace, J., said: "The stipulation distinctly looked to the rendition of a final judgment, which should determine that Donner or Bradley, the one or the other, had acquired the title in fee to the undivided quarter assumed and admitted to have been formerly vested in Yontz. We cannot regard it as reserving the question as to whether or not Yontz himself ever had the title, or as merely presenting the abstract question of the relative priority of the lien under which each claimed to have acquired that title for himself. It cannot be considered that it was the purpose of the parties to obtain the opinion of the court upon one ab-

3. Questions of Jurisdiction.—The same principle applies in regard to decisions relating to jurisdiction. If there has been either a direct or an implied decision as to jurisdiction, the question cannot be raised again or reopened in the same case, although the decision might be reversed, modified or affirmed in another case.¹

VI. LIMITATIONS OF THE RULE.—There are certain reasonable limitations to this as to almost all rules. There are clear and palpable mistakes of law which should be corrected, especially when it can be done without injury to any person or property. If no injury or injustice would result to anyone, and a future and permanent benefit would undoubtedly result, the correction should be made at once. No prior decision is to be reversed without good and sufficient cause, yet the rule is not in any sense iron-clad, and the future and permanent good to the public is to be considered rather than any particular case or interest. Even if the decision affects real-estate interests and titles, there may be cases where it is plainly the duty of the court to interfere and overrule a bad decision. Precedent should not have an overwhelming or despotic influence in shaping legal decisions. No elementary or well settled principle of law can be violated by any decision for any length of time. The benefit to the public in the future is of greater moment than any incorrect decision in the past. Wherever a correction can be made without working more harm than good, it should be done.²

abstract proposition in the first instance, and then upon another, and so on ad infinitum, as they may see proper to submit them, and to be followed, it may be, by no determination of the ultimate rights of either party. Our judicial system has not as yet provided for the establishment of moot courts, or made it our duty to solve legal conundrums for purposes of mere amusement or instruction."

1. Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, 3 How. (U. S.) 413; Clary v. Hoagland, 6 Cal. 685; Rising v. Carr, 70 Ill. 596; Hawley v. Smith, 45 Ind. 183; Kibler v. Bridges, 5 S. Car. 336; Dewey v. Gray, 2 Cal. 377; Dugan v. Hollins, 13 Md. 162; Tompson v. Albert, 15 Md. 285; Bane v. Wick, 6 Ohio St. 13; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 40 Wis. 462. See also last preceding note.

2. Bane v. Wick, 6 Ohio St. 14; Gwin v. McCarroll, 1 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 371; McFarland v. Pico, 8 Cal. 631; San Francisco v. Spring Valley Water Works, 48 Cal. 509; Aud v. Magruder, 10 Cal. 291. In this last case, the court, by Baldwin, J., said: "In overruling the case of Bryan v. Berry (6 Cal. 394), we feel less reluctance because we think that the principle there laid down is of injurious import. We think that principles of commercial law long established and maintained by a consistent course of decision in the other States should not be disturbed; that the tendency of such disturbance in any instance is to confusion and uncertainty, and gives rise to perplexing litigation and doubts and uneasiness in the public mind. Almost any general rule governing commercial transactions, if it has been long and consistently upheld as a part of the general system, is better than a rule superseding it, though the latter were much better as an original proposition. Men knowing how the law has been generally received and repeatedly adjudged govern themselves and are advised by their counsel accordingly; but if courts establish new rules whenever they are dissatisfied with the reasons upon which the old ones rest, the standards of commercial transaction would be destroyed and commercial business regulated by a mere guess at what the opinion of the judges at the time might be, and not by a knowledge of what the doctrines of recognized

Where vital and important public or private rights are concerned and the decisions regarding them are to have a direct and permanent influence in all future time, it becomes the duty as well as the right of the court to consider them carefully and to allow no previous error to continue if it can be corrected. The reason that the rule of stare decisis was promulgated was on the ground of public policy, and it would be an egregious mistake to allow more harm than good to accrue from it. Much not only of legislation but of judicial decision is based upon the broad ground of public policy, and this latter must not be lost sight of. Permanent rights should not be interfered with if it can be avoided, others may with less hesitancy.¹

VII. THE RULE AS BETWEEN STATE AND FEDERAL COURTS.—On questions of the construction or application of provisions of the Federal Constitution, of treaties, and of Federal law, the decisions of the Federal courts have the greater weight; on such questions the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States are binding upon the State courts. On questions of the construction or interpretation of State statutes or constitutions, the decisions of the court of the State whose constitution or statute is in question are followed by the Federal courts.² On questions of general works of authority and the precedents of the courts are. The commercial law has a system of its own, built up by centuries and the wisdom of learned jurists all over the world. It is not local but applicable to all the States with few modifications; and California, eminently commercial in her character, and in close commercial connection with the other States, finds her interest and safety in adhering to the well-settled general rules which prevail in those States as the laws of trade. We repeat, the stability and certainty of these rules are of more importance than any fancied benefits which might accrue from any innovation upon the system. Innovation begets innovation; and we cannot always see with clearness what is to be the consequence of the new rule established. . . . The doctrine of stare decisis seriously invoked by the respondent's counsel can have no effect; or, if any, only the effect to induce us the more readily to return to a principle recognized, we believe, for many years, everywhere else in the commercial world. The conservative doctrine of stare decisis was never designed to protect such an innovation."

And see, to the same effect, the reasoning of the Pennsylvania court in Callender v. Keystone Mut. L. Ins. Co., 23 Pa. St. 471, where a prior decision was attacked on the ground that it had no support from the cases whence it purported to be derived, and the court yielded, and said in regard to the positive right and duty of a court to correct errors when practicable: "Do we violate the doctrine of stare decisis by now correcting the mistake and going back to the well-established doctrine which that case has disturbed? If we do, we commit a greater error than the one we have felt bound to correct; for that doctrine, though incapable of being expressed by any sharp and rigid definition, and therefore incapable of becoming an institute of positive law, is among the most important principles of good government."

1. Hardigree v. Mitchum, 51 Ala. 151; Linn v. Minor, 4 Nev. 462; Hollinshead v. VonGlahn, 4 Minn. 190; 1 Kent's Com. 477; Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 609; Butler v. Van Wyck, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 459; Callender v. Keystone Mut. L. Ins. Co., 23 Pa. St. 474; And v. Magruder, 10 Cal. 291.

2. There is no difficulty in stating the rule; the difficulty is in its application. The Supreme Court of the United States has said that an ejectment in a Federal court is governed by the local statute giving one or more new trials as of right. Equator Min., etc., Co. v. Hall, 106 U. S. 86.

It was held in Hamilton Bank v.

Dudley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 492, that federal courts should follow the decision of a State court as to the validity of a local law under the State constitution.

So in East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. (U. S.) 511; East Hartford v. Hartford Bridge Co., 10 How. (U. S.) 541, and Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 488, it was held that a decision by the highest court of a State that a statute of the State is repugnant to the constitution of the State, was binding upon the Federal courts.

In Gut v. Minnesota, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 35, it was held that the Federal courts were bound by the decision of the highest court of the State that a statute of the State was not in conflict with the constitution of the State.

In Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Black (U. S.) 510, the supreme court followed the decision of a State court holding a statute requiring a railroad aid tax leviable exclusively on realty to be in violation of a provision of the State constitution declaring that the rule of taxation should be uniform and that taxes should be levied on such property as the legislature should prescribe.

In Chambers County v. Clews, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 317, it was held that the Supreme Court of the United States was bound by a decision of the highest court of the State declaring constitutional a statute under which municipal bonds had been issued.

In Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175, it was held that where the State court, by a series of decisions, had affirmed the right of a State legislature, under the State constitution, to authorize the issue of municipal bonds in aid of a railroad, the United States Supreme Court, on approving such decisions, would follow them in a suit on bonds issued and put on the market while those decisions remained in force, even though the State court had since finally overruled them. In this case, Miller, J., dissented and wrote an exhaustive opinion reviewing the cases. See, on this point, Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 204; Thomson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 327; Mitchell v. Burlington, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 270; Larned v. Burlington, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 275; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 181; Kenosha v. Lamson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 477.

So it has been held that the Federal courts are bound by the decision of a State court denying the validity of a statute on the ground that it was not enacted in the mode required by the State constitution. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667. In line with the current of the foregoing cases are Elmwood Tp. v. Marcy, 92 U. S. 289, and Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Vance, 96 U. S. 450.

On a question of the construction and effect of a State statute regulating voluntary assignments, a decision by the State supreme courts binds the federal courts. Union Bank v. Kansas City Bank, 136 U. S. 223.

Where the supreme court affirms the validity of a voluntary conveyance, the Supreme Court of the United States will follow it, although the statute is common to many States and some have differently construed it. Randolph v. Quidnick Co., 135 U. S. 457.

Where, in an action for personal injuries received by a passenger while traveling on Sunday, the trial court ruled that the plaintiff's evidence did not show that he was traveling either from necessity or charity, and he took a nonsuit, and sued in the United States circuit court, this court refused to submit the question of necessity or charity to the jury. Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co., 125 U. S. 555.

It was held in Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, that the United States Supreme Court would follow the decisions of the State court construing the State constitution, even though such construction was contrary to that given by the Federal court in a rule of property having been fixed by the interpretation of the State court and not having been abandoned.

In Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278, it was laid down that the validity of contracts arising under a provision of the organic law of a State must be determined in the light of the construction given to such provision by the highest court of the State. To the same effect substantially is Randall v. Brigham, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 523. Other cases of the same court asserting or recognizing the general doctrine are M'Keen v. Delancy, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 22; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Thatcher v. Powell, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 119; Sneed v. Wister, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 690; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 152; M'Dowell v. Peyton, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 454; Shelby v.

Guy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 361; Jackson v. Chew, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 153; Waring v. Jackson, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 570; Davis v. Mason, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 503; Bell v. Morrison, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 351; D'Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 476; Beach v. Viles, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 675; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 58; Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 216; Hamilton Bank v. Dudley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 492; McCluny v. Silliman, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 270; U. S. v. Morrison, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 124; Hinde v. Vattier, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 398; Henderson v. Griffin, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 151; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 291; Ross v. McLung, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 283; Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 469; Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 608; M'Cutchen v. Marshall, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 220; U. S. Bank v. Daniel, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 32; U. S. v. Coombs, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 72; Ross v. Duval, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 45; Wilcox v. Hunt, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 378; Harpending v. Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 455; Sims v. Hundley, 6 How. (U. S.) 1; Nesmith v. Sheldon, 7 How. (U. S.) 812; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 1; Alabama State Bank v. Dalton, 9 How. (U. S.) 522; Van Rensselaer v. Kearney, 11 How. (U. S.) 297; U. S. v. Reid, 12 How. (U. S.) 361; Murray v. Gibson, 15 How. (U. S.) 421; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. (U. S.) 304; U. S. v. Coxe, 18 How. (U. S.) 100; Beauregard v. New Orleans, 18 How. (U. S.) 497; Morgan v. Curtenius, 20 How. (U. S.) 1; Fisher v. Haldeman, 20 How. (U. S.) 186; Middleton v. McGrew, 23 How. (U. S.) 45; Smith v. McCann, 24 How. (U. S.) 398; Suydam v. Williamson, 24 How. (U. S.) 427; Foote v. Egery, 24 How. (U. S.) 267; League v. Egery, 24 How. (U. S.) 264; Ryan v. Bindley, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 66; Christy v. Pridgeon, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 196; Nichol v. Levy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 433; Williamson v. Suydam, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 723; Lane County v. Oregon, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 71; Walker v. Walker, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 743; McGoon v. Scales, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 23; Williams v. Kirtland, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 306; Richmond v. Smith, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 429; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 203; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 678; Walker v. Marks, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 648; Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 351; Carroll County v. U. S., 18 Wall. (U. S.) 71; Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg, etc., R. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 137; Erie R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 492; Sweeney v. Lomme, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 208; Bailey v. Magwire, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 215; Seacombe v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 23 Wall. (U. S.) 108; Conway v. Taylor, 1 Black (U. S.) 603; Vance v. Campbell, 1 Black (U. S.) 427; Haussknecht v. Claypool, 1 Black (U. S.) 431; Wright v. Bales, 2 Black (U. S.) 535; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black (U. S.) 599; Sumner v. Hicks, 2 Black (U. S.) 532; Townsend v. Todd, 91 U. S. 452; Taylor v. Secor, 92 U. S. 575; Kibbe v. Ditto, 93 U. S. 674; Leavenworth County v. Barnes, 94 U. S. 70; East Oakland Tp. v. Skinner, 94 U. S. 255; Stone v. Wisconsin, 94 U. S. 181; Lawrence v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 U. S. 164; Peik v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 94 U. S. 164; Adams v. Mayor, etc., of Nashville, 95 U. S. 19; Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485; Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 96 U. S. 627; Meister v. Bissell, 96 U. S. 83; Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76; Allis v. Minnesota Mut. L. Ins. Co., 97 U. S. 144; Davie v. Briggs, 97 U. S. 628; Amy v. Dubuque, 98 U. S. 470; Orvis v. Powell, 98 U. S. 176; Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Georgia, 98 U. S. 359; Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676; American Emigrant Co. v. Adams County, 100 U. S. 61; Mohr v. Manierre, 101 U. S. 417; Fleitas v. Cockrem, 101 U. S. 301; Scipio v. Wright, 101 U. S. 665; Bowditch v. Boston, 101 U. S. 16; Swift v. Smith, 102 U. S. 442; Barrett v. Holmes, 102 U. S. 651; Ohio v. Frank, 103 U. S. 697; Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118; Bondurant v. Watson, 103 U. S. 281; Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 806; Moores v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 104 U. S. 625; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51; Bendey v. Townsend, 109 U. S. 665; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371; San Francisco v. Scott, 111 U. S. 768; Britton v. Thornton, 112 U. S. 526; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co., 112 U. S. 250; Bond v. Dustin, 112 U. S. 604; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462; German Sav. Bank v. Franklin County, 128 U. S. 526; Anderson v. Santa Anna, 116 U. S. 356.

Federal courts other than the Supreme Court have thus applied the rule: The decision of the supreme court of a State that a particular corporation is a corporation of that State is binding on the Federal courts. Fitzgerald v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 45 Fed. Rep. 812.

mercantile and commercial law the Federal decisions have no special influence or control over State decisions.¹ In determining property rights founded on the constitution of Spanish and

If municipal bonds are declared invalid by one of the judges holding the circuit court, and the case is pending on a writ of error in the supreme court in a subsequent suit involving the same bonds tried by one of the other judges holding the court, the former judgment should be followed, notwithstanding a difference of opinion until the supreme court has passed on the questions involved. Norton v. Taxing District of Brownsville, 36 Fed. Rep. 99.

Where the supreme court of a State decides that a penal code is or is not duly enacted under the State constitution, the decision will not be reviewed by a Federal court on habeas corpus. In re Duncan, 139 U. S. 449; it being the general rule that penal statutes, in habeas corpus proceedings, are controlled by the construction of the State courts. In re Converse, 42 Fed. Rep. 217.

If, under the Judiciary Act of 1789, the circuit courts have jurisdiction of personal rights and duties, because of adverse citizenship or the alienage of a party, then on application of a citizen of a foreign country residing without the United States, to have awarded to him the custody of his child as against its mother and grandmother (or others), citizens of a State, the courts will be governed by the statutes and decisions of the State. In re Barry, 42 Fed. Rep. 113.

Where a court decided that acts were invalid which gave priority to material and supply claims over mortgage bonds, it was held that the decision was binding on the Federal courts. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co. v. Shenandoah Iron Co., 42 Fed. Rep. 372.

Where, in an action on a policy of insurance, a supreme court has held that certain conduct of the company should be submitted to the jury as evidence of its intention to waive a forfeiture for over-insurance, the ruling is binding on removal to a Federal court. Cleaver v. Traders' Ins. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 711. This case decides indirectly that causes on removal are bound by prior rulings. This is expressly declared in Lookout Mountain R. Co. v. Houston, 44 Fed. Rep. 449.

See also New England Mortgage Security Co. v. Gay, 33 Fed. Rep. 636; Talcott v. Pine Grove Tp., 1 Flap. (U. S.) 120; Tomes v. Barney, 35 Fed. Rep. 112; Consolidated Roller Mill Co. v. Smith Middlings Purifier Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 305; U. S. v. Garlinghouse, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 205.

State courts have discussed and applied the rule in the following cases: Dubuque County v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 4 Greene (Iowa) 1; State v. Bissell, 4 Greene (Iowa) 328; Clapp v. Cedar County, 5 Iowa 15; 68 Am. Dec. 678; Stokes v. Scott County, 10 Iowa 166; McClure v. Owen, 26 Iowa 253; Stokes v. Scott County, 10 Iowa 166; Bressler v. Wayne County, 25 Neb. 468; Howe v. Welch, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 80; Krogg v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., 77 Ga. 202; 4 Am. St. Rep. 79; McIntyre v. Kamm, 12 Oregon 253; Lord v. Cannon, 75 Ga. 300; Goodnow v. Wells, 67 Iowa 654; Forepaugh v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 672; Com. v. Stevens, 142 Mass. 457.

1. It was held by this court at an early day that the provision of the judiciary act declaring that the laws of the States should be rules of decision in the Federal courts in certain cases did not apply to the decisions of the State courts in the construction of ordinary contracts or on questions of general commercial law. Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 1.

This principle was applied as follows, viz.: That the Federal courts were not bound by decisions of State courts construing and determining the legal effect of insurance contracts. Carpenter v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 495. Nor by decisions of State courts as to rights of the parties to negotiable paper; such rights depending on the law of negotiable paper. Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239; Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14. Nor by a decision on the construction of a contract of carriage. Myrick v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 107 U. S. 102. Nor by a decision construing a deed by the rules of the common law. Foxcroft v. Mallett, 4 How. (U. S.) 353. Nor by a decision on a question of equity law. Neves v. Scott, 13 How. (U. S.) 268. Nor by

Mexican law, the Federal courts follow the construction laid down by the courts of the States within the limits of which such law was formerly enforced.¹

START.—The word “start” is not limited to setting out upon a journey or race; it means, as well, the commencement of an enterprise or an undertaking.²

STATE COURTS.—See COURTS, vol. 4, p. 447; JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 244; MUNICIPAL COURTS, vol. 15, p. 1202; SURRENDER; UNITED STATES COURTS.

As to the concurrent jurisdiction of State and Federal courts, see UNITED STATES COURTS.

STATED ACCOUNT.—See ACCOUNT, vol. 1, p. 108.

a decision as to the liability over of a tort-feasor. Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black (U. S.) 418. And see further as to the application of the doctrine, Marlatt v. Silk, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367; Lane v. Vick, 3 How. (U. S.) 464; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. (U. S.) 134; Williamson v. Irish Presbyterian Congregation, 8 How. (U. S.) 565; Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. (U. S.) 495; U. S. v. Reid, 12 How. (U. S.) 361; Carroll v. Carroll, 16 How. (U. S.) 275; Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. (U. S.) 369; Ohio L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. (U. S.) 416; Pease v. Peck, 18 How. (U. S.) 595; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 575; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 497; Delmas v. Merchants Mut. Ins. Co., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 661; Boyce v. Tobbs, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 546; Pine Grove Tp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 666; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelley, 1 Black (U. S.) 436; Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 494; Johnson County v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677; Roberts v. Bolles, 101 U. S. 119; Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791; Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14; Thompson v. Ferrine, 103 U. S. 846; King v. Worthington, 104 U. S. 44; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60; New Buffalo Tp. v. Cambria Iron Co., 105 U. S. 73; Ralls County v. Douglass, 105 U. S. 728; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 29; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51; Green County v. Conness, 109 U. S. 104; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Palmes, 109 U. S. 244; Carroll County v. Smith, 111 U. S. 556; Enfield v. Jordan, 119 U. S. 680. See also Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Or- ton, 32 Fed. Rep. 457; Myrick v. Heard, 31 Fed. Rep. 241; Pickle v. Muse, 88 Tenn. 389; Forepaugh v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 128 Pa. St. 217; 15 Am. St. Rep. 672.

1. Thus in Christy v. Pridgeon, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 196, it is held that “the Mexican Colonization law of August 4, 1824, though general to the republic of Mexico, was, so far as it affected lands, within the limits of Texas, after the independence of that country, a local law of the new State, as much so as if it had originated in her legislation. The interpretation, therefore, placed on it by the highest court of the State must be accepted as the true interpretation so far as it applies to titles to lands in that State, whatever may be the opinion of this court of its original soundness. If in courts of other States carved out of territory since acquired from Mexico, a different interpretation has been adopted, the courts of the United States will follow the different rulings so far as it affects titles in those States. The interpretation, within the jurisdiction of a State, of a local law, becomes a part of that law, as much so as if incorporated in the body of it by the legislature. If different interpretations are given in different States to a similar law, that law, in effect, becomes by the interpretations, so far as it is a rule of action by this court, a different law in one State from what it is in another.”

See also Kennedy v. Hunt, 7 How. (U. S.) 586.

2. Graw v. Manning, 54 Iowa 721. And see that case for the facts which were held sufficient to bring a debtor within a clause of the Iowa statute on attachments, as one who had “started” to leave the State.

STATE LANDS.—(See also GRANTS, vol. 9, p. 43; PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, p. 305.)

- I. Introduction, 42.
- II. Origin and Acquisition of State Title, 42.
 1. In General, 42.
 2. Original Ownership, 43.
 3. State Sovereignty, 46.
 - a. Riparian Rights (See ACCRETION, vol. 1, p. 136; NAVIGABLE WATERS, vol. 16, p. 236; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES), 46.
 - b. Escheat (See also ESCHEAT, vol. 6, p. 354), 46.
 - c. Forfeiture (See also FORFEITURE, vol. 8, p. 443), 47.
 4. Grant, 48.
- III. Transfer of State Title, 48.
 1. What Land May be Transferred, 48.
 2. To Whom Transfer May be Made, 50.
 3. Application to Purchase, 52.
 4. Elements of Transfer, 53.
 - a. In General, 53.
 - b. Warrant, 54.
 - c. Entry, 55.
 - d. Survey, 57.
 - e. Grant, 58.
 - f. Patent, 60.
 - (1) Definition and Form, 60.
 - (2) Issuance, 61.
 - (3) Validity and Conclusiveness, 62.
 - (4) Effect, 63.
 - (5) Construction, 65.
 - (6) Conflicting Patents, 66.
 - (7) Action to Annul, 67.
 - (8) Patent as Evidence, 68.
 - g. Certificate of Purchase, 69.
- IV. School Lands, 69.
 1. In General, 69.
 2. Sale, 69.
 3. Lease, 71.

I. INTRODUCTION.—The term State lands comprehends all lands in the possession or ownership of the State, as distinguished from lands possessed or owned by private individuals or by the United States.¹ Land which is not the property of private persons is held to be the property of the State within whose limits it lies, or of the United States, according to the circumstances.² The so called public lands, being the property of either the State within whose limits they lie, or of the United States, the title to them can only be acquired by grant from the sovereignty to which they belong.³ The mode of acquiring title to lands belonging to the State is, as a general rule, in all the States, founded exclusively upon statutes general or special.⁴ Where one State owns lands within the limits of another State, it occupies simply the position of a private proprietor, and its estate in such lands is subject to all the incidents of ordinary ownership.⁵

II. ORIGIN AND ACQUISITION OF STATE TITLE—1. In General.—Ownership of land by a State may arise by virtue of original ownership by State sovereignty, or by grant. Acquisition by

1. Anderson's L. Dict.
 2. Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 682; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 164; 1 Story on Const. 3; Doe v. Beardsley, 2 McLean (U. S.) 412; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 50.

3. Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 682; Bingham on Real Estate 80; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 186; Doe v. Beardsley, 2 McLean (U. S.) 412; Worcester v.

Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 543; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 571.

4. Minor's Insts. 998; 2 Lomax Dig. 502 et seq. In the older States which have long had public lands to dispose of, there are few statutes or decisions on the subject which are now practically in force. Hilliard on Real Prop. 236.

5. Burbank v. Fay, 65 N. Y. 57.

State sovereignty may be classified into acquisition by virtue of riparian rights, by escheat, or by forfeiture; of these, each in its order.

2. Original Ownership.—The States which possess land by virtue of original ownership are Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia.¹ In these States lands not held as the private property of individuals, or ceded by the State to the general government, belong to the State within whose limits they lie.² In the other States the public lands not given to the States by act of congress are the property of the United States.³

1. Tiedeman on Real Prop., §§ 682, 744; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 182-184; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 50; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 543; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. (U. S.) 558.

2. Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 744; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 184-188-189; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212; U. S. v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375.

3. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 182-184; Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 744; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 50; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 543; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543.

Upon the admission into the Union of a State formed from the territory of the United States, the right of eminent domain passes to the State, and nothing remains to the United States but the public lands. U. S. v. Crosby, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 115; Kerr v. Moon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 565; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212; Turner v. American Baptist Missionary Union, 5 McLean (U. S.) 344; Darby v. Mayer, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 465; Calloway v. Doe, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 372; Cutter v. Davenport, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 81; 11 Am. Dec. 149; Nims v. Palmer, 6 Cal. 8.

The question whether the title to public lands owned by the United States has passed from the United States, is to be determined by the laws of the United States. But as soon as the title shall have passed from the United States, it takes the character of other property within the State and is subject to State legislation. Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Cannon v. White, 16 La. Ann. 89; State v. Bachelder, 5 Minn. 223; 80 Am. Dec. 410.

The reason for this difference in the ownership of the public lands lying within the limits of the different States involves a matter of history. According to the principles of international law, as understood by the European powers, the Indian tribes in America were regarded as mere temporary occupants of the soil. Their right to the soil was considered to be in the nature of revocable or defeasible licenses or tenancies at will. The absolute right of property and dominion were considered to belong to the European nations by which any portions of the soil were first discovered. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 182; 4 Dane Abr. 68-70. See an article on Indian Titles in 13 Albany Law Jour. 28.

The Indians, therefore, were deemed to be protected, while in peace, in the possession of their lands. Their interest, however, could be divested only by conquest or purchase. They could transfer the title absolutely to none other than the sovereign of the country. 1 Kent's Com. 257-259; Doe v. Beardsley, 2 McLean (U. S.) 412; Stockton v. Williams, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 546; Jackson v. Porter, 1 Paine (U. S.) 457; Jackson v. Hudson, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 375; 3 Am. Dec. 500; Jackson v. Wood, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 290; Marshall v. Clark, 4 Call (Va.) 268; Stevens v. Smith, 2 Kan. 243; Langford v. U. S., 12 Ct. of Cl. 338.

The sovereignty and general property of the soil in the territory of the original thirteen colonies were claimed by and conceded to Great Britain by the right of discovery. The claim to this part of the American Continent which lay between Newfoundland and the Gulf of Mexico was based upon the discovery of that part of the coast by John Cabot in 1496. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 182; 1 Story on Const. 3; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367.

The right of the soil and more or less of the sovereignty was granted by the crown of England to companies or proprietors by letters patent, under which communities were formed, with greater or less powers of jurisdiction and government, into colonies, provinces, or proprietaries, according to the style and form of their organization. Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 534.

The chartered colonies were Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. The provinces were New Hampshire, New Jersey, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. The proprietaries were Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and New York. 1 Curtis on Const. 425; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 183.

The jurisdiction over and the disposal of the lands within the limits of these bodies politic were, as a general proposition, committed to and made subject to the immediate governing power thereof in place of the original jurisdiction and property of the royal government. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 183; Jackson v. Hart, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 81; 7 Am. Dec. 280; Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.) 478.

Upon the treaty of peace in 1783, immediately after the Revolution, to whatever lands were lying outside of the boundaries of the respective colonial governments, and previously belonging to Great Britain, the United States government was entitled as successor to the British crown. Complete control of these lands was vested in Congress without limitation. U. S. v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 526; Fort Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 436; U. S. v. Maxwell Land Grant Co., 121 U. S. 325; Taming v. U. S. Freehold, etc., Co., 93 U. S. 644; Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall (U. S.) 363; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. (U. S.) 558.

Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory, or other property belonging to the United States. U. S. Const., art. 4, § 3, ch. 1, 2.

And this power cannot be interfered with, nor its exercise embarrassed by the legislation of any State. Terry v. Hennen, 4 La. Ann. 458; Foley v. Harrison, 5 La. Ann. 75; Pontalba v. Copland, 3 La. Ann. 86; Purvis v. Harmanson, 4 La. Ann. 421; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Jourdan v. Barrett, 4 How. (U. S.) 169; Union Mill, etc., Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176; Vansickle v. Haines, 7 Nev. 249; Lewis v. Lewis, 9 Mo. 182; 43 Am. Dec. 540.

The control of the United States over their own property is independent of locality, and no state or territory can interfere with their control, enjoyment, or disposal of such property; nor are the contracts of the government, with respect to subjects within its constitutional competency, local or confined in respect to their effect or operation strictly to the situs to which they relate. Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. (U. S.) 558; Farrington v. Willson, 29 Wis. 383; Union Mill, etc., Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 176;

The legislative power over a place purchased by the United States with the consent of the legislature of the State, is transferred from the State to the Federal government, except as restrained by some qualification in the expression of the consent of the State. Allegheny County v. McClung, 53 Pa. St. 432.

Under the act of Congress of June 15, 1836, admitting Michigan into the Union as a State, the State of Michigan is expressly prohibited from exercising any power over the public lands within her limits. Turner v. American Baptist Missionary Union, 5 McLean (U. S.) 344; Brewer v. Kidd, 23 Mich. 440; Auditor General v. Williams (Mich. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 1097.

In Missouri, the constitution provides, that the assembly shall not interfere with the primary disposal of the soil by the United States, nor with the United States' regulations for securing title to purchasers. Const. Mo., art. 10, § 1.

To such of the lands as belonged to the respective colonial governments the respective States which succeeded to the different colonies became entitled, and acquired the power to dispose of them as they might see fit. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 164-165; 1 Story on Const. 3 and 215; Johnson v. M'Intosh, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 543; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367; 1 Curtis on the Const. 425; Jackson v. Hart, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 81; 7 Am. Dec. 280; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 544; Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.) 478; 1 Kent's Com. 259; Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 50.

The confederation of the colonies was formed in 1777, but some of the smaller ones hesitated to come into it; one obstacle being the claim of Virginia, New York, and some of the other colonies, to what were called the crown lands, that had not been located and settled, though within what was claimed to be their charter limits. The indefinite terms in which the crown grants were made to several of these colonies were sources of conflict among them, and gave rise to claims of an almost unlimited extent beyond the actual settlements. The smaller colonies, which were excluded from these territorial claims, insisted that these lands ought to become and be deemed part of the public domain, and held by the confederacy for public purposes, and Maryland refused to become a party to the confederacy until 1781. In the meantime New York had taken steps towards ceding the lands claimed by her, and was followed by Virginia, Massachusetts, Connecticut, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Georgia; and these lands were ceded to the general government, "to be disposed of for the common benefit of the United States." 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 184, and note; Kent's Com. 259; 1 Story on Const. 215. With respect to lands which, prior to the rupture between the British crown and the colonies in America which afterwards formed the United States, had been legally granted to individuals by the crown, or to which the title had been acquired in any other way by individuals, neither the Revolution, nor any change in the form of government, nor any declaration of sovereignty by the people worked any change or forfeiture in the ownership of said property. People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Kelly v. Harrison, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 29; 1 Am. Dec. 154; Jackson v. Lunn, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 111; U. S. v. Percheman, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 87.

This principle applies also to those grantees of the Mexican government who had acquired rights under the Mexican government prior to the admission of California as a State into the Union. Teschemacher v.

Thompson, 18 Cal. 22; 79 Am. Dec. 151; Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 270; Minturn v. Brower, 24 Cal. 669; Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 422. And it is a principle which applies to all instances of a change of sovereignty, and is a recognized principle of international law, that the cession of property from one sovereignty to another does not, independent of treaty stipulations, impair the right of private property. The cession passes only public property, and the sovereignty over the territory. Vattel's Law of Nations 388; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 189; Bingham on Real Estate 101.

After the cession of Virginia to the United States of her military tract she had nothing left for which she could issue a patent. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 189; Miller v. Lindsey, 1 McLean (U. S.) 32.

In Massachusetts, the transition of title to the public lands, which by the charter was at first in the colonial government, was to that of the province under the new charter, and from that to the commonwealth at the Revolution. The fee of the soil, therefore, from that time was in the commonwealth, unless the government of the colony or the province had aliened it. Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.) 478.

Massachusetts has owned large tracts of land in Maine, which however, for many years it has been her policy to dispose of and has an agent to take charge of same. Hilliard on Real Prop. 237.

In North Carolina, after the cession of land by that State to the United States in 1789, the State no longer owned the ceded lands and had no right to convey or grant the lands within the ceded territory to a grantee who had not the incipient title before the cession. Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 87.

In Pennsylvania, the right to the soil of the province, as well as the sovereignty in absolute fee simple, was in the proprietaries upon the original constitution of that province. Penn. v. Klyne, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 207.

In New York, of the lands not actually granted by the crown, the State became the immediate possessor as successor to the crown. By the Revolution, the State succeeded to all lands within the limits of the State which had not been prior thereto legally granted, held, or possessed by persons or corporations, or in whom the title

Texas, on being admitted to the Union, retained possession of all the public lands lying within its limits. This was effected by the congressional resolutions providing for its admission into the Union as a State.¹

3. State Sovereignty—a. RIPARIAN RIGHTS.—See ACCRETION, vol. 1, p. 136; NAVIGABLE WATERS, vol. 16, p. 236; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

b. ESCHEAT.—(See also ESCHEAT, vol. 6, p. 854).—It is a general principle in the American law that when the title to land fails from defect of the heirs or devisees, it necessarily reverts or escheats to the people, as forming part of the common stock to which the whole community is entitled. Whenever the owner dies intestate without leaving any inheritable blood, the title vests in the State by operation of law.²

had not legally vested, and being the source of title the State is presumed to be the owner of the land not granted by it until the contrary appears. Bingham on Real Estate 81; People v. Van Rensselaer, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 189; Van Rensselaer v. Hays, 19 N. Y. 96; 75 Am. Dec. 268; Wandell v. Jackson, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 183; 22 Am. Dec. 635; People v. Trinity Church, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 548; 22 N. Y. 48.

In the early grants by the crown in the province of New York, large tracts of land were, in some cases, given to the individuals with manorial rights attached thereto, and questions have arisen within a few years how far it was competent for the crown to create new manors, after the passage of the act of quia emptores by the British parliament in 18 Edw. I. It has been held, however, that the grant of lands with such privileges was not void, and that that statute did not restrain the king from granting to his own tenants authority to grant lands, to be holden of such tenants instead of the king as superior lord; and that even if the grant of manorial privileges and franchises was void, it did not affect the validity of the grant of the land itself. People v. Van Rensselaer, 9 N. Y. 271. But the courts of New York hold that the principles of the statute above mentioned have always been the law of that State, as well during its colonial condition as after it became an independent body politic. Van Rensselaer v. Hays, 19 N. Y. 74; 75 Am. Dec. 278, controlling DePeyster v. Michael, 6 N. Y. 467; 57 Am. Dec. 470; 3 Washb. on Real. Prop. 189, 190 and note.

1. The resolutions passed in 1845, providing for the "Annexation of Texas," contained a provision that "Said State when admitted to the Union, after ceding to the United States, etc., etc.; and shall also retain the vacant unappropriated lands lying within its limits, to be applied to the payment of the debts and liabilities of said Republic of Texas; and the residue of said lands after discharging said debts and liabilities, to be disposed of as said State shall direct, etc., etc.," Stephens' History of the United States, p. 477; State v. Williams, 8 Tex. 384.

A title of possession to land in Texas before the adoption of the common law, issued to an attorney in fact of the original grantee for the latter's use, vests the title in such grantee and not in the attorney. Hanrick v. Barton, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 166.

2. 4 Kent's Com. 424; 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 344.

The principle of the text is usually declared and asserted by statute. Sometimes the statute diverts the title into other channels, as, for example, in Indiana and Tennessee, to the school fund. State v. Reeder, 5 Neb. 203; State v. Meyer, 63 Ind. 33; Hinkle v. Shadden, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 46; Parchman v. Charlton, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 381. In North Carolina to the State University. University v. Foy, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 310; University v. Harrison, 90 N. Car. 385.

The title to lands acquired by the commonwealth on the escheat of the right of the eldest patentee does not accrue to the junior patentee for the same land, but the commonwealth may regrant the escheated title. Elmondorff v. Carmichael, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 472; 16

c. FORFEITURE—(See also FORFEITURE, vol. 8, p. 443).—Where the State sells land and the purchaser fails to pay, a forfeiture may take place.¹ Where the statute limits the quantity or value of land which a corporation may take or hold, an excess may be forfeited to the State.²

Am. Dec. 86; Stith v. Hart, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 624; Gouverneur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 332; Jones v. Jones, 1 Call (Va.) 468.

How Escheat Right Conveyed.—This is a matter of statutory enactment and is regulated by the statutes of the different States. Wilbur v. Tobey, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 177; Jackson v. Adams, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 367; Fairfax v. Hunter, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 603; Jones v. Badley, 4 Md. Ch. 167; Casey v. Inloes, 1 Gill (Md.) 430; 39 Am. Dec. 658; Com. v. Hite, 6 Leigh (Va.) 588; 29 Am. Dec. 226; Nettles v. Cummings, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 440.

In some States it is held that grants of escheated lands by officers appointed to convey vacant lands are void. Trustees of University v. Sawyer, 1 Tayl. (N. Car.) 114; Straub v. Dimm, 27 Pa. St. 46; Boddin v. Speigner, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 321; Hinkle v. Shadden, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 46; Wolfe v. Reynolds, 80 Pa. St. 204.

An escheat patent is prima facie evidence of an escheat at the date of the warrant and not before. Peterkin v. Inloes, 4 Md. 175.

An escheat grant passes all the land comprehended in the true location of the land escheated, but this rule does not apply when it is clearly apparent that the escheat grant was not intended to include it all, and the party who took out the escheat warrant knew it did not. Jones v. Badley, 4 Md. Ch. 167.

As the law governing the succession to property emanates from the State, and the State has power to determine who shall take it, it follows that land which has been patented by the United States to an alien, will on his death, without inheritable blood, escheat to the State and will not revert to the general government. Etheridge v. Malempre, 18 Ala. 565.

In Pennsylvania, lands returning to the State by escheat or forfeiture, or other proceeding investing her with title, are not governed in their disposition by the ordinary laws and usages regulating the land office. Wolfe v. Reynolds, 80 Pa. St. 204.

1. As in California, where it was held in Borland v. Lewis, 43 Cal. 569, that a failure to pay interest annually and the principal at the end of five years on a swamp and overflowed land purchase, made under the act of 1855, worked a forfeiture, and that the State might resell as if no purchase had been made.

Where the title to land granted by patent has been revested in the State by forfeiture, a subsequent patent of the same land upon an entry and survey thereof as waste and unappropriated is void, and in such case the State can only pass the title by special grant. Whittington v. Christian, 2 Rand. (Va.) 353; Warwick v. Norvell, 1 Rob. (Va.) 308; Wolfe v. Reynolds, 80 Pa. St. 204. Where land has been located and patented it will not revert in the State merely for the owner's neglect to pay the taxes. Bear Valley Coal Co. v. Dewart, 95 Pa. St. 72.

When State lands once sold have been forfeited for a default in payment of principal or interest by their terms and by force of the statute under which they issued, the certificates of sale become absolutely void, and if trespasses have been committed upon the lands by cutting and removing the timber, the right of action for the trespass or for the timber is thenceforth in the State until the land is resold. Conklin v. Hawthorn, 29 Wis. 476.

2. Lands Owned by Corporations in Excess of Corporate Powers.—In many of the States, statutes prohibit or limit corporations from holding or acquiring more than a specified quantity of real estate.

In Virginia, corporations have power, where it is not otherwise provided, to purchase, hold, and grant estates real and personal, but they may not hold more than is proper for the purposes for which they are incorporated. 2 Minor's Inst. 592; Banks v. Poitiaux, 3 Rand. (Va.) 136; 15 Am. Dec. 706; 1 Lom. Dig. 14.

In Pennsylvania, in Methodist Church v. Remington, 1 Watts (Pa.) 219; 26 Am. Dec. 61, C. J. Gibson says: "The statutes of mortmain have been extended to this State only so far as

4. Grant.—The State may acquire title to land by grant from a private individual,¹ or from the United States.² A grant by Congress to a State cannot be recalled at the will of Congress any more than can a grant to a private individual.³ By acts of Congress passed at various times grants have been made to States and Territories for particular purposes, as, for example, the school land grants,⁴ the swamp land grants,⁵ the internal improvement acts.⁶ So miscellaneous grants have been made at various times.⁷

III. TRANSFER OF STATE TITLE—1. What Lands May be Transferred.—The statutes of each State regulate what portion of the they prohibit dedications of property to superstitious uses and grants to a corporation without statutory license." This statement of the law is repeated by Woodward, C. J., in Miller v. Porter, 53 Pa. St. 292. See also Grant v. Henry Clay Coal Co., 80 Pa. St. 218; Leasure v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co., 91 Pa. St. 491.

Under these or similar statutes, where a corporation is incompetent to take title to real estate, a conveyance to it is not void, but voidable only; the sovereign alone can object. It is valid until assailed in a direct proceeding instituted for that purpose. Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co., 100 U. S. 55; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174; Mallett v. Simpson, 94 N. Car. 37; 55 Am. Rep. 594; Leazure v. Hillegas, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 313; Groundie v. Northampton Water Co., 7 Pa. St. 233; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99; Runyan v. Coster, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 122; Bank v. Poitiaux, 3 Rand. (Va.) 136; 15 Am. Dec. 706; Hickory Farm Oil Co. v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 22; Alexander v. Tolleston Club, 110 Ill. 65; Russell v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 68 Tex. 646; Smith v. Sheeley, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 358; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 758; De Camp v. Dobbins, 29 N. J. Eq. 36; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 273; 41 Am. Rep. 221.

If a corporation violates the provision by acquiring more land than it is allowed to acquire, and the State institutes proceedings to enforce forfeiture, in the absence of any legislative enactment as to its disposition, the excess goes to the State. 2 Minor's Insts. 592, 593; 1 Lomax Dig. 14, 777; Leazure v. Hillegas, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 313; 1 Purd. (Pa.) 361; Banks v. Poitiaux, 3 Rand. (Va.) 136; 10 Am. Dec. 706.

A private individual cannot insist upon the forfeiture, by a railroad company, of certain lands granted by Congress and the State, because of the failure to perform the conditions of the grant. Where a State reserves the power to resume all rights conferred upon any railroad company failing to comply with the condition that its line shall be completed by a certain day, the title of the company is not affected until the right is exercised. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lewis, 53 Iowa 101; Little v. Watson, 32 Me. 214.

1. A relinquishment of land to the State by the owner of the superior title passes such claim to the government. Stith v. Hart, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 624. See DEDICATION, vol. 5, p. 395; GRANT, vol. 9, p. 43.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2449. See 21 U. S. Stat. at L. 326; 25 U. S. Stat. at L. 676; 26 Stat. at L. 222, as to grants to the territories Montana, Dakota, Idaho and Wyoming. See 10 U. S. Stat. at L. 305; 13 Stat. at L. 28; 25 Stat. at L. 673, as to grants to Washington Territory, confirmed afterwards to the State upon its admission into the Union. See 12 U. S. Stat. at L. 504; 12 Stat. at L. 208; 23 Stat. at L. 10, whereby Colorado was allowed to select a portion of the public lands belonging to the United States and lying within the State limits for the purposes of an agricultural college.

3. Busch v. Donohue, 31 Mich. 480; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. McGee, 115 U. S. 469.

4. See PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, p. 305. See also infra, this title, School Lands.

5. See PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, p. 305. See also infra, this title, Swamp Lands.

6. See PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, p. 305.

7. See the various provisions of the United States statutes.

public domain belonging to the State shall be granted by it to private individuals. The State must, as a rule, own the lands to be granted.¹ Certain portions of the public domain owned by the State may be reserved from sale, and an attempt to dispose

1. Bingham on Real Estate 80; De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N. Y. 467; 57 Am. Dec. 470.

Lands within the ordinary jurisdiction of the land office are those granted upon application, according to the forms of the office, and fit for settlement and cultivation and within the navigable rivers. Poor v. McClure, 77 Pa. St. 214.

Where it clearly appears on the face of the warrant and survey that the land is not subject to entry, or is subject to entry only on conditions which have not been complied with, the secretary may refuse to issue a grant therefor. Wool v. Saunders, 108 N. Car. 729.

Where lands subject to entry are applied for and payment tendered, the commissioner of the land office has no discretionary power to retain them from the market in order to accommodate other parties. People v. Pritchard, 17 Mich. 338.

Lands adapted to the growth of fruits are agricultural lands, and may be entered as such, fruits being "an ordinary agricultural crop," as that phrase is used in Pol. Code Cal., § 3495, prescribing the tests of lands which may be entered as agricultural. Reeves v. Hyde, 77 Cal. 397.

Escheat Lands.—In some of the States it is held that the method of taking up lands by warrant and survey does not apply to lands reverting to the State by escheat and applies to vacant lands only, and that lands to which the State becomes entitled by virtue of the law of escheat must be taken up by virtue of an escheat warrant or some other method than that by which the title to vacant lands is acquired. Straub v. Dimm, 27 Pa. St. 36; Wolfe v. Reynolds, 80 Pa. St. 204.

School Lands.—The State can obtain no title to school lands until the survey is completed; and a location on unsurveyed lands is void and carries no title. Smith v. Athern, 34 Cal. 506; Hastings v. Devlin, 40 Cal. 358; Medley v. Robertson, 55 Cal. 396.

Lien Lands.—All selections of lieu lands, upon unsurveyed public lands of the United States are utterly void, and all public land of the United States is considered unsurveyed until a certified copy of the official plat of the survey is filed in the local land office. U. S. v. Curtner, 38 Fed. Rep. 1.

Coal lands are mineral lands, and therefore not open to selection in California in lieu of lands included in the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections, but occupied before survey or reserved for public purposes. Mullan v. U. S., 118 U. S. 271.

Lands Which have been Once Granted.

—It is held in some of the States that land once granted by the State will not be granted by the State a second time; and that a patent for such land, though vacant, does not pass the title. Jackson v. Murray, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 5; Smith v. Baker, 4 Md. Ch. 29; State v. Bevers, 86 N. Car. 588; Atkins v. Lewis, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 30. Gen. Stat. Ky. ch. 109, § 3; Roberts v. Davidson, 83 Ky. 279.

In North Carolina, lands once granted by the State to individual citizens do not become vacant lands within the meaning of the statute, where the State subsequently acquires title to them, but abandons the use to which they were put. State v. Bevers, 86 N. Car. 588.

A valid disposal of lands by the State made to one person, cannot be affected by another disposal of them by the State board, and want of notice is no defense to the second grantee against the first grantee's suit for conveyance, but the second grantee will be considered trustee for the legal title. Wardwell v. Paige, 9 Oregon 517.

Public land sold by the State for bonds afterwards adjudged to be void, does not become vacant land which may be resold by the State. Cochran v. Cobb, 43 Ark. 180.

A patent for lands covered by a prior claim does not pass a title to the patentee, subject only to such claim. But if the latter is a mere entry, which fails to take effect by neglect to survey and return the plat, the land is open to a warrant in favor of any third person. Nichols v. Covey, 4 Rand. (Va.) 365.

of such reserved lands is of no effect to pass the title thereto.¹ In the absence of legislative enactment, the State may dispose of all lands owned by it.²

2. To Whom Transfer May be Made.—Any person may acquire State land by compliance with the statutory provisions, unless prevented by some legislative enactment.³ In some States he

1. Best v. Polk, 18 Wall. (U.S.) 112; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U.S.) 284; U. S. v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. (U.S.) 728.

Where, in a grant by the State of Maine, of a township of lands, there are reserved one thousand acres for public uses, the fee in such reserved land does not rest in the grantees of the township, even if no town should be established there. Dillingham v. Smith, 30 Me. 370.

A reservation by a State of lands for the use of a town is a covenant in law that those lands shall only be for the use of the town and forever, and a grant of those lands made afterwards is of no effect. Hawkins v. Arthur, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 195.

In Texas, by a provision of the constitution, the sale of unappropriated lands, in quantities exceeding 160 acres, to others than actual settlers is forbidden. Looney v. Bagley (Tex. 1877), 7 S. W. Rep. 766.

2. Bingham on Real Estate 80. Public lands on which the settler is located without authority are considered vacant. Tigh v. Chouquette, 21 Mo. 233.

After land has been located and patented, it will not revert to the State merely for the owner's neglect to pay taxes. Bear Valley Coal Co. v. Dewart, 95 Pa. St. 72.

A grant by the State of land in its possession, although another State disputes the title, is not affected by the fact that the latter State afterwards acquires the land. Coffee v. Groover, 20 Fla. 64.

In Freytag v. Powell, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 536, it was held that land within high and low water mark on the great river of the State was not within the jurisdiction of the land office; and that land in Philadelphia was not considered within the jurisdiction of the land office.

The State is not bound to evict parties unlawfully holding possession of public lands before granting them to others; there being nothing prohibiting the State from granting lands held in possession, the grantee from the State takes against the party in possession. Austin v. Dungan, 46 Tex. 236.

In Virginia, there shall be no warrants for land vested in the State for nonpayment of taxes or grants of unappropriated lands on the Chesapeake bay, the seashore, or that of a public river or creek. Hilliard on Real Prop. 261.

In South Carolina, lands recently purchased by the State from a corporation, to whom they were formerly granted, are not within the meaning of the term "vacant lands;" hence a grantee acquires no good title to them. Hilliard on Real Prop. 269; State v. Arledge, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 401; 23 Am. Dec. 145.

3. Under the land laws of Nevada, a patent cannot be issued to a person who has already purchased from the State three hundred and twenty acres of land. State v. Hatch, 15 Neb. 304.

In Missouri, an officer attached to the State land office cannot purchase lands by entry at his own office. Massev v. Smith, 64 Mo. 347.

In Franklin v. Fokes, 15 Tex. 180, it is held that a government commissioner, to extend the titles to lands, cannot alienate to himself as a colonist, directly or indirectly, and a contract to obtain a title for a grantee for half the land is void.

Nothing in the Tennessee statute prohibits the entry of public land by an entry taker for his deputy. Even an entry by the entry taker himself, in his own name, would be voidable only, not void. Berry v. Wagner, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 591.

A conveyance of the land by the sovereign power invests the grantees with the requisite power to take and hold it. Bingham on Real Estate 83, 84; North Hempstead v. Hempstead, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 100; Denton v. Jackson, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 320; Jackson v. Lurvey, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 397; Jackson v. Etz, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 314; Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 693; Jackson v. Cory, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 385; Hornbeck v. Westbrook, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 73.

must be an actual settler.¹ In some States, it is only the lands which have been left undisposed of after a public sale which are open to

Power of Aliens to Acquire Lands Belonging to the State.—An alien can take lands and hold them by grant from the State. Bingham on Real Estate 83, 101; Jackson v. Beach, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 399; Jackson v. Lunn, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 109; Dudley v. Grayson, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 259; Marshall v. Conrad, 5 Call (Va.) 364; Trustees v. Grey, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 147; Larreau v. Davignon, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 367; Jackson v. Etz, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 397; Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 693.

If an alien purchase lands of the State with covenants of warranty, the State cannot claim the land of the alien nor of his heirs. 1 Washb. on Real Prop. 49; Bingham on Real Estate 83, 101; Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 694; People v. Schermernhorn, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 540; Com. v. Andre, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 224.

In Massachusetts, an alien may acquire title to land as against the State by adverse possession. Bingham on Real Estate 91, 92; Piper v. Richardson, 9 Met. (Mass.) 157.

One who has entered upon the vacant public domain as a purchaser from another, who assumed to have a title, may, on discovering that the land is vacant, repudiate the executory contract for its purchase without quitting possession, resist the payment of the notes given for the purchase money, and while in possession, if entitled to pre-empt land, may take steps to secure it as a purchaser. Rodgers v. Daily, 46 Tex. 578.

In California, in Peabody v. Prince, 78 Cal. 511, the court held that a cross complaint alleging that before defendant applied to purchase the land, a third person applied, and he and the plaintiff settled the contest between them in fraud of the defendant, the third person receiving money from plaintiff, and withdrawing from the contest, must also allege, to entitle defendant to recover on the ground of fraud, that the application of the third person was invalid, and that the defendant possesses the qualifications necessary to entitle him to become a purchaser.

An allegation, in action to determine the right to purchase land from the State, that the surveyor-general "referred the contest arising under the various applications to purchase said land to the superior court," with "profert of said order of reference," sufficiently avers that an order of reference was made under Pol. Code Cal., § 3498, providing for dismissal of unapproved applications, "wherein the contest has been referred to court, or a demand made for an order of reference." Riddell v. Mullen, 77 Cal. 577.

1. Hickie v. Starke, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 98; Upton v. Wilson, 65 Cal. 11; Johnson v. Squires, 55 Cal. 103; Bass v. Dinwiddie, Cooke (Tenn.) 130; Taylor v. Burke, 66 Tex. 643; Const. Cal., art. 17, § 3; Const. Tex., art. 14, § 4; Sweetman v. Sanders (Tex. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 124; Sanborn v. Gunter (Tex. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 117; 20 S. W. Rep. 72.

Under California constitution, providing that land shall be granted only to actual settlers, an applicant to purchase who is not an actual settler can acquire no rights even though his application was made before the constitution was adopted. Urton v. Wilson, 65 Cal. 11; Johnson v. Squires, 55 Cal. 103; Const. Cal., art. 17, § 3; Jacobs v. Walker, 90 Cal. 43.

Under the provision requiring grantee of State lands to be an actual settler, and Pol. Code Cal., § 3500, requiring an applicant for such lands to state in his affidavit that he is an actual settler, a certificate of purchase issued to one who is not an actual settler, though his affidavit states that he is such, confers no rights, and neither he nor his assignee can maintain an action to annul a patent to another. Davidson v. Cucamonga, etc., Land Co., 78 Cal. 4.

California Const., art. 17, § 1, providing that State lands that are "suitable for cultivation" shall be granted only to actual settlers, applies to swamp lands granted as such to the State by Congress, but which afterwards became dry and fit for cultivation. Goldbug v. Thompson (Cal. 1892), 30 Pac. Rep. 1019; Fulton v. Brannan, 88 Cal. 454.

One who makes an actual entry followed by building a house and occupation, while doing so is an actual settler. Gavitt v. Mohr, 68 Cal. 506.

In Mississippi, by act Feb. 17, 1890 (Laws, 1890, ch. 12, p. 34), lands held by settlers.¹ Lands under the waters of navigable lakes and rivers are frequently granted to adjacent owners, to enable them to improve such lands.² On the admission of a new State into the Union, the "shore" or tide lands therein not disposed of by the United States prior thereto, become the property of the State, and are sold under certain statutory regulations.³ An individual cannot be made the grantee of land without his consent.⁴

3. Application to Purchase.—The application to purchase State land must contain all that the statute requires.⁵

the State, with specified exceptions, are reserved for purchase by residents of the State.

In Texas, in order to be a settler as required by the act of April 12, 1883, one must reside on the land or occupy it preparatory, with a bona fide intention of returning. Occupancy for such purposes must be in good faith. Occupancy for other purposes does not entitle the party to purchase as an actual settler. However, the occupancy need not be longer than is necessary to show good faith. Burleson v. Durham, 46 Tex. 152; Taylor v. Burke, 16 Tex. 643. The terms "settlement and improvement," include the animus residendi, and, in case of a temporary departure, the animus revertendi. Clemmins v. Gottshall, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 330; McLaughlin v. Mayberry, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 534.

In North Carolina, the statute "permitting non-residents to enter and take out grants for vacant lands, provided they 'comply with the laws of the State in relation to such entries,' has been construed to require the enterer to become a resident within the time prescribed for perfecting the entry. Mockridge v. Howerton, 72 N. Car. 221.

1. See State v. Public Land Com'rs., 61 Wis. 274; Attorney-Gen'l v. Smith, 31 Mich. 359; Attorney-Gen'l v. Thomas, 31 Mich. 365.

Lands left undisposed of after a public sale may be entered at the State land office only after the land commissioner has received and entered the returns from the public sale, and fixed a minimum price and the time for future entries. Potter v. State Land Com'r., 55 Mich. 485.

2. New York Laws, 1850, ch. 283, § 1. See Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 124 U. S. 656; Illinois v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 730; State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 435; Wilson v. Shiveley, 11 Oregon 215.

3. Case v. Toftus, 39 Fed. Rep. 730.

4. Acceptance of a grant is established by proof that the grantee has assumed to dispose of the land by will. Mackinnon v. Barnes, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 91.

Actual use of right of way by a railroad company or other grantee is conclusive evidence of acceptance of the grant. Fazende v. Morgan, 31 La. Ann. 549.

5. McEntee v. Cook, 76 Cal. 187; Fruit Land Co. v. Moir, 83 Cal. 101; McCoy v. Byrd, 65 Cal. 92; Remeau v. Mills, 24 Mich. 15.

If the statute requires that the payment of a portion of the price should accompany the application, this is vital; and a tender long afterwards will not make the application valid. Wanke v. Foit, 80 Tex. 591.

In California, the applicant must show by affidavit that he is entitled to purchase the land. Millidge v. Hyde, 67 Cal. 5.

An application is void if sworn to before an officer not authorized to administer the oath. Garfield v. Wilson, 74 Cal. 175. So in California the applicant must show that he has entered the land according to law. Cucamonga Fruit Land Co. v. Moir, 83 Cal. 101, and that he is an actual settler upon it. Davidson v. Cucamonga Fruit, etc., Co., 78 Cal. 4; Urton v. Wilson, 65 Cal. 11.

In Texas, he must be a bona fide settler and a citizen of the State. McCarthy v. Gomez (Tex. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 999; Burleson v. Durham, 46 Tex. 152.

In Nevada there must be an actual occupation. Robinson v. Imperial Silver Min. Co., 5 Nev. 44. And so in California. Rogers v. Shannon, 53 Cal. 99.

The affidavit must state truly all that the statute requires. McKenzie v. Brandon, 71 Cal. 209; Taylor v. Weston, 77 Cal. 534.

4. Elements of Transfer—a. IN GENERAL.—The analogy between the mode of transfer of State land and United States land is very close, except as to the character of the surveys and divisions of the land.¹ The conveyance by which the title is transferred is called a public grant.²

Every individual interest in lands which once belonged to the State must trace its title from a grant by the State.³ The transfer of lands belonging to the State is regulated by statutes. The legislature, as a rule, is charged with the power to dispose of the

Where the statute requires the applicant to show in his affidavit that he "knew the land applied for and the exterior bounds thereof, and that he knew of his own knowledge that there were no settlers thereon," a person is qualified to make this affidavit by information obtained by going upon the land and examining it as indicated by a guide, unless it is proved that the guide pointed out the wrong land. Price v. Beaver, 73 Cal. 625.

Under a statute providing that the lands shall be sold in tracts of 640 acres each, an application to purchase land in one body, to be surveyed in 640-acre tracts, it is not essential to describe the land "section by section," since the act simply prescribes the amounts to be purchased and does not prescribe or affect the form of application. Jumbo Cattle Co. v. Bacon (Tex. 1890), 17 S. W. Rep. 136; 79 Tex. 5.

The provisions of California Pol. Code, § 3444, as to the affidavit to be filed by one seeking to purchase swamp or overflowed land, requiring that "if the applicant is a female, such affidavit must show that she is entitled to purchase real estate in her own name," is complied with by a statement in such affidavit that applicant "is an unmarried woman, over the age of eighteen years, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of the State of California, of lawful age." Price v. Beaver, 73 Cal. 625.

If the affidavit states the facts untruly it will not support the application, though the facts if truly stated might support it. Plummer v. Woodruff, 72 Cal. 29.

In Texas, under act April 12, 1883, creating the State land board and directing the procedure, the board may inquire into the facts on which the application was based, and finding them false may declare the rights of the purchaser forfeited, even though he has paid part of the price and given his obligation for the rest. King v. Jones, 78 Tex. 285.

The fact that the surveyor-general's certificate and approval and application to purchase State land are void, does not necessarily invalidate the application and the right of priority thereunder. Pollard v. Putnam, 54 Cal. 630.

An application properly made creates a vested right which the legislature cannot divest by amending the statute under which the application was made. Jumbo Cattle Co. v. Bacon, 79 Tex. 5; White v. Martin, 66 Tex. 340.

But the mere filing of an application for the purchase of land, prior to a statute withdrawing the land from sale, confers no vested right. State v. Work, 63 Tex. 148.

It was held in Cadierque v. Duran, 49 Cal. 356, that the application did not confer a right in the lands such as could be transferred.

Under the Texas statute, which provides that an application shall be made for land as a homestead donation within a certain time after settlement, a failure to make the application within the prescribed time will not defeat the rights of the settler, when the rights of no other person have intervened before the making of the application. McCarthy v. Gomez (Tex. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 999; Gammage v. Powell, 61 Tex. 629.

1. 3 Washburn on Real Prop. *519. See PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, p. 305.

2. Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 734.

3. Bingham on Real Estate 80.

"The State in the exercise of its sovereignty and through its duly authorized agents, may execute to individuals the most ample and comprehensive conveyance of land which it is possible to make, but the grantee will not acquire the absolute right of property. He will take at most an public domain; hence for every grant, although the executive functionaries may be the intermediate agents in making it, there must be the authority of a general or special statute.¹

Statutes regulating the transfer of the title to State lands provide generally for a warrant from the land office; an entry, or location by designated limits, in the books of the proper officer in the county or district where the land lies; a survey by the county surveyor or other designated officer; and a grant or letters patent.²

b. WARRANT.—A warrant from the land office is usually the first step in proceedings for the acquisition of State land. The warrant empowers the applicant or claimant to claim and appropriate the number of acres of unappropriated land belonging to the State mentioned in the warrant. It authorizes a survey. The warrant does not of itself effect an appropriation, but confers estate in the land only; and there will remain to the State still, the absolute and ultimate right of property, to which the estate granted will remain in a measure subordinate so long as it will continue to exist. But after the estate is granted and while it continues to exist, this absolute right of property remaining in the State is called in legal language sometimes the escheat, sometimes the reversion, and sometimes the possibility of reverter. (De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N. Y. 501; 57 Am. Dec. 470.) The difference in the right of the State as it exists before and after the grant of an estate is that before the grant the State has both the right of property and the right of immediate possession, while after the grant and while it is in force, the State has only the right of property without the right of possession. Whenever, for any cause, the estate has ceased to exist, then the State becomes entitled to the immediate possession. On the termination of an estate, it is said to revert or escheat, by which is meant, that the right of possession before granted by the State has ceased to exist, leaving the right of possession in the State the same as if the grant had never been made." Bingham on Real Estate 4.

1. Bingham on Real Estate 82; Shapleigh v. Pillsbury, 1 Me. 280; 2 Min. Inst. 998; 2 Lomax Dig. 501; Wilcox v. Calloway, 1 Wash. (Va.) 38; Whittington v. Christian, 2 Rand. (Va.) 353; Lavasser v. Washburn, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 584; McCaughal v. Rvan, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 376; Harris v. Dyer, 27 Ga. 211; Patterson v. Trabue, 3 J. J.

Marsh. (Ky.) 598; Nims v. Palmer, 6 Cal. 8.

In many of the States, conveyances by special act of the legislature are discouraged, if not absolutely inhibited, by the constitution, hence conveyances by special act of the legislature are rare. 2 Min. Inst. 995; Va. Const., 1869, art. 5, § 20; Faulkner v. Davis, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 651.

Where an unauthorized sale of public lands is made under a misconstruction of the act of the legislature, a grant issued to the purchaser is void, and evidence of the irregularity may be given. Harris v. Dyer, 27 Ga. 211.

A State auditor has no power to make agreements respecting the lands of the State, unless such power is expressly conferred upon him by statute. McCaslin v. State, 99 Ind. 428.

It is the general policy of the Michigan land laws that there shall be no private sale of State lands until they shall have been offered at public sale. The act fixing a minimum price does not authorize their sale, but merely prohibits it below the price. Lands left undisposed of after public sale cannot be entered at the State land office until the commissioner has had opportunity to receive and enter the returns from the public sales, and to fix a minimum price and the time for future entries. Nor does the previous deposit of money confer precedence on the depositor. Potter v. State Land Comm'r. 55 Mich. 485.

2. 2 Minor's Inst. 998 et seq.; 2 Lom. Dig. 592 et seq.; Cox v. Ewing, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 429; Ross v. Cutshall, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 399.

only power to appropriate in the mode pointed out by the statute.¹

c. ENTRY.—A failure to comply with the entry laws will invalidate a grant by the State.² Where the statute requires the entry to be so specific and precise as to enable others to locate their warrants on the adjacent lands with certainty, and an entry made is so vague as not to identify the land, such an entry will not give any priority of right as against another individual who makes a proper entry.³ Where the claimant is required to produce to the entry-taker a writing describing the land, and the entry-taker is required to enter a copy thereof in a book, an entry of land placed in the entry-taker's book without his authority by a claim-

1. Warrant.—2 Minor's Inst. 999; 2 Lomax Dig. 502, 503; Wilson v. Mason, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 45; Taylor v. Brown, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 234; Tryon v. Munson, 77 Pa. St. 250.

A warrant upon which the purchase money has been paid is authority to survey vacant lands to the person taking it out, and it is a contract between the State and the warrantee to permit him to select unappropriated land where he shall designate. Tryon v. Munson, 77 Pa. St. 250.

The withdrawal of a State's warrant from land by the person directly interested leaves the land vacant and subject to appropriation. Porter v. Gordon, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 100.

A loosely descriptive warrant conveys only propinquity, and the lands must be surveyed in order to identify it; it takes title from the survey. Manhattan Coal Co. v. Green, 73 Pa. St. 310.

A person who advances money for the purchase of land warrants acquires rights in the warrants which follow them into whosoever hands they may come with notice of his claim. Patrick v. Marshall, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 40; 40 Am. Dec. 670.

Assignability of Warrant.—A warrant may be assigned. 2 Minor's Inst. 999; 2 Lom. Dig. 503; Session Laws, Cal. 1859, p. 227; Watkins v. Lynch, 71 Cal. 21; Morrison v. Campbell, 2 Rand. (Va.) 206.

The facts that a person causes a certificate to be located on land and a survey to be made in the name of the original grantee, and that this is returned to the general land office, are not sufficient proof that the original grantee sold the land certificate to such person. Hemdon v. Davenport, 75 Tex. 462.

Nature of Warrant.—The warrant, until it is located by entry in the surveyor's book on specified lands, is personal estate; after entry, the interest becomes real estate. 2 Minor's Inst. 999; 2 Lom. Dig. 503.

Land warrants are not to be regarded as real estate in the settlement and distribution of estates in the probate office. Moody v. Hutchinson, 44 Me. 57; Dodge v. Litter, 73 Tex. 319; Adams v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 70 Tex. 252; Forbes v. Withers, 71 Tex. 302; Barker v. Swenson, 66 Tex. 407.

In Texas it was held in the case of Dodge v. Litter, 73 Tex. 319, that where the wife of one who died possessed of a land certificate, sold and conveyed in writing her one-half interest in it, and shortly afterwards it was located, and the field notes of the survey, together with the certificate, were returned and filed in the general land office with an indorsement that the balance of said certificate was entered in the name of the purchaser, but the purchaser neither recorded his conveyance in the county where the land was situated nor filed it in the land office; as the land certificate was personality, the registration laws did not apply, and the purchaser acquired title thereto as against a subsequent purchaser from the wife, who had no notice of the prior sale, except the memorandum on file in the land office; that being sufficient to put him on inquiry as to the prior purchaser's connection with the certificate. Dodge v. Litter, 73 Tex. 319.

2. McNamee v. Alexander. 109 N. Car. 242; Mockridge v. Howerton, 72 N. Car. 221.

3. Buckner v. Feagins. 2 Bibb (Ky.) 138; Davis v. Davis, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 134; Moore v. Whitledge, Hard. (Ky.) 95; Camp v. Prather, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 599;

ant is of no validity.¹ If the land lies in different counties, an entry upon it must be made in each county.² The land must be subject to entry.³ An entry of land already located is void.⁴ A prior location, followed by the statutory diligence in making survey and returning the field notes, is an appropriation of the land against any claim having its inception subsequently.⁵ But the one having a prior location may be estopped from claiming title

Hinckley v. Fowler, 43 Cal. 56; Hildebrand v. Stewart, 41 Cal. 387; Cunningham v. Browning, 1 Bland (Md.) 299; Wood v. Elledge, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 607; Kendrick v. Dallum, Cooke (Tenn.) 220; Winchester v. Gleaves, 2 Hayw. (Tenn.) 213; Bowley v. Taylor, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 191; McNeal v. Herold, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 309; Harper v. Baugh, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 508.

Where an entry calls for lands on a certain creek, "about seven miles" from its mouth, the word "about" must be rejected, and the distance taken in a straight line from its mouth if the stream is of sufficient length. Sanders v. Morrison, 2 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 109; 15 Am. Dec. 140; Johnson v. Rowland, Sneed (Ky.) 77; Nichols v. Wells, Sneed (Ky.) 255; Whitaker v. Hall, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 72; Green v. Watson, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 105; Lockhart v. Trabue, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 250; Smith v. Watson, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 153; Carland v. Rowland, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 127; Stephens v. Hedden, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 107; Morrison v. Coghill, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 379.

In such case, if the stream is a large river, or is not of sufficient length, the meanders may be followed in measuring the distance. Sanders v. Morrison, 2 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 109; 15 Am. Dec. 140.

1. Pearson v. Powell, 100 N. Car. 86.

2. Stith v. Jones, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 375; Avery v. Strother, Cam. & N. (N. Car.) 434.

The Tennessee Act, 1823, ch. 49, providing for the entry of vacant lands lying north and east of the congressional reservation line and north of the Tennessee river, provided for the election and qualification of one entry-taker for each county, fixed the amount per acre to be paid the enterer, and limited the quantity to be covered by one entry. The act of 1825 reduced the price, and the act of 1827, ch. 69, increased the quantity. Act Jan. 9, 1830, ch. 87, provided that "where an entry has been heretofore made, or may hereafter be made, in any county," under the above acts, the beginning corner of which is in one county and a part of the entry in another, it shall be lawful for the surveyor of the county where such beginning corner is situated to proceed and survey such entry. It has been held that, as these acts all relate to the same subject, they must be construed together, and that act Jan. 9, 1830, ch. 87, applied to an entry and grant under the act of Jan. 9, 1830, ch. 85, which enlarged the quantity to be covered by an entry, and reduced the enterer's fee, and that an entry in the county where the beginning corner was situated was sufficient, though part of the entry was situated in another county. Graham v. Gunn, 87 Tenn. 458.

3. Reeves v. Hyde, 77 Cal. 397; Looney v. Bagley (Tex. 1887), 7 S. W. Rep. 360.

One who has entered upon the vacant public domain, as a purchaser from another who assumed to have a title, may, on discovering that the land is vacant, repudiate the executory contract for its purchase, without quitting possession, resist the payment of the notes given for the purchase-money, and while in possession, if entitled to pre-empt land, may take steps to secure it as a purchaser. Rodgers v. Daily, 46 Tex. 578.

4. Fitch v. Bullock, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 228; Miller v. Hays, 42 Tex. 479.

In an action to recover land, where defendant claims under a grant in 1856 of 59,000 acres, evidence is admissible that a large number of persons have settled upon the land, for the purpose of showing that the lands were not vacant and subject to entry in 1881, when plaintiff's grant was issued. Dugger v. McKesson, 100 N. Car. 1.

5. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. McGehee, 49 Tex. 481.

On the question of priority of locations, the opinion of the commissioner of the general land office is not admissible. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. McGehee, 49 Tex. 481.

But the regulations prescribed by him are entitled to the highest considby acquiescing in the subsequent entry.¹ Land subject to entry cannot be refused to one who makes a valid entry because such entry is made subsequent to an entry which is void. But if the invalidity of a prior entry is doubtful, a subsequent entry may be refused.² The right to make an entry upon land subject to entry cannot be defeated by the refusal of the surveyor to accept the location, or by the subsequent issue of a patent to another.³ One who makes an entry and has it surveyed cannot afterwards shift its location, to the detriment of a subsequent enterer.⁴ In case of a conflict between enterers, the number and position on the entry-taker's books are to be regarded rather than the date, which generally indicates the time of making the location.⁵ No estate or interest in the land is acquired by the entry; the enterer acquires only a right of preference,⁶ which right cannot be assigned.⁷

d. SURVEY—(See also SURVEY, vol. 24).—Next follows the survey by the county surveyor of the land appropriated, and the return of the survey to the register of the land office.⁸ eration as evidence. Johnson v. Eldridge, 49 Tex. 507.

1. Sensenderfer v. Smith, 66 Mo. 80.
Compare Sensenderfer v. Neale, 66
Mo. 669.

2. Rainey v. Aydelette, 4 Heisk.
(Tenn.) 122.

It was held in Sampson v. Galloway,
5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 275, that an entry-taker could not enter land in his own office, but that nothing in the Tennessee statute prohibited an entry by such entry-taker for his deputy.

In Berry v. Wagner, 13 Lea (Tenn.)
591, it was held that an entry by the entry-taker for himself in his own name was not void, but voidable.

In Massey v. Smith, 64 Mo. 347, it was held that an officer attached to a land office in that State could not make an entry for purchase in his own office.

3. De Montel v. Speed, 53 Tex. 339.

4. Munroe v. McCormick, 6 Ired.
Eq. (N. Car.) 85.

5. Brummett v. Scott, 4 Heisk.
(Tenn.) 319; Sampson v. Bone, 4
Heisk. (Tenn.) 702.

6. Hall v. Hollifield, 76 N. Car. 476.
See Judson v. Malloy, 40 Cal. 299.

7. Morrison v. Campbell, 2 Rand.
(Va.) 206.

In Iowa a certificate of entry may be assigned. When a certificate of entry is assigned, the assignee is invested with the legal title to the land.

Burdick v. Wentworth, 42 Iowa 440.

8. 2 Minor's Inst. 999; 2 Lom. Dig.

507 et seq. See generally SURVEY,
vol. 24.

A survey not founded on an entry is void and constitutes no title; the land so surveyed remains vacant and liable to be appropriated by any person holding a land warrant. Wilson v.
Mason, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 45.

A survey variant from the entry is not void, but voidable. Estill v. Hart, Hard. (Ky.) 577.

A private survey is not evidence of title. Paxton v. Griswold, 122 U. S.
441; Greenlee v. Tate, 1 Dev. (N.
Car.) 300.

A survey does not mean a map, *ex
vi termini*, but will include a description in words or figures of the lands located. Attorney Gen'l v. Stevens,
1 N. J. Eq. 369; 22 Am. Dec. 526.

A surveyor's certificate is only prima facie evidence of their doings. Wallace v. Maxwell, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 447.

When the meanders of a river are called for in a survey, and also courses and distance, the former will control.
Galveston County v. Tankersley, 39
Tex. 651.

Granting a patent according to the return of the survey is virtually an acceptance of the return. Brandon v.
Fritz, 91 Pa. St. 88.

A shifted survey, if fairly made, returned and accepted by the proper authorities, will, when there is no intervening and opposing right, hold and secure the lands from the time of ace. GRANT.—The transfer may be by operation of law,¹ or by grant, or patent. The grant is generally in form a certificate from the State officer authorized to execute it, and signifies that the State has granted the land described in the survey to the grantee. It is required usually to issue under the seal of the State.² The legislature may enact a statute confirming an invalid grant, and thus make it valid as though it had been so originally.³ A grant which purports to convey land, a part of which has been granted already, may be valid in part and void in part.⁴ A grant from the State is color of title, even if the grant should be void for irregularities.⁵ A grantee from the State has no greater title than his grantor in the lands granted.⁶

ceptance. Smith v. Walker, 98 Pa. St. 133; Munroe v. McCormick, 6 Ind. 85.

Objection that a land grant is void, because upon the land plat attached it appears that no survey was ever made by one having authority to survey and locate entries, cannot be raised in an action to recover possession. Dugger v. McKesson, 100 N. Car. 1.

In Pennsylvania, since the proprietary government and customs have ceased, a survey without a warrant is void, except survey as allowed to actual settlers under the act of April 3, 1872. Manhattan Coal Co. v. Green, 73 Pa. St. 310.

After a survey and patent under a warrant to the owner thereof, a resurvey to correct error was made, returned to the surveyor-general, and by him accepted and approved. Held, that the State thereafter had no right to the land described in the second survey, and therefore, one who with notice of the facts took a warrant and survey of the same land, could have none, and could not question the authority of the State officers to order a resurvey. Huntley v. Barclay (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 223.

The survey may be assigned. 2 Minor's Inst. 999; 2 Lom. Dig. 503; Morrison v. Campbell, 2 Rand. (Va.) 206.

In Pennsylvania, by a custom in the surveyor-general's office, the dates of the receipt of returns to surveys are marked in pencil upon them, and this is held by the courts to furnish evidence of such dates. Conkling v. Westbrook, 81½ Pa. St. 81.

In Pennsylvania, after the lapse of 21 years from the return of a survey, the presumption is that the warrant was located as returned by the surveyor to the land office; but this presumption is not conclusive and is rebutted by evidence of the existence of marked lines and monuments, and other facts tending to show that the actual location was different from the official courses and distances; and the fact that younger surveys of fixed lines call for the older is admissible to aid the jury in discovering the actual location of the survey. Clement v. Packer, 125 U. S. 309.

1. 3 Washburn on Real Prop. 185; Worthern v. Ratcliffe, 42 Ark. 330.

2. 2 Minor's Inst. 1000.

3. 3 Washb. Real Prop. 185; Surget v. Doe, 24 Miss. 118; Dent v. Bingham, 8 Mo. 579; Tucker v. Burris, 13 La. Ann. 614.

The legislature cannot legally confirm a patent or survey of land which was absolutely void so as to divest a title legally acquired before the attempted confirmation. Sherwood v. Fleming, 25 Tex. Supp. 408; McNamee v. Alexander, 109 N. Car. 242; Wright v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. 452.

4. Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 216; Hough v. Dumas, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 328; Thomson v. Gaillard, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 418; 45 Am. Dec. 778.

5. Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115; 48 Am. Dec. 210.

6. Tymannus v. Williams, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 80; 46 Am. Dec. 69.

In Webster v. Clear (Ohio 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 744, Minshall, J., says: "The principle seems to be that, in making purchases from the State, the individual is bound to inquire for himself as to the title of the State, and its power to convey; and can acquire no rights against a previous purchaser of the same lands from the State. He stands in the shoes of the State and takes

Formerly, grants from the State to an individual were construed strictly against the State and in favor of the grantee.¹ Nothing was presumed beyond the letter of the grant.² But this strict rule of construction was applied only where there was uncertainty or ambiguity in the terms of the grant, and where the grant was not for a valuable consideration; otherwise the rules of construction applicable to grants between individuals were applied.³ The modern tendency, however, is toward a liberal construction in favor of the grantee,⁴ so as to carry out fully and liberally the legislative intent so far as it is ascertainable.⁵

Possession continued for a sufficient length of time may raise a presumption of a grant from the State.⁶

such title as it had power and right to convey. In Gouverneur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 332, it is said: "The State never intends to grant the lands of another, and where the grantee is ignorant of the previous patent, the maxim caveat emptor is emphatically applicable to this species of contract."

1. Washb. Real Prop. 190; 2 Minor's Insts. 996; People v. New York, etc., Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 71; Tolson v. Latham, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 17.

2. Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 9; Townsend v. Brown, 24 N. J. L. 80; Mayor, etc., of Allegheny v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 26 Pa. St. 355; Green's Estate 4 Md. Ch. 349; Dubuque R. Co. v. Litchfield, 23 How. (U. S.) 88; Gildart v. Gladstone, 11 East 685.

3. 3 Washb. Real Prop. 190; 2 Minor's Inst. 996; 2 Co. Lit. 607, n. A.; Molyn's Case, 6 Co. 6 a.

4. 2 Minor's Inst. 997; 2 Lom. Dig. 501; 3 Washb. Real Prop. 190; Hyman v. Read, 13 Cal. 455; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 596; Com. v. Roxbury, 9 Gray (Mass.) 492; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 411; Attorney Gen'l v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 631.

5. McArthur v. Nevill, 3 Ohio 183. Conditions of forfeiture in grants must be created by express terms or clear implication, and construed strictly. Brown v. State, 5 Colo. 496.

6. Bingham on Real Estate 4; Des Moines v. Harker, 34 Iowa 84; Gardiner v. Miller, 47 Cal. 570; Cary v. Whitney, 48 Me. 516; State v. School Dist. No. 3, 34 Kan. 237; 9 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 587; Alton v. Illinois Transp. Co., 12 Ill. 38; 52 Am. Dec. 479; Brinsfield v. Carter, 2 Ga. 143; Wright v. Swan, 6 Port. (Ala.) 84; Kirschner

v. Western, etc., R. Co., 67 Ga. 760; Glaze v. Western, etc., R. Co., 67 Ga. 761; Wallace v. Miner, 6 Ohio 366; Harlock v. Jackson, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 254; Kennedy v. Townsley, 16 Ala. 239; Troutman v. May, 33 Pa. St. 455; Lavasser v. Washburn, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 572; Lindsey v. Miller, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 666; Walls v. McGee, 4 Harr. (Del.) 108; Chapman v. Hoskins, 2 Md. Ch. 485; Crooker v. Pendleton, 23 Me. 339; Tubbs v. Lynch, 4 Harr. (Del.) 521; Jarboe v. McAtee, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 279; Doe v. Roe, 20 Ga. 467; Barclay v. Howell, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 498; Hanes v. Peck, Mart. & Y. (Tenn.) 228; Pipkins v. Wynns, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 402; Rogers v. Mabe, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 180; Sulphen v. Norris, 44 Tex. 204; Jackson v. Gumaer, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 568.

As between a junior patentee and one in possession who traces his title backwards seventy years, it is a presumption of law that a grant has issued for the land, and it is not subject therefore to entry and grant as waste and unappropriated. Matthews v. Burton, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 317; Archer v. Saddler, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 370; Doe v. Barksdale, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) 461.

After forty years, all presumptions are in favor of the regularity of proceedings had to acquire public land in Texas, and in favor of the construction there put by the public officers on the laws and their powers under them. State v. De Leon, 64 Tex. 553.

After the lapse of forty years, during which possession was shown and a destruction of the public records, payment of the appraised value recited in the expediente will be presumed. State v. Sais, 60 Tex. 87.

A presumption of a conveyance by Provision is made sometimes for filing a caveat in the case of conflicting claims. The principles and procedure, while varying in detail in different jurisdictions, are not dissimilar to those governing the caveat in the case of patents for inventions.¹

f. PATENT—(1) Definition and Form.—A patent is the instrument that forms the evidence of title to lands acquired from the State. It is designed to define the lands to be granted and the terms of the grant.² It is nothing more than a deed in which the State is the grantor and the patentee is the grantee.³ A patent for lands owned by the State must be executed in the manner provided by statute. The requirements of the various States vary as to the form and requisites of the patent. It is usually made necessary that the governor sign the patent and that the great seal of State be affixed.⁴ The principles governing the law the State cannot arise in a case where from the constitution or common law of the State, the legislature never acted and never will act. Fitzhugh v. Croghan, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 429; 19 Am. Dec. 139.

A grant of land will not be presumed from lapse of time unless the lapse of time is so great as to create the belief that it was actually made; or unless the facts in the case show that the party to whom it is presumed to have been made was legally or equitably entitled to it. Jackson v. Moore, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 706.

As the State's lands cannot be taxed, one claiming them under a sale for taxes shows no title as against a proceeding instituted by the State for their recovery. State v. Pinckney, 22 S. Car. 484.

See, generally, ADVERSE POSSESSION, vol. 1, p. 225; PRESUMPTIONS, vol. 19, p. 36.

1. Alexander v. Noland, 88 Ky. 142; Preston v. Harvey, 3 Call. (Va.) 495; Davis v. Stafford, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 274; Allen County v. Allen, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 30; Currie v. Martin, 3 Call. (Va.) 28; Walton v. Hale, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 194; Harper v. Baugh, 9 Gratt. (Va.) 508; Carter v. Ramey, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 346; Person v. Davey, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 115; Miller v. Woodard, 29 Ga. 753; Records v. Melson, 1 Houst. (Del.) 139; Trotter v. Newton, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 582; Sharp v. Curds, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 547; Lewis v. Billups, 1 Leigh (Va.) 353; Smith v. Devecmon, 30 Md. 473. See PATENT LAW, vol. 18, p. 25.

2. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 185; Anderson's Law Dict.; Black's Law Dict.

3. See PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, pp. 354, 355.

4. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 185; 2 Minor's Inst. 1000; Compton v. Killen, 60 Ga. 543; People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Doe v. Roe, 14 Ga. 252; Hulick v. Scovill, 9 Ill. 174; Exum v. Brister, 35 Miss. 391; Bradley v. Parkhurst, 20 Kan. 462; Jarrett v. Stevens, 36 W. Va. 445.

In New York, it was held that a patent without the governor's signature was valid if sealed with the great seal. The fact of the seal being attached was considered as evidence that the patent had been approved by the governor. People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253.

In Mississippi, a land patent issued under the act of Mar 15, 1852, which required that the "patent shall be signed by the governor and attested by the secretary with the great seal of the State," was held to be good if signed by the governor and sealed by the great seal, even though not signed by the secretary of state. Exum v. Brister, 35 Miss. 391.

In Arkansas, patents are to be signed by the governor and sealed with the great seal of the State. State v. Morgan, 52 Ark. 150.

In West Virginia, in Jarrett v. Stevens, 36 W. Va. 445, Brannon, J., says: "The act of May, 1779, in the form of grant, and by express enactment, required such seal. The grant is an act of great solemnity and can only be issued as the law directs. While the commonwealth's grant cannot be generally attacked, yet if void on its face it may be. 2 Lom. Dig. 388; Patterson v. Winn, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 380. In such case, we have no need to regulating patents for State land are founded upon general principles of law and equity, and are, as a rule, applicable as well to patents issued by the United States for its public lands as to those issued by the States.¹

(2) Issuance.—The existence of a patent implies a compliance with every prerequisite. The presumption is that the officer issuing the patent has done what the law requires of him.² The issuance of a patent must be performed according to law; and if issued against law, it is void, and those claiming under it acquire no title nor right.³

bring in matter dehors the grant, but itself affords record evidence of the matter invalidating it. In the Virginia Court of Appeals. in Carter v. Edwards, 88 Va. 205, it seems to be conceded that the want of a seal would invalidate the grant. A deed of an individual will not pass land without seal. Cromwell v. Tate, 7 Leigh (Va.) 301; 30 Am. Dec. 506; Pratt v. Clemens, 4 W. Va. 443; 2 Minor's Inst. 651. I do not see why it is not indispensable in a commonwealth's grant. It is the highest evidence of the authority of the act, the signum, or mark of the genuineness of its act, and of its finality. It is the sign of sovereignty. In Doe v. Roe, 14 Ga. 252, though the decision was that there was evidence to show there once had been a seal, it seems conceded that a seal is indispensable to a State grant of land. The court said: 'It is the signature of the governor, and the great seal which gave it effect and validity.' In Hunter v. Williams, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 221, the court said that public lands could be granted only as the legislature authorized; that as that required a grant to be authenticated by the governor and countersigned by the secretary, and as the grant involved was not so countersigned, it was the same as if no mode had been adopted, and was held void. My own opinion is that the want of a seal invalidates a patent."

The duplicate copy of a lost land patent authorized by the Illinois school law of 1857, § 96, to be issued by the State auditor, need not have the seal of the State affixed, to render it admissible in evidence for the same purposes for which the original might have been offered. Jackson v. Berner, 48 Ill. 203.

1. PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, pp. 354, 355; Brown v. Huger, 21 How. (U. S.) 305.

2. Bingham on Real Estate 85; 3

Starkon Ev. 1248, 1250; Hartwell v. Root, 29 Johns. (N. Y.) 347; 10 Am. Dec. 232; Barry v. Gamble, 8 Mo. 88; Parkinson v. Bracken, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 174; 49 Am. Dec. 296; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 98; subnom. Polk v. Wendell, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 304; Patterson v. Jenks, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 237; Groves v. Slaughter, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 490; Gibson v. Chouteau, 39 Mo. 536; Jackson v. Marsh, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 281; Sutton v. Menser, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 433; Surget v. Doe, 24 Miss. 118; Ray v. Barker, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 364; McMillan v. Hutchinson, 4 Bush (Ky.) 611; Schnee v. Schnee, 23 Wis. 377; 99 Am. Dec. 183, note 186; Mayor, etc. v. Eslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577; 33 Am. Dec. 325; People v. Mauran, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 389.

A sale of lands forfeited to the State for non-payment of rent reserved in a grant thereof will be assumed to have been in accordance with the State; but an omission of any of its requirements will not invalidate the title of a grantee, as against a subsequent grantee of the State. DeLancy v. Piepgras, 63 Hun (N. Y.) 169; Gilchrist v. Middleton, 108 N. Car. 705.

The presumptions that arise in support of a patent for public lands issued by the State can have no force in the face of the facts that the State selection of the same was originally void and that the selection has been validated by Congress. Chant v. Reynolds, 49 Cal. 213.

3. State v. Delesdemer, 7 Tex. 76.

Though the issuance of a patent upon a junior location is unauthorized, the patent is voidable only and not void. Gullett v. O'Connor, 54 Tex. 408.

The statute of limitations does not begin to run against the patentee of lands until the time of the issuance of the patent. Ring v. Gray, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 368; Dubois v. McLean, 4 McLean (U. S.) 486.

(3) Validity and Conclusiveness.—A valid patent cannot be issued for lands to which the State has no title, or which may not be granted.¹ If the land is reserved from sale, the patent is void.² A patent is good only for so much of the land which it purports to convey as is properly included in it.³ A patent issued without authority of law is void, and if void on its face may be assailed by anyone.⁴ So a patent obtained by fraud will

The register of the land office must not issue a patent for State lands until the applicant surrenders his certificate of purchase. Duncan v. Gardner, 46 Cal. 24.

A public grant or patent need not be delivered or accepted in order to vest title, but takes effect immediately after the date of issuance. Ex parte Kuhlman, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 257; 55 Am. Dec. 642.

A land patent is not operative against the rights of a third person existing before it was issued. One purchasing after the issuance, whose whole claim originates after its date cannot search into the imperfections of the previous title of the patentee. Such patent may be impeached if tainted by fraud, procured by imposition or in entire excess of the proceedings on which it is founded. Smith v. Vashbinder, 77 Pa. St. 127.

1. Coffee v. Groover, 123 U. S. 1; Robinson v. Bailey, 26 Fed. Rep. 219; Garrett v. Weaver, 70 Tex. 463; Parker v. Baines, 59 Tex. 15; Attorney-Gen'l v. Thomas, 31 Mich. 365; Hoover v. Thomas, Phil. (N. Car.) 184; Webster v. Clear (Ohio 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 744; Roseberry v. Hollister, 4 Ohio St. 297; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 284; U. S. v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 728; Rechart v. Felps, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 160; New Orleans v. U. S., 10 Pet. (U. S.) 731; Best v. Polk, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 112; Gouverneur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 332.

A patent for and including part of the 500,000 acre grant, if issued as for swamp land, is void and conveys nothing. Laugenour v. Shanklin, 57 Cal. 70.

A patent for tide lands as swamp is void. Knight v. Roche, 56 Cal. 15.

The fact that swamp lands are within the limits of an incorporated city will not avoid a patent when not appearing on its face. McNear v. Hutchinson, 31 Cal. 177.

2. Best v. Polk, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 112; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.)

284; Gouverneur v. Robertson, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 332.

A court of law will receive a parol evidence that the officers of State have granted lands forbidden to be granted, and will take notice that such grant is void. Den v. Cathey, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 162.

3. Jarrett v. West, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 501; Delaware, etc., Canal Co. v. Dimock, 47 Pa. St. 393.

A land warrant issued in Virginia, and a patent issued thereon for lands described as and declared to be within the State are simply void as to lands within the limits of Maryland. Baker v. Swan, 32 Md. 355.

A grant of public land made by a special commissioner whose want of authority has not been shown, and whose acts have not been repudiated by the government, conveys good title. Groesbeck v. Golden (Tex. 1887), 7 S. W. Rep. 362.

A patent for land granted by a sister State is one of those public acts to which every other State is bound to give full faith and credit under the constitution of the United States: therefore the invalidity of the patent cannot be drawn collaterally into question by the courts of another State on a suggestion that the survey on which the patent was founded was a forgery. Lassly v. Fontaine, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 146; 4 Am. Dec. 510.

4. Webster v. Clear (Ohio, 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 744; Todd v. Fisher, 26 Tex. 239; Wright v. Rutgers, 14 Mo. 585.

A patent issued by virtue of an unconstitutional act is void on its face. Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; 54 Am. 379.

A title is not void because the officer in extending it has not incorporated into it the evidence of the concession or sale. The want of authority of an officer which renders a title void is not shown by proof of mere error of the officer in extending a title to one in fact not legally entitled, not prevail against a subsequent valid title.¹ A patent once issued, after having been signed, countersigned, and delivered, cannot be recalled, nor impeached collaterally, nor cancelled by any act of the government officers.² If the patent is not void on its face, it cannot be impeached collaterally.³

(4) Effect.—A difference of opinion exists in the different State tribunals as to the effect of the patent in regard to vesting the legal title. In some States it is held that the issuance of the patent vests the legal title, and that not until the patent issues is the patentee vested with complete legal title.⁴ In other States the courts hold that the title takes effect by relation to the first steps of the proceedings, and that the patent does not pass the title, but is merely evidence that it has passed.⁵

but whom he supposed to be. Haurick v. Jackson, 55 Tex. 17.

The governor's and surveyor general's certificate, required by the act of April 10, 1862, in relation to swamp lands, is indispensable to the validity of the State's patent, and it not having been given, the patentees may be ousted. People v. Center, 66 Cal. 551.

A patent issued by the governor of a State in pursuance of an express grant is not void upon its face and passes the legal title to the property therein granted. It may be impeached for fraud or set aside for other sufficient cause, but it cannot be assailed collaterally. State v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 7 Neb. 357.

California Pol. Code, § 3500, requires an affidavit of certain facts in the case of one desiring to purchase State lands. Held that this affidavit is indispensable to the validity of the patent. Milledge v. Hyde, 67 Cal. 5.

A government grant never in fact issued by the officer purporting to have issued it, or by subsequent alterations made to confer other rights than those conferred at its issue, is absolutely void, and may be shown to be so by a subsequent grantee. Haurick v. Cavanaugh, 60 Tex. 1.

1. Wright v. Rutgers, 14 Mo. 585; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 379; 54 Am. Dec. 379; Wilson v. Shiveley, 11 Oregon 215; Attorney-Gen'l v. Thomas, 31 Mich. 365.

2. Hennen v. Wood, 16 La. Ann. 263; Franklin v. Woodland, 14 La. Ann. 184; Merrill v. Roberts, 64 Tex. 441; Spofford v. Bennett, 55 Tex. 293.

3. Bingham on Real Estate 85; People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Jackson v. Lawton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.)

23; 6 Am. Dec. 311; Jackson v. Hart, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 77; 7 Am. Dec. 280; Norvell v. Camm, 5 Munf. (Va.) 233; 8 Am. Dec. 742; Jackson v. Marsh, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 281; Brady v. Begun, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 533; People v. Mauran, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 398; Parmelee v. Oswego, etc., R. Co., 6 N. Y. 75; Hill v. Miller, 36 Mo. 182.

This rule does not apply to sales and conveyances by State municipal officers for the non-payment of taxes and other like cases. The party who claims the right under that class of proceedings is bound to prove all that is required to make the conveyances regular and valid by other evidence than the deed. Bingham on Real Estate 85; Sharp v. Spier, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76; Varick v. Tallman, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 113; Williams v. Peyton, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 77; Jackson v. Shepard, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 88; 17 Am. Dec. 502; Striker v. Kelly, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 323.

4. Green v. Litter, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 229; Jones v. Bache, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 199; Delaware, etc., Canal Co. v. Dimock, 47 Pa. St. 393; Reed v. Bullock, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 510; 12 Am. Dec. 345; Bodley v. Taylor, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 191; Roads v. Symmes, 1 Ohio 281; 13 Am. Dec. 621; Brill v. Stiles, 35 Ill. 305; 85 Am. Dec. 364; Moore v. Wilkinson, 13 Cal. 487; Seekright v. Bogen, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 177; Dickey v. Hoodenpile, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 359; Den v. Mooney, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 401.

5. 3 Washb. on Real Prop. 192; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. (U. S.) 284; Hunter v. Hemphill, 6 Mo. 106; Innerarity v. Mims, 1 Ala. 660; Goodlet v. Smithson, 5 Port. (Ala.) 245; 30 Am. Dec. 561; Jones v. Inge, 5 Port. (Ala.) 527; Bullock v. Wilson, 5 Port.

When a patent is issued by the State it is regarded as a conveyance of the existing rights of the State.¹ It is subject to any and all encumbrances legally existing on the lands.² When granted it enures to the benefit of anyone to whom the patentee ought to convey the land or for whose use he ought to hold it.³ A patent merges the irregularities of the former proceedings and is notice to a subsequent claimant that the land is not vacant.⁴

(Ala.) 338; Waterman v. Smith, 13 Cal. 419; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; 54 Am. Dec. 379; Waters v. Bush, 42 Iowa 255; Rankin v. Miller, 43 Iowa 11; Heath v. Ross, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 140.

A patent is only requisite to ascertain that all the prerequisites of the law have been complied with. Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; 54 Am. Dec. 379.

A land patent relates back to the original land office certificate and is a patent from that date. West v. Hughes, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 6; Ringgold v. Malott, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 299.

While a survey may be made first, and the certificate afterward applied, the title accrues from the date of the application, and not from the date of the survey. Stewart v. Cook, 62 Tex. 522.

A grant was held not to relate back to the certificate of entry so as to overreach a prior grant for the same land when the certificate had not been returned, nor the composition paid within the time limited by the rules of the land office. Beall v. Beall, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 346; Peter v. Mains, 4 Har. & M. (Md.) 423.

A patent for land which passes the great seal after its date as to parties relates back to its date so as to vest the title in the patentee from that time and enable him to maintain an action for injuries done by strangers to the land after its date. But the right of relation does not, however, apply so as to prejudice the rights of third persons not parties or privies having a right. Heath v. Ross, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 140.

1. Beeler v. Coy, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 312; Green v. Liter, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 229; Green v. Watkins, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 28; Clay v. White, 1 Munf. (Va.) 162; Tolson v. Mainor, 85 N. Car. 235; Webster v. Clear (Ohio 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 744.

Where an act of transfer of land by the State to a corporation expressly conveys the occupancy and "possession" forever, not the mere usufruct, but the full ownership of the property, is thereby passed. In re Mechanics' Society, 31 La. Ann. 627.

A State patent to land passes its title, but does not establish that it had title; so a law of the State making such patent presumptive evidence of absolute title in fee in the grantee is of no force in the courts of another State, so as to make the patent evidence that the title had passed from the United States to the State. Musser v. McRae, 38 Minn. 409.

A patent from the State passes the legal possession to the grantee, which continues until disturbed by an actual adverse possession. The title vests in the grantee upon the return and acceptance of the survey and payment of the purchase money, and the title rests at the same time. Potts v. Gilbert, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 475.

A patent for the land under the Virginia land law, as modified by usage and judicial construction in Kentucky and Ohio, conveys the legal title, but leaves the equities open. Brush v. Ware, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 93.

2. Baltimore v. McKim, 3 Bland (Md.) 453; Webster v. Clear (Ohio 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 744.

3. Urket v. Coryell, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 60; Watterston v. Bennett, 18 La. Ann. 250; Stark v. Mather, Walker (Miss.) 181; 12 Am. Dec. 533; Duer v. Boyd, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 203; People v. Clarke, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 120.

A patent though granted to A. B. is really in favor of his prior vendees, and enures to their benefit. Watterston v. Bennett, 18 La. Ann. 250.

4. Balliot v. Bauman, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 150; Fritz v. Brandon, 78 Pa. St. 342; Bushey v. South Mountain, etc., Co., 136 Pa. St. 541; James v. Betz, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 12; Wolf v. Goddard, 9 Watts (Pa.) 547.

A purchaser under a patent from the commonwealth is bound to take notice of a prior title to which reference is made in the patent. Burkart v. Bucher, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 455; 4 Am. Dec. 57.

At common law, a patent issued after the death of the person named therein as patentee is void,¹ but generally the statutes provide that in case of death before the issue of the patent to one entitled to it, it shall issue to his heirs.²

A patent issued to a fictitious person conveys no title to the lands therein described; and no one, not even a subsequent bona fide purchaser for value, can derive any right under a conveyance to such fictitious patentee.³

(5) Construction.—A patent is to be construed by the same rules as a private conveyance.⁴ All parts must be construed together in order to ascertain boundaries, and effect must be given to every part if possible.⁵ A construction that gives effect to a patent is to be preferred to one that renders it inoperative and void; and in determining what land is embraced within the calls of a patent, reference may be had to the surveyor's field notes and the original plat if the patent itself is uncertain.⁶

The law does not devolve on the patentee the burden of proving that the land embraced in his patent or some part of it was vacant. Munford v. Carpenter, 11 Bush (Ky.) 51.

1. Davenport v. Lamb, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 427; Wood v. Ferguson, 7 Ohio St. 288; Galloway v. Finley, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 264; McCracken v. Beall, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 210; Thomas v. Wyatt, 25 Mo. 26; 31 Mo. 188; 69 Am. Dec. 446, note; Lyles v. Lescher, 108 Ind. 382; Price v. Johnston, 1 Ohio St. 390.

2. Cox v. Prewitt, 88 Ky. 156; Briggs v. McClain, 43 Kan. 652; Cobb v. Stewart, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 255; 83 Am. Dec. 465; Bowman v. Bartlett, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 86; Russell v. Marks, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 37.

A patent issued to A. and B., after A's death vests the entire estate in B., one half for himself and one half in trust for A's heirs. Reynold v. Clark, Wright (Ohio) 656.

In Kentucky, by an act passed in 1792, a patent issued to a deceased person vests the title in his heirs. Prior to 1792, a patent issued to a deceased person was void and of course yields to one of later date. Bowman v. Bartlett, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 86.

A patent to a deceased person vests the legal title in the heirs, and in the suit to recover the land by the devisees the heirs are necessary parties and the action must be in equity. Cobb v. Stewart, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 255; 83 Am. Dec. 465.

A grant to the "heirs" of a decedent, made in Texas in 1827, from the Mexican Government, can enure only to such persons as were heirs according to the civil law which was in force in Mexico at that time. McGahan v. Baylor, 32 Tex. 789.

3. Thomas v. Wyatt, 25 Mo. 24; 69 Am. Dec. 446; Thomas v. Boerner, 25 Mo. 27; Morrison v. Kelley, 22 Ill. 610; 74 Am. Dec. 169.

A patent issued to a person under an assumed name is not void, but vests the title in him, and his title will pass by a transfer of the land under his assumed name. Thomas v. Wyatt, 31 Mo. 183; 77 Am. Dec. 640.

A patent will not be void for misnomer of the patentee; if he is otherwise sufficiently described the title will vest in him. Russell v. Marks, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 137.

4. Moore v. Smaw, 17 Cal. 199; 79 Am. Dec. 123.

5. Alexander v. Lively, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 159; 17 Am. Dec. 50; Budd v. Brooke, 3 Gill (Md.) 198; 43 Am. Dec. 32.

Where a patent has two irreconcilable dates, the ambiguity, if unexplained, must be taken most strongly against the patent, and the latest date being the true one, the patent must yield to another conflicting patent issued between the two dates. McGowan v. Crooks, 5 Dana (Ky.) 65.

6. Alexander v. Lively, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 159; 17 Am. Dec. 50.

A map referred to in the patent is part of the patent and will control its calls. Alexander v. Lively, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 159; 17 Am. Dec. 50; Sheppard v. Wilmott, 79 Wis. 15.

(6) Conflicting Patents.—Where two patents are granted for the same land, the second patent is inoperative until the first patent is set aside.¹ A State cannot pass title to public land belonging to the United States.² A State patent to lands which have been granted to the State by the United States is good as against a subsequent United States patent for such lands.³

A patent is governed by the actual survey in the field if it refers thereto. Sheppard v. Wilmott, 79 Wis. 15; Lyon v. Fairbank, 79 Wis. 455; 24 Am. St. Rep. 732.

A patent for 74,000 acres, "excluding 60,518 acres prior grants," with no description of the land excluded, is void for indefiniteness. Hamilton v. Fugett, 81 Ky. 366.

If the State issues a patent describing the land by metes and bounds, and stating that it contains 200 acres, when in fact it contains 300, the patent is good for the 300 when attacked collaterally, not being void on its face. Frazier v. Frazier, 81 Ky. 137.

1. Jackson v. Lawton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; 6 Am. Dec. 311; Gallipot v. Manlove, 2 Ill. 156; Botts v. Shields, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 32; Howard v. Richeson, 13 Tex. 553; Garner v. White, 18 Ill. 455.

Where both parties have equities, the legal title arising prima facie from a patent must obtain, unless there is a preponderance of the adverse equitable right. Johnson v. Eldridge, 49 Tex. 507.

Where the older patentee has had no actual possession of the land contained in his grant, and the later patentee takes and enters upon the land, and takes and holds possession of any parts thereof, claiming the title to all within the limits and bounds of his grant, it is an adversary possession of the whole, to the extent of the limits of the later patent, and to that extent is an ouster of the seisin or possession of the older patentee as to those lands. Overton v. Davisson, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 211; 42 Am. Dec. 544; Koiner v. Rankin, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 428; Cline v. Catron, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 378; Millar v. Humphries, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 446; Moss v. Currie, 1 Dana (Ky.) 266; Harrison v. McDaniel, 2 Dana (Ky.) 348; Wilson v. Stevers, 4 Dana (Ky.) 634; Sicard v. Davis, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 124.

If the elder patentee is in the actual possession of any part of the land in controversy, at the time of the junior patentee's entry thereon, the latter by such entry gains no adversary possession beyond the limits of his mere enclosure, cultivation or actual use, without an actual ouster of the older patentee from the disputed territory. Overton v. Davisson, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 211; 42 Am. Dec. 544; Koiner v. Rankin, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 428; Cline v. Catron, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 378; Turpin v. Saunders, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 27; Millar v. Humphries, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 446.

Where the elder patentee is in actual possession of part of his own grant, but not of any part included in the junior grant, the entry and possession of the patentee will be limited to his mere enclosure or actual use. Taylor v. Burnside, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 165; Turpin v. Saunders, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 27; Cline v. Catron, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 378; Koiner v. Rankin, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 428; Green v. Liter, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 229.

Where the senior patentee is in actual possession of the lands of his patent lying without the bounds of the junior patentee, and the latter enters on and holds the lands embraced within the patent, it is an ouster of the senior patentee only to the limits of the junior patentee's actual close or use, and not to the limits of his grant. 2 Minor's Inst. 577; Green v. Liter, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 229.

2. Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. (U. S.) 558; Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 603; Foley v. Harrison, 5 La. Ann. 75.

The Territory of Wisconsin could not impair the title of the United States in lands by the exercise of the right of eminent domain over the same. The title conveyed by the United States could not be hampered by any claim derived from such authority. Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 603.

Where a State selected in lieu of school lands certain lands not the subject of selection, and they were listed to the State and by the State patented to private persons, it was held, upon a bill by the United States, that equity would annul the selection, listing and patent, whether such unlawful acts were the result of fraud, accident or mistake. U. S. v. Mullan, 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 466.

3. Megerle v. Ashe, 27 Cal. 322; 87

Statutes sometimes provide for judicial contests in case of conflicting claims.¹

(7) Action to Annul.—When the false suggestion, mistake, or illegality appears on the face of the patent it is void, and may be declared so in whatever court it is adduced as an evidence of title.² A State patent void on its face may be impeached in an action of ejectment.³ A patent may be impeached in a court of

Am. Dec. 76; Matthews v. Goodrich, 102 Ind. 557. See Cramer v. Keller, 98 Mo. 279; Le Beau v. Armitage, 56 Mo. 191.

It was held in Matthews v. Goodrich, 102 Ind. 557, that a United States patent to an individual issued after the swamp land grant to the State passed no title, and that neither did the attempted release of the governor of the State to the United States effect anything, such release being unauthorized and void. See also Gormley v. Uthe, 116 Ill. 643.

1. People v. Carrick, 51 Cal. 325; Thompson v. True, 48 Cal. 601; Espinosa v. Phelan, 77 Cal. 100.

It was held in Greenwade v. De Camp, 72 Cal. 448, that a default after a first reference to the court did not preclude a second reference.

It was held in Thompson v. True, 48 Cal. 601, that the court had jurisdiction to determine not only the rights of the contestants but the question of the title of the State.

As to the order of reference, it was held in Espinosa v. Phelan, 77 Cal. 100, that an order was sufficient which showed that a contest had arisen, and that the reference was made upon the demand of one of the parties to the contest, although owing to a clerical omission the order of reference did not recite that the reference was founded upon such demand. But it was held in Lane v. Pferdner, 56 Cal. 122, that the fact that the surveyor-general made the order of reference must be averred and proved.

In Cunningham v. Shanklin, 60 Cal. 118, it was held that mandamus might issue to enforce the judgment rendered upon the reference.

Pending the contest the State cannot sell the land to an applicant whose claim was filed after the inception of the contest. People v. Carrick, 51 Cal. 325; Cunningham v. Shanklin, 60 Cal. 118.

2. Minor's Inst. 997; Cooper v. Roberts, 6 McLean (U. S.) 93; White

v. Jones, 4 Call (Va.) 253; 2 Am. Dec. 564; Jackson v. Lawton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; 6 Am. Dec. 311; Jackson v. Marsh, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 281.

The case of Norvell v. Camm, 6 Munf. (Va.) 238; 8 Am. Dec. 742 (Roane, J.) states the true general doctrine in regard to the extent to which a court of law will go to impeach a patent. It says: "It is equally clear that a patent perfect on its face is not to be avoided in a trial of law by anything short of an older patent; it is not to be affected by circumstances of equity tending to show that in a caveat court or court of equity, the party relying on it would probably prevail. The jurisdiction of the two tribunals must be kept distinct and the actual patent must prevail at law, although it may be made to the superior right of the adverse party in another form. In the case of an actual and perfect patent, there is no remedy but to set it aside in a court of equity, or in some other proceeding having that as its direct end and object. It cannot be done in the ordinary progress of a trial at law, the patent alone must prevail. These principles seem to us plain, and are fairly deducible from the case of Witherington v. McDonald, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 306; 3 Am. Dec. 603; they ought not therefore to be departed from." As supporting this general doctrine see Klein v. Argenbright, 26 Iowa 493; State v. Bachelder, 5 Minn. 223; 80 Am. Dec. 410; Polk v. Wendal, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Boggs v. Merced Min. Co., 14 Cal. 362; Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465; Leese v. Clark, 18 Cal. 535.

3. Jackson v. Hart, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 77; 7 Am. Dec. 280; Norvell v. Camm, 6 Munf. (Va.) 233; 8 Am. Dec. 742; State v. Bachelder, 5 Minn. 223; 80 Am. Dec. 410; People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Brady v. Begun, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 533; Hoover v. Thomas, Phil. (N. Car.) 184; Alexander v. Greenup, 1 Munf. (Va.) 134; 4 Am. Dec. 541.

law for any matter which makes it absolutely void.¹ But for causes which make a patent voidable only and not void, and which are not apparent on its face, it cannot be impeached collaterally. To annul a patent the proceeding is by scire facias, bill, or information.²

(8) Patent as Evidence.—A patent is only prima facie evidence of the facts recited. It may be overcome by proof.³ A

1. People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; Jackson v. Lawton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; 6 Am. Dec. 311; White v. Jones, 4 Call (Va.) 253; 2 Am. Dec. 564; Jackson v. Marsh, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 281.

2. 1 Minor's Inst. 997, 1000; People v. Livingston, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 253; State v. Bachelder, 5 Minn. 223; 80 Am. Dec. 410; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; 54 Am. Dec. 379; Alexander v. Greenup, 1 Munf. (Va.) 134; 4 Am. Dec. 541; Bledsoe v. Well, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 329; Doll v. Meador, 16 Call. 327; Gallipot v. Manlove, 2 Ill. 162; Arnold v. Grimes, 2 Greene (Iowa) 83; Jackson v. Lawton, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 26; 6 Am. Dec. 311; Finlay v. King, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 379; Norvell v. Camm, 6 Munf. (Va.) 238; 8 Am. Dec. 742; French v. Loyal Co., 5 Leigh (Va.) 627; White v. Jones, 4 Call (Va.) 253; 2 Am. Dec. 564; Hartley v. Hartley, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 56; Taylor v. Fletcher, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 80; Ray v. Barker, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 364.

Where letters patent are sought to be vacated on the ground that they were issued on false suggestions, it must be proved that the suggestions were material as well as false. People v. Clarke, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 120.

When a grant is void on its face, in a controversy between individuals, the State need not be made a party to the suit. Dart v. Orme, 41 Ga. 376.

A patent for land cannot be treated as void on account of any fraud practiced by the patentee to procure it. Marshall v. McDaniel, 12 Bush (Ky.) 378; Decourt v. Sproul, 66 Tex. 368; Oliver v. Pullam, 24 Fed. Rep. 127.

That a patent was prematurely issued does not authorize the State to avoid it, if locator is in a position to compel another patent to be issued when land is properly certified to the State. People v. Jackson, 62 Cal. 548.

A patent prematurely issued, or issued on a mistake of fact, is only voidable, and conveys the legal title. Romain v. Lewis, 39 Mich. 233.

If a patent emanated from competent authority, although in the preliminary proceedings upon which it was based an illegality should intervene, which eventuates in the grant of a patent to a party who otherwise would not have been entitled to receive it, it can only be attacked by the State or someone having color of title from the State or an equitable interest in the land. Todd v. Fisher, 26 Tex. 239.

A court of equity will not entertain a bill to repeal a patent filed more than ten years after patent was issued. Goodwin v. McCluer, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 291.

3. Wallace v. Maxwell, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 447; People v. Mauran, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 389; Huidekoper v. Burris, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 109; Gingrich v. Foltz, 19 Pa. St. 38; 57 Am. Dec. 631; Cox v. Bowman, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 108.

The act of Congress known as the swamp land grant conveyed to each of the States respectively in fee all lands within the purview, and title thereof vested in the State from the date of such act, and the patent which afterwards issued for such land is only evidence of the grant and not of the date on which the grant took effect. Sterling v. Jackson, 69 Mich. 488; 13 Am. St. Rep. 405.

In a real action it is no objection to the admission of the plaintiff's patent for lands that it was issued after the commencement of the suit when it was founded on a certificate issued before. Pitts v. Booth, 15 Tex. 453.

A patent by the governor, under the seal of State, of State swamp lands is admissible in evidence to prove title in the patentee, without proof of the title of the State or the authority of the governor to issue the patent. Grant v. Smith, 26 Mich. 201; Chrisman v. Jones, 31 Ark. 609.

The recitals in a State certificate of purchase are not evidence of facts recited against the holder of a prior United States patent. Laughlin v. McGarvey, 50 Cal. 169.

A patent is not prima facie evidence if made upon a State survey as against one claiming under the United States. Bludworth v. Lake, 33 Cal. 255.

certified copy of the recorded patent is admissible as primary evidence.¹

g. CERTIFICATE OF PURCHASE.—A certificate of purchase is a writing issued by the officer authorized to execute it, showing that the State has granted the land, of the description contained in the survey, to the applicant.²

The certificate does not, like a deed, transfer the legal title, but is simply a chose in action.³

IV. SCHOOL LANDS—1. In General.—School lands generally consist of certain lands set apart from the public domain, and granted by Congress to States or to territories about to become States.⁴ In some of the older States, lands which are forfeited for the non-payment of taxes are, under certain statutory provisions, sold, and the proceeds applied to the school fund.⁵

2. Sale.—An application to purchase school lands, to be good against other claimants, must be in the prescribed form.⁶ All the prerequisites of the statute,⁷ such as making affidavit that the applicant is a citizen of the United States, or has filed his intention to become such, that he is an actual settler on the land,⁸ or that he intends that the land shall be actually settled within the specified time,⁹ must be complied with or the sale will be invalid.

A duplicate receipt of the receiver of the land office at any time is evidence of the title at any time before patent issues. Birdwell v. Bowlinger, 5 Port. (Ala.) 86.

A report of the register of the land office of the State is not competent evidence to show that lands have been patented to the railroad company. Gordon v. Bucknell, 38 Iowa 438.

The record of the United States patent to the State in the county where the land is situated and located is admissible. Laugenour v. Shanklin, 57 Cal. 69.

1. The duplicate copy of the lost land patent need not have the seal of State affixed to render it admissible in evidence. Jackson v. Berner, 48 Ill. 203.

Where a party has proved by his own oath the destruction of his patent, he will not be allowed in the same way to prove that a plat and a certificate of survey produced was annexed to such patent. As there is a counterpart of all old patents and plats lodged in the secretary's office, the title should be proved by the production of such counterpart. Seekright v. Bogan, 1 Hayw. (N. Car.) 178, note.

2. Minor's Inst. 1000.

3. Whipple v. Whipple, 109 Ill. 418.

The title does not pass until full payment has been made. Yoakum v. Brower, 52 Cal. 373. Compare Somo v. Oliver, 52 Cal. 378.

Mandamus may issue to compel the delivery of a certificate to one entitled to it. Robertson v. Land Com'rs, 44 Mich. 274.

4. See PUBLIC LANDS, vol. 19, pp. 360-362; SCHOOLS, vol. 21, p. 748.

5. McClure v. Mauperture, 29 W. Va. 633. See also SCHOOLS, vol. 21, p. 748.

6. White v. Douglass, 71 Cal. 115.

7. Trimmer v. Bode, 82 Cal. 647; Woods v. Sawtelle, 46 Cal. 389.

The requirements of the law respecting the description of the land in the affidavit is imperative. Cucamonga Fruit-Land Co. v. Moir, 83 Cal. 101.

Where an applicant desiring to purchase school lands proceeded under a statute which was changed subsequently, it was held that, before he was entitled to purchase the land at its appraised value, he must comply with all the prerequisites of the law in force at the time he presented his petition for the lands to the probate court. State v. Budgett, 35 Kan. 600.

8. White v. Douglass, 71 Cal. 115; Bratton v. Cross, 22 Kan. 673. See Clay County Land, etc., Co. v. Wood, 71 Tex. 460.

9. State v. Opperman, 74 Tex. 136.

A certificate of purchase may be attacked on the ground that the purchaser was not a citizen, had not de-

A fictitious application secures no preference.¹ The officers entrusted with the sale of school lands must comply with the provisions of the law respecting such sales. Public policy requires that they should not be permitted to speculate in such lands, or purchase from themselves.² But one who has obtained a right to purchase school lands under the statute may compel by mandamus the county treasurer to take the purchase money and to receipt therefor.³ If the lands sold are not surveyed or classified as required by the statute,⁴ or if the sale is not made at public outcry in the county where situated, where the statute so requires, the purchaser acquires no title.⁵ If the lands are sold in larger quantities than authorized by the statute, the sale will be void.⁶ But where one purchases the maximum quantity of land allowed to be sold, he is not disqualified from taking an assignment of a certificate of purchase issued to another applicant or from receiving a deed from the proper authorities for such land in his own name.⁷ A patent regular on its face, that is, in proper form, signed by the proper officers, and with the proper seal, is conclusive evidence of the legal title, and can be defeated only by want of title in the State or want of power in the officers.⁸

clared his intention to become such, and was not an actual settler on the land at the time of making his affidavit. Trimmer v. Bode, 82 Cal. 647.

A certificate of purchase of State school lands, issued under California Pol. Code, § 3495, which requires an applicant to make affidavit whether the land is or is not suitable for cultivation, and, if it is, that he is an actual settler thereon, is only prima facie evidence of the purchaser's title, and may be impeached by proof showing that he was not legally entitled to purchase the land. Miller v. Prentice, 82 Cal. 104.

1. Martin v. Brown, 62 Tex. 467.

2. Cotulla v. Laxson, 60 Tex. 443.

3. Wilkie v. Howe, 27 Kan. 518.

4. State v. Opperman, 74 Tex. 136; Martin v. McCarty, 74 Tex. 128; Brown v. Shiner, 84 Tex. 505.

A location under a school land warrant issued under California act of May 3, 1853, providing for the disposition of the half million acres of land donated to California by the United States, made before the survey and selection by the State of the lands thus donated, is valid as between the locator and the State. Roberts v. Columbet, 63 Cal. 22.

5. State v. Opperman, 74 Tex. 136; Martin v. McCarty, 74 Tex. 128.

The California sixteenth and thirty-sixth section are deemed to be surveyed for the purpose mentioned in Cal. Pol. Code, § 3495, only when the plat of the survey of the township has been approved by the U. S. surveyor-general. Until then, title to a particular section does not vest in the State, and an application to purchase, prior to that time, is unauthorized and void. Medley v. Robertson, 55 Cal. 396.

The selection by the State of public land as a portion of the seventy-two sections granted to the State for the use of a seminary of learning—even if approved by the register and receiver of the local land office—does not confer a title on the State until the selection is approved by the secretary of the interior; and the plaintiff must prove such approval. Buhne v. Chism, 48 Cal. 467.

6. Hicken v. French, 70 Cal. 430; Clay County Land, etc., Co. v. Wood, 71 Tex. 460.

7. Gliem v. Board of Com'rs, 16 Oregon 479.

8. McKinney v. Bode, 33 Minn. 450. When school lands, after forfeiture for non-payment of the purchase money, are sold for taxes, and the balance due is paid by the purchaser at the tax sale, who receives a patent from the State, the title thus conveyed cannot be questioned by any private person. Baker v. Newland, 25 Kan. 25. See Ewing v. Baldwin, 24 Kan. 82.

A subsequent applicant for a patent to school land cannot attack a prior patent on the ground that the name of the applicant was changed by a fraudulent alteration under the application so recorded. The point can be raised only by the State or by one having an antecedent or contemporary equity.¹ An attack on the title of a purchaser of school lands cannot be based on the fact that someone other than himself has paid interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money, the State not having seen fit to interfere.² And where a patentee purchases school lands with knowledge of a former sale and payment, equity will decree the title to be vested in the first purchaser.³

A sale of school lands may be annulled for a default in payment of interest or principal, or for irregularities, or non-compliance with the statutory requirements. In order to forfeit the rights of the purchaser for default to pay interest annually, or the balance of the purchase money when due, notice of default must be given and served by the county clerk, as provided by the statute.⁴ A State cannot bring suit to annul a contract for the sale of school lands held by an innocent assignee, for irregularities or non-compliance with the statutory requirements for a sale, unless it does equity by paying or tendering back the purchase money received under the contract.⁵

3. Lease.—A constitutional provision relating to county school lands, providing that "each county may sell or dispose of its land in whole or in part," does not deprive a county of the right to utilize such lands temporarily by lease.⁶ Nor does a statute which authorizes the leasing of school lands conflict with a constitutional provision which declares that school lands "shall be sold under such regulations, at such times, and on such terms as may be prescribed by law."⁷ After the county has once leased its lands, or otherwise indicated its policy to lease and not to sell them, settlers have no right to occupy any part of them.⁸

If, before leasing the lands, the commissioner is required to be satisfied that the lands applied for are not in immediate demand for purposes of actual settlement, his act is conclusive of the question of such demand.⁹ If they are leased for a higher rental than the statute requires, the lessee will be bound by his acceptance of such lease.¹⁰ An action to recover rent for the use of

1. Martin v. Brown, 62 Tex. 485.

2. McKinney v. Bode, 32 Minn. 228.

3. Barksdale v. Brooks, 70 Mo. 197.

4. Hansen v. Wilson, 40 Kan. 211.

5. State v. Dennis, 39 Kan. 509.

6. Smisson v. State, 71 Tex. 222; Falls County v. De Laney, 73 Tex. 463; Brown v. Shiner, 84 Tex. 505.

7. Swenson v. Taylor, 80 Tex. 584.

The rejection, by a constitutional convention, of a proposition authorizing the lease as well as sale of public school lands, shows nothing more than that the people did not mean to give the legislature power to accept leases whereby the lands might become tied up, and sale rendered impossible; and it cannot be relied upon to show that leases were intended to be altogether prohibited. Smisson v. State, 71 Tex. 222.

8. Falls County v. De Laney, 73 Tex. 463.

9. Brown v. Shiner, 84 Tex. 505.

10. Smisson v. State, 71 Tex. 222.

school lands may be brought in the county where by the lease the rent is payable.¹

STATEMENT.—In a general sense, an allegation; a declaration of matters of fact. The term has come to be used of a variety of formal narratives of facts, required by law in various jurisdictions as the foundation of judicial or official proceedings.²

STATE PRISON.—See PRISONS, vol. 19, p. 85.

STATES.—(See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 499; INTERNATIONAL LAW, vol. 11, p. 431; STATE LANDS, vol. 23; UNITED STATES.)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I. Definition, 72.
 II. Admission Into the Union, 74.
 III. Relation Between, 76.
 IV. Contracts—Power to Make—Incidents of, 77.
 V. Actions, 80.
 1. By a State, 80.
 a. In State Courts, 80.
 b. In United States Courts, 82.
 2. Against a State, 83.
 a. In State Courts, 83.
 b. In United States Courts, 86.
 (1) Generally, 86.
 (2) Eleventh Amendment to Constitution, 88.
 3. Set-off Against a State, 95.
 VI. Priority of State as Creditor, 97.
 VII. State Bonds, 98.
 VIII. State Boundaries, 100.
 IX. Compacts Between States, 103. | X. State Officers (See also PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 378), 105.
 1. Introduction; Definition, 105.
 2. Election and Appointment, 106.
 3. Official Bonds (See also PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 442; SURETYSHIP), 107.
 4. Salaries, 108.
 5. Different Officers, 109.
 a. Governor (See GOVERNOR, vol. 8, p. 1400), 109.
 b. Secretary of State, 109.
 c. Treasurer, 110.
 d. Auditor, 111.
 e. Attorney - General (See ATTORNEY-GENERAL, vol. 1, p. 974), 112.
 6. Impeachment and Removal (See IMPEACHMENT, vol. 9, p. 951), 112. |
|--|--|

I. DEFINITION.—A state is a body politic, or society of men, united together for the purpose of promoting their mutual safety and advantage, by the joint efforts of their combined strength.³ This is the commonly accepted definition of the term as employed in international law, but as the subject in that connection has received full treatment elsewhere in this work,⁴ this article will deal with the term only as used in American constitutional law.

1. Fitzgerald v. State (Tex. 1888), 9 S. W. Rep. 150.

2. Abb. L. Dict.

For statement as a component part of a bill in equity, see BILL IN EQUITY, vol. 2, p. 211.

Brief Statement.—In Maine practice, see BRIEF, vol. 2, p. 565.

Statement or Certificate.—In an Illinois election law, see CERTIFICATE, vol. 3, p. 60.

Statement on Appeal.—See SETTLED CASE ON APPEAL, vol. 22, p. 467.

Within a Statute.—Statement is "the act of stating, reciting, or presenting verbally or on paper." So defined where used in a statute prohibiting a party sued by the personal representative of the decedent from testifying as to any "transaction with or statement by deceased." Montague v. Thomasson (Tenn.), 18 S. W. Rep. 264. See also WITNESSES.

3. Vattel's Law of Nations, b. 1, ch. 1, § 1.

4. INTERNATIONAL LAW, vol. 11, p. 431.

A state, in the ordinary sense of the Federal Constitution, is a political community of free citizens, occupying a territory of defined boundaries, and organized under a government sanctioned and limited by a written constitution and established by the consent of the governed—one of the component commonwealths of the United States.¹

Within the meaning of the word "state," as used in the grant of judicial power to the Federal Government in the Constitution, neither the District of Columbia, nor a territory,² nor Indian

1. In the clauses which impose prohibitions upon the states in respect to the making of treaties, emitting of bills of credit, and laying duties on tonnage, and which guarantee to the states representation in Congress, are found some instances of this use of the term in the constitution. It is also employed in a geographical sense simply, as in the clauses which require that a representative in Congress shall be an inhabitant of the state in which he shall be chosen; and that the trial of crimes shall be held within the state where committed. It is sometimes used in the sense of a people or political community as distinguished from a government. This idea is presented in the provision that the United States shall guarantee to every state a republican form of government, and protect it against invasion. Texas v. White, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 700.

2. At an early day in Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 445, it was held, that under the judiciary act giving the national courts jurisdiction of controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not sue in such courts as a citizen of a state, because the District was not a member of the Union.

Subsequently the same principle was asserted in reference to a territory, in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 91, where it was said that although the District and the territory are both states—political societies—in the larger and primary sense of the word, neither of them is such in the sense in which the term is used in the constitution in the grant of judicial power to the national government on account of the citizenship or residence of the parties to a controversy, when it is understood to comprehend only "members of the American confederacy."

In what sense the District of Columbia may be regarded a distinct political society, see Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, 132 U. S. 1, qualifying the statement above, that the District is a state in the larger sense of the term, and also the position assented to by Ch. J. Marshall, in Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 445, that the District of Columbia is a distinct political society, and is therefore a state according to the definitions of writers on general law.

When a bank is chartered, and its charter repealed by the legislature of a territory, the question of the validity of the repealing act cannot be brought before the United States Supreme Court under the 25th section of the judiciary act. The power of review is confined by that section to certain laws passed by states, and does not extend to those passed by territorial legislatures. Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 12 How. (U. S.) 1.

And it has been decided that an organized political body within the limits of the United States does not become, by virtue of this organization merely, a state. It must be admitted to statehood in accordance with the Federal Constitution and laws. Scott v. Jones, 5 How. (U. S.) 343. See infra, this title, Admission Into the Union.

In Cissell v. McDonald, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 150; 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 175, it is held that a citizen of the District of Columbia is not a citizen of a state; and in Prentiss v. Brennan, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 162, it is said that "a person may be a citizen of the United States and not a citizen of any particular state. This is the condition of citizens residing in the District of Columbia and in the territories of the United States." See also Picquet v. Swan, 5 Mason (U. S.) 35.

In Barney v. Baltimore City, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 287, these rulings were followed without question, upon the principle of stare decisis; and in Watson v. Brooks, 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 316, tribes or nations,¹ can be said to be a state; but in some statutes the term "state" has been held to comprehend both the territories and the District of Columbia.²

II. ADMISSION INTO THE UNION.—The sole power of admitting new states into the Union is vested in Congress by the Constitution.³

they were followed, but questioned, the court observing: "It is very doubtful if this ruling would now be made if the question was one of first impression, and it is to be hoped that it may yet be reviewed and overthrown."

1. Indian Tribes and Nations.—They are neither states of the Union nor foreign states. Yet in a certain domestic sense, and for certain municipal purposes, they are states, and have been uniformly so treated since the settlement of our country and throughout its history, and numerous treaties made with them recognize them as a people capable of maintaining the relations of peace and war, of being responsible in their political character for any violation of their engagements, or for any aggression committed on the citizens of the United States by any individual of their community. Laws have been enacted by Congress in the spirit of these treaties, and the acts of our government, both in the executive and legislative departments, plainly recognize such tribes or nations as states. Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 211; Warner v. Joy, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 253. See also Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians v. U. S., 117 U. S. 288.

In Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 1, the nation was not permitted to sustain an action in the U. S. court, it not being a foreign state in the sense of the constitution, and it was said that the relation of the Indian tribes to the Federal government resembles that of a ward to his guardian.

Again, it has been said that the Cherokee Nation bears the same relation to the U. S. Government as a territory did under the Ordinance of 1787. It is not a foreign, but a domestic territory. U. S. v. Cox, 18 How. (U. S.) 100.

See generally INDIANS, vol. 10, p. 438.

2. Under Statutes—"State" in the Internal Revenue Title of the Revised Statutes, includes the territories and the District of Columbia when such construction is necessary to carry out its provisions. U. S. Rev. Stats., § 3140.

The term "state," in the act of March 2, 1837 (U. S. Rev. Stats., § 4236), regulating the taking of pilots on a water forming the boundary between two states, includes an "organized territory" of the United States. The Panama, Deady (U. S.) 31. In this case, the court, by Deady, J., said: "Whether the word 'state' as used in this act should be construed so as to include a territory, is a question not free from doubt. The case is within the mischief intended to be remedied by the act, and it seems to me might be held to come within its spirit and purview without any violation of principle. I do not think it comes within the reasoning or considerations that controlled the court in Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 445, in which it was held that under the judiciary act, giving the national courts jurisdiction of controversies between citizens of different states, that a citizen of the District of Columbia could not sue in such courts as a citizen of a state, because such District was not a member of the Union." This ruling was followed in The Ullock, 9 Sawy. (U. S.) 641; The Abercorn, 26 Fed. Rep. 877.

And the word "state" as used in § 1 of the act of Congress, July 20, 1870, relating to the shipping and deserting of seamen, embraces a territory of the United States. In re Bryant, Deady (U. S.) 118.

3. U. S. Constitution, art. 4, § 3, ch. 1, provides: "New states may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned as well as of the Congress." See Brittle v. People, 2 Neb. 198. According to the opinion of Attorney-General Bates, the act for the admission of West Virginia was unconstitutional, for the reason that it did not receive the assent of the peo-

Admitting a state into the Union on equal footing with the original states, means that the newly admitted state is equal to her sister states in being alike free in the formation of her constitution and the exercise of government, under such restrictions and limitations as she may voluntarily impose upon herself, and in the people having power to modify or change the constitution at will.¹ Upon the unconditional admission into the Union of a territory as a state, the erection of Federal courts therein, and ple of the State of Virginia. 10 Opinions Attorney-Generals, p. 426. But the decision in Virginia v. West Virginia, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 79, settles the question the other way.

In Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.), p. 41, it is said: "The people of the several territories may form for themselves state constitutions whenever enabling acts for that purpose are passed by Congress; but only in the manner allowed by such enabling acts, and through the action of such persons as the enabling act shall clothe with the elective franchise to that end. If the people of a territory shall, of their own motion, without such enabling act, meet in convention, frame and adopt a constitution and demand admission to the Union under it, such action does not entitle them as matter of right to be recognized as a state. But the power that can admit, can also refuse, and the territorial status must be continued until Congress shall be satisfied to suffer the territory to become a state. There are always in these cases questions of policy as well as of constitutional law to be determined by the Congress before the admission becomes a matter of right. . . . These questions, in which the whole country is interested, cannot be finally solved by the people of the territory for themselves; but the final decision must rest with Congress and the judgment must be favorable before admission can be claimed or expected."

When a constitution has been adopted by the people of a territory, preparatory to admission as a state, and Congress prescribes certain changes and additions to be adopted by the legislature as part of the constitution, and such changes and additions are declared to be fundamental conditions of the admission of the state, and the legislature accepts such changes, additions and conditions, and the state is thus admitted, they become thereby a part of the constitution and binding as such, although not submitted to the people for their approval. Brittle v. People, 2 Neb. 198.

There are several theories as to when a territory ceases to be such and becomes a state, and as to when the constitution and governmental machinery of a new state goes into operation. One theory is, that a territory continues in all respects a territory until admitted into the Union by act of Congress, and that until such act of admission, the proposed state constitution cannot take effect, nor any part of the machinery of a state government go into operation. A second theory is that where, under an enabling act of Congress, the people adopt a state constitution and form a state government, such constitution goes into effect upon its adoption by the people, and the former territory thereby becomes a state, although not in the Union, for the purposes of representation in Congress, until formally admitted by Congress. Still another theory, which is really only an extension of the one last named, is that an enabling act operates as a constitutional act of admission, and that when a state complies with the conditions of that act, it is a state in the Union for all purposes without any further action on the part of Congress. Secombe v. Kittelson, 29 Minn. 555; Scott v. Detroit Young Men's Soc., 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 119; Campbell v. Fields, 35 Tex. 751.

The Texas reconstruction constitution became operative before the state was admitted to representation in Congress. Peak v. Swindle, 68 Tex. 242.

An amendment to the Minnesota original constitution adopted before formal admission of the state is valid. Any irregularity is healed by the admission, and the subsequent recognition of the validity of the amendment by the state. Secombe v. Kittelson, 29 Minn. 555.

1. Spooner v. McConnell, 1 McLean

the extension of the laws of the United States over the same, the territorial government is extinguished, and with it the existence of the territorial courts of the General Government, and, consequently, if a cause, brought from the supreme court of the territory, is pending in the Supreme Court of the United States at the time of the admission, the jurisdiction of the latter tribunal ceases, in the absence of provision for the disposal of such cases.¹ But by adoption on the part of the state, with the consent of Congress, those courts may become provisional and temporary courts of the state.² When a new state is carved from an old one, a contract made in the original state to convey lands subsequently embraced in the newly created state, is binding according to the laws of the original state which existed at the time the contract was made.³

Where a state is divided into two or more states, in the adjustment of liabilities between each other the debts of the parent state should be ratably apportioned among them.⁴

III. RELATION BETWEEN.—For national purposes embraced by the Federal Constitution, the states are regarded as domestic, being united under the same sovereign authority and governed by the same laws; in other respects, they are necessarily foreign to, and independent of, one another. Thus, in the matter of bills of exchange drawn in one state upon a party in another, the states are foreign.⁵ The courts of one of the states are not presumed to know, and therefore not bound to take judicial notice of, the

(U. S.) 337, where, also, it is said that this does not mean that its powers, legislative, executive, and judicial, shall be exercised to the same extent, and in the same mode, as all the other states; in this respect the states are unequal, as perhaps, the powers of no two states are exercised in the same mode and to the same extent.

1. Ames v. Colorado, etc., R. Co., 4 Dill. (U. S.) 251; Benner v. Porter, 9 How. (U. S.) 235; McNulty v. Batty, 10 How. (U. S.) 72; Preston v. Brocken, 10 How. (U. S.) 81; Freeborn v. Smith, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 160; Hunt v. Palao, 4 How. (U. S.) 588.

Laws of the United States.—The provision of the act admitting a state which declares, upon such admission, the laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable, to be in force there, renders the Process Act of 1828 in force in the Federal courts of such newly admitted state. U. S. v. Keokuk, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 514; Smith v. Cockrill, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 756.

Texas having been admitted to the Union on December 29th, 1845, from that date the laws of the United States were extended over it and therefore the revenue laws of Texas were not in force in 1846, so that goods seized for a noncompliance with those laws were illegally seized. Calkin v. Cocke, 14 How. (U. S.) 227.

2. Ames v. Colorado, etc., R. Co., 4 Dill. (U. S.) 251. See also Freeborn v. Smith, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 160.

3. Caldwell v. Carrington, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 86.

Erection of State of West Virginia.—Effect on Virginia Corporation.—Upon the creation of the State of West Virginia, a corporation created by Virginia continues to be a corporation of Virginia until it becomes affirmatively a corporation of West Virginia, by complying with an act of the legislature of that state, providing for certain proceedings, which being taken by corporations shall result in their becoming corporations of the new state. Kanawha Coal Co. v. Kanawha, etc., Coal Co., 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 391.

4. Hartman v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672.

5. Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 581; Bank of U. S. v. Daniel, 12 Pet.

laws of another state—the members of the Union being, in this respect, also, foreign to one another.¹

IV. CONTRACTS—POWER TO MAKE—INCIDENTS OF.—A state may make a binding contract; indeed, the power to contract is one of the necessary constituents of its sovereignty.² When a state enters into a contract with a private individual it relinquishes its sovereign character quoad such transaction, and, as a general rule, can claim no exemption from the rules of law applicable to the contracts of private parties under like circumstances.³ Thus, upon a breach of its contract, the state is liable for prospective

(U. S.) 32; Dickins v. Beal, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 572; Chenoweth v. Chamberlin, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 60; 43 Am. Dec. 14; State Bank v. Hayes, 3 Ind. 400; Warren v. Coombs, 20 Me. 139; Phoenix Bank v. Hussey, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 483; Carter v. Union Bank, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 548; 46 Am. Dec. 89; Carter v. Burley, 9 N. H. 558; Wells v. Whitehead, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 527; Ocean Nat. Bank v. Williams, 102 Mass. 141. See also BILLS AND NOTES, vol. 2, p. 313.

The sentiment of the text was expressed with force by the President of the Court of Appeals of Virginia in Warder v. Arall, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282; 1 Am. Dec. 488, where he states that in cases of contracts the laws of a foreign country where the contract was made must govern, and then adds as follows: "The same principle applies, though with no greater force, to the different states of America, for though they form a confederated government, yet the several states retain their individual sovereignties, and, with respect to their municipal corporations, are to each other foreign."

1. Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1. See also JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 151.

Judgments.—Prior to the adoption of the confederation and the Constitution of the United States, the several states were considered entirely independent of each other, and judgments recovered in their respective courts were foreign judgments in every respect, as in any separate and independent government, and whatever changes now exist in this respect must be sought for in the Constitution and laws of the United States. Warren Mfg. Co. v. Actna Ins. Co., 2 Paine (U. S.) 501.

"Full Faith and Credit."—In Smith v. Lathrop, 44 Pa. St. 326; 84 Am. Dec. 448, it was held that, except in cases governed by that clause of the Federal Constitution which gives "full faith and credit" in each state to judicial proceedings in every other state, the courts of the several states are foreign to each other. See also Davis v. Morriss, 76 Va. 27.

2. Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. (U. S.) 369; Danolds v. State, 89 N. Y. 36; 42 Am. Rep. 277; State v. Bank of Smyrna, 2 Houst. (Del.) 99; 73 Am. Dec. 699. A state may contract with an individual by an act of the legislature; and two or more states may contract inter se, in the same manner. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 5. In State v. Woram, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 33; 40 Am. Dec. 378, it was held that a state is a corporation, and as such may be the payee of a promissory note.

And in Dikes v. Miller, 25 Tex. Supp. 281; 78 Am. Dec. 571, it was held that a state has capacity to take by deed or devise, and a release to it by a grantee of land will be operative and effectual to divest the title of the grantee.

3. Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 203; Patton v. Gilmer, 42 Ala. 548; 94 Am. Dec. 665; Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 204; 22 Am. St. Rep. 624.

The state must be governed by the same rules of common honesty and justice which bind individuals. It is for its interest that its contracts should be binding on all the parties thereto. If it can at pleasure violate or abandon its contracts in the absence of any stipulation authorizing it to do so, there will be such uncertainty and risk attending all its contracts that it will go into the market for work and materials at a great disadvantage. Per Earl, J., in Danolds v. State, 89 N. Y. 36; 42 Am. Rep. 277.

As was well said by Allen, J., in People v. Stephens, 71 N. Y. 549, "There profits, if such profits would have constituted a proper item of damages had the contract been between private individuals.¹ A contract by the state violative of the organic law of the Union is invalid.² The intention of a state in making a contract must be ascertained by the acts and declarations of its constituted authorities and agents acting within the scope of their duty, and all acts which relate to the contract, and all declarations of agents which in the case of a private individual would affect the contract, must be held as in like manner affecting a contract made by the state.³ But to the general rule stated above, there appears to be an exception in the matter of interest, it being held that a state is not liable therefor in the absence of express contract or positive is not one law for the sovereign and another for the subject, but when the sovereign engages in business, and the conduct of business enterprises, and contracts with individuals, whenever the contract in any form comes before the courts the rights and obligations of the contracting parties must be adjusted upon the same principle as if both contracting parties were private persons. Both stand upon equality before the law, and the sovereign is merged in the dealer, contractor, and suitor."

With a view to raising revenue, a state statute required the inspection of tobacco and the storing of it in the state tobacco warehouses for that purpose. The plaintiff stored his tobacco in conformity with that law, and while stored it was destroyed by fire. The plaintiff was empowered by special act of the legislature to bring suit therefor. He accordingly brought an action, alleging that the loss occurred through the negligence of the state. It was held on demurrer that there was no contract or obligation on the part of the state to keep the tobacco safe, and that the state was not liable for the loss as bailee or in any other capacity. Moore v. State, 47 Md. 467; 28 Am. Rep. 483.

1. Danolds v. State, 89 N. Y. 36; 42 Am. Rep. 277. See also Masterton v. Mayor, etc., of Brooklyn, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 61; 42 Am. Dec. 38; U. S. v. Speed, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 77; U. S. v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214; Thompson v. U. S., 9 Ct. of Cl. 187.

2. As, for example, a contract made by a state with a corporation with intent to aid the Confederate States in the late war, and this although the contract was made in conformity to the law and policy of the de facto government.

Patton v. Gilmer, 42 Ala. 548; 94 Am. Dec. 665. In this case the court, by Byrd, J., said: "Ordinarily, a sovereignty cannot make a contract obnoxious to the principle which declares all illegal contracts void or voidable. In other words, it cannot be said with strict propriety that a sovereign power can, in a contract, violate its public policy, or make a contract which can be assailed in its own courts on that ground. For the contract which it makes is as much a declaration of its policy as any pre-existing law or policy. But in a government like ours, where in theory, at least, all sovereignty is in the people, and where they have conferred on the state and national governments only certain sovereign powers, retaining all inherent sovereignty in themselves, it does not seem that the same rule would be applicable to contracts made by the government, as in a government in which the sovereignty inherent in the people has been vested in it—the government. A government like ours with limited and well-defined powers cannot adopt any law, or make any contract which can be enforced in the courts which is hostile to, or violative of, the fundamental law—the Constitution of the United States. And all such contracts whether made by the United States, the states or individuals, which are clearly in contravention of the provisions of this instrument or of its evident spirit and meaning, are alike reprehensible and invalid. The Constitution is the supreme law of the land, and all laws and contracts in derogation of its provisions and policy must necessarily be inoperative, at least, in the courts of the country."

3. Patton v. Gilmer, 42 Ala. 548; 94 Am. Dec. 665.

enactment.¹ Interest, however, accrues in favor of the state precisely as it does in favor of private parties.² There is one essential difference between the contract of a state and that of an individual—not, indeed, as to the meaning and effect of the contract itself, but as to the capacity of the state to defeat the enforcement of its contract:—the state may defeat enforcement, but the individual cannot. This is the logical result of the rule that a state cannot be sued without its own consent.³ But it seems to be beyond controversy that the constitutional provision which denies to the state the power to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts, applies as well to contracts made by the state as to those made by individuals.⁴

1. U. S. v. North Carolina, 136 U. S. 211; State v. Thompson, 10 Ark. 61; Attorney-Gen'l v. Cape Fear Nav. Co., 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 444; Bledsoe v. State, 64 N. Car. 392; Western, etc., R. Co. v. State (Ga.), 14 L. R. A. 438.

But a state is not bound by a general statute providing for the payment of interest in cases where money is wrongfully withheld from a creditor. This is upon the familiar principle that a sovereign is not bound by the words of a statute, unless expressly named. State v. Board of Public Works, 36 Ohio St. 409. To the same effect is Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 204; 22 Am. St. Rep. 624. And in this case, it was also held that a state is not chargeable with interest upon interest unless it expressly contracts to pay such interest.

In Auditorial Board v. Arles, 15 Tex. 72, it was held that a state is not bound by the contract of its agent to pay interest, unless there is a law authorizing the agent to contract to pay it.

But in Res Publica v. Mitchell, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 101, it was held that the state is liable to pay interest as well as individuals.

And in Pennsylvania, it has been held that where one pays money properly chargeable against the state, he is entitled to the interest from the time of payment, but ordinarily a demand must be made on the legislature before the state may be charged with interest. Milne v. Republican, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 101.

In Mississippi, it has been adjudged that as a general rule the state is not bound to pay interest, and in cases where a contract contemplates the action of the legislature in order to pay the claim, interest cannot be claimed until demand has been made upon that body. State v. Mayes, 28 Miss. 706.

And in People v. Canal Com'rs, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 401, it was held that the state is liable to pay interest upon the amount of a legal appraisal of damages for land taken for public use after a lawful demand made by the party entitled of the officers charged by law with the duty of making payment. See also UNITED STATES.

2. Chevallier v. State, 10 Tex. 315. As to the principles governing interest generally, see INTEREST, vol. 11, p. 379.

3. Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 204; 22 Am. St. Rep. 624. See infra, this title, Actions against State.

Under some of the state constitutions, the states may defeat the enforcement of their obligations by the failure or refusal of their legislatures to make the necessary appropriations. State v. Porter, 89 Ind. 260; May v. Rice, 91 Ind. 546; Rice v. State, 95 Ind. 33; Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 204; 22 Am. St. Rep. 624. See also Hans v. Louisiana, 24 Fed. Rep. 55.

4. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 519; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Hartmann v. Greenhow, 102 U. S. 672; New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 164; Cooley's Const. Lim. (6th ed.), p. 329; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 5.

In Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 87, Marshall, C. J., said: "If, under a fair construction of the constitution, grants are comprised under the term contracts, is a grant from the state excluded from the operation of the provision? Is the clause to be considered as inhibiting the state from impairing the obligation of contracts between

V. ACTIONS—1. By a State—a. IN STATE COURTS.—A state of the Union, as a political corporation, has the right to institute suit whether it be required by its pecuniary interests or the general public welfare, and, for this purpose, its own courts¹ as well as those of a sister state,² are open to it. A state, like other parties to actions, must show an interest in the subject-matter of litigation in order to entitle it to prosecute a suit and demand relief; private wrongs are remediable at the suit of the parties injured, and state interference in such controversies, either directly, or upon the relation of private parties, should not be allowed.³ In the absence of a statute authorizing a suit in such form, a suit two individuals but excluding from the inhibition contracts made with itself? The words themselves contain no such distinction. They are general and are applicable to contracts of every description." And in New Jersey v. Wilson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 164, the same learned judge observed: "In the case of Fletcher v. Peck, it was decided in this court on solemn argument and much deliberation, that the provision of the constitution extends to contracts to which a state is a party, as well as to contracts between individuals."

In Georgia Penitentiary Co's v. Nelms, 71 Ga. 301, the court, by Stewart, J., said: "A state being sovereign in the eye of the law is presumed to be the embodiment of all the wisdom, honor, justice, and virtue of its citizens, and how could this great commonwealth lay claim to such a high standard of excellence if she should break her contracts with impunity? If there be reason and justice in the rule that the obligations of contracts between citizens should not be impaired by legislative act, when the state is a party to the contract, is it not a greater reason why the rule should be maintained and upheld?"

Estoppel.—A state, as well as individuals, may be estopped by its acts, conduct, silence and acquiescence. State v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 89 Mich. 481; Com. v. Anare, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 224; Com. v. Pejepscut Proprietors, 10 Mass. 155; State v. Bailey, 19 Ind. 452; Cahn v. Barnes, 5 Fed. Rep. 326; Indiana v. Milk, 11 Fed. Rep. 389; Enfield v. Permit, 5 N. H. 280. But see Candler v. Lunsford, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 407.

1. Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 225; 41 Am. Dec. 549; State v. Grant, 10 Minn. 39; Peo- ple v. St. Louis, 10 Ill. 351; 48 Am. Dec. 339.

Under a statutory provision of Alabama (Alabama Code, §§ 2573, 960, Subd. 4), the state may sue in all cases where under like circumstances an action would lie between individuals, may maintain an action of ejectment, and may sue in the name of a township for school lands belonging to it. Gaston v. State, 88 Ala. 459.

The territory of Montana is a body politic or artificial person, a corporation, and as such may sue upon contracts without any statute empowering it to do so. Territory v. Hildebrand, 2 Mont. 426.

Set-off by the State.—The sinking fund of the state of Mississippi is the property of the state, therefore a person indebted to that fund is indebted to the state, and such indebtedness is subject to be set off against any indebtedness of the state to such person for his salary or otherwise under the statute. State v. Dickinson, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 579.

2. Delafield v. Illinois, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 159; Indiana v. Woram, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 33; 40 Am. Dec. 378; Spencer v. Brockway, 1 Ohio 259; 13 Am. Dec. 615.

3. State v. Shiveley, 10 Oregon 267; State v. Parkeville, etc., R. Co., 32 Mo. 496; State v. Bradish, 34 Vt. 419.

A civil action for the recovery of money due the state is properly brought in the name of the state. State v. Poulterer, 16 Cal. 514; Fry v. State, 27 Ind. 348. And the state should be plaintiff in a suit to set aside a grant from the state. Parker v. Hughes, 25 Ga. 374.

To authorize the institution of a suit in the name of a state to forfeit a charter of a corporation under a statute declaring such forfeiture, it is not instituted by a "prosecuting attorney for the state in behalf of the people of the state" should be dismissed for want of proper parties.¹ A suit, the subject-matter of which is local, must be commenced by the state in the county of the locality, unless a necessary that the legislature should by some general or special statute have authorized the suit to be brought; the forfeiture is a right in which the state is interested and suit may be brought on the motion of the attorney-general. State v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 24 Tex. 80. The state is the real plaintiff where the treasurer sues and recovers judgment for its use. Com. v. Baldwin, 1 Watts (Pa.) 54; 26 Am. Dec. 33.

The state, and not the trustees of the school district, is the proper party plaintiff in a suit for delinquent school taxes under § 35, Nevada Act of March 20, 1865 (Stats. 1864-1865, 419), relating to schools. State v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Nev. 796.

In Davis v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 663, it was held that when the act of a municipal corporation, against which relief is sought, affects injuriously the whole community over which the corporate jurisdiction extends, the attorney-general is a necessary party to the prosecution of the suit. The doctrine of this case has been approved in People v. Mayor of N. Y., 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 253; People v. Mayor of N. Y., 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 144; People v. Tweed, 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 25 (but this last case is questioned in New York v. Tweed, 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 152); State v. Saline Co. Ct., 51 Mo. 350. And there are dicta to the same effect in People v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 102; Roosevelt v. Draper, 7 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 108. And in People v. Lowber, 7 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 158, Ingraham, J., intimates a similar opinion.

But in People v. Miner, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 396, it was held that the attorney-general has not the power either by the common law, or under New York Code, §§ 430, 432, to prosecute an action in the name of the people against commissioners to restrain them from issuing town bonds under an act of the legislature for railroad purposes. And Mullen, J., for the court, in referring to Davis v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 2 Duer (N. Y.) 663, observes: "I think it will be found, upon an examination of the cases from which he deduces the rule, that they do not authorize the inference, and that there are but two classes of cases in which the attorney-general is a necessary party; one is where the unauthorized act of the corporation will produce a public nuisance; the other is when it tends to, or is a breach of, some trust for charitable uses." This was reaffirmed in People v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 25; 57 N. Y. 161, and followed in State v. Parkville, etc., R. Co., 32 Mo. 496; Attorney-Gen'l v. Utica Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 371; People v. Clark, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 172; People v. Booth, 32 N. Y. 397; People v. Law, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 494, it being held in the last two cases that the people cannot maintain an action in respect to property belonging to the city of New York. And in People v. Ingersoll, 58 N. Y. 1; 17 Am. Rep. 178, where it was held that where the right to the proceeds of the suit is vested in a county, the suit may not be brought in the name of the people. But it has been held that an action for unlawfully obstructing a public street by means of telegraph poles may be brought in the name of the people. People v. Metropolitan Teleph., etc., Co., 31 Hun (N. Y.) 596.

The remedy to prevent the erection of a purpresture and nuisance in a bay or navigable river, is by injunction at the suit of the people by the attorney-general; for all the people of the state are interested in the matter and entitled to use all bays and navigable streams within the state. People v. Vanderbilt, 26 N. Y. 287; 28 N. Y. 396; 84 Am. Dec. 351; affirming 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 282; 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 301; People v. Macy, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 65; Attorney-Gen'l v. Cohoes Co., 6 Paige (N. Y.) 133; 29 Am. Dec. 755.

The people of a territory may sue upon bonds given by defendants in criminal proceedings. People v. Bugbee, 1 Idaho 89; People v. Slocum, 1 Idaho 62.

1. Patterson v. Temple, 27 Ark. 202.

By statute in Indiana, in actions to recover money due the state from a special statute authorizes it to be instituted elsewhere.¹ A statute authorizing suits to be brought in the name of the state on the written direction of the governor to the attorney, "without giving bond or security, or causing affidavit to be made, though the same may be required in actions between private citizens," is not dispensing with "due process of law," nor violative of any constitutional provision, state or federal.²

b. IN UNITED STATES COURTS—(See also UNITED STATES COURTS).—The Federal Constitution authorizes a suit by a state against a citizen of another state in the United States Supreme Court, by reason of the character of the parties,³ but not a suit by a state against its own citizens.⁴ A state, as plaintiff, cannot maintain a suit in the circuit court of the United States on the ground of the character of the parties, as such jurisdiction is vested in the Supreme Court.⁵ A suit in the Supreme Court in the nature of a quo warranto, brought in the name of the state on the relation of certain persons, is not to be regarded as a suit by the state itself so as to entitle the cause to be advanced for hearing.⁶ The governor of the state ordinarily represents the state, and when it is plaintiff the suit may be in form a suit by county treasurer and his sureties, the auditor of public accounts and not the state treasurer should be the relator. Pepper v. State, 22 Ind. 399; 85 Am. Dec. 430. And a suit upon the bond of a commissioner to sell real estate in partition, is properly brought in the name of the state on the relation of the parties interested. Owen v. State, 25 Ind. 107. So with a suit on the bond of an assignee in trust for creditors. Jackson v. Rounds, 59 Ind. 116. But in a suit by the state for its own use, upon a bond payable to the state, no relator need be named. Fry v. State, 27 Ind. 348.

1. People v. St. Louis, 10 Ill. 351; 48 Am. Dec. 339.

2. Ex parte Macdonald, 76 Ala. 603.

3. Pennsylvania v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 553; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co., 127 U. S. 265.

Where a state owned bonds of a railway company, the interest whereon was guaranteed by the trustees of an internal improvement fund, which fund was created under an act of the legislature by the conveyance to the trustees of state lands, and the bonds were also a lien upon the road, it was held, that the state, both by virtue of her interest in the lands composing the fund, and by virtue of her possession of the bonds, might bring an original bill in the United States Supreme Court against citizens of other states to protect her interests; and that the objection that she had not such an interest in the subject-matter of the suit as to give her a standing in court, and that the trustees of the improvement fund, who could not bring an original bill in the supreme court, were the only parties legally interested, could not be maintained. Florida v. Anderson, 91 U. S. 675.

A state, Pennsylvania, having constructed lines of canal and railroad, and other means of transportation and travel, which would be injured in their revenues by the obstruction in the Ohio river caused by the bridge at Wheeling, erected by a corporation of another state, has a sufficiently direct interest to sustain an application to the supreme court in the exercise of original jurisdiction for an injunction to remove the obstruction. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518.

An injunction will be granted by the U. S. Supreme Court in behalf of a state, to stay the payment to others of a debt confiscated to the state until it is adjudged to whom the money belongs. Georgia v. Brailsford, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 402, 415.

4. Pennsylvania v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 553.

5. Wisconsin v. Duluth, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 407.

6. Miller v. State, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 159.

him as governor in behalf of the state.¹ And he may authorize an attorney to institute suit in the name of the state.²

2. Against a State—a. IN STATE COURTS.—A state of the Union is not liable to suit in its own courts or those of another state without its express consent.³ This principle is absolute, and may not be overthrown by indirection, as, for instance, by the institution of suits against state officers, when in effect, they

1. Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66.

When an officer of the state is the party prosecuting the suit for the state, the citation to appear in the United States Supreme Court must be served on him, as he is the "adverse party," and not the state, and the party to the record under rule 10 of that court, and chapter 20 of the Judiciary Act of 1789. Poydras v. Treasurer of Louisiana, 17 How. (U. S.) 1.

2. A suit brought in the name of the state of Texas in the U. S. Supreme Court by an attorney, the bringing and prosecution of which have been sanctioned successively by a provisional governor of the state appointed by the president after the conclusion of the war in 1865, by a governor elected by the people in 1866 under the constitution adopted in that year, and by a governor subsequently appointed by the military commander of the district acting under the reconstruction acts, is to be considered as instituted and prosecuted by competent authority. Texas v. White, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 700.

3. Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. (U. S.) 527; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531; Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 257; Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446; Treasurers v. Cleary, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 372; Sharp v. Contra Costa County, 34 Cal. 284; People v. Miles, 56 Cal. 401; People v. Dennison, 84 N. Y. 272; Gan v. Bright, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 157; Kiersted v. People, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 392; State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 Md. 344; Williamsport, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 33 Pa. St. 288; Pattison v. Shaw, 6 Ind. 377; Raymond v. State, 54 Miss. 562; 28 Am. Dec. 382; Tate v. Salmon, 79 Ky. 540; Tracy v. Hornbuckle, 8 Bush (Ky.) 336; Hosner v. De Young, 1 Tex. 764; Moore v. Tate, 87 Tenn. 725; 10 Am. St. Rep. 712. And a territory of the United States is not liable to suit by one of its citizens.

Langford v. King, 1 Mont. 38; Fisk v. Cuthbert, 2 Mont. 593.

But it has been held that if the state asserts a claim against an individual for the purchase money of property sold him by the state, upon which there is an incumbrance, which the state is bound in equity to remove, such individual may deny his liability for the whole amount and insist upon his right to retain a sum sufficient to remove the incumbrance. Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Northern Bank, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 176.

And when the state sues to recover property the defendant may file a cross complaint and have the title litigated and quieted. State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 435; State v. Washington County, 101 Ind. 69.

But the immunity of the state from suit and indictment does not pass to the vendees of its property or rights. Delaware Division Canal Co. v. Com., 60 Pa. St. 367; 100 Am. Dec. 570; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Duquesne Borough, 46 Pa. St. 223. The fact that a state is not subject to an action on behalf of a citizen does not establish that he has no claim against the state, or that no liability exists from the state to him, but only that there is no proper tribunal to try the claim, and no remedy. Coster v. Mayor, etc., of Albany, 43 N. Y. 399. Her creditors have nothing to rely upon except her good faith, and she has equally the power to postpone the time of payment or to refuse to pay at all. Hunsaker v. Borden, 5 Cal. 288; 63 Am. Dec. 130. The remedy of a party upon a contract with the state is by appeal to the legislature, who, it is fair to presume, will make provision for its full execution, and do ample justice. Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 225; 41 Am. Dec. 549.

Consent of State Officer Not Sufficient.—The mere consent of an officer of the state, the attorney-general, for instance, by appearing and answering in are suits against the state.¹ If the state consents to abrogate this prerogative of sovereignty, it may prescribe the terms and the name of the state, does not bind it by the judgment or decree which may be the result of the suit. Ex parte Dunn, 8 S. Car. 207; Dabney v. Bank of S. Car., 3 S. Car. 124. See also Adams v. Bradley, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 217.

The legislature is the proper body to authorize suits against the state, and it may act in this matter by joint resolution as well as by bill. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, 24 Minn. 517.

Services performed for the state under an unauthorized contract with the governor or attorney-general may be the subject of relief at the hands of the legislature, but do not constitute a legal cause of action against the state. People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256. And if an illegal tax has been paid into the state treasury, the persons paying the tax are the creditors respectively of the state to the amount of illegal tax which each has paid, and, like other creditors of the state, their remedy is to ask the law-making power to make the proper appropriations. Shoemaker v. Grant County, 36 Ind. 175.

1. Shoemaker v. Grant County, 36 Ind. 175; State v. Burke, 33 La. Ann. 498; Taylor v. Hall, 71 Tex. 206. Where an insurance company was required to make a deposit with a state treasurer for the benefit of its policyholders, but the statute failed to provide for further disposition of the fund, no suit can be maintained against the state treasurer to recover or dispose of the fund until the legislature shall direct in what manner, and in what court it may be brought. Tate v. Salmon, 79 Ky. 540.

The salary of a state officer cannot be attached, because the state is a necessary party to the proceeding, and it cannot be sued. Rodman v. Musselman, 12 Bush (Ky.) 354; 23 Am. Rep. 724; Divine v. Harvie, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 440; 18 Am. Dec. 194; Tracy v. Hornbuckle, 8 Bush (Ky.) 336. But it seems that creditors of the state, for whom appropriations have been made by statute, may maintain mandamus against the auditor and treasurer to compel them to pay the money out of the treasury. Divine v. Harvie, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 440; 18 Am. Dec. 194. An application to the court by mandamus to compel a district surveyor to make a survey of a certain tract of land, by virtue of a land certificate, is in effect a suit against the state, and cannot be maintained. Hosner v. De Young, 1 Tex. 764. See also Marshall v. Clark, 22 Tex. 23.

So also is an application for mandamus by a county to compel the auditor-general to pay funds collected by the state for the several townships of the county. Ottawa County v. Aplin (Mich. 1888), 36 N. W. Rep. 702.

Mandamus will not issue on the application of an individual to any officer of the government, commanding him to make a contract, entered into with that individual by public officers, binding upon the state. People v. Canal Board, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 432.

A suit, the object of which is to test the constitutionality of certain statutes supposed to affect individual rights, and which is brought against a public officer in the form of an application for a mandamus to compel him to perform official acts which the legislature has forbidden, is in effect a suit against the state, and is an attempted evasion of the well established principle that the sovereign authority cannot be sued in its own courts without its express consent. League v. De Young, 2 Tex. 497.

The provision of the Illinois constitution, art. 4, § 26, that the state "shall never be made a defendant in any court of law or equity," prohibits the courts from enforcing the performance of a contract, made by the penitentiary commissioners for convict labor by mandamus, as its effect would be to give an action against the state. People v. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503.

A proceeding by mandamus to compel an officer of the state to do that which the legislature has prohibited him from doing, for example, to compel a tax collector to receive certain obligations of the state in payment of taxes, is, in effect, a suit against the state, and not maintainable. State v. Sneed, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 472.

Where an executive council of a state gives a contract to a certain party, it is not competent for an unsuccessful bidder to sue the executive council to enjoin the contract with that party and compel the giving of the contract to him. Mills Pub. Co. v. Larrabee, 78 Iowa 97.

conditions upon which it may be sued, and the manner in which the suit shall be conducted,¹ all of which must be strictly complied with.² It seems that the state may also withdraw its consent, and, in exercising this power, does not violate the prohibition of the Federal Constitution against the impairment of the obligation of contracts;³ and further, that such withdrawal has the effect of

But a bill to enjoin the funding board, created by the Tennessee Act of 1881, from funding the bonded indebtedness of the state, is not a suit against the state. Lynn v. Polk, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 121.

In Board of Public Works v. Gannt, 76 Va. 455, it was held that suits against agents and officers of the government in possession of specific property under a void title, may be maintained by the true owner; and it is no answer for them to say that the state has an interest in or claim to the property. But no decision has gone to the extent of affirming that such suit can be maintained for the recovery of money or property belonging to the state because it happens to be found in the possession of its ministerial officers or agents.

In a case where a bank indebted to a state conveyed to it, in satisfaction of such indebtedness, certain property on a certain condition, the court held that specific performance of that condition could not be enforced against the state, although it could control an improper use of the property in the hands of state officers. Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 225; 41 Am. Dec. 549.

An action on the case will lie against a public officer for a false and fraudulent representation made by him in relation to property sold by him, and it is no answer that the sale was made in his official capacity. Culver v. Avery, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 379; 22 Am. Dec. 586.

1. Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. (U. S.) 527; DeSaussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216; Hosner v. DeYoung, 1 Tex. 764. The new constitution of North Carolina, art. 4, § 11, provides that "the supreme court has original jurisdiction to hear claims against the state; but its decisions shall be merely recommendatory; no process in the nature of execution shall issue thereon; they shall be reported to the next general assembly for its action." By this it was probably intended that such hearing shall be chiefly of the law involved in any such claim, including only such general observations upon the facts as may be required to render the rules of law laid down intelligible in their special application. At all events it must be so in the absence of further legislation providing the court with the proper machinery for deciding issues of fact. Bledsoe v. State, 64 N. Car. 392. Upon the decision of the court in favor of the plaintiff upon a claim preferred against the state, the proper course is for the clerk to transmit the proceedings in the cause, together with the judgment of the court, to the governor, to be by him communicated to the general assembly. Clements v. State, 77 N. Car. 142.

2. Raymond v. State, 54 Miss. 562; 28 Am. Rep. 382. Where a statute permits actions against a state on such claims as are presented to the auditor of public accounts, and in whole or in part rejected, no claim that has not been so presented and rejected can be sued for. State v. Stout, 7 Neb. 89; Owen v. State, 7 Neb. 108; Bradford v. State, 7 Neb. 109; State v. White, 7 Neb. 113; State v. Lancaster Co. Bank, 8 Neb. 218. The effect of Wisconsin Rev. Stats., § 3200, providing for suits against the state, is to make the refusal of the legislature to allow a claim a condition precedent to the right of the claimant to maintain suit, and the complaint in an action against the state is bad on general demurrer unless it shows that the claim sued upon has been presented to, and disallowed by, the legislature. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, 53 Wis. 509.

3. Beers v. Arkansas, 20 How. (U. S.) 527; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443; Board of Public Works v. Gannt, 76 Va. 455; State v. Hill, 54 Ala. 67; State v. Bank of Tennessee, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 365; State v. Sneed, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 476; Horne v. State, 84 N. Car. 362; Baltzer v. State, 104 N. Car. 265. "If a state furnishes a remedy by process against itself or its officers, that process may be pursued because it has consented to submit itself to abating pending suits.¹ A constitutional provision that suit may be brought against the state in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, does not compel that body to act; until a statute has been passed agreeably to such provision, the state retains its immunity from suit.² An act authorizing suits against the state, being in derogation of its sovereignty, must be construed strictly; thus the privilege must be confined to those by whom it was clearly intended that it should be enjoyed;³ and to such claims as are clearly comprehended by the act;⁴ and if the state is made liable to suit in a certain court, it may not be sued in another court.⁵

Such a statute does not have the effect of creating liabilities on the part of the state, or of subjecting it to liabilities which did not exist, or could not arise under the laws already existing; as, for instance, liability for the tortious acts or conduct of the officers or agents employed in the administration of public affairs.⁶

b. IN UNITED STATES COURTS — (1) Generally.—A state of that extent to the jurisdiction of the courts, but if it chooses to withdraw its consent by a repeal of all remedies, it is restored to the immunity from suit which belongs to it as a political community, responsible to no superior." Per Matthews, Bradley, and Gray, JJ., in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769. And in Ex parte State, 52 Ala. 231, it was said by Brickell, C. J., "Legal remedies or their efficacy in enforcing the obligation or liability are not contemplated as in cases of contracts between individuals. These are vain and useless against the state without the concurrence of the legislative power. Statutes are often passed permitting suits against the state. Such statutes are matters of grace, confer privileges, they do not create rights, and are always construed like other statutes conferring privileges or exemptions on the citizen. The power to withdraw is commensurate with the power to confer, and when the privilege is withdrawn the citizen is remitted to the condition in which he stood when it was conferred." But compare Hancock v. Walsh, 3 Woods (U. S.) 351; Clark v. State, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 306; Danolds v. State, 89 N. Y. 36; 42 Am. Rep. 277; Dabney v. Bank of S. Car., 3 S. Car. 167; and dissenting opinions of Justices Field and Harlan, in Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769, and State v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711.

The right to sue which the State of Tennessee once gave its creditors, was not in legal effect a judicial remedy for the enforcement of its contracts, and the obligation of its contracts was not impaired, within the meaning of the prohibitory clause of the United States Constitution, by taking away what was thus given. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Tennessee, 101 U. S. 337.

1. Ex parte State, 52 Ala. 231; Horne v. State, 84 N. Car. 362. See also South & N. Ala. R. Co. v. Alabama, 101 U. S. 832.

2. Galbes v. Girard, 46 Fed. Rep. 500; Turner v. State, 27 Ark. 337; People v. Talmage, 6 Cal. 256; Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Northern Bank, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 175; Williams v. Register of West Tenn., Cooke (Tenn.) 218; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, 53 Wis. 509; State v. Stout, 7 Neb. 89.

3. Rose v. Governor, 24 Tex. 496.

4. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. State, 53 Wis. 509. In this case it is held that Wisconsin Rev. Stats., § 3200, relative to suits against the state, applied only to claims, which, if allowed by the legislature, render the state a debtor to the claimant, and does not authorize an equitable action directly against the state to restrain it from perpetrating a threatened injustice.

5. Ex parte Greene, 29 Ala. 52.

6. State v. Hill, 54 Ala. 67; Clark v. State, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 306; Green v. State, 73 Cal. 29; Todhunter v. State (Cal. 1887), 14 Pac. Rep. 615.

the Union is not subject to suit in the Federal courts by its own citizens notwithstanding there may be involved a question under the Federal Constitution or laws.¹ But it has been adjudged recently that the General Government may sue a state in the Supreme Court.² In a suit, otherwise well brought, in which a state has sufficient interest to entitle it to become a party defend-

1. Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1; North Carolina v. Temple, 134 U. S. 22. See infra, this title, Eleventh Amendment to Constitution.

2. U. S. v. Texas, 143 U. S. 621. The facts of this case were as follows: When the act was passed to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Oklahoma, in May, 1890, a question arose as to the boundary between the territory and the State of Texas. In the southwest corner of the tract, claimed by the United States as public land, and which it was proposed to erect into a territory, lay Greer county. The title to this land had always been in dispute, on account of the indefinite character of the boundary of the State of Texas. Congress, in order to quiet the title to the disputed tract, incorporated in the Oklahoma bill a section authorizing the attorney-general "to commence in the name and on behalf of the United States, and prosecute to a final determination, a proper suit in equity in the Supreme Court of the United States against the State of Texas, setting forth the claim and title of the United States to the tract of land . . . designated . . . as Greer county;" and directing that the case should be "advanced on the docket of said court, and proceeded with as rapidly as the nature and circumstances of the case permit." Acting on this authority, the attorney-general began suit, and the State of Texas put in a demurrer, claiming that the United States could not, under the Constitution, sue a state. The demurrer, however, was overruled, and Harlan, J., in speaking for the court, said: "We cannot assume that the framers of the Constitution, while extending the judicial power of the United States to controversies between two or more states of the Union, and between a state of the Union and foreign states, intended to exempt a state altogether from suit by the general government. They could not have overlooked the possibility that controversies capable of judicial solution might arise between the United States and some of the states, and that the permanence of the Union might be endangered if to some tribunal was not entrusted the power to determine them according to the recognized principles of law. And to what tribunal could a trust, so momentous, be more appropriately committed than to that which the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, and insure domestic tranquillity, have constituted with authority to speak for all the people and all the states, upon questions before it to which the judicial power of the nation extends?"

Referring to the exemption of a state from suit by individuals without its consent, and the reasons, the opinion continues as follows: "The question as to the suability of one government by another government rests upon wholly different grounds. Texas is not called to the bar of this court at the suit of an individual, but at the suit of the government established for the common and equal benefit of the people of all the states. The submission to judicial solution of controversies arising between these two governments, each sovereign with respect to the objects committed to it, and neither sovereign with respect to the objects committed to the other, but both subject to the supreme law of the land, does no violence to the inherent nature of sovereignty. The states of the Union have agreed in the Constitution that the judicial power of the United States shall extend to all cases arising under the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States, without regard to the character of the parties (excluding, of course, suits against a state by its own citizens or by citizens of other states, or by citizens or subjects of foreign states), and equally to controversies to which the United States shall be a party, without regard to the subject of such controversies, and that this court may exercise original jurisdiction in all such cases, 'in which a state shall be a ant, its appearance in a court of the United States is a voluntary submission to the jurisdiction;¹ but it is otherwise where the state expressly declines to become a party, and appears merely to protest against the exercise of jurisdiction by the court.² In suits against a state in the Supreme Court, service of process should be made on the governor and attorney-general,³ and service on one only is not sufficient.⁴ If the state neglects to appear after due notice, no coercive measures will be employed to compel appearance, but the complainant will be permitted to proceed ex parte.⁵ The rules which govern courts of equity as to allowance of time for filing an answer, in suits between individuals, will not be applied by the Supreme Court in controversies between states.⁶

(2) Eleventh Amendment to Constitution.—Under the Federal Constitution as first adopted, the judicial power of the United States was construed to extend to a suit prosecuted against a state by a citizen of a sister state;⁷ but the authority of the case so deciding was abrogated by the Eleventh Amendment, which declares that “the judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or party,’ without excluding those in which the United States may be the opposite party. The exercise, therefore, by this court, of such original jurisdiction in a suit brought by one state against another to determine the boundary line between them, or in a suit brought by the United States against a state to determine the boundary between a territory of the United States and that state, so far from infringing in either case upon the sovereignty, is with the consent of the state sued. Such consent was given by Texas when admitted into the Union upon an equal footing in all respects with the other states. We are of the opinion that this court has jurisdiction to determine the disputed question of boundary between the United States and Texas.” Mr. Chief Justice Fuller and Mr. Justice Lamar dissented.

1. Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436.

2. Georgia v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 458.

3. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 419; Grayson v. Virginia, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 320; New Jersey v. New York, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 461; 5 Pet. (U. S.) 284; Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. (U. S.) 66.

Subpoena in an equity suit against a state was held to have been well served upon the governor by leaving a copy at his house, and then showing the original to the secretary of state. Hu- ger v. South Carolina, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 339.

And in a suit by one state against another, service of the process of the Supreme Court sixty days before the return day is a sufficient service in point of time. New Jersey v. New York, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 284.

4. New Jersey v. New York, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 461.

5. Massachusetts v. Rhode Island, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 755. And in this case it was further decided that proceeding ex parte will likewise be allowed where appearance is withdrawn.

A demurrer filed in a case by the attorney-general of a state, who is a practitioner of the court, is considered as an appearance for the state. New Jersey v. New York, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 323.

Judgment by Default.—Judgment may be entered against a state for default of appearance. Oswald v. New York, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 415; Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 419.

6. Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 23. In this case the State of Massachusetts was allowed one year to put in an answer to the amended bill of the State of Rhode Island. The reason assigned for the indulgence was that states, in the nature of things, were incapable of acting with the promptness of individuals.

7. Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 419.

equity commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state.”¹ The words “commenced” and “prosecuted” are construed as not only preventing the institution of new suits, but also as superseding depending suits.² The inhibition applies only to citizens or subjects, and does not extend to suits by a state, or by foreign states or powers.³ But one state cannot create a controversy with another state so as to bring the case within the jurisdiction of the United States courts by assuming the prosecution of debts owing by the other state to its citizens.⁴

The doctrine once held by the United States Supreme Court, that whether or not a suit is against the state must be determined by the fact whether or not the state is the nominal defendant of record,⁵ has been qualified in some of the later decisions of that court, and now it is settled that whether a suit is within the prohibition of the Eleventh Amendment is not always determined by reference to the nominal parties on the record, but by a consideration of the nature of the whole case.⁶ A suit against the

1. The decision in Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 419, gave rise to the Eleventh Amendment. It is obvious that the framers of the Constitution did not suppose that the grant of the judicial power of the United States to cases “between a state and citizens of another state” gave the right to these parties to sue the state. Its object was to give to the state power and authority to sue these parties, and to the Federal courts jurisdiction over such causes. See 81st article of the Federalist (by Alexander Hamilton); and 3 Elliott’s Debates (Va. Const. Convention), 2d ed. 533, containing the arguments of Madison and Marshall, the latter maintaining that it was irrational to put any other construction upon the grant than the above. But notwithstanding this, the United States Supreme Court, in the case just cited, did put this irrational construction upon it, and hence the necessity for this amendment to give to it the true construction, for it will be observed that the amendment declares that the judicial power, etc., shall not be construed to extend to such cases, thus showing that in the opinion of the people and of Congress an improper construction had been given it.

2. Hollingsworth v. Virginia, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 378.

3. 1 Kent’s Com. (13th ed.), p. 297; Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 1; New Jersey v. New York, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 284.

4. New Hampshire v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76; New York v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76.

5. Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738. The opinion in this case was delivered by Marshall, C. J., in the course of which he observed: “It may, we think, be laid down as a general rule, which admits of no exception, that in all cases where jurisdiction depends on the party, it is the party named in the record. Consequently the Eleventh Amendment, which restrains the jurisdiction granted by the Constitution over suits against states, is of necessity limited to those suits in which a state is a party on the record. The amendment has its full effect, if the Constitution be construed as it would have been construed had the jurisdiction of the court never been extended to suits brought against a state by citizens of another state or by aliens.” This is followed in Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. (U. S.) 497. And in Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 203, following Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, it was held that in deciding who are the parties to the suit, the court will not look beyond the record: making a state officer a party does not make the state a party, although its law may have prompted his action, and the state may stand behind him as the real party to the record.

6. Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446; Chicago, etc., R.

officers of a state to compel them to do acts which constitute a performance by the state of its contract, is, in effect, a suit against the state itself;¹ and the converse of this proposition must be equally true, viz., that it is a suit against the state to seek to Co. v. Dey, 35 Fed. Rep. 866; In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1. In New Hampshire v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76, there was upon the face of the record nominally a controversy between two states, which, according to the terms of the Constitution, was within the judicial power of the United States. So far as could be determined with reference to the parties named in the record, the suits were within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, but on examination of the cases as stated in the pleadings, it appeared that the state which was plaintiff was suing not for its own interest and use, but for the use and on behalf of certain individual citizens thereof, who had transferred their claims to the state for the purposes of suit. It was accordingly unanimously held by the court that it would look behind and through the nominal parties on the record to ascertain who were the real parties to the suit.

In Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, the following were suggested as tests for determining when a suit would be considered as brought against the state: (1) Where the state is named as a party on the record. (2) Where the action is brought directly upon the state's contract. (3) Where the suit is brought to control the discretion of an executive officer of the state. (4) Where the suit is brought for the purpose of administering funds actually in the public treasury. (5) Where the suit is in effect an attempt to compel officers of the state to do acts which constitute a performance of its contract by the state. (6) Where the suit brought is such that the state is a necessary party in order that the defendant may be protected from liability to it.

1. Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1; North Carolina v. Temple, 134 U. S. 22; Louisiana v. Steel, 134 U. S. 230; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 746. This was a case of mandamus and injunction against officers of the State of Louisiana, constituting the state board of liquidation, to compel them to carry out a contract with the state for the payment of coupons on its bonds repudiated by a subsequent constitutional amendment, and to apply funds in the treasury already collected, to the redemption of bonds contracted to be redeemed, and to execute generally the act embodying the contract. The court denied relief on the ground that it was an attempt to control the discretion of the state's executive officers and to compel them to do acts constituting a performance of the state's contract, and to administer funds actually in the public treasury.

The principle of this case was applied in Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52. The object of the suit, which was against officers of the State of South Carolina, was to obtain on behalf of the complainants by judicial process, the redemption by the state of certain scrip of which they were holders, but the relief sought was denied, and the identification of officers of the state with the state itself is thus expressed: when a suit is brought in a court of the United States against officers of a state, to enforce performance of a contract made by the state and the controversy is as to the validity and obligation of the contract, and the only remedy sought is the performance of the contract by the state, and the nominal defendants have no personal interest in the subject-matter of the suit, but defend only as representing the state, the state is the real party against whom the relief is sought, and the suit is substantially within the inhibition of the Eleventh Amendment.

An exhaustive treatment of the subject is to be found in In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, and Matthews, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The very object and purpose of the Eleventh Amendment were to prevent the indignity of subjecting the state to the coercive process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties. It was thought to be neither becoming nor convenient that the several states of the Union invested with that large residuum of sovereignty which had not been delegated to the restrain state officers by judicial process from doing acts required of them by state laws, which, when performed, would constitute a breach of the state's contract.¹

There are certain cases, however, in which the state, though affected by the decision, is not a necessary party so as to defeat jurisdiction. Thus, the court will take jurisdiction against individuals sued in tort for acts injurious to the persons or property of others, although their defense is that they acted under the orders of government;² the court will enforce the performance

United States, should be summoned as defendants to answer the complaint of private persons, whether citizens of other states or aliens, or that the course of their public policy and the administration of their public affairs should be subject to and controlled by the mandates of judicial tribunals without their consent and in favor of individual interests. To secure the manifest purposes of the constitutional exemption guaranteed by the Eleventh Amendment, requires that it should be interpreted not literally and too narrowly, but fairly and with such breadth and largeness as to effectually accomplish the substance of its purpose. In this spirit it must be held to cover not only suits brought against a state by name, but those also against its officers, agents and representatives where the state, though not named as such, is, nevertheless, the only real party against which alone in fact the relief is asked and against which the judgment or decree effectively operates. But this is not intended in any way to impinge upon the principle which justifies suits against individual defendants who, under color of the authority of unconstitutional legislation by the state, are guilty of personal trespasses and wrongs, nor to forbid suits against officers in their official capacity, either to arrest or direct their official action by injunction or mandamus, where such suits are authorized by law and the act to be done or omitted is purely ministerial in the performance or omission of which the plaintiff has a legal interest."

1. In re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443. This case came before the U. S. Supreme Court on habeas corpus, on the petition of the attorney-general of the state of Virginia, who was committed for contempt for disobedience of a restraining order of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Virginia. The order was made by way of final decree on a bill in equity filed by aliens against the attorney-general, auditor, and other officers of the state, to restrain them from instituting and prosecuting in the name and for the use of the state, as required by a statute of the state, suit against certain parties who, in payment of taxes, had tendered coupons of a class already adjudged by the supreme court to be receivable for taxes under a prior contract of the state. The petitioner was released on the ground that the suit in which the restraining order had issued was in effect against the state.

2. Osborn v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, was a suit in equity brought in the circuit court of the United States for the State of Ohio by the president, directors and company of the Bank of the United States to restrain Osborn, auditor of the State of Ohio, from executing a law of that state which was in violation of, and destructive to, the rights and privileges conferred upon the complainants by the bank's charter and by the Federal Constitution. One of the leading enquiries in the case was, whether an injunction could be issued to restrain a person who is a state officer from performing an official act enjoined by the statute of the state. The question presented by that enquiry was discussed on the assumption that the statute of the state was unconstitutional, and it was held that in such a case, grounds of equity interposition existing, injunction would lie. With regard to the objection that if any case was made by the bill for the interference of chancery, it was against the State of Ohio, and therefore was within the prohibition of the Eleventh Amendment, the court held that exemption of the state from suit could not be pleaded by its officers, when they were proceeded against for executing an unconstitutional law of the state. This question was discussed most thoroughly in the light of the other provisions of the Constitution relating to jurisdiction of the Federal courts, and the conclusion arrived at thus announced: "It was proper then to make a decree against the defendants in the circuit court, if the law of the State of Ohio be repugnant to the Constitution or to a law of the United States made in pursuance thereof, so as to furnish no authority to those who took or to those who received the money for which the suit was instituted." The statute of Ohio in which the defendant was acting was then examined and was found to be unconstitutional.

The doctrine as thus declared has never been departed from, but on the contrary has been recognized and enforced in a number of cases. Thus in Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, it was held that a suit in equity against the board of land commissioners of the State of Oregon brought by a purchaser of swamp and overflowed lands, under the act of October 26, 1870, in order to restrain the defendants from doing acts which the bill alleges are violative of the plaintiff's contract with the state when he purchased the lands, and which are unconstitutional, destructive of the plaintiff's rights and privileges, and which it is alleged will work irreparable damage to his interest and property rights so acquired, is not a suit against the state within the meaning of the Eleventh Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. And Hancock v. Walsh, 3 Woods (U. S.) 351; Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Woods (U. S.) 223; Preston v. Walsh, 10 Fed. Rep. 315; Pick v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 6 Biss. (U. S.) 177; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dev, 35 Fed. Rep. 866. are to the same effect.

The most notable application of the principle is found in the Virginia coupon cases (so called), reported in 114 U. S. 270 et seq. The first and leading case is Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, which was an action in detinue against the treasurer of the city of Richmond, Virginia, for the recovery of an office desk which he had seized for delinquent taxes in payment for which the plaintiff had duly tendered coupons cut from bonds issued by the State of Virginia, under the funding act of March 30, 1871, and by that act made receivable for all state taxes. The defendant, under color of office as tax collector and acting in the enforcement of the statutes passed in 1882, which forbade the receipt of coupons for taxes, refused to receive such tender and made the seizure complained of. It was held that the act of the general assembly passed in 1882 was unconstitutional and void, because it was an impairment of the contract entered into between the state and its bondholders by the act of 1871; that being unconstitutional it afforded no protection to the defendant, that the action was properly maintainable against him as a wrongdoer, and that it was not an action against the state in the sense of the Eleventh Amendment. The whole question was discussed by Mr. Justice Matthews, both on principle and authority, and the following from the opinion of the court delivered by Mr. Justice Miller in Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446, quoted with approval: "Another class of cases is where an individual is sued in tort for some act injurious to another in regard to persons or property, to which his defense is that he has acted under orders of the government. In these cases he is not sued as or because he is the officer of the government but as an individual, and the court is not ousted of jurisdiction because he asserts authority as such officer. To make out his defense he must show that his authority was sufficient in law to protect him." White v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 307; Chaffin v. Taylor, 114 U. S. 309; Allen v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 311, were decided at the same time as the foregoing case and upon the authority thereof.

The first and second of these cases were actions of trespass de bonis asportatis for offenses of a character like that of Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270; in the third, an injunction was granted to prevent the state auditor from seizing certain personal property of the complainant in satisfaction of taxes alleged to be due, for the payment of which the railroad company had tendered tax-paying coupons.

Ex parte Ayers and Virginia Coupon Cases Distinguished. — In Ex parte Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, it was sought to prevent state officers from instituting suits as required by a valid state law, and the action was not maintainable. This is and enjoin the violation of ministerial duties of such officers; ¹ the court will determine the rights of the parties to suits as to quite different from bringing against the officer a bill for injunction to preserve, or detain to restore, the status quo, or trespass for unwarranted interference with property under color of an unconstitutional law, which were allowed in Virginia Coupon cases. This distinction is expressed by Bradley, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 662, as follows: "No proceedings can be instituted by any holder of state bonds or coupons against the Commonwealth of Virginia, either directly by suit against the Commonwealth by name, or indirectly against her executive officers to control them in the exercise of their official functions as agents of the state. Any lawful holder of the tax receivable coupons of the state issued under the act of 1871, or the subsequent act of 1879, who tenders such coupons in payment of taxes, debts, dues, and demands due from him to the state, and continues to hold himself ready to tender the same in payment thereof, is entitled to be free from molestation in person or goods on account of such taxes, debts, dues, or demands, and may vindicate such right in all lawful modes of redress—by suit to recover his property, by suit against the officer to recover damages for taking it, by injunction to prevent such taking, where it would be attended with irremediable injury, or by a defense to a suit brought against him for his taxes or other claims standing against him."

1. But in all such cases, from the nature of the remedy by mandamus, the duty to be performed must be merely ministerial and must involve no element of discretion to be exercised by the officer. It has, however, been insisted that in this class of cases, where it shall be found necessary to enforce the rights of the individual, a court of chancery may, by a mandatory decree, or by an injunction, compel the performance of the appropriate duty, or enjoin the officer from doing that which is inconsistent with that duty and with the plaintiff's rights in the premises. Perhaps the strongest assertion of this doctrine is found in Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 203. In that case the State of Texas having made a grant of the alternate sections of land, along which a railroad should thereafter be located, and the railroad company having surveyed the land at its own expense and located its road through it, the land commissioner and the governor of the state were, in violation of the rights of the company, selling and delivering patents for the sections to which the company had an undoubted vested right. The circuit court of the United States enjoined them from doing this by its decree, which was affirmed in the supreme court. Judge Hunt did not sit in the case and Justice Davis, and Chief Justice Chase dissented on the ground that it was a suit against the state. Referring to this case, Mr. Justice Miller, in the opinion of the court in Cunningham v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 446, observes "that in enjoining the governor of the state in the performance of one of his executive functions, the case goes to the verge of sound doctrine, if not beyond it, and that the principle should be extended no further." But at the same time, he points out that in the case no affirmative relief was granted, and that the governor and land commissioner were not compelled to perform any act towards perfecting the title of the company, and this may perhaps be regarded as the saving feature of the decision; for in McCauley v. Kellogg, 2 Woods (U. S.) 13, it was held that a suit to compel state officers to do any affirmative official act, is in effect a suit against the state; and it is there said that a Federal court will not take upon itself to administer a state government.

In Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, the board was charged by a statute of Louisiana with certain duties in regard to issuing new bonds of the state in place of old ones which might be surrendered for exchange by the holders of the latter. The amount of new bonds to be issued was limited by a constitutional provision. McComb, the owner of some of the new bonds already issued, filed his bill to restrain the board from issuing that class of bonds in exchange for a class of indebtedness not included within the purview of the statute, on the ground that his own bonds would be rendered less valuable. The Supreme Court property of the state, or property in which the state has an interest, so long as it is not necessary to take property forcibly from the possession of the government.¹

And the fact that a state is interested in a bank in the capacity of sole proprietor,² or indeed in that of corporator and stockholder affirmed the decree of the circuit court enjoining the board from exceeding its power in taking up by the new issue a class of such indebtedness not within the provision of the law on that subject. In the opinion in that case the following language used by Mr. Justice Bradley well expresses the rule and its limitations: "The objections to proceeding against state officers by mandamus or injunction are: first, that it is in effect proceeding against the state itself; and, second, that it interferes with the official discretion vested in the officers. It is conceded that neither of these can be done. A state, without its consent, cannot be sued as an individual; and a court cannot substitute its discretion for that of its executive officers in matters belonging to the proper jurisdiction of the latter. But it has been settled that where a plain official duty requiring no exercise of discretion is to be performed, and performance is refused, any person who will sustain a personal injury by such refusal may have a mandamus to compel performance; and when such duty is threatened to be violated by some positive official act, any person who will sustain personal injury thereby, for which adequate compensation cannot be had at law, may have an injunction to prevent it." See also Rolston v. Crittenden, 120 U. S. 390.

It is believed that this is as far as the Supreme Court of the United States has gone in granting relief in this class of cases. Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 746, and Elliott v. Wiltz, 107 U. S. 711. In the first of these cases the owners of the new bonds mentioned in McComb's case just cited, brought their bill in equity in the circuit court of the United States to compel the state auditor and treasurer to pay out of the state treasury the overdue interest coupons upon their bonds, and to enjoin them from paying any part of the taxes collected for that purpose for the ordinary expenses of the government. They at the same time applied to the state court for a writ of mandamus to the same officers, which suit was removed into the circuit of the United States. In this they asked that these officers be commanded to pay out of the moneys in the treasury the taxes which they maintained had been assessed for the purpose of paying the interest on their bonds, and to pay such sums as had already been diverted from that purpose for others by the officers of the government. The circuit court refused the relief asked in the case, and the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of that court.

1. In U. S. v. Peters, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 115, a mandamus was required to be issued to the representatives of Rittenhouse, treasurer of the State of Pennsylvania, commanding them to pay to certain libellants the proceeds of the sale of a vessel to which it had been adjudged that the latter were entitled. And it was then said that the state treasurer or his representatives, sued individually for the detention of funds, could not shield themselves behind the state's exemption from suit, when the funds were never in the state's possession. And in Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, the State of Rhode Island, appearing as claimant to a fund in court, assignees in bankruptcy of other parties claiming the fund were permitted to file a bill in chancery against the treasurer of the state to restrain him from collecting the same.

But on the other hand, where a libel and claim exhibited a demand for money actually in the state treasury, and for property in the possession of the government, acquired by lawful means, the courts of the United States have no jurisdiction, under the Eleventh Amendment. Sundry African Slaves v. Madrazo, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 110.

2. Bank of Kentucky v. Wistar, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 318; Briscoe v. Bank of Ky., 11 Pet. (U. S.) 257.

Subrogation to Rights of a State.—The State of Alabama indorsed the bonds of a railroad company and was indemnified against loss on account of the indorsement by a statutory mortgage on the company's property. It was held that the fact of the state's combined,¹ does not have the effect of making a suit against the corporation a suit against the state.

In one instance it was contended that a case brought on writ of error or appeal to the Supreme Court from a lower court, where the state had been plaintiff, and the plaintiff in error defendant, was, under the Constitution, a suit against the state, but the contention was negatived by a unanimous court.²

3. Set-Off Against a State—(See also SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT AND COUNTERCLAIM, vol. 22, p. 272).—The preponderance of authority is to the effect that a set-off cannot be maintained against a state, in the absence of express consent, for the same reasons that forbid an original suit.³ But it seems that the defendant may plead and prove all matters properly defensive, so far as they are dependent on, connected with, or grow out of, the immunity from suit was no reason why the holders of the bonds so indorsed should not be subrogated to the rights of the state, and have the benefit of the security. Young v. Montgomery, etc., R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 606.

1. Bank of U. S. v. Planters' Bank, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 904.

2. Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 264.

3. People v. Miles, 56 Cal. 401; White v. Governor, 18 Ala. 767; State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 Md. 344; State v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 18 Md. 193; People v. Dennison, 84 N. Y. 272; People v. Corner, 59 Hun (N. Y.) 299; Com. v. Matsack, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 303; Com. v. Rodes, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 318; Treasurers v. Cleary, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 372; Borden v. Houston, 2 Tex. 594; State v. Leckie, 14 La. Ann. 636; Newport, etc., Bridge Co. v. Douglass, 12 Bush (Ky.) 673.

Chevallier v. State, 10 Tex. 315, was a suit by the state on a written acknowledgment of indebtedness to the Republic of Texas. In sustaining a demurrer to a plea by way of set-off of certain claims against the state, the court, by Hemphill, C. J., observed: "It is only necessary to refer to the admitted principle that no action can be instituted on a claim against the government at the instance of an individual, either directly, or indirectly by way of set-off, unless by the sanction of express law to that effect."

In Wait's Actions and Defenses, vol. 7, p. 477, it is said: "And it is laid down as a rule that a claim is available in set-off at law only when it is a debt on which the defendant could maintain an action at law against the plaintiff." See generally SET-OFF, RECOUPMENT AND COUNTERCLAIM, vol. 22, p. 209.

And in Battle v. Thompson, 65 N. Car. 406, it was held that a party sued on a single bill, payable to the state treasurer, given for cotton sold by that officer, could not plead by way of set-off to the action, valid coupons, taken from the bonds of the state. And Pearson, C. J., speaking for the court, said: "The test of a set-off or counterclaim under the statute is this: could the defendant maintain an action against the plaintiff? Tried by this test the defense fails, for a citizen cannot maintain an action against the state."

In Bates v. The Republic, 2 Tex. 616, it was said that a set-off, though not denominated a suit, is in the nature of a cross-action. Being then but another name for an action, it cannot be instituted or set up against the government without its consent. The proposition that the government is above the reach of judicial authority by direct action, but within its control and coercive power by indirect suit, is a solecism and absurdity in its very terms.

The drawer of a bill of exchange, accepted by the drawees for his accommodation, and by the drawer delivered to the state in payment for a debt owed by him to it, cannot maintain a bill in chancery against the state and the acceptors to set off against the demand of the state an indebtedness by it to him growing out of a distinct transaction. Raymond v. State, 54 Miss. 562; 28 Am. Rep. 382.

A sheriff and ex officio tax collector is not entitled to deduct from amounts transaction which constitutes the subject-matter of the suit; this, however, is distinguishable from set-off, and is on the ground that the claim is in the nature of a payment or credit or recoupment to which the defendant is entitled, and that the demand of the state is in fact for the balance.¹ In some of the states, there are statutes authorizing set-off to be employed in actions by the state, but a defendant must, in order to avail himself of the privi-

due the state for taxes and licenses collected by him, the cost of deeds and copies charged to the state in cases of purchases of lands sold for taxes and bought by the state. Such a demand is reconventional in character, and in the absence of statute is not pleadable against the state. State v. Bradley, 37 La. Ann. 623.

And in Tennessee it is held that a sister state, when plaintiff in the courts of that state, will be allowed the same exemption from set-off that the State of Tennessee enjoys when plaintiff. Moore v. Tate, 87 Tenn. 725; 10 Am. St. Rep. 712.

Contra Cases.—There are cases in which a defendant has been permitted to plead a set-off against the state's demand. Thus, in Powers v. Central Bank, 18 Ga. 658, it was held that an attorney who has collected money for a bank whose assets have been transferred to the state treasury, upon being ruled by the bank for the amount in his hands, may plead by way of set-off, a sum due him from the state for professional services which has been audited and liquidated.

And in Harlan v. Lumsden, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 86, it is held that the sheriff's claim on his deputy is a chose in action on which the commonwealth, having obtained judgment against the sheriff, has a lien; but where the deputy is also surety of the sheriff, and has been compelled as such to pay money for the latter before the commonwealth's lien attached, the sum so paid is a valid set-off against the commonwealth. But the court says, had the deputy made the payment after the lien upon his debt to the sheriff attached in favor of the commonwealth, it is doubtful whether such payment would give him a valid set-off against the commonwealth.

State v. Gaillard, 1 Bay. (S. Car.) 500, is very brief and seems to rest upon an amercement act which it is impossible to understand from the meager reference to it. In the opinion there is no discussion and no authority cited. It is virtually a set-off allowed against the state, however.

This case, though not referred to, is virtually overruled by Treasurers v. Cleary, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 372.

In State v. Franklin Bank, 10 Ohio 91, set-off was maintained against the state. But this was an agreed case, where the state, by its attorney, consented to try the question of set-off to the claim for taxes.

Com. v. Owensboro, etc., R. Co., 81 Ky. 573, has been supposed to be a contra case, and the court does say, that "when the state undertakes to litigate with a citizen the latter may, by way of set-off or counterclaim, make such defense as will defeat the recovery, but is not entitled to a judgment over against the state in the absence of some legislative enactment authorizing the recovery." But the case contains no discussion of the question of set-off and cites no authority; it is simply a suit for taxes, and it was adjudged that no taxes were due, so that at best the observation is a mere dictum.

Nor can Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Northern Bank, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 174, be properly placed in the category of contra cases.

It is true that the defendant was permitted to plead a set-off, but the case was not a suit by the state, but by a corporation created by the state subject to sue and be sued. (See Com'rs of Sinking Fund v. Theobald, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 476.) And even had the suit been by the state, the set-off interposed was that of an incumbrance on the property bought by the defendant. It grew out of the same transaction and would have been admissible under the doctrine of the cases cited in the note next succeeding in reference to credits, etc.

1. Raymond v. State, 54 Miss. 562; 28 Am. Rep. 382; Battle v. Thompson, 65 N. Car. 406. See also Moore v. Tate, 87 Tenn. 725; 10 Am. St. Rep. 712.

lege, strictly comply with the requirements of the statute. Thus, if the requirement that the claim shall be presented to a certain state officer for his examination and allowance does not appear to have been conformed to, the claim will not be available in set-off.¹

VI. PRIORITY OF STATE AS CREDITOR—(See also DEBTS OF DECEDENTS, vol. 5, p. 206; UNITED STATES).—In nearly all of the states there are statutes giving preference to taxes, rates, and other debts due the state over the debts of the citizens;² but in one instance, the statute directs that debts due the state shall be paid last.³ Whether a state, in the absence of positive enactment, is entitled to the priority claimed by the crown under the common law, appears to be not well settled.⁴ The language "debts due to the public" in a statute giving priority to the state

1. Biscoe v. State, 19 Ark. 559. And the same is true when it is made a condition precedent that the claim shall be presented to a certain officer for his examination and by him disallowed in whole or in part. Frier v. State, 11 Fla. 300.

2. See various state statutes.

3. Bright Purd. Dig. (Pa.), p. 525, §

94. Unless secured by judgment. Ramsey's Appeal, 4 Watts (Pa.) 73.

4. See 16 Albany L. J. 298.

Maryland.—The priority of the state in the payment of its claim against a debtor was recognized and enforced in Maryland as early as 1787 in State v. Rogers, 2 Har. & M. (Md.) 198. And again in Murray v. Ridley, 3 Har. & M. (Md.) 171.

The same question arose in Contee v. Chew, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 417, and this right of the state was again announced. And in Smith v. State, 5 Gill (Md.) 45, it was held that as between the state and the other general creditors of a deceased debtor, whose lands were sold for the payment of debts in consequence of the insufficiency of his personal property, neither having a lien, the state is entitled to priority of payment out of the proceeds thereof over such other creditors. Again, in Green's Estate, 4 Md. Ch. 349, two judgments were rendered against a party contemporaneously, one at the suit of the state, the other at the suit of a private citizen, that of the state standing first upon the docket, and priority was given to it. And it was there said that whenever the state and a citizen have claims in equal degree and a conflict arises by death or act of the party, not having enough to pay his debts, the claim of the citizen must yield to the right of the state.

The subject is treated at considerable length in the opinion of the court in State v. Bank of Maryland, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205; 26 Am. Dec. 561, delivered by Buchanan, C. J., and the conclusion arrived at is in favor of the state's priority as a prerogative right derived from the common law, entitling it to be first paid, except where some antecedent lien stands in the way. And this was followed in Orem v. Wrightson, 51 Md. 34; 34 Am. Rep. 286.

The priority of the state is lost, however, by a valid assignment of the debtor's (in this case a banking corporation's) property in trust for the equal benefit of all his creditors and the state can only come in with the other creditors. State v. Bank of Maryland, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205; 26 Am. Dec. 561. But where the state and other parties are creditors under the same bond of the same party, who has conveyed his property by deed of trust to indemnify his sureties on the bond, the state by virtue of its prerogative is entitled to priority of payment out of the proceeds of the property sold by the trustee in the deed under the direction of a court of equity. State v. Mayor, etc., of Baltimore, 10 Md. 504. See the opinion in this case for the grounds upon which it is distinguished from the case just preceding.

If a judgment be obtained against one in his lifetime, his executor or administrator is bound to satisfy it in preference to a debt passed to the state after such judgment. Hollingsworth v. Patten, 3 Har. & M. (Md.) 126.

Under Maryland Rev. Code, art.

as a creditor, does not comprehend a debt due to an incorporated bank, notwithstanding the entire interest in the corporation is owned by the state;¹ but it is otherwise in the case of a debt due by a surety, at the time of his death, on a county treasurer's bond for a default of his principal.² It has been held that a state does not lose its general priority in cases to which it is entitled by law, by taking special security.³

VII. STATE BONDS.—Parties dealing in the bonds of a state must rely upon the sense of justice and good faith of the state, the judiciary of the state not being authorized to enforce them, without the consent of the state, and the Federal courts being expressly prohibited from exercising such a jurisdiction.⁴ Bonds of a state issued for a purpose contrary to the United States Constitution are not a valid consideration for a promissory note, and this is not altered by the fact that they were employed as a circulating medium in the state.⁵ And bonds which constitute a debt in excess 64, § 36, the state has a lien on the lands of a person indebted to it from the commencement of a suit for such indebtedness. Under the similar act of 1779, ch. 9, it was held in Davidson v. Clayland, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 546, that if the lands of a debtor be sold under a fieri facias, issued on a judgment obtained by an individual before the commencement of suit by the state, the surplus money remaining in the hands of the sheriff after satisfying such prior lien is subject to attachment issued on its judgment by the state, in preference to a prior attachment issued by a private creditor on a judgment rendered at the same term. See also Jones v. Jones, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 446; 18 Am. Dec. 327; Hodges v. Mullikin, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 515. This lien, however, is for the benefit of the state alone and cannot be called into action to subserve the purposes of an individual who institutes a suit against one bound only nominally as a debtor of the state, but in reality upon a contract intended to operate as a mere private security. Ridgely v. Iglehart, 3 Bland Ch. (Md.) 544.

South Carolina.—Com'rs of Pub. Accounts v. Greenwood, 1 Desaus. (S. Car.) 450, denied that the general common law prerogative of the king to be paid in preference to his subjects had any application to the state. And in State v. Harris, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 598, it was held that the priority of the state applied only to such demands as constituted specific liens, as taxes, for instance. And in Klinck v. Keckley, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.)

250, the common law right of the state to priority was denied, and it was said that the right depended altogether on the statute law of the state.

Georgia.—The sovereign right of the state to priority of payment out of the effects of an insolvent, is based upon the common law and was adopted by the act of 1784, which introduces into the jurisprudence of Georgia the whole body of the common law, not inconsistent with the new frame of government, and subject, of course, to legislative modification. It does not exist here, however, with all the incidents of the royal prerogative right in England; we have not the writ of protection, nor the extent in chief, nor in aid; the priority of the state is a rule only in the distribution of the property of the debtor, requiring the debt due to the state to be first paid where the individual creditor has no antecedent lien overreaching it. Robinson v. Bank of Darien, 18 Ga. 65.

Virginia.—In Leake v. Ferguson, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 419, and Nimmo v. Com., 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 57; 4 Am. Dec. 488, the right was doubted.

1. Bank of South Carolina v. Gibbs, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 377. And so with the phrase "debts and arrearages due the state." Fields v. Wheatley, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 351.

2. Baxter v. Baxter, 23 S. Car. 114.

3. Lenoir v. Winn, 4 Desaus. (S. Car.) 65; 6 Am. Dec. 597.

4. Bank of Washington v. Arkansas, 20 How. (U. S.) 530. See also supra, this title, Actions Against a State.

5. So decided in the case of bonds of the amount which a state may constitutionally create, are void.¹ When a state borrows money on bonds issued by it for that purpose and pledges a certain fund for the payment of the interest to accrue thereon, such pledge is a part of the contract with the holders of the bonds, and the diversion of the fund to other purposes is an impairment of the contract, and prohibited by the Federal Constitution.² And when a state issues bonds with coupons receivable "at and after maturity for all taxes, debts, dues, and demands due the state," a subsequent act of the state forbidding the receipt of the coupons for such purposes impairs the obligation of the contract and is void.³ An offer on the part of a state to issue new bonds for all its valid outstanding bonds, whenever the holders thereof choose to accept the terms on which the exchange is to be made, is, before acceptance, not a contract, but a mere proposal, which may be withdrawn.⁴ A bona fide holder of invalid state bonds is not entitled to the benefit of a scheme of compromise which the state offers to holders of its securities that were valid in the hands of the first takers.⁵ No recovery can be had on state bonds negotiable in form, even in favor of innocent holders, into whose hands they came, after having been fraudulently reissued from the treasurer's office.⁶ But if the legislature recognizes the legality of bonds, which have been put into circulation improperly, upon condition that certain secuof the state of Arkansas, issued for the purpose of aiding the Southern cause in the war between the states. Hanauer v. Woodruff, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 439.

1. By an amendment to the constitution of Louisiana, adopted in 1870, no debt could be created for twenty years, which, added to the then existing state debt, would swell the total above a certain amount; in 1871, after the limit had been reached, certain bonds were authorized to be issued by an act of the legislature, which act, and the bonds issued thereunder, were adjudged void. Williams v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 637.

Indorsement of State Bonds—Effect of.—Where a railroad company put on the market and sold bonds of a state indorsed by the company with its certificate that the state held the first mortgage bonds of the company for a like amount as security to the holder, it was held that although the state was not liable upon its bonds because they were unconstitutional, this certificate was equivalent to an acknowledgment by the company that the bonds, so far as the security was concerned, were valid obligations of the state. Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118. See also Tompkins v. Little Rock, etc.,

R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 6; Williams v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 344.

2. Under an act of the legislature of South Carolina (14 Stat. at L. 385), bonds of the state were issued to raise money to be used in the purchase of land to be sold to settlers thereon, and the interest on the purchase money of the lands when sold, to be applied by the treasurer of the state to the payment of the interest on the bonds issued under the act. It was held that the act constituted part of the contract between the state and the holders of the bond, and that the state had no right to divert the fund arising from the interest on the purchase money of the land from the payment of the interest on the bonds. State v. Cardozo, 8 S. Car. 71; 28 Am. Rep. 275. See also supra, this title, Contracts.

3. Antoni v. Greenhow, 107 U. S. 769; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270; Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572.

4. Durkee v. Board of Liquidation, 103 U. S. 646.

5. New York Guaranty, etc., Co. v. Board of Liquidation, 105 U. S. 622.

6. Pugh v. Moore (La. 1892), 10 So. Rep. 710; Herwig v. Richardson (La. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 135.

rities shall be given, and directs that they may be sold in open market, the state may not afterwards repudiate them.¹ When a state lends its own bonds, taking back security for their payment, the presumption is strong that it intends, by means of such security, to indemnify itself against loss by reason of the loan of its credit, rather than to protect those who may subsequently become holders of such bonds against the consequences of its own repudiation or inability to pay.²

VIII. STATE BOUNDARIES.—(See also JURISDICTION, vol. 12, p. 244; BOUNDARIES, vol. 2, p. 495.)

The right of the several states of the Union to establish and fix the disputed boundaries between their respective limits is recognized by the Constitution, and is guarded in its exercise by a single limitation or restriction, requiring the consent of Congress; and the boundaries so established and fixed by compact, become conclusive upon all the citizens of the states concerned, and bind their rights.³

The Supreme Court of the United States has jurisdiction of a bill filed by one state against another to ascertain and establish the boundary between them;⁴ and this jurisdiction is not defeated because in deciding that question the court must examine and

1. Butler v. Dubois, 29 Ill. 105.

2. Stevens v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 663. In this case this presumption was held to be supported by certain provisions of the statutes under which the bonds were issued, and it was decided that the statutory lien with which the State of Tennessee was invested, upon the issue of its bonds to railroad companies under the "Internal Improvement Acts," was created solely for the state's security, and the holders of the bonds are not entitled to the benefit thereof. Chamberlain v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 92 U. S. 299, was upon statutes and facts similar to the case just preceding, and it was held that where a state has loaned its bonds to a corporation, and received a conveyance of lands as indemnity, the bondholders have no equity for the application of the lands in the hands of the state's grantees to the payment of the bonds.

3. The constitution declares that no state shall, without the consent of Congress, enter into any agreement or compact with another state. U. S. Const., art. 1, § 10, cl. 3. Thus admitting that with such consent it may be done. Poole v. Fleeger, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 185; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 226. And the requisite consent of Congress to an agreement between two states fixing their boundaries may be given subsequently, or may be implied from subsequent action of Congress itself towards the states, and the agreement, when thus made and thus assented to, is valid. Virginia v. Tennessee, 148 U. S. 503. See infra, this title, Compacts Between States.

This provision is obviously intended to guard the rights and interests of the other states, and to prevent any compact or agreement between any two states which might affect injuriously the interests of the others. And the right and duty to protect these interests are vested in the general government. Accordingly, where a bill is filed by one state against another to establish a disputed boundary, the attorney-general of the United States, on his application, may intervene and appear in behalf of the United States and adduce evidence, and be heard in argument, without making the United States a party in the technical sense of the term. He will, however, have no right to interfere in the pleading, or evidence, or admissions of the states, or either of them. The judgment can be neither for nor against the United States. Florida v. Georgia, 17 How. (U. S.) 478.

4. Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 657; Florida v. Georgia, 17 How. (U. S.) 478; Virginia v. West

construe compacts or agreements between the states concerned, or because its decision may affect the territorial limits of the political jurisdiction and sovereignty of those states.¹

When a river is the boundary between two states, if the original property is in neither and there be no convention respecting it, each holds to the middle of the stream; but when one state is the original proprietor and grants territory on the one side only, it retains the river within its domain and the granted territory extends to the river only.²

The period of time which in equity constitutes a bar is held not to apply to the case of a disputed boundary between two states, especially where the boundary is in a wild and unsettled country; but it seems that long possession under a claim of title will be protected, especially where there is not clear proof of mistake.³

The court does not act differently in deciding on boundaries between states than on lines between separate tracts of land. Thus, if there is uncertainty or confusion as to the lines, it is a case appropriate for equity: an issue at law is directed, and a commission of boundary awarded: or, if the court is satisfied without either, it decrees what and where the boundary is and shall be.⁴

In a suit between states on the question of boundary, a bill and cross bill are deemed the most appropriate mode of proceeding, as thus is afforded an opportunity to the court of making an affirm-

Virginia, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 39; Virginia v. Tennessee, 148 U. S. 503.

But a question arising in a state court in regard to the construction of a compact between two states as to the boundary line between them, is one of which the Supreme Court of the United States has no jurisdiction under the 25th section of the judiciary act. New York v. Central R. Co., 12 Wall. (U. S.) 455.

1. Virginia v. West Virginia, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 39; Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 724; Missouri v. Iowa, 7 How. (U. S.) 660; Florida v. Georgia, 17 How. (U. S.) 478.

2. Handly v. Anthony, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 379; Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 381; The Pea Patch Islands, 1 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) Appendix ii; Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 (U. S.) 479.

3. Virginia v. Tennessee, 148 U. S. 503. The State of Rhode Island filed a bill against the State of Massachusetts, setting forth that the boundary called for by the charter of the latter was three miles south of the Charles river, and the parties intended to mark a line in that place more than one hundred years ago, but by mistake marked it four miles further south, thereby encroaching on the territory of the former; and the complainant was led into the mistake of confiding in representations of the commissioners of the defendant. It was held that the possession of Massachusetts was not such as to give a title by prescription, nor the laches of Rhode Island such as to forfeit her right to the interposition of a court of equity, and the demurrer was accordingly overruled. Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 233. Upon the final hearing of the cause it was held that Rhode Island would be bound even if the call of the charter had been deviated from; and that a mistake was not clearly established, and even if it had been, it would be difficult to disturb so long a possession. Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 4 How. (U. S.) 591. See also Phillips v. Payne, 92 U. S. 130, holding that the doctrine of prescription is applicable to states and governments as well as to individuals.

4. Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 657.

ative decree for the one side or the other, and establishing by its authority the disputed line, and of having it permanently marked by a commissioner of its own appointment, if necessary.¹

The boundary of a state, when a material question in the determination of the extent of the jurisdiction of a court, is not a simple question of law, but the application of the evidence in the ascertainment of it belongs to the jury.²

1. Missouri v. Iowa, 7 How. (U. S.) 660.

2. United States v. Jackalow, 1 Black (U. S.) 484. And upon questions of boundaries on rivers and similar matters, the testimony of living witnesses as to matters within their memory is to be preferred to evidence derived from early maps and the reports of early explorers and travelers. Missouri v. Kentucky, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 395.

Certain State Boundaries — Georgia and Alabama.—It was decided that the river Chattahoochee was within the State of Georgia, and the line of division between the two states is not the high or low water mark but the water line impressed upon the bank by the flow of water at its usual and accustomed stage. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 381; Alabama v. Georgia, 23 How. (U. S.) 505. And see Handly v. Anthony, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 374.

Missouri and Iowa.—In a suit to fix the boundary between Missouri and Iowa, it appeared that the general government before the State of Iowa was formed had recognized the Osage or Indian boundary of 1816 as the true northern boundary of Missouri by treaties with the Indian tribes by its action through the land department and by the organization in 1834 of a territorial government bounded by that line. It was held, that Iowa was bound by this action of the general government and could not maintain a claim to territory south of that line. Also, that the claim of Missouri to extend its boundary to "Brown's" line which purports to start from the rapids of the river Des Moines could not be upheld, since reliable surveys showed that there were no rapids of any magnitude at said starting point and since the State of Missouri herself recognized for ten years after coming into the Union, the Indian lines north and west as her proper boundaries. Missouri v. Iowa, 7 How. (U. S.) 660.

Missouri and Kentucky.—In a controversy between these two states touching the possession of Wolf Island in the Mississippi river, it was held that as the middle of the river was the boundary between the British and French possessions in North America, recognized by various treaties, and had been the western boundary of Virginia both as a colony and as a state; and as the State of Kentucky when created succeeded to the right and possession of Virginia, the middle of the Mississippi river became her western boundary and continued to be such when Missouri was admitted to the Union in 1820. If, therefore, in 1763 or 1820 or any intermediate period the island was east of the middle channel of the river, the jurisdiction of Kentucky attached to it, and if the river subsequently changed its course or ran east of the island, it would not affect the ownership which was before fixed. Missouri v. Kentucky, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 395.

Missouri and Kansas.—The act of Congress issued January 7, 1836, ceding to the State of Missouri the land known as the "Platte" purchase provided that when the Indian title to all lands lying between the State of Missouri and the Missouri river shall be extinguished, the jurisdiction over such lands shall be hereby ceded to the State of Missouri, and the western boundary of said state shall then be extended to the Missouri river. Under this act, it was held that the western boundary of Missouri was thereby fixed in the center of the channel of said river and not at the eastern bank. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Devereux, 41 Fed. Rep. 14.

Louisiana and Mississippi.—The line of demarkation fixed by Ellicott and Dunbar, commissioners on the part of the United States and Spain respectively, in 1798 was the true boundary line between the territory of those two nations prior to its purchase by the United States, and has ever since been the boundary between Mississippi and Louisiana irrespec-

IX. COMPACTS BETWEEN STATES.—The states are authorized by the Federal Constitution to enter into compacts with each other, subject to the qualification of Congressional sanction for their absolute validity.¹ No provision is made respecting the mode or form in which the assent of Congress is to be signified, and it has been adjudged that it need not be an express and formal statement tive of any mistakes in marking such line. Jenkins v. Trager, 40 Fed. Rep. 726.

New York and Connecticut.—By any just construction of the three great muniments of title upon which the territorial limits and jurisdiction of the colonies of New York and Connecticut rested; viz., the Warwick patent of 1631 and the charter of Connecticut of 1662 and the patent of Charles II. 1664, the islands including Goose Island, lying easterly of the land boundary between Connecticut and New York and adjacent to the Connecticut shore, are within the jurisdiction of Connecticut. Keyser v. Coe, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 32.

New Jersey and Delaware.—The territory of New Jersey only extends to low water mark on the Delaware river; the territory of Delaware, on the contrary, includes part of the Delaware river by express words of the deed from the Duke of York to Penn, conveying the town of Newcastle and all that tract of land lying within a circle of twelve miles to be the same, situate on the river Delaware, all islands in the said river and the said river and soil thereof lying north of the southern part of said circle. The rights of the two colonies thus fixed remain unchanged vesting in Delaware the title to an island known as Pea Patch Island, which sprung up in the river within the twelve mile circle some time after 1870. The Pea Patch Island, 1 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) Appendix ii.

New York and New Jersey.—The boundary line is the middle of the Hudson river, of the bay of New York, of the waters between Staten Island and New Jersey, and of Raritan Bay, except as otherwise particularly mentioned in the agreement of September 16, 1833. A vessel afloat in the Kill Van Kull, between Staten Island and New Jersey at the end of the dock at Bayonne, at a place about three hundred feet below low water mark, is within New Jersey. In re Devoe Mfg. Co., 108 U. S. 401.

Indiana and Kentucky.—The waters of the Ohio river when Kentucky became a state flowed in a channel north of the tract known as Green River Island, and the jurisdiction at that time extended, and ever since has extended, to what was then low water mark, on the north side of that channel, and the boundary between Kentucky and Indiana must run on that line as nearly as it can now be ascertained after the channel has been filled up. Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479.

1. U. S. Const., art. I, § X, cl. 3. And provision is also there made for compacts and agreements between states and foreign powers, subject to the same qualification.

In Virginia v. Tennessee, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728, it was held that the mere selection of parties to settle a boundary line between two states, and the legislative adoption of their report by one of the states, does not amount to a "compact" or "agreement" between states, which they are forbidden by the United States Constitution to make without the consent of Congress, until the one state has adopted the report in consequence of its adoption by the other, nor even then unless the boundary established leads to the increase or decrease of the political power or influence of the states concerned.

See supra, this title, State Boundaries.

Compact Between Virginia and Kentucky—Affecting Jurisdiction of United States Courts.—The jurisdiction of the United States courts extends by the Constitution to cases where a caveat had been entered according to the laws of Virginia, in existence before the erection of the part of her territory into the State of Kentucky, in which the lands in controversy were situated, on which caveat a judgment had been entered, although by the law of Virginia the judgment was declared to be final and the compact between Virginia and Kentucky contained a stipulation that rights acquired according to the laws in exist-of every proposition of the compact, and of its consent thereto, but may be shown by clear and satisfactory inference from an act which necessarily implies such consent.¹ In a compact between two states, the states in their character as states are the parties, and not the individual citizens, though the latter are bound as well as the contracting parties, and the same power which establishes the compact may modify or annul it.² The conditions of a compact which has received the sanction of Congress may be enforced by the courts without further legislation.³ A compact affecting commerce, though entered into before the adoption of the Constitution, is subordinate to the provisions of that instrument on that subject.⁴ A compact between members of the Union is a contract within the meaning of the Constitution, and when a state law impairs the obligation thereof, the Supreme Court is authorized to declare such law unconstitutional.⁵ A question arising under and to be decided by a compact between two states ence at the time the compact was made. Wilson v. Mason, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 45.

Compact Between New Jersey and Pennsylvania — Right of Fishery.—The compact between New Jersey and Pennsylvania recognizes the right of fishery in riparian owners on the Delaware river. Bennett v. Boggs, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 60.

1. Virginia v. West Virginia, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 39; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1. And an act of Congress, which, after recognizing the conditions upon which alone one of the states agrees to a compact, assents to the compact by express declaration, necessarily includes an assent to these conditions and is sufficient to satisfy the constitutional requirement. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

2. Mayor, etc., of Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 91. See also Fleeger v. Pool, 1 McLean (U. S.) 185.

3. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518.

4. The compact between South Carolina and Georgia, made in 1787, by which it was agreed that the boundary between the two states should be the northern branch of the Savannah river, and that the navigation of the river along a specified channel should forever be equally free to the citizens of both states, and exempt from hindrance, interruption, or molestation, attempted to be enforced by one state on the citizens of the other, has no effect upon the subsequent constitutional provision that Congress shall have power to regulate commerce between the several states. Congress has the same power over the Savannah river that it has over the other navigable waters of the United States. South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4.

The compact between Virginia and Kentucky cannot restrict the power of Congress to regulate commerce between the states, and an act of Congress declaring a bridge across the Ohio river to be a lawful structure, although it does in fact interfere with commerce, is valid. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518.

5. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518. The act of Kentucky of 1812, superseding that of 1797, on the same subject, and providing, that occupying claimants in good faith of lands from which they might be evicted by a better title, should have a right to compensation for improvements, and be exempt from liability for rents and profits to the time of rendition of judgment against them, is unconstitutional and void because it violates the clause of the compact of 1789, providing that the right in lands, existing at that date, should be determined by the then existing laws of Virginia. Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

To bring a case within the protection of this clause, it must be shown that the title to the land asserted is derived from the laws of Virginia prior to the separation of the two partakes of an international character, and the adjudications of either state are not controlling as a rule of decision in the Federal courts.¹

X. STATE OFFICERS—1. Introduction ; Definition.—It is not proposed here to treat comprehensively the subject of state officers, the principles applicable having been set forth and elaborated elsewhere.² At the same time there are numerous recent cases dealing with the duties, rights, and liabilities of various state officers which may well be set forth in this connection. A state officer is one whose duties concern the state at large or the general public.³ An officer appointed for a particular locality, but whose duties are essentially of a public or general nature, is states. Fisher v. Cockerell, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 248.

The Limitation act of Kentucky, commonly known by the epithet of the "seven years" law, does not impair the compact between the states of Virginia and Kentucky. Hawkins v. Baney, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 457.

1. Marlatt v. Silk, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 1.

2. See PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 378.

3. Burch v. Hardwicke, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 24; 32 Am. Rep. 640.

In Britton v. Steber, 62 Mo. 370, it is said "that a state officer may be connected with some of the municipal functions, but he must derive his powers from a state statute, and execute his powers in obedience to a state law." See also State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

Mayor.—The mayor of a city in Indiana is not an officer of the state. Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569. So of Missouri. Britton v. Steber, 62 Mo. 370.

A member of the state legislature is a state officer. Morril v. Haines, 2 N. H. 246.

The office of city clerk is not an office "under the state" within the meaning of Indiana Const., § 16, art. 7. Mohan v. Jackson, 52 Ind. 599.

The office of councilman in a city is an office purely and wholly municipal in its character, and such officer has no duties to perform under the general laws of the state. State v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401; 15 Am. Rep. 239.

Police Commissioner.—A police commissioner is a mere local district officer and not a state officer within the meaning of the term as used in the New York statute of 1851. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Mayor, etc., of New York, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 584.

The office of levee commissioner under statute of Mississippi (acts 1854, p. 186) is a "civil officer under the state," within the meaning of the state constitution declaring that "no senator or representative shall be appointed to any civil office of profit under the state." Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273; 72 Am. Dec. 169.

Constables are held to be state, not municipal officers. State v. McKee, 69 Mo. 504.

Certain commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of Missouri (May 13, 1861, entitled "An act for the relief of the city of St. Louis") to sign city treasury warrants, which were to be delivered to the city treasurer and issued by the city to circulate as money, were held to be state officers. Garnier v. St. Louis, 37 Mo. 554.

A sheriff is a state officer. State v. Finn, 4 Mo. App. 347.

But he is not a state officer within the meaning of art. 6, § 15, Missouri Const., and the constitutional amendment of 1884, conferring on the supreme court jurisdiction of appeals and writs of error "in cases . . . where any state officer is a party." State v. Dillon, 90 Mo. 229.

The language "officers of the commonwealth" means "state officers," and does not include commissioners of a county. Com. v. Neely, 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 527.

Trustee of State Agricultural College.—A trustee of the State Agricultural College, appointed by the board of regents of education, as provided by South Dakota Const., art. 14, § 4, is not a state officer within the meaning of art. 16, § 3, of that instrument, providing that state officers are liable to impeachment. The term "state officers" in this connection includes only such a state officer, whether the legislature makes the appointment or delegates its authority to the municipality.¹

2. Election and Appointment.—A constitutional provision authorizing the legislature to create state offices and to prescribe the manner of choosing the officers, does not confer upon that body the power to elect.² When an office is created in pursuance of such authority, to be filled immediately, and no legitimate mode is provided for filling the same, and the office belongs to a class made elective by the people, the governor, by virtue of a constitutional provision enjoining upon him the duty of seeing to the faithful execution of the laws, may fill the vacancy until a general officers as immediately belong to one of the three constituent branches of the state government, and not those who are appointed by other officers or boards for subordinate administrative purposes. State v. Hewitt (S. Dak. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 875.

Auditor's Agent.—The auditor's agent to attend to revenue matters, whose appointment is authorized by Kentucky act of April 29, 1880, is a mere subordinate, and not an officer within the meaning of the constitution, and there was no necessity for limiting his term of office. Hoke v. Com., 79 Ky. 567.

State Depository.—A bank which is a depository of state moneys, under Georgia act of 1879 (Code, § 943, a, to 943, g), is not an officer of the state within the meaning of Georgia Code, §§ 148–171, fixing the relations between the state and its officers. Colquitt v. Simpson, 72 Ga. 501.

Chief of Bureau of Statistics.—In Indiana, the office of chief of the bureau of statistics, a department created by an act of the general assembly for the purpose of gathering, systematizing, and distributing statistical information and details relating to agriculture, manufacturing, mining, commerce, education, labor, social conditions, etc., is a state office and the chief is a state officer. State v. Peelle, 121 Ind. 495.

Superintendent of Fisheries.—The superintendent of fisheries is not an officer within the meaning of the constitution and law of the State of Michigan, but is an employe of the state board of fish commissioners and is removable at their pleasure. Portman v. State Board of Fish Com'rs, 50 Mich. 258.

1. Police Officers.—The chief of police of a city in Virginia is an officer of the state and not subject to removal by the mayor. Burch v. Hardwicke, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 24; 32 Am. Rep. 640.

In People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 103; 9 Am. Rep. 103, Cooley, J., said: "For those classes of officers whose duties are general—such as judges, the officers of militia, the superintendents of police, of quarantine, and of ports, by whatever name called—provision has, to a greater or less extent, been made by state appointment. But these are more properly state than local officers; they perform duties for the state in localities, as collectors of internal revenue do for the general government; and a local authority for their appointment does not make them local officers where the nature of their duties is essentially general."

Police officers appointed by a city are not its agents or servants, so as to render it liable for their negligent or unlawful acts in discharge of their duties. While thus engaged they represent the authority and dignity of the state, and not that of the municipality. Buttrick v. Lowell, 1 Allen (Mass.) 172; Cobb v. Portland, 55 Me. 381; 92 Am. Dec. 598; Farrell v. Bridgeport, 45 Conn. 191; 2 Dill. Munic. Corp. (4th ed.), § 773.

2. Constitution of Indiana, § 1, art. 15, provides that "all officers whose appointments are not otherwise provided for in this constitution shall be chosen in such manner as now is or may hereafter be prescribed by law." The general assembly created the office of chief of the bureau of statistics. It was held under this clause that the legislature had authority to prescribe the manner of electing an officer to fill the office of chief of the bureau of statistics, but not the power itself to elect. State v. Peelle, 121 Ind. 495. See also State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547.

election by the people.¹ If an office is, by the statute creating it, authorized to be filled by appointment of the governor, and is made elective by a subsequent statute, the governor is authorized to fill a vacancy occurring between the time fixed for the general election and the expiration of the term of the present incumbent.²

3. Official Bonds—(See also BONDS, vol. 2, p. 466f; PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 442; SURETYSHIP).—Where a state officer is appointed for a limited time, the sureties on his official bond are not liable for his defaults beyond the term of his appointment or commission under which the bond was furnished.³ The dereliction of a prescribed duty on the part of one state officer, whereby another is enabled to appropriate state funds to his own use, and to conceal the fact, does not release the sureties on the latter's official bond.⁴

1. State v. Gorby, 122 Ind. 17.

2. The legislature of Alabama passed an act in 1886, creating the office of commissioner of agriculture. The statute provided that it should be filled by appointment of the governor. In 1891, a statute was passed making the office elective, which provided that at the general election in 1892 and every two years thereafter, there should be elected one commissioner of agriculture whose term of office should be two years. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with the act were repealed. It was held that the specific provision of 1891 ordering the election in 1892, controlled the general rule of law as declared by the supreme court of Alabama, that statutes take effect from the date of their enactment; and that, therefore, on the expiration of the term of the incumbent in September, 1891, the governor, under the authority conferred on him by the statute of 1886, had the power to appoint a successor to hold the office until the general election of 1892. Lane v. Kolb, 92 Ala. 636.

3. State v. Powell, 40 La. Ann. 241.

Succeeding Terms—Liability of Sureties.—By the constitution of Maryland, art. 6, § 1, the term of the state treasurer is two years "and until his successor shall qualify;" he must take an oath and give bond. By art. 1, § 6, and Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 95, § 2, he may not enter on the duties of his office until he has given the bond and taken the oath. A. was appointed state treasurer and duly qualified. At the expiration of his term he was re-appointed, but failed to give a new bond or to take the oath until more than a year thereafter, but fulfilling the duties of the office meanwhile. It was held that the original bond was liable for all defalcations made by him before the new bond was given. Archer v. State, 74 Md. 410.

Maryland constitution, § 5, requires the state treasurer to qualify within one month from his appointment. Art. 1, § 7, provides that "every person hereafter elected and appointed to an office in this state who shall refuse or neglect to take . . . the prescribed oath, shall be considered as having refused to accept said office, and a new election or appointment shall be made," etc. A. was appointed to succeed himself as treasurer but neglected for more than a year to take the oath. It was held that his qualification by taking the oath after that time was of no effect to induct him into the office under the second appointment, and that his new bond, approved by the governor and filed at that time, was not binding. Archer v. State, 74 Md. 443.

In State v. Churchill, 48 Ark. 426, a state treasurer was delinquent in his accounts at the expiration of his second term of office, and upon entering on his third term, he simply charged the deficit against himself, instead of paying it up. It was held that this did not have the effect of releasing the sureties on his bond for the second term from liability for such deficit, and imposing it on the sureties for his third term.

4. Com. v. Tate, 89 Ky. 608.

State Treasurer—Ex Officio Insurance Commissioner.—In Tennessee the state treasurer's bond does not cover, and his sureties thereon are not bound for, that officer's acts or defaults as ex officio.

4. Salaries.—If the constitution of a state declares that a specified salary “shall be received” by an officer, no legislative act making an appropriation for such salary is necessary.¹ But in the absence of some such provision a specific appropriation by the legislature seems necessary before payment by the custodian of the public funds can be authorized.²

An appropriation of an official salary may be prospective and payable periodically out of any funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated at the time when the services are performed, and the periodical payments become due, and the appropriation may be made in any form of words expressing the intention of the legislature to provide for the payment of the salary as it accrues.³

In most of the states there are constitutional provisions relative to increasing or decreasing the salaries of state officers.⁴

The legislature of a state may increase or diminish the salary of a state officer unless there be a constitutional prohibition to the contrary.⁵ But it has been held that the appropriation of a commissioner of insurance. State v. Thomas, 88 Tenn. 491.

1. State v. Hickman, 9 Mont. 370; Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189; State v. Weston, 4 Neb. 216; Green v. Purnell, 12 Md. 333.

When the amount of an officer's salary is prescribed by the constitution, and the legislature appropriates a sum more than sufficient to pay it and other salaries of the same class, the comptroller neither errs in his judgment nor transcends his authority in refusing to allow such officer a different amount than that prescribed by the constitution, when that instrument imposes upon him the duty of auditing the officer's claim and deciding upon the amount payable to him as a salary. State v. Barnes, 25 Fla. 75.

Under the state constitution of Missouri of 1875, and the statutes enacted thereunder, officers of the executive department are entitled to compensation for services rendered by them as members of the state board of equalization. State v. Walker, 97 Mo. 162, overruling State v. Holladay, 67 Mo. 64.

2. State v. Hickman, 9 Mont. 370; Myers v. English, 9 Cal. 348; Thomas v. Owens, 4 Md. 189; State v. Weston, 6 Neb. 16.

Priority of Payment of Salaries of State Officials.—In Louisiana, warrants for the salaries of constitutional officers, the amounts of which salaries are fixed by the constitution of the state, are entitled to payment from the general fund of the state by preference and priority over all other warrants drawn against that fund. State v. Burke, 34 La. Ann. 404.

Appropriation for Several Offices in Solido.—By Nevada act February 17, 1883, the lieutenant-governor was made ex officio state librarian, and ex officio adjutant-general, and an appropriation in solido made for his salary as such. A vacancy arose in the office of state librarian, which was filled, and the appointee sought to recover his salary out of the appropriation—but relief was denied on the ground that the appropriation had become inoperative. State v. Hallock, 19 Nev. 371.

3. Humbert v. Dunn, 84 Cal. 57. In this case the salary of certain state officers was, by the act creating the offices, made “payable monthly” and “out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated,” and this language was construed to mean that the salaries should be paid when the services were performed and the monthly payment became due, and not as indicating an intention on the part of the legislature to postpone the payment of the salaries until the next session of that body, as was contended.

4. See PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 525 et seq., where the subject is discussed at length.

5. Farwell v. Rockland, 62 Me. 296. See Collins v. State (S. Dak. 1892), less sum than that fixed by general law as the salary of a state officer does not operate as a repeal or amendment of the act fixing the salary.¹ If the compensation be diminished during the official term, such diminution is prospective only.²

The subsequent repeal of a legislative act creating a public office, providing for the appointment of the officer, and making an appropriation to pay his salary, terminates both the office and the right of the appointee to any salary not already earned at the time of such repeal.³

5. Different Officers—a. GOVERNOR.—(See GOVERNOR, vol. 8, p. 1400.)

b. SECRETARY OF STATE.—A secretary of state may not intrust to a deputy the performance of official acts when the statute prescribing the duties of the former clearly contemplates that he himself shall perform such acts.⁴ When the secretary is forbidden to exercise judicial functions, his decision upon a claim against the state presented to him for allowance, is not conclusive upon the rights of the parties in a collateral proceeding.⁵ It is held that when the secretary's power of appointment to an office depends 51 N. W. Rep. 776; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 10 How. (U. S.) 402; Loving v. Auditor, 76 Va. 947.

An attorney-general of Virginia was, under the law existing at the time of his election, entitled to a salary of $3,500 per annum. This salary was reduced to $2,500 per annum by the legislature during his term. Const. of Virginia, § 8, art. 6, provides that the attorney-general shall receive such compensation "as may be prescribed by law." Art. 4, § 12, provides that the salary of the secretary, treasurer and auditor of the state "shall be determined by law." It was held that the words "prescribe" and "determine" do not admit of a wide distinction and the duty of prescribing the salary of the attorney-general was legislative; and there being no limitation of its exercise, the general assembly could pass an act diminishing his salary during his term. Field v. Auditor, 53 Va. 882.

The legislature of Kentucky has no power to authorize a deduction from the salary of a circuit judge during the period for which he was elected, except for neglect of official duty, as authorized by § 13, art. 8, Kentucky constitution. Garrard v. Nuttall, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 106.

Unauthorized Increase.—When the constitution provides that an officer's salary shall not exceed a specified amount, the legislature may not authorize an increase thereof under the guise of clerk hire or traveling expenses not incurred. State v. Cunningham (Wis. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 1133.

Increase or Decrease of Salary of Secretary of State by Special Law.—The New Jersey legislature is forbidden by the constitution of the state from increasing or decreasing the compensation due the secretary of state during his term of office by an act applicable to him alone, such an act being a special law, and as such unconstitutional. State v. Kelsey, 44 N. J. L. 1.

1. State v. Cook, 57 Tex. 205; State v. Steele, 57 Tex. 201. And in the latter case it was further held that the acceptance of an amount less than the salary under an appropriation of such less sum, does not estop the officer from claiming the full amount of the salary, in a suit allowed by legislative act, to ascertain what, if any, may be owing such officer.

2. Farwell v. Rockland, 62 Me. 296.

3. Hall v. State, 39 Wis. 79.

4. Beam v. Jennings, 96 N. Car. 82; State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 518.

5. State v. Brown, 10 Oregon 215.

In Wisconsin it is held that if the secretary of state allows a claim which may in law be a proper claim, the court will not examine into it; but if he allows a claim against the law, his decision is not final. State v. Hastings, 10 Wis. 461.

upon some precedent or concurrent action of other persons or officers, the power of removal by him from such office is not a necessary incident to such power of appointment.¹

c. TREASURER.—In some of the states the treasurer is made absolutely responsible for funds received in his official character. When this is the case no degree of care will excuse him in the event of loss by theft, fire, or insolvency of the banks selected as depositaries;² but it seems that he is not, in the absence of statute, liable for interest received on money deposited in banks.³

Where it is the duty of the treasurer to receive from his predecessor in office the moneys and securities of the state in his hands, and from other officers the amount due from them, he is liable if he accepts in lieu thereof the receipt or check of a depository with whom the moneys and securities were left by such officers.⁴

If the state treasurer pays an appropriation in advance of the time of payment appointed by law, or if he pays it without the warrant required by law, he will be liable for any damages resulting to the state from such irregular payment.⁵ And he and his sureties are chargeable with moneys collected by him in advance, which fall due during his incumbency, and during the period for which the sureties are responsible.⁶

1. Carr v. State, 111 Ind. 101.

Custodian of Public Records.—In South Carolina the secretary of state is a mere custodian of public records, and subject to the will of the state, allowing any person the right of access to them. Pinckney v. Henegan, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 250.

2. People v. Walsen (Colo. 1892), 28 Pac. Rep. 1119; In re House Resolution, 12 Colo. 395. And where a treasurer's bond was conditioned for the true and faithful discharge of "all the trusts and duties enjoined and required by law," and one of such trusts and duties was that he should account for and pay over to his successors all moneys received by him in his official capacity, a failure to pay over moneys which had been lost by a failure of the bank in which they were deposited, payable on demand, and which at the time of deposit was entirely sound, is a breach of the condition of the bond. Baily v. Com. (Pa. 1887), 10 Atl. Rep. 764.

Entitled to Control of Fund.—It has been held that when by the constitution the treasurer is absolutely liable, the legislature cannot directly or indirectly divest him of his general control of the custody of the public moneys, before disbursement or investment—responsibility and control for safe keeping belonging naturally together—hence an act authorizing the governor to dictate the particular banks in which such moneys shall be deposited is invalid. In re House Resolution, 12 Colo. 395.

3. People v. Walsen (Colo. 1892), 28 Pac. Rep. 1119. See also Shelton v. State, 53 Ind. 331; 21 Am. Rep. 197.

4. State v. Newton, 33 Ark. 276.

5. State v. Baltz, 44 Wis. 624. But it was further held that where such a payment of a legislative appropriation for the state hospital for the insane was made to the treasurer of such hospital, who was the person appointed by law to receive it, and was receipted for by him in his official character, and used by him to pay claims against the hospital for the payment of which the money was appropriated, and the amount paid was placed to the credit of the treasurer in the books of the secretary of state (even if irregularly), the state treasurer after the money became by law due and payable to the hospital treasurer, was not bound to refund the amount to the state treasurer, and his failure to pay over the same to his successor in office was not a breach of his official bond.

6. Sooy v. State, 41 N. J. L. 395.

Fines and Penalties Due to State—Treasurer's Interest Therein.—In Connecticut, the state treasurer has no legal interest in fines due to the state, d. AUDITOR.—In many of the states there are constitutional provisions forbidding the auditor from drawing warrants upon the state treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation first made.¹ In such a case, when an appropriation made by the legislature for any specific purpose has been exhausted, the action of the auditor in refusing to draw further warrants for that specific purpose is proper and right.² It is likewise the auditor's duty to refuse to issue his warrant for money that is to be used for an unconstitutional purpose.³

until they are received by him; therefore an action in his name will not lie to recover fines imposed by a judgment of court, although by the terms thereof the fines are payable to the treasurer for the use of the state. Bissell v. Spencer, 9 Conn. 267; 23 Am. Dec. 336. And in Spencer v. Huntington, 6 Conn. 312, it was held that an action of debt in the name of the state treasurer for a penalty arising from the violation of the statute regulating the sale of spirituous liquors, the penalty being for the use of the state, cannot be sustained.

Excessive Warrants.—In Michigan, the state treasurer can make no payment on a warrant that is admitted to be excessive; and if the auditor-general issues a warrant that is found to be excessive, it should be returned to him and a new one taken out instead of drawing the proper amount on the original warrant. People v. State Treasurer, 40 Mich. 320.

Regular Warrant.—In California, the state treasurer must pay a warrant regularly drawn on him, without stopping to enquire whether the persons on account of whose claims the warrant was drawn have been paid or not. National Bank v. Herold, 74 Cal. 603.

State Treasurer Applying Funds of Levee Board to State Indebtedness.—Under the Appropriation Act of 1884, of Mississippi, the state treasurer, who was also treasurer of the Levee board, was not authorized to apply money of the board to state indebtedness. It was not a "special fund" within the meaning of § 2 of the act which authorized the use of the money of the general, or any special fund in payment of state warrants. Board of Levee Com'rs v. Hemingway, 66 Miss. 289.

Refusal of Treasurer to Pay Warrant—Punishment by Fine.—Under § 3784 Rev. Stats. Louisiana, which provides for the punishment of the state treasurer by fine, etc., for refusing to pay warrants in certain cases, upon conviction thereof, etc., means a conviction in a regular criminal proceeding. Such conviction is a condition precedent under the statute to the recovery of the penalty. Tissot v. Dubuclet, 33 La. Ann. 703.

False Voucher.—In State v. Cardoza, 11 S. Car. 195, the state treasurer made a false voucher to cover an illegal abstraction of state funds in his hands, and it was held that such an act was the very essence of deception and thereby the state was cheated and defrauded.

1. Under the provision of the constitution of the State of Nebraska that "no money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law," the auditor of public accounts has no authority to draw a warrant upon the treasurer for commissions due county treasurers for money collected by them and paid into the treasury, unless a specific appropriation has been made for that purpose. State v. Babcock, 18 Neb. 221.

The Nebraska act of February 28, 1823, entitled "an act making appropriations for the current expenses of a state government," etc., does not appropriate any money for the purpose of returning prisoners from the penitentiary to the counties in which they were convicted, for retrial. State v. Wallichs, 15 Neb. 457.

2. Collins v. State (S. Dak. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 776.

3. State v. Hallock, 16 Nev. 373. In this case an application was made for mandamus to compel the controller to audit an account, and to issue his warrant on the state treasurer for the amount of same in favor of the petitioner, the Nevada Orphan Asylum, said account having been apportioned and allowed by a majority of the board of asylum commissioners, for the sup-

The auditor has no power to extend the time fixed by law for the settlement of state tax collectors, who are defaulters from the moment they fail to make their settlements at the time fixed by law.¹

Where the auditor is forbidden to exercise any powers belonging to the judicial department, his disallowance of a claim is reviewable by the court, although he is authorized in the auditing of claims to compel the attendance of witnesses as a court of record may compel their attendance.²

The failure of the auditor, in settling with a public officer, to include items with which he is properly chargeable, will not debar the state from an appropriate action against the officer.³

In common with other state officers, the auditor, in a proper case, is subject to a writ of mandamus.⁴

e. ATTORNEY-GENERAL.—(See ATTORNEY-GENERAL, vol. 1, p. 974.)

6. Impeachment and Removal.—(See IMPEACHMENT, vol. 9, p. 951.)

port and maintenance of orphans, under and in accordance with the Nevada act approved March 3, 1881 (Stat. 1881, 122) entitled, "An act to appropriate funds for the relief of the several orphan asylums of the state."

The controller refused to audit the account, or to issue his warrant therefor, upon the ground that the petitioner was a sectarian institution, and that under the state constitution (§ 10, art. 11) no public funds could be used for sectarian purposes. The asylum was held to be sectarian, and the controller's refusal right and proper.

Withholding Warrant from Defaulting Official.—It is the fact of default by a public officer, and not the ascertainment by suit, that makes it the duty of the state auditor, under Code of Alabama, 1876, § 596, to withhold a warrant from such defaulter for money due him by the state, and the default sufficiently appears, if shown by the books and records in the auditor's office. State v. Brewer, 62 Ala. 215.

1. State v. Lanier, 31 La. Ann. 423.

Auditor—Ex Officio Commissioner of Land Office.—By Minnesota Gen. Stats., ch. 38, § 2, the auditor is ex officio commissioner of the land office, and authorized to settle with trespassers for damages to state lands, occasioned by cutting and carrying away timber, and to state an account therefor, and also to defer or extend the time of payment of the amount of such account. State v. Galusha, 26 Minn. 238.

2. State v. Burdick, 3 Wyo. 588.

3. But the error must be established as in other cases of mistake in accounting; it may not be proved or shown, prima facie, by a re-statement by a succeeding auditor. State v. Brewer, 61 Ala. 318.

4. State v. Burdick, 3 Wyo. 588. In Indiana, when the amount of a claim against the state has been ascertained as prescribed by law, and money in the treasury has been appropriated to pay it, the auditor may be compelled by mandamus to issue a warrant therefor, but not otherwise. Rice v. State, 95 Ind. 33.

In Alabama, mandamus will lie to compel the auditor to allow a tax-collector or his attorney to inspect the collector's account with the state, as kept in the auditor's office. Brewer v. Watson, 61 Ala. 310.

Where the legislature of Montana has made an appropriation for a claim against the state, and the same has been examined, approved, and transmitted to the auditor by the state board of examiners, and the taxes levied for the year are less than the total appropriations, a mandamus will lie to compel the auditor to issue his warrant on the treasurer for the claim—he may not refuse on the ground that there are no funds in the treasury for the immediate payment of the claim. State v. Kenney, 10 Mont. 488.

Under a statute directing the auditor of state to cause the publication "in the two leading daily newspapers of the state having the largest circulation therein, of the semi-annual statements of foreign insurance companies doing business in the state," it was held that mandamus would lie to compel him to proceed to exercise the authority thus conferred.

STATIONARY.—See note 1.

STATIONERY.—Stationery means such articles as are usually sold by stationers—paper, ink, quills, etc.²

But his selection of such newspapers is final and he cannot be compelled to select any particular paper in which to make such publication. Holliday v. Henderson, 67 Ind. 103.

The law of Nebraska (Sess. Laws Nebraska, 1877, 202), gives an adequate remedy by appeal from the decision of the state auditor in the examination and adjustment of claims against the state; accordingly a mandamus will not issue to compel him to draw a warrant for the payment of a claim which has been disallowed by him upon such examination and adjustment. State v. Babcock, 22 Neb. 38.

For other instances in which mandamus has issued against a state auditor, see Wolfe v. State, 90 Ind. 16; State v. Kenney, 9 Mont. 223; People v. Schuyler, 79 N. Y. 189; State v. Brewer, 62 Ala. 215.

See also MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 88.

Acting by Deputy or Clerk.—In Indiana a state auditor may act by deputy on a sale of lands mortgaged to trust funds. Bansemmer v. Mace, 18 Ind. 27; 81 Am. Dec. 344.

A settlement of an account for state tax on gross receipts, due by a corporation under Pennsylvania act of June 7, 1879, upon the basis of a report furnished by the corporation to the auditor-general, is a ministerial act which need not be performed by the auditor-general in person, but may be performed by clerks acting respectively under the direction and by the authority of the auditor-general and state treasurer. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 104 Pa. St. 86. See also Com. v. Aurand, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 282.

Nebraska Constitution, § 26, art. 5, prohibits the creation of a new executive department, but does not prohibit the appointment of a deputy by the auditor, treasurer, secretary of state, or commissioner of public lands and buildings. In re Appropriations, 25 Neb. 662.

The Kentucky act, approved April

29, 1880, authorizing the auditor to appoint agents to attend to certain revenue matters, is constitutional. Hoke v. Com., 79 Ky. 567.

Bond Payable to Governor—Action Thereon by Auditor.—An action may be maintained by the auditor upon a bond payable to the governor, under the statute authorizing actions for the collection of money due the state to be brought in his name. Auditor v. Woodruff, 2 Ark. 73; 33 Am. Dec. 368.

Special Judge—Auditor Cannot Question Services of.—The auditor of the State of Arkansas may not inquire into the amount of service rendered, or the degree of fidelity with which a special judge acts. Brizzolari v. Crawford, 38 Ark. 218.

Real Estate Owned by State—Power of Auditor with Reference Thereto.—When the state sues for the recovery of real estate owned by it, and the defendant relies upon an alleged agreement with the state auditor in defense of the suit, unless it appears that the latter was expressly authorized to make the agreement, it is absolutely void as against the state. McCaslin v. State, 99 Ind. 428.

1. To be "stationary," within art. 9 of the English regulations of 1863 for preventing collisions at sea, a fishing vessel must not have more way on than is necessary to keep her under command whilst attached to her nets. If it is necessary, even for the purpose of rendering her fishing more effective, that she should have more way on, she is not "stationary," and must carry the lights of a vessel under way. The Dunelm, 9 P. D. 164.

A trawler proceeding at the rate of a quarter of a knot an hour with her trawl down, is "stationary." The Edith, Ir. Rep., 10 Eq. 345. The court said: "A perfectly stationary condition probably could not, from the very nature of the element of water, last beyond a mere punctum temporis." See generally NAVIGATION, vol. 16, p. 270.

2. Arapahoe Co. v. Koons, 1 Colo. 160; Knox Co. v. Arms, 22 Ill. 175.

Printed Blanks.—The term includes printed blanks for the use of public officers. So held when a statute pro-

STATIONS (RAILROAD).—(See also DEPOT, vol. 5, p. 622; FENCES, vol. 7, p. 889; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 604; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 817; UNION DEPOT COMPANIES.)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I. Definition, 114.
 II. Establishment and Maintenance, 115.
 III. Contracts Concerning Location, 120.
 IV. Rules and Regulations, 124.
 1. In General, 124.
 2. Admission to Station Premises, 125.
 3. Exclusive Privileges to Hackmen, 126. | V. Injuries at and around Stations, 128.
 1. In General, 128.
 2. Duty of the Company, 128.
 3. Persons to Whom Duty Is Due, 132.
 4. Negligence, 133.
 5. Assault by Station Servants, 137.
 VI. Condemnation of Land, 138. |
|--|--|

I. DEFINITION.—A railroad station is a place where railroad trains regularly come to a stop for the convenience of passengers, taking in fuel, discharging freight, and the like. It is to be distinguished from "depot," which is a term properly used to designate the buildings at the station.¹

vided that the counties should be liable for "stationery" furnished clerks of court. Knox Co. v. Arms, 22 Ill. 175; Commissioners' Court v. Goldthwaite, 35 Ala. 704. Contra Arapahoe Co. v. Koons, 1 Colo. 160.

1. Webster's Dict.; where it is also said that, "It is unfortunate that, in the United States, the stopping-places on railways first received the name of depot—a gross misapplication of the term, since it means simply a storehouse or magazine. In England, the name has always been station or station-house, and there is now a growing tendency to adopt this in the United States, as the only proper word."

Meaning in Particular Cases.—Within the meaning of the New Hampshire statute prohibiting the expulsion of any person from the cars for non-payment of fare except at a passenger station, it has been held that the station must at least be a stopping place where passenger tickets are ordinarily sold. Baldwin v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 64 N. H. 596; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 126. See also RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 908. In Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Lattimer, 128 Ill. 171, under a similar statute, the court said: "The instructions given for the plaintiff defined the term 'regular stations,' to mean 'the place on the railroad where passenger trains usually stop for the purpose of having passengers get on and off such trains,' while several instructions, asked by defendant and refused, defined such term to mean 'the town or village in which a railroad company may have its passenger depot building,' and not 'the depot platform of a railroad company.' We think the definition laid down in the given instructions was substantially correct, and in accord with the decisions of this court." The court in this connection cited Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Flagg, 43 Ill. 364; 92 Am. Dec. 133; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Parks, 18 Ill. 465; 68 Am. Dec. 562; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Vanatta, 21 Ill. 188; 74 Am. Dec. 96.

A statute of Connecticut provided that no railroad corporation should abandon any depot or station on its road after the same had been established for twelve months, except by approval of the railroad commissioners. In State v. New Haven, etc., Co., 37 Conn. 153, it appeared that the defendant company, after constructing its road, leased it for twenty years to a New York railroad company. This latter company soon after taking possession built a platform for the accommodation of passengers at a place on the road which was thereafter called "Brooks' Station," and placed upon it an old baggage car which served as a shelter for passengers waiting at the station. No agent was ever placed there and no tickets were sold there, nor was freight way-billed to or from that station, but to and from an-

II. ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE.—There is no question as to the power of legislatures to compel and regulate, either directly other station in the same town. But tickets were sold at other stations to passengers for that station, trains were stopped to take up passengers, trains carrying the mail also stopped regularly, and freight was deposited there as a place of deposit. It was held that this "Brooks' Station" was a depot or station within the meaning of the statute.

In State v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 41 Conn. 134, under the same statute, the case just set forth was distinguished. The court, by Park, C. J., said: "In the case of State v. New Haven, etc., Co., 37 Conn. 153, the court considered themselves as going to the verge of the law in holding that the place called Brooks' Station was a station within the meaning of the statute. In that case much reliance was placed upon several important facts, none of which appear in the case under consideration." After enumerating the facts just stated, the court went on to say: "These were important facts and distinguished that case from the present one. The railroad never treated this place as a station. It never appeared on any of their timetables or lists of stations; and passengers were never ticketed to it, but always to the station beyond. No transactions at this place appeared on the books of the company, but all dealings with it were regarded as having taken place at the station beyond, and so appeared on their books."

Under the North Carolina statute designating the place where freight must be tendered in order to make the carrier liable for not transporting it, the words "regular depot or station" mean a certain place situated alongside of or near to a railroad, fitted up by it with suitable buildings, erections, appliances, and conveniences for carrying on generally and continuously in an orderly manner the business of transporting freight; and the fact that a mail train stopped regularly at a certain place to deliver mail, and that such place was set down in the circulars and orders of the company as a station, does not necessarily make it a regular station. Land v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 104 N. Car. 48; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18. Under the same statute it is held that a place at which there has never been any station, or where no tickets have ever been kept or sold, or where there is no agent's office and where no bills of lading or receipts are given, but where the conductors sometimes stop trains and take on freight and passengers, is not a regular depot or station. Kellogg v. Suffolk, etc., R. Co., 100 N. Car. 158; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 529. See also Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Lilly (Miss.), 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 379; Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Robinson, 68 Miss. 643. As to what is a depot or station under the fencing statutes, see infra, this title, Duty of the Company.

In Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Pickard, 8 Colo. 163; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284, one sued for damages for injuries received in an attempt to board a moving train, and claimed that the point at which he attempted to get on was a regular station and that the train was bound to stop for him. He had no ticket. It was held that he could not recover; that the mere fact that the place was put down in a timetable which expressly stated that it was for the government employes only, did not make such place a regular station. Beauchamp v. International, etc., R. Co., 56 Tex. 239; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 307.

See also U. S. v. Caldwell, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 264, where, in a contract for the transportation of government supplies, the words "posts, depots, or stations" were held not to include railroad depots or stations, but merely military posts or stations.

Depot.—The word depot properly indicates the building at a station used to receive deposits of freight, either after or before delivery, and which also contains accommodations for passengers, where tickets are bought and sold, etc., and where the offices of the agents are. See also DEPOT, vol. 5, p. 622; Abb. Law Dict.; Maghee v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 45 N. Y. 520; 6 Am. Rep. 128.

A Depot Not a Fixture.—A depot placed upon land by the consent of the owner is not a fixture, and may be removed by the railroad company. Western N. Car. R. Co. v. Deal, 90 N. Car. 110.

or indirectly, or through railroad commissioners, the establishment and maintenance of stations;¹ but the power of courts is not so extensive in the absence of statutes. The power has been exercised by the court, and its exercise supported, but the weight of authority is against it.² If, however, the legislature declares the

1. Com. v. Eastern R. Co., 103 Mass. 258; 4 Am. Rep. 555; Railroad Com'rs v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 63 Me. 270; 18 Am. Rep. 208; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 884. Such statutes are regarded as a legitimate exercise of the police power. State v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 722.

The only limitation as to the right of the legislature in this regard is found in the principle that the legislature cannot pass a statute which would be an impairment of the obligations of the charter contract. See FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 620 et seq.; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 891.

2. In support of the exercise of the power is State v. Republican Valley R. Co., 17 Neb. 647; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; 52 Am. Rep. 424; affirmed on rehearing in 18 Neb. 512. The court, by Cobb, C. J., said: "At common law, it was the duty of a common carrier by land to deliver freight personally to the consignee; but when railways took the place of conveyances drawn by animals, necessity required the relaxation of this rule so as to allow of the substitution, in place of personal delivery, of a delivery at the warehouse or depot provided by the companies for the storage of goods. Vincent v. Chicago etc., R. Co., 49 Ill. 33. Is it too much to say that this relaxation of the above rule in favor of railway companies as common carriers imposed upon them the duty of providing suitable depots for the purpose of such delivery? This duty is so intimately connected with the business for which railways are built and managed that motives of self-interest almost always secure its observance. But when, for any reason, it is neglected or refused, may it not be enforced the same as any other public duty? . . . In the use of such franchises all citizens have an equal interest and equal rights, and all must, under the same circumstances, be treated alike. It cannot be supposed that it was the legislative intention, when such privileges were given, that they were to be used as private property at the discretion of the recipient; but, to the contrary of this, I think an implied condition attaches to such grants that they are to be held as a quasi public trust for the benefit, at least to a considerable degree, of the entire community. In their very nature and constitution, as I view this question, these companies become, in certain aspects, public agents, and the consequence is, they must, in the exercise of their calling, observe to all men a perfect impartiality."

In People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 130 Ill. 182; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 355, reversing 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462, a mandamus was granted. The petition for the writ alleged specific facts making out a clear and strong case of public necessity; and also alleged that the accommodation of the public living in or near the town required and had long required the establishment of a station within the town. A demurrer to the petition admitting all the allegations was overruled. The court, by Bailey, J., said: "It is undoubtedly the rule that railway companies, in the absence of statutory provisions limiting and restricting their powers, are vested with a very broad discretion in the matter of locating, constructing and operating their railways, and of locating and maintaining their freight and passenger stations. This discretion, however, is not absolute, but is subject to the condition that it must be exercised in good faith and with a due regard to the necessities and convenience of the public. Railway companies, though private corporations, are engaged in a business in which the public have an interest, and in which such companies are public servants and amenable as such. This doctrine has been repeatedly announced by this and other courts. . . . It cannot be admitted that the discretion vested in the defendant in the matter of establishing and maintaining its freight and passenger stations, extends so far as to justify such manifest and admitted disregard of its duties to the public." See this language approved in Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. People, 132 Ill. 571; 42 Am.

& Eng. R. Cas. 679; 22 Am. St. Rep. 556. See also Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Territory, 3 Wash. 303.

In Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Washington, 142 U. S. 492; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 475, reversing 3 Wash. Ter. 303, it appeared that the charter gave the road a discretion as to the location of its route, and imposed no specific duties as to the establishment of stations. When the road was first constructed, the company stopped its trains at a place known as Y., it being the county-seat and principal town of the county, but built no depot there. When the road was completed four miles further on, it reached the town of North Y., which had been laid out by the railroad company on its own land. The company then established a freight and passenger station at that place and ceased to stop its trains at Y. Mandamus was applied for to compel it to build and maintain a station at Y. Before the suit was determined, Y. rapidly retrograded and the town of North Y. rapidly increased in size at its expense, and became the principal town of the county and was made the county-seat. It appeared also that there were other stations on the road which furnished sufficient facilities for the country south of North Y., and that a station at Y. would not pay expenses, the earnings of this division of the road being insufficient to pay the running expenses; that the passenger and freight traffic of the people living in the surrounding country, considering them as a community, would be better accommodated at North Y. than at Y. It was held that the mandamus should not issue, since it was not shown that the duty was imposed upon the railroad company by statute, and because the duty did not exist independently of statute. The opinion of the majority of the court, delivered by Gray, J., was an elaborate one. It began with the premise that "A writ of mandamus to compel a railroad corporation to do a particular act in constructing its road or buildings or in running its trains, can be issued only when there is a specific legal duty on its part to do that act, and clear proof of a breach of that duty." The court, after adverting to York, etc., R. Co. v. Reg, 1 El. & Bl. 858; 72 E. C. L. 856; Com. v. Fitchburgh R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 180; State v. Southern Minn. R. Co., 18 Minn. 40, in support of the doctrine that where a railroad charter simply authorizes the corporation, without requiring it, to construct and maintain a railroad to a certain point, the corporation cannot be compelled by mandamus to complete or maintain its road to that point when it would not be remunerative, said: "The difficulties in the way of issuing a mandamus to compel the maintenance of a railroad and the running of trains to a terminus fixed by the charter itself, are much increased when it is sought to compel the corporation to establish or to maintain a station, and to stop its trains at a particular place on the line of its road. The location of stations and warehouses, for receiving and delivering passengers and freight, involves a comprehensive view of the interests of the public, as well as of the corporation and its stockholders, and a consideration of many circumstances concerning the amount of population and business at or near, or within convenient access to one point or another, which are more appropriate to be determined by the directors, or, in case of abuse of their discretion, by the legislature, or by administrative boards intrusted by the legislature with that duty than by the ordinary judicial tribunals. . . . To hold that the directors of this corporation, in determining the number, place and size of its stations and other structures, having regard to the public convenience as well as its own pecuniary interests, can be controlled by the courts by writ of mandamus, would be inconsistent with many decisions of high authority in analogous cases." The court cited People v. New York, etc., R. Co., 104 N. Y. 58; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; 58 Am. Rep. 485; Com. v. Eastern R. Co., 103 Mass. 254; 4 Am. Rep. 555; South Eastern R. Co. v. Railway Com'rs, 6 Q. B. Div. 586, and disapproved the decision cited above, viz.: State v. Republican Valley R. Co., 17 Neb. 647; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; 52 Am. Rep. 424, declaring that decision to be inconsistent with Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 667; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 57. Justices Brewer, Field, and Harlan dissented, Brewer, J., saying: "A railroad company has a public duty to perform as well as a private interest to subserve; and I never before believed that the courts would permit it to abandon the one to promote the other. Nowhere in its charter is in terms expressed the duty duty, the courts may enforce it.¹ In many jurisdictions, however, statutory regulations as to the establishment and erection of depots at proper places along the route of the road exist.² There are, also, in some of the States, statutes forbidding the of carrying passengers and freight. Are the courts impotent to compel the performance of this duty? Is the duty of carrying passengers and freight any more a public duty than that of placing its depots and stopping its trains at those places which would best accommodate the public? If the State of Indiana incorporates a railroad to build a road from New Albany through Indianapolis to South Bend, and that road is built, can it be that the court may compel the road to receive passengers and transport freight, but, in the absence of a specific direction from the legislature, are powerless to compel the road to stop its trains and build a depot at Indianapolis? I do not so belittle the power or duty of the courts."

1. See Bonham v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 26 S. Car. 353; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177; People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (Ill.), 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462; South Eastern R. Co. v. Railway Com'rs, 6 Q. B. Div. 586; 29 Moak's Rep. 724; People v. New York, etc., R. Co., 104 N. Y. 63; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 484; 58 Am. Rep. 485. In this last case the court, by Danforth, J., said: "No doubt the court may by mandamus act in certain cases affecting corporate matters, but only where the duty concerned is specific and plainly imposed upon the corporation. . . . Such is not the case before us. The grievance complained of is an obvious one, but the burden of removing it can be imposed upon the defendant only by legislation. The legislature created the corporation upon the theory that its functions should be exercised for the public benefit. It may add other regulations to those now binding it, but the court can interfere only to enforce a duty declared by law. The one presented in this case (that is, to erect a depot) is not of that character. Nor can it be by any fair or reasonable construction be implied." The application for mandamus was therefore denied, though it was admitted in the opinion of the court that "a plainer case could hardly be presented of a deliberate and intentional disregard of the public interest and the accommodation of the public."

A statute of South Carolina provided that the railroad commission of the State might suggest to a railroad company to make enlargements and improvements in its stations and station houses, and if their suggestions were not complied with, they were authorized to take such legal proceedings as they should deem expedient, but provided no fine or forfeiture or mode of redress. It was held that the court could not enforce the suggestions of the commission requiring a larger depot, and that the only remedy lay in an appeal to the legislature. Bonham v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 26 S. Car. 353; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177.

2. Statutory Regulation.— Thus, in Missouri a statute exists requiring that wherever two railroads intersect, passenger waiting-rooms shall be erected and maintained. Such a statute is held to be a proper exercise of police power and not unconstitutional. State v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 83 Mo. 144; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 133. A similar statute exists in Texas. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. State, 79 Tex. 264; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 586. See also Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 667; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 57; State v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 40 Minn. 353.

Under such statutes neither company is released from its obligation by the default of the other, and a prosecution may be instituted against one without joining the other. State v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 722. And the fact that the roads had established separate depots in the town before the passage of the act will not excuse their failure to erect a depot at the point of intersection, as required by the act. San Antonio, etc., R. Co. v. State, 79 Tex. 264.

In other cases statutory provisions exist requiring that a railroad company shall furnish sufficient accommodations at such stations as their trains stop at. Such a statute applies only to such stations as are already established, and does not authorize a court abandonment of stations once established by the company, without authority from the railroad commissioners.¹

Where once a specific duty in regard to stations or depots is shown to exist, mandamus will lie to enforce its performance.² In such case, the right of any particular community to demand a to compel the establishment of new stations. State v. Republican Valley R. Co., 17 Neb. 647; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; 52 Am. Rep. 424; People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (Ill.), 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462.

A railroad company cannot be subjected to the penalty named in a statute for neglecting to comply with an order of the railroad commissioners to erect a new depot, where the order fails to "prescribe the number and dimensions of the rooms therein for passengers," as required by the statute. State v. Alabama, etc., R. Co., 67 Miss. 647; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 681.

1. See State v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 37 Conn. 153; State v. New Haven, etc., Co., 41 Conn. 134; 42 Conn. 56; New Haven, etc., Co. v. Hamersley, 104 U. S. 1; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; Attorney Gen'l v. Eastern R. Co., 137 Mass. 45; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 237 (facts showing re-location instead of abandonment).

A statute of Mississippi forbids the abolishment or disuse of any depot once established, without the consent of the railroad commission. Changing the site of a depot from one place to another in the same town is not an abolishment or disuse within the meaning of the statute. But such a change can only be made when the interests of the railroad company and the public concur in demanding it, and when the new site is not inconvenient or inaccessible. State v. Alabama, etc., R. Co., 68 Miss. 653. And the relocation and consolidation of two stations at one point in one proceeding is not an abandonment of a station, within the meaning of Massachusetts Pub. Stats., ch. 112, where § 157 authorizes a railroad company to relocate its passenger stations with the approval of the board of railroad commissioners, etc., and § 156 prohibits the abandonment of a passenger station which has been maintained five years. Cunningham v. Board of Railroad Com'rs (Mass. 1893), 32 N. E. Rep. 959.

Enjoining Abandonment of Station Once Established.—No authorities have been found as to whether in the absence of statutory provision a railroad company may be enjoined from abandoning a station once established. It would seem, however, that where property has been purchased, investments made, and business undertakings begun upon the faith of such an establishment, an injunction would lie to prevent the abandonment, since irreparable injury might follow the denial of the remedy. Damages for injuries received in consequence of an abandonment have been allowed. See Rich v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 87 N. Y. 382; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 594; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Molloy, 64 Tex. 607; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 244.

See, in this connection, Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Compton, 2 Gill. (Md.) 20, where the party through whose land a railroad had been located and constructed was allowed to recover damages for injuries sustained by the company's abandonment of the location. Compare Kinealy v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 69 Mo. 658, holding that where the construction and maintenance of a railroad are authorized by the legislature solely for the public benefit, no contract or duty to maintain its road or continue to run its trains will be implied on the part of the company in favor of a private citizen who has bought and improved lots along the line of the road under the belief that it will continue to be maintained and operated.

In Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. People, 132 Ill. 559; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 671; 22 Am. St. Rep. 556, a mandamus to compel the reestablishment of a station was refused where it appeared that the new station was more convenient than the old for a majority of the residents of the community.

2. Mandamus to Compel Establishment of Station.—That mandamus is the proper remedy, see MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 162; State v. Republican Valley R. Co., 17 Neb. 647; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; 52 Am. Rep. 424; People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 130 Ill. 175; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 352. The only question arising in such cases is as to the existence of the duty; the station must depend upon circumstances, among which are to be considered the amount of railroad business to be done there, or the proximity of other stations.¹

III. CONTRACTS CONCERNING LOCATION.—The validity of contracts designed to influence the site or location of stations has been questioned and denied frequently.² Sometimes such contracts have been held objectionable in providing that no other station should be located near by; a contract of this nature is void, as having a tendency to prevent the corporation from discharging properly its duty to the public at large.³ Sometimes contracts have been made with an officer of the railway, or some person supposed to be influential with the corporation, and he has agreed, cases denying a mandamus when applied for have all done so on the ground that no specific legal duty was shown to exist. See Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Washington, 142 U. S. 492; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 475, reversing 3 Wash. Ter. 303. See also on the general subject Nashua, etc., R. Co. v. Derry, 58 N. H. 65 (notification of election equivalent to a request); Ohio etc., R. Co. v. People, 120 Ill. 200; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 509.

In Nebraska, where by statute the railroad commission is authorized and required to examine into all cases presented and to report as to the necessity of a station asked for, a party desiring to have a station created must first go to the commission. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 19 Neb. 476. The case of State v. Republican Valley R. Co., 17 Neb. 647; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; 52 Am. Rep. 424, was decided before this act took effect. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 19 Neb. 476.

1. See note in 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 513 et seq., where decisions by railroad commissions relative to the necessity of stations at particular points are set out. See also RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS, vol. 19, p. 689.

In State v. Republican Valley R. Co., 17 Neb. 647; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500; 52 Am. Rep. 424, a town of fifteen hundred inhabitants, with an ordinary amount of business, was allowed a station, though there was another station on the same road at a town only one mile distant, and there was another road serving the town.

In St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Adcock, 52 Ark. 406; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 682, it was held to be not an unreasonable regulation for a railroad company to refuse to designate as a flag station for through trains an unincorporated town, situated within three miles of a regular station, and containing only a few residences.

It is not a misuser for a railroad company to use land acquired by it for a right of way for the erection of a freight depot and other structures, for it may make any use of such land which contributes to the safe and efficient operation of the road, and does not interfere with the rights of property pertaining to adjacent lands. Elyton Land Co. v. South & North Ala. R. Co. (Ala. 1891), 10 So. Rep. 270.

2. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 816, 817.

3. The rule applies whether the contract exists specially, or as a condition in a deed of conveyance. Marsh v. Fairbury, etc., R. Co., 64 Ill. 414; 16 Am. Rep. 564; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Mathers, 71 Ill. 592; 22 Am. Rep. 122; 104 Ill. 257; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 600; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. People, 132 Ill. 559; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 671; 22 Am. St. Rep. 556; Williamson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Iowa 126; 26 Am. Rep. 206; St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Ryan, 11 Kan. 602; 15 Am. Rep. 357. See also Pacific R. Co. v. Seely, 45 Mo. 212; 100 Am. Dec. 369.

In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Sumner, 106 Ind. 55; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 644; 55 Am. Rep. 719, the court, by Mitchell, J., said: "Railroad corporations are regarded as public agencies, owing duties to the public generally. They are therefore not authorized to make any contract which may prevent them from discharging their duties efficiently to the public, and for that reason they cannot contract that the company will not locate a station or erect a depot at a place where the demands of business or con-for a consideration, to secure the location of a desired station; such a contract is void, as against public policy.¹ But where the contract is with the railroad company, that it shall furnish a station at the place desired, in consideration of a donation of money or grant of land, and there is no restriction or prohibition against the location of other stations, there is no rule of law or policy violated, and such contracts are usually upheld.² And, therefore, where such a contract exists, damages may be recovered for a failure by the company to perform its obligations.³

centration of population may at some time in the future require it. Such a contract is void as against public policy."

In Tucker v. Allen, 16 Kan. 312, one of the conditions of the deed was that no railroad depot should be built at a certain place within one year. No depot was built at such place within that time, and all the other conditions were strictly fulfilled; nor was there anything to show that injury or inconvenience ever resulted to any person or to the public generally because no depot had been built at the place designated. It was held that neither the grantor in the said deed, nor any person claiming under him, could avoid the deed merely because of the supposed illegality in inserting the condition as to not building a depot.

See, however, Mahaska Co. R. Co. v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 28 Iowa 437, in which a stipulation that "but one other depot" should be allowed between certain points was not objected to by court or counsel.

1. Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 472 (leading case); Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Sumner, 106 Ind. 60; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 644; 55 Am. Rep. 719; Holladay v. Patterson, 5 Oregon 177.

See also in this connection Houston, etc., R. Co. v. McKinney, 55 Tex. 176; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 723, holding that an agent of a railroad company, acting under a general power to procure a right of way for the road, has no authority to contract that the company will locate its stations at particular places. Bestor v. Wathen, 60 Ill. 138; Linder v. Carpenter, 62 Ill. 309; Workman v. Campbell, 46 Mo. 305.

2. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Sumner, 106 Ind. 55; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 644; 55 Am. Rep. 719; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Jefferson Co., 21 Kan. 309; McClure v. Missouri River, etc., R. Co., 9 Kan. 373; Vicksburg, etc., R.

Co. v. Ragsdale, 54 Miss. 200; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Tygard, 84 Mo. 263; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 54; 54 Am. Rep. 97; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Robards, 60 Tex. 549; 48 Am. Rep. 268; Nottawasaga Tp. v. Hamilton, etc., R. Co., 16 Ont. App. Rep. 52; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 677.

See also as establishing a similar rule in regard to contracts to influence the location of the road, Pixley v. Gould, 13 Ill. App. 565; First Nat. Bank v. Hendrie, 49 Iowa 402; 31 Am. Rep. 153. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 837.

3. Damages for Failure to Maintain Station.—In St. Thomas v. Credit Valley R. Co., 12 Ont. App. Rep. 273; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 473, it appeared that the main consideration of a bonus to a railroad company was the bringing of its line to a certain town, and the establishment of a station at a certain location within its corporate limits. In an action for damages for breach of the contract by failure to locate the station, it was held that it was proper to consider in estimating the damages the depreciation in value of the property around the station by reason of such failure, as showing how much less benefit has been derived by the city from taxes on the area affected by the station. It was held also that the city was not a trustee for individuals who suffer loss or inconvenience from the abandonment of the station, and could not therefore recover damages for their use. See also Nottawasaga Tp. v. Hamilton, etc., R. Co., 16 Ont. App. 52; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 677 (agreement to "establish" held not to mean to "maintain forever").

The case of Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Molloy, 64 Tex. 607; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 244, was a suit for damages for removing a railroad depot from the location in which it had been for years. It appeared that the depot had been erected at that particular spot upon the first construction of the road in consideration of donations by the citizens of the surrounding locality. It was held that the plaintiff might recover, and that in proof of damages he might show depreciation in the value of his property adjacent, diminution in business to which the property was adapted, or diminution in other like things resulting from the unlawful act. See also In re Ruthin, etc., R. Act, 32 Ch. Div. 438; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 434.

The most common form of contract concerning the location of stations is seen in conditions or covenants contained in grants of a right of way to the railroad company. The validity and construction of these conditions are governed by the ordinary rules of law.¹

But ordinarily the mere fact that the property owner's land has diminished in value by the discontinuance of a station on the land of another person does not authorize a recovery of damages. Pittsburgh Southern R. Co. v. Reed (Pa.), 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233.

In Watterson v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 74 Pa. St. 208; 8 Am. Ry. Rep. 30, the measure of damages for failure to locate depot as agreed was said to be "the additional value that would have accrued to plaintiff's land had the depot been erected." The profits of business could not be considered. Westchester, etc., R. Co. v. Broomal (Pa.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 591; Hubbard v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 63 Mo. 68; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Sumner, 106 Ind. 55; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 641; 55 Am. Rep. 719. See also Griswold v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 8 Mo. App. 582; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 626. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 853.

In International, etc., R. Co. v. Dawson, 62 Tex. 260, where land was conveyed to a company under a parol agreement that the company would locate permanently its depot at a certain point, the grantor was allowed to recover the land upon the company's removal of the depot to another point. Such a removal was merely a breach of a condition subsequent which defeated the estate of the grantee. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Coburn, 91 Ind. 557; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37.

In Close v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 64 Iowa 149; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 33, the grant of land was conditioned on the permanent location of a depot at a certain point. The depot was erected, but was burned down soon after. It was held that the grantors were not entitled to damages for failure by the company to erect another depot, but were entitled to the notes given to the company, and to a release by it of its right to the lands.

Failure to Locate May Amount to a Tort.—In Rich v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 87 N. Y. 382; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 594, the railroad company, in consideration of the grant of certain riparian rights, agreed to locate and maintain its depot at a certain point. It appeared that unless the depot was so located the lands of the plaintiff, R., would be sold under foreclosure, and that he would be seriously injured financially. After the making of the contract, the company refused to locate the depot, though it had full knowledge of the consequences which would result. It was held that the breach of contract by the company, the time, circumstances, and conditions being considered, constituted a tort, and the plaintiff might recover damages therefor.

Specific Performance of Contract to Locate.—Specific performance of a contract by a railroad company with a land owner to erect a station at a certain point is properly denied by a court of equity, where it appears that such point is on the side of a steep mountain, in a sparsely settled district, and approached by a steep grade; that the station could only be constructed at a considerable expense; and that the public travel would be delayed by the stoppage of the trains, and the public convenience would not be promoted. Conger v. New York, etc., R. Co., 120 N. Y. 29; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 643.

1. See the subject discussed generally in RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 847-855. See also Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Coburn, 91 Ind. 557; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Sumner, 106 Ind. 55; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 641; 55 Am. Rep. 719; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 106 Ind. 600; Crow v. Owensboro, etc., R. Co., 82 Ky. 134; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 31.

What is a sufficient compliance with conditions or covenants to locate stations and erect depots must depend largely upon the circumstances of each particular case.¹

Jones v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 79 Mo. 92; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371; Westchester, etc., R. Co. v. Broomal (Pa.), 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 591; Wooters v. International, etc., R. Co., 54 Tex. 294; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 100; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Pfeuffer, 56 Tex. 66; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 373; Miller v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 65 Tex. 659; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158; Homer v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 38 Wis. 165 (grant of land "only for depot and other railroad purposes," held a condition subsequent).

If the depot is to be erected on the land granted, the granting of the land is a condition precedent to the right to demand the depot; so that if the intended grantor disables himself to make the conveyance, he can maintain no action for a failure to erect the depot. Sayre v. New York, etc., R. Co., 3 Duer (N. Y.) 57.

In Pitkin v. Long Island R. Co., 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 221; 47 Am. Dec. 320, it was held that an agreement made by a railroad company with a person owning land adjacent to the road to establish and maintain a permanent turnout track and stopping place at a particular point in the neighborhood of his property, and to stop there with the freight and passenger trains of the company, is, in substance, the grant of an easement or servitude binding upon the property of the railroad company as the servient tenement for the benefit of the owner of such adjacent property and those who succeed him in his estate.

See also New York, etc., R. Co. v. Providence, 16 R. I. 746, where it is held that the consent of the city to the location and construction of a railroad and depot buildings within the city on condition that the company fill certain tide flowed lands, is not a grant, but only a permission to occupy the land on compliance with the condition; so that the forfeiture of a deposit for breach of condition could not be exacted.

1. What Is Sufficient Performance of Contract to Maintain Station.—The mere erection of buildings, without providing the necessary agents and employes at a station, is not a compliance with an agreement to erect, maintain, and equip a permanent freight and passenger station at a certain place. Wallace Tp. v. Great Western R. Co., 25 Grant Ch. 86; 3 Ont. App. Rep. 44. So an expressed condition in a note payable to a railroad company, "that a depot be constructed within eighty rods of the present town of W." is not fulfilled by the building of a depot within eighty rods of the limits of the town as extended after the note was given. Davenport, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 39 Iowa 298.

Where by the terms of a contract granting to the company certain franchises, the company were to build or allow "but one other depot" between certain points, it was held that a station at a coal bank where trains merely stopped to take or leave cars, was not a depot within the meaning of the contract. Mahaska Co. R. Co. v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 28 Iowa 437.

In Hood v. Northeastern R. Co., L. R., 5 Ch. 525, the railroad company covenanted with a land owner that the land purchased should thereafter be used as a first class station. The company was afterwards made part of a company operating a much longer line. Twenty-one years after the date of the conveyance the land owner filed a bill to compel the company to build a larger station and stop all of their trains at that station. It was held that the existing station had not been objected to and had remained for many years, and as it did not appear that the passengers were numerous, the court would not compel the erection of a larger station; but that as many trains as stopped at any other station between the termini of the original railway, excepting mail, express and special trains, must stop at that station.

See generally RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 848.

Length of Time Station to be Maintained.—In Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co. v. Barbour, 89 Ind. 375; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 466, the deed contained this clause: "The above ground is deeded to the State of Indiana expressly for the use and purpose of depot grounds for the Madison & Indianapolis Railroad. Now if the State shall fail to erect buildings and occupy such ground for the use and purpose above mentioned, then the above specified ground shall revert back to the donors." The railroad company took possession immediately and erected depot buildings, which they continued to use for thirty years. They then removed the buildings and established a depot elsewhere. It was held that no specific time being mentioned in the deed a reasonable time was meant, and that thirty years was such reasonable time, so that on the removal of the depot the land did not revert to the donors.

IV. RULES AND REGULATIONS — 1. In General. — Subject to the limitation that its regulations shall not be unreasonable, a railroad company has the right to make and enforce rules and regulations regarding its stations, as to who shall enter upon the premises, and as to how those allowed to enter shall conduct themselves while there.¹

So in Nottawasaga Tp. v. Hamilton, etc., R. Co., 16 Ont. App. Rep. 52; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 677, the agreement was to establish a station. It was held that the word "establish" did not in itself mean to "maintain and use forever," and that in view of the seven years' limitation in contracts concerning other stations, the company was not bound to maintain the particular station after seven years.

In Jessup v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 28 Grant Ch. 583, it was held that where the grant was made "in consideration of the company's placing the station for P. upon his land," the grantor was entitled to damages or to restitution of the land upon the removal of the station to a point some distance away, even though it had been maintained at the proper place for over twenty years. The case of Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Hood, 66 Ind. 580, holding that a station must be maintained permanently, is based upon the ground that the terms of the contract evidently intended a permanent location.

1. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 820 et seq.; Landrigan v. State, 31 Ark. 50; 25 Am. Rep. 547; Summitt v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 413; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 302, 304, note; 41 Am. Rep. 637; Com. v. Power, 7 Met. (Mass.) 596; 41 Am. Dec. 465. In this last case the court, by Shaw, C.J., said: "Railroad corporations, both as the owners and proprietors of the houses and buildings connected with the railroad, and as carriers of passengers, have authority to make reasonable and suitable regulations in regard to passengers intending to pass and repass on the road in the passenger cars, and in regard to all other persons making use of such houses and buildings. This authority is incident to such ownership of the real estate, and to their employment as passenger carriers; and all such regulations will be deemed reasonable which are suitable to enable them to perform the duties they undertake, and to secure their own just rights in such employment; and also such as are necessary and proper to insure the safety and promote the comfort of passengers. The reasonableness of such regulations must in some measure be judged of with reference to the particular depot for which they are adopted."

In Dickerman v. St. Paul Union Depot Co., 44 Minn. 433; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596, the company had a rule requiring persons passing through its gates for the purpose of taking trains, to exhibit their tickets to the gate-keepers and have them punched by them; also, one providing that no passenger should be allowed to board any train while in motion. It was held that these rules were reasonable, and that all persons intending to take trains, and knowing, or having reasonable opportunity to know, of them, were bound to comply with them; also, that the company had a right to enforce them, or to prevent a violation of them, and to employ such force as might be necessary for that purpose. The company, therefore, was not liable for an assault where its agent seized hold of a passenger and detained him to prevent him from boarding a train in motion.

But a railroad company cannot compel a passenger to present his ticket to a ticket receiver to have its validity passed upon where the gate-keeper has refused to allow him to pass because the date was illegible, if in the same condition as when received from

A disregard of proper regulations by one who knew, or ought to have known, of them, may constitute contributory negligence on his part such as to bar a recovery in an action for damages for injuries sustained by him.¹

A State may pass a law compelling railroad companies to place a bulletin board in each passenger station, on which shall be posted, before the schedule time for the arrival of each passenger train stopping at such station, the fact whether such train is on schedule time or not.²

2. Admission to Station Premises.—A regulation prohibiting all persons from entering the station premises except those having lawful business there is not unreasonable, and may be enforced by the company, if it is uniform in its operation and not used to the agent. Northern Cent. R. Co. v. O'Conner (Md. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 449.

Where a gateman wrongfully refuses to allow a passenger to pass to a train, he can only recover such damages as were the immediate and necessary consequences resulting from the wrongful act of the gateman, unless malice or circumstances of aggravation be shown. Northern Cent. R. Co. v. O'Conner (Md. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 449.

1. Willful Disregard of Regulations Contributory Negligence.—Thus in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Zeb, 33 Pa. St. 327, a passenger on leaving a station left it on the opposite side, instead of leaving by the platform provided for the egress of passengers. It was held that the company was not liable for injuries sustained by him in being struck by a locomotive in leaving. The court, by Thompson, J., said: "A voluntary disregard of regulations providing for their safe exit by the platform, was a disregard of their obligations to the company; and if this were so, the plaintiff ought not to recover. We hold, on these principles, that the company's liability could not be fixed for the injury consequent on the choice of the passenger in disregard of the provisions made by them for his safety and convenience. It was, we think, error in the court to submit the questions of the rights of the parties to leave the cars at either side, in the absence of proof of a justifying necessity for so doing. It was not negligence on the part of the company that it did not, by force or barriers, prevent the parties from leaving at the wrong side." The same views are supported in Bancroft v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 97 Mass. 275; Michigan Cent. R.

Co. v. Coleman, 28 Mich. 440, and numerous cases cited; Pastoris v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 283.

The carrier is not required to have the side opposite the platform lighted, even though parties have been in the habit of getting on and off there as a matter of convenience to themselves. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Ricketts (Ky. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 182.

2. State v. Indiana, etc., R. Co. (Ind. 1892), 32 N. E. Rep. 817. In this case a statute had been passed requiring such a blackboard to be placed in every passenger depot located at any station in the state at which there was a telegraph office, and providing that for each violation in failing to report, or making a false report, the railroad company should be subject to a penalty of $25; and it was held that the company was liable for the penalty for failing to make such report, though no blackboard had been put up and though no penalty had been provided for a failure to put up a blackboard; that such statute was not class legislation because it only applied to stations where there were telegraph offices, since it applied alike to all persons operating railroads and to the same class of stations; that such statute was a proper police regulation and not void as a regulation of interstate commerce because the company was compelled to bring into use knowledge possessed by it or its servants situate in another State; and that under such statute a railroad company was liable for one penalty for each train, during each trip, at each station where there was a failure to comply with its provision, and was not limited to a single penalty for its violation.

make unjust discrimination.¹ Common instances of such regulations are seen in rules forbidding hackmen, hotel drummers, or loiterers, from entering the depot premises to solicit patronage or annoy passengers.²

3. Exclusive Privileges to Hackmen.—Discriminations are made sometimes in favor of certain hackmen. So far as such regulations have for their object the comfort and convenience of passengers and the avoidance of the presence and clamor of competing hackmen, it would seem, both upon principle and authority, that they are valid. The difficulty arises on the contention that a regulation of this sort, in the particular instance, may constitute an unfair and unjust discrimination.³

1. Summitt v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 413; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 302; 41 Am. Rep. 637; Fluker v. Georgia R., etc., Co., 81 Ga. 461; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 379; 12 Am. St. Rep. 328. In this latter case for nine years and without objection from the company, a person had exercised the privilege of entering the station and supplying the passengers with lunches. The company then notified him that he could no longer enjoy the privilege, it having been leased to another. He insisted upon exercising it, however, and was ejected by the company's servant with no greater violence than was actually necessary. In an action by him for damages for an assault the court held that the company had a right to revoke the implied license to him and to exclude him from the station; and the expulsion having been done properly it was not liable for assault. See also INNS AND INNKEEPERS, vol. 11, pp. 35-36; Jincks v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 221; Barker v. Midland R. Co., 18 C. B. 46; 86 E. C. L. 45 (refusal to allow hack owner to drive his vehicle within station grounds).

2. Thus in Landrigan v. State, 31 Ark. 50; 25 Am. Rep. 547, it was held that the company had a right forcibly to eject from its station premises a hotel runner, who came there to solicit patronage, in violation of a regulation of which he might be ignorant. In Com. v. Power, 7 Met. (Mass.) 596; 41 Am. Dec. 465, a hotel man who had entered the depot frequently for the purpose of soliciting patronage received notice from the station superintendent that he would be allowed to do so no longer. Notwithstanding, he entered the depot repeatedly in violation of the order. On one occasion he entered, and purchased a ticket with the bona fide intention of taking passage in the cars. The superintendent, believing that he was there merely to secure patrons, ordered him to leave, and, in his refusing to do so, proceeded to eject him. He did not show his ticket or give any notice of his real intention. The expulsion having been done without undue violence he was not allowed to recover. The opinion, by Shaw, C. J., states the law at length. See also Hall v. Power, 12 Met. (Mass.) 482; 46 Am. Dec. 698; Howell v. Jackson, 6 C. & P. 723; 25 E. C. L. 617.

One who desires to remain on the depot premises in order to take passage on the train must exercise his right to do so in conformity with the regulations of the company as to his conduct while there; and the purchase of a ticket does not entitle a person to occupy the depot for an unreasonable time before or after the arrival of his train; and if he attempts to remain longer than a reasonable time he may be ejected. Harris v. Stevens, 31 Vt. 79; 73 Am. Dec. 337.

Intoxicated Persons.—The company may enforce a regulation against the admission of intoxicated persons to its accommodations, and may expel such persons if they persist in entering. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 904, note 2; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Pillow, 76 Pa. St. 510; 18 Am. Rep. 424; Johnson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 51 Iowa 25. It may also expel a prostitute, but only when she conducts herself in an unseemly or improper manner. Beeson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 62 Iowa 173; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 45; Brown v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 51; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 247.

3. In Cravens v. Rodgers, 101 Mo. 247; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 656, a railroad company gave to the owner of one of several competing omnibus lines the exclusive privilege of approach to the most desirable and advantageous part of its platform for securing the patronage of passengers. The owner of the line at his own expense made an approach to the platform and erected an additional platform for the convenience of those taking passage upon his vehicles. In an action to enjoin other lines from using this platform it was held that the railroad company had no power to grant such an exclusive privilege, and that the grant was therefore void. The decision rested upon the constitutional provision prohibiting "discrimination in charges or facilities in transportation . . . between transportation companies and individuals, or in favor of either." Missouri Const., art. 12, § 23. The court, by Brace, J., arguing that the competing omnibus lines were all common carriers, said: "On the other hand, if better facilities are afforded to one carrier than another by the connecting carrier (that is, the railroad company), competition is discouraged, a monopoly created, and the traveling public are apt to receive slow, uncomfortable, slovenly, negligent, and expensive service. Monopolies are obnoxious to the spirit of our laws and ought to be discouraged." The same view was taken in McConnell v. Pedigo (Ky. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 15.

So in Montana Union R. Co. v. Langois, 9 Mont. 419; 18 Am. St. Rep. 745; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 646, the company granted to a single hack-owner, and to the exclusion of all others, the right to receive and discharge passengers at its station platform. It was held that such a grant could not be upheld—that the railroad company had no power to make such a regulation. Again, in Kalamazoo Hack. etc., Co. v. Sootsma, 84 Mich. 194; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 445; 22 Am. St. Rep. 699, note, the railroad company leased a portion of its ground, constituting the only point of easy access to the depot, to the owner of a certain hack line, practically giving him the exclusive right to occupy a place upon the depot grounds where he could comfortably discharge his passengers and seek patronage from incoming passengers. The court held that the lease was an unjust discrimination, tending to defeat competition and to create a monopoly, and was void under Howell's Michigan Stat., § 3355, providing that "all railroad corporations shall grant equal facilities for the transportation of passengers and freight to all persons, companies, or corporations."

The subject underwent a discussion in the recent Massachusetts case of Old Colony R. Co. v. Tripp, 147 Mass. 35; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 488; 9 Am. St. Rep. 661. Here the regulation was one which granted to a certain person the exclusive right of coming upon station grounds to solicit the patronage of incoming passengers with respect to carrying their baggage, etc. It was held that such a regulation was proper and did not contravene the provision of the statute, that "every railroad corporation shall give to all persons and companies reasonable terms, facilities, and accommodations for the transportation of themselves, their agents and servants, etc." The statute was considered to apply only to railroads as common carriers and their patrons. In this case, there was a dissent on the part of three of the judges. The majority opinion referred to Markham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523, in which case it was held that an innkeeper had no right to exclude from his inn a stage driver who entered it to solicit guests to patronize his stage, in opposition to a driver of a rival line who had been admitted for a like purpose, but distinguished such a case from one involving the right to enter a railroad station for purposes substantially similar. As directly in point, the cases of Barney v. Oyster Bay, etc., Steamboat Co., 67 N. Y. 301, and Jenks v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 221, were cited. Com. v. Power, 7 Met. (Mass.) 596; 41 Am. Dec. 465; Harris v. Stevens, 31 Vt. 79; 73 Am. Dec. 337, were also referred to. The opinion also reviewed the English cases of Marriott v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 C. B. N. S. 499; 87 E. C. L. 498; Beadell v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 2 C. B. N. S. 509; 89 E. C. L. 509; and referred to Painter v. London, etc., R. Co., 2 C. B. N. S. 702; 89 E. C. L. 701; Barker v. Midland R. Co., 18 C. B. 46; 86 E. C. L. 45; In re Palmer R. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 194; In re Parkinson, L. R., 6 C. P. 554. The dissenting opinion referred to New England Express Co. v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 57 Me. 188; 2 Am. Rep. 31.

See, as illustrative of the subject, Fluker v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 81 Ga. 461; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 379; 12 Am.

V. INJURIES AT AND AROUND STATIONS—1. In General.—This subject involves only the application of the general law of negligent injury to a particular class of cases; the right of the injured party to recover depends upon his showing: first, that the company owed him a certain duty, e. g., to light the station premises; second, that it was guilty of a want of ordinary care in failing properly to perform that duty; and, third, that he himself stood in such a relation to the company that the duty was owing to him.¹

2. Duty of the Company.—The company does not insure the lives or safety of its passengers, but the law imposes upon it a high measure of duty to provide for their safety and protection.² It is bound, therefore, to exercise care to have its station platforms and its depot buildings so constructed that injury shall not occur to persons properly occupying them.³ It is also a part of

St. Rep. 328 (stating the right of a railroad company to license lunch vendors); Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 221. In this last case, however, the question was submitted to the jury to find whether or not the contract for exclusive privilege was a reasonable one. See also Griswold v. Webb, 16 R. I. 649; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 683; Cole v. Rowen, 88 Mich. 219; Smith v. New York, etc., R. Co. (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 304.

Elevator Companies.—See State v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 29 Neb. 550; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 661, where the doctrine is stated that under the Nebraska statute the courts will compel railroad companies to grant equal facilities to elevator companies who desire in good faith to engage in handling and shipping grain along its line.

Wharves Used as Stations.—An injunction has been granted to compel a railroad company owning a wharf and using it as a station, to allow a steamboat company to land passengers on it who wished to take the trains on the railroad. Indian River Steamboat Co. v. East Coast Transp. Co., 28 Fla. 387; 49 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 212; Oregon, etc., R. Co. v. Ilwaco R., etc., Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 611.

1. See the general subject discussed in COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, vol. 3, p. 367; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 15 et seq.; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 386 et seq.; Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 132.

2. See NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 415; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 2, p. 738; Gilson v. Jackson Co. Horse R.

Co., 76 Mo. 282; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 132; Renneker v. South Carolina R. Co., 20 S. Car. 219; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149.

3. In Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 132; 7 L. R. A. 687, the rule is thus stated in the opinion of the court by Mitchell, J.: "While it is the duty of a railroad company to keep its platform and approaches safe and convenient for the ingress and egress of passengers to and from its cars, the rigor of the rule which requires it out of considerations of public policy to exercise the highest possible diligence for the benefit of the passenger while in the progress of his journey, and holds it responsible for the slightest defect in its machinery, track, and appliances, is measurably relaxed with respect to its platform and approaches. With respect to these it is to be held to that reasonable degree of care for the safety and protection of its patrons, having regard to the nature of its business, as is demanded by individuals upon whose premises they come by invitation or inducement for the transaction of business." See Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Butcher, 83 Tex. 309; Jarvis v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 133 N. Y. 623; Evans v. Interstate Rapid Transit R. Co., 106 Mo. 594; Bethmann v. Old Colony R. Co. (Mass. 1892), 29 N. E. Rep. 587; McDermott v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. (Wis. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 85; Ensley R. Co. v. Chewing, 93 Ala. 24; Bullard v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 64 N. H. 27; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 117; 10 Am. St. Rep. 367.

Wherever a railroad company is in the habit of receiving passengers, there people have a right to assume that they may safely congregate to get aboard trains. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Ward, 35 Ill. App. 423, aff'd on other grounds in 135 Ill. 511.

Where a passenger waiting for a train at a station, the platform of which is properly constructed, stands so near the track as to be struck and killed by the bumper of a passing locomotive, the railroad company is not liable. Matthews v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 67.

But because a train stops at a mere signal, or flag station, to take up or put off an occasional passenger, it does not follow that a building, or even a permanent platform, must be provided. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Peters, 80 Ind. 168; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 126; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Stacey, 68 Miss. 463. Nor is a railroad company running to a seaside summer resort, whose line is used chiefly for summer excursions, bound to keep its platform, cars and trains fenced in, or to keep a servant by them to warn people not to go on or about them at a time when no trains are running. Hodges v. New Hanover Transit Co., 107 N. Car. 576.

Where a railroad company fails to provide a station with a platform upon which passengers may alight, but furnishes a box instead, it is their duty to at least render such assistance to passengers as to make the box as safe as a platform would have been. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Wortham, 73 Tex. 25; 3 L. R. A. 368.

It is the company's duty to provide reasonable accommodations at its stations, and if the waiting room is full or is intolerably offensive because of tobacco smoke, a passenger has a good reason for not remaining there, and is justified in attempting to enter the cars at the earliest moment, and if in so doing he receives an injury from the unsafe condition of the platform at a point where passengers would naturally go, he may recover damages if he exercised proper care in other respects. McDonald v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 26 Iowa 124; 95 Am. Dec. 114. See also Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Whitfield, 44 Miss. 466; 7 Am. Rep. 699; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Connor, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 254; Keefe v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 142 Mass. 251; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; Hulbert v. New York Cent. R. Co., 40 N. Y. 145; Cross v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 69 Mich. 363;

35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 476; 13 Am. St. Rep. 399.

In Collins v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 80 Mich. 390, it appeared that the platform at a station used by passengers in entering and leaving the cars, was so high as not to be conveniently reached, particularly by women, without a step, which the company failed to provide. A well beaten path led from the store of a station agent to this platform, which path was commonly used by the public. Some one had provided a plank reaching from the platform to the path, which was commonly used in reaching the platform, and had been since the depot was built, by the falling of which plank the plaintiff was injured. It was held that the case showed a violation of duty by the railroad company in not providing a reasonably safe and convenient means of reaching its trains, and that therefore the plaintiff might recover. See also Cole v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 81 Mich. 156; Cross v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 69 Mich. 363; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 476; 13 Am. St. Rep. 399; Reid v. New York, etc., R. Co., 63 Hun (N. Y.) 630.

A railroad company erecting and maintaining an approach to its boat landing is not relieved from liability for an injury to its patron caused by a defect in such approach by the fact that it was maintained in a public street. Skotlowe v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 22 Oregon 430; Mullen v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 22 Oregon 430.

A passenger was allowed to recover from a railroad company for personal injuries occasioned by his stepping into a hole in a bridge constructed on the company's right of way and connecting its depot platform with a hotel, although the bridge had been built by the hotel proprietor and turned over to the company for the use of passengers going to and from the hotel for meals, and was not connected with the ticket office except through another room, and the company had never exercised any control over it nor repaired it, nor used it for any purpose within three years prior to the accident, the court holding that passengers could not be presumed to know in regard to the ownership or control of such a structure. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Watson, 94 Ala. 634; Watson v. Oxanna Land Co., 92 Ala. 320; Watson v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 92 Ala. 320.

its duty to keep the station premises well lighted during the time passengers or other persons have a right to be there.¹

The company is bound to use a reasonable amount of care to protect waiting passengers from insults or assaults, but this duty cannot be extended to make it liable for assaults which it could not have anticipated, or reasonably be expected to prevent.²

Its duty in each of these cases is measured by that which every person owes to those who come upon his premises by invitation

1. Duty to Have Station Premises Lighted.—For cases in which this duty has been insisted upon and where a failure to perform it was considered a proximate or concurrent cause of injury, see Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Arnold, 84 Ala. 159; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 466; 5 Am. St. Rep. 354; Ensley R. Co. v. Chewning, 93 Ala. 24; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. White, 48 Ark. 495; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 545; Fordyce v. Merrill, 49 Ark. 277; Moses v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 39 La. Ann. 649; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 556; 4 Am. St. Rep. 231; Peniston v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 777; 44 Am. Rep. 444; Wentworth v. Eastern R. Co., 143 Mass. 248; Buenemann v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 32 Minn. 390; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 153; Osborn v. Union Ferry Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 629; Jarvis v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 133 N. Y. 623; Patten v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 32 Wis. 524; Martin v. Great Northern R. Co., 16 C. B. 179; 81 E. C. L. 177.

See also Bishop v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 67 Wis. 611, as to suing on the contract or in tort, where a lady passenger, having bought her ticket, asked the station agent to light the waiting room, which he refused to do, accompanying his refusal with grossly insulting language. Stewart v. International, etc., R. Co., 53 Tex. 289; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 497; 37 Am. Rep. 753; infra, this title, Negligence.

Where it is the custom of a carrier to receive passengers on its boats in the evening and allow them to sleep there, for which an extra charge is made, there is no contributory negligence in a passenger's trying to board the boat in the evening instead of waiting until morning, and the carrier is liable for failing to keep its approaches lighted and in safe condition in the evening. Skotlowe v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 22 Oregon 430.

2. Duty to Protect from Assault.—An illustrative case is that of Batton v.

South & North Ala. R. Co., 77 Ala. 591; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; 54 Am. Rep. 80. The plaintiff, a lady passenger, was in the passenger's waiting room, awaiting the arrival of her train. While there several intruders rushed in and grossly insulted her by obscene and profane language, indecent exposure, and other disorderly conduct. The company could not possibly have anticipated such an occurrence, nor could they have prevented it except by providing a force of police to be in constant attendance. It was held that the company was under no such obligation; that the insults were a part of the risk necessarily run by a lady traveling without a protector. The court, by Somerville, J., said: "We do not think there is any duty to police station houses, with the view of anticipating violence to passengers, which there are no reasonable grounds to expect. The liability of a common carrier, when receiving passengers at a station for transportation, ought not to be greater than that of an innkeeper, who is never held liable for trespasses committed ordinarily by strangers upon the person of his guests." 2 Kent's Com. (13th ed.), p. 593; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 53 Pa. St. 512; 91 Am. Dec. 224. See INNS AND INNKEEPERS, vol. 11, p. 50.

See also Smith v. Great Eastern R. Co., L. R., 2 C. P. 4, where the plaintiff while waiting at a station for a train was bitten by a stray dog. It was shown that the dog had a short time before attacked a passenger there and had been kicked out by the porter and had not been seen again prior to his attack on the plaintiff. The court held that there was no evidence which would warrant the jury in finding that the company had been guilty of negligence; this on the ground that no violated duty was shown.

The rule is somewhat different in the cases under consideration from those where the passenger is assaulted or permission, and the same degree of care to prevent injury is not exacted as where the passengers are actually on the train.¹

while actually on the cars. See CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 2, pp. 752, 764; Craker v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 657 (case of conductor kissing lady passenger); Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 354; 42 Am. Rep. 33; Stewart v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 90 N. Y. 588; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127; 43 Am. Rep. 185; Britton v. Atlanta, etc., Air Line R. Co., 88 N. Car. 536; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391; 43 Am. Rep. 749; Flint v. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co., 34 Conn. 554. In these cases the assault occurred while the passenger was actually on the cars and the company was held liable. But as was said in the opinion in Batton v. South and North Ala. R. Co., 77 Ala. 591; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; 54 Am. Rep. 80, by Somerville, J., "The measure of duty is admitted by all the authorities, however, not to be so great as it is after the passenger has boarded the train for reasons of a manifest nature. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Schwindling, 101 Pa. St. 258; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 544; 47 Am. Rep. 706."

1. Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 132; Batton v. South & North Ala. R. Co., 77 Ala. 591; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; 54 Am. Rep. 80; Moreland v. Boston, etc., R. Corp., 141 Mass. 31.

A carrier is held to the highest degree of care as to the condition of its engines, cars, bridges, and other appliances, because negligence as to them involves extreme peril to passengers, but as the detention of a passenger at a depot, or his exit to the train, is not attended with the hazards pertaining to the journey on the cars, the degree of care is justly lessened to the extent that under such circumstances the carrier is bound to exercise only a reasonable degree of care for the protection of its passengers. But where a railroad company induces an unusual crowd to collect at its stations by means of advertisements and reduced rates, it is bound to use such means as are reasonably necessary to prevent injury to individuals from the conduct or pressure of the crowd in passing to and from the trains. Taylor v. Pennsylvania Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 755.

Waiting Passengers Injured by Postal

Agents.—Several cases have arisen in which passengers waiting on the platform of a station have been injured by a mail-bag being thrown from the postal car. The company has constantly been held liable for such injuries on the ground that, though the postal agent may not have been its servant, or under its control, still the injury was one which he might reasonably anticipate, and by the exercise of ordinary care provide against by warning the passengers or by other means. Carpenter v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 97 N. Y. 494; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331; 49 Am. Rep. 540; Snow v. Fitchburg R. Co., 136 Mass. 552; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 161; 49 Am. Rep. 40. In the former case, the court, by Danforth, J., said: "The practice which led to the accident was a familiar and usual one. It was proven by uncontradicted evidence that this method of discharging mail-bags from the postal car upon the platform provided for passengers, and while they were upon it and exposed to injury, had prevailed for a long time under circumstances from which notice to the defendant might be fairly implied, and with the actual knowledge of the defendant's agent, in whose presence the act was frequently, if not daily, performed. They were, therefore, chargeable with notice that the mail-bag was likely to be thrown off in the same manner and under the same circumstances at any arrival of a postal car. By this knowledge the defendant was brought fairly within the rule which enjoins care, not only on the part of itself and its servants, but also like care in preventing injury from the careless or wrongful act of any other person whom it permits to come upon its premises." See also Hutchinson on Carriers, § 499. In the second case cited, Snow v. Fitchburg R. Co., 136 Mass. 552; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 161; 49 Am. Rep. 40, attention was called to the fact that the case presented was entirely unlike that of the act of a passenger which the railroad company had no reason to anticipate or power to prevent. For a similar case see James v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 107 Mo. 480, where it was alleged that the injury resulted from the mail-bags driving plaintiff's heel into a hole in

The duty exists on the part of a railroad company using a depot, although it is not the real owner but only a lessee.¹

The statutes which exist in many States, requiring railroad companies to fence their tracks, do not, as a general thing, extend to the station and depot grounds, and injuries occurring there do not impose a liability on the company, unless actual negligence on its part in the management of the trains or otherwise can be shown.² But this exemption is considered to extend no further than to such part of the station grounds as public convenience or necessity requires to remain open, and does not excuse the company for a failure to fence its tracks at such parts of the station grounds as that the public convenience would not be disturbed.³

3. Persons to Whom Duty Is Due.—The liability of the company for injury to passengers at stations rests on the ground that it has extended an invitation to them to come there, and has, therefore, assumed the duty to use proper care to prevent injury to them.⁴ Therefore, if a party injured is not properly at the station, as where he is a mere loiterer or trespasser, he cannot recover, since he cannot show the existence of a duty to him.⁵ But the invita-

the station platform It was held that the jury must determine the question.

But in Muster v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Wis. 325; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 113; 50 Am. Rep. 141, where a similar injury occurred, the company was held not liable. It was on the ground, however, that as the bag was usually thrown out at a point 200 feet west of the depot the company could not be charged with notice that it would be thrown out on the station platform.

1. Liability of Lessee.—Montgomery, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 77 Ala. 448; 54 Am. Rep. 72. See NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, pp. 473-475; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 899 et seq.

2. Company Not Bound to Fence Station Grounds.—See FENCES, vol. 7, pp. 911, 926; Bechdolt v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 113 Ind. 343; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Sawyer, 109 Ind. 342; Hooper v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 37 Minn. 52; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, 47 Mich. 265; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 545; McGrath v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 57 Mich. 555; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 574; International, etc., R. Co. v. Dunham, 68 Tex. 231; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 530; 2 Am. St. Rep. 484; Prickett v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 33 Kan. 748; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 232.

Meaning of Station or Depot in This Connection.—Grounds on the main track of a road on which are water tanks, a telegraph office, ticket office, etc., and on which there is a platform at which the trains stop, are to be considered a station within the meaning of the fencing statute. Peters v. Stewart, 72 Wis. 133; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 174. See also note 49 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 555.

A mere side track, used only for loading and shipping tanbark, there being no depot buildings or platform, no station or station agent, no highway leading thereto, does not make a place "depot grounds" within the statute. Jaeger v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 Wis. 130; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 194. See also Rhines v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 Iowa 597; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123; Kobe v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 36 Minn. 518; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 528.

3. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Quick, 109 Ind. 295; Hooper v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 37 Minn. 52; Cox v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 41 Minn. 101; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Shaft, 33 Kan. 521; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 529; International, etc., R. Co. v. Dunham, 68 Tex. 231; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 530; 2 Am. St. Rep. 484; Kobe v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 36 Minn. 518; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 528; Dinwoodie v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Wis. 160.

4. See NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, pp. 411, 414; Shear. & Red. on Neg. (4th ed.), § 488; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 51.

5. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Schwind-

tion of the railroad company is not confined to those taking passage on its trains; it extends to the friends or relatives who come to the station to meet or to part with passengers,¹ also to a passenger's servants;² and to other persons to whom it has extended permission to enter upon the station premises.³

4. Negligence.—A certain duty having been shown to exist, the injured party may recover only upon showing that the company has been guilty of a want of ordinary care in the performance of ling, 101 Pa. St. 258; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 544; 47 Am. Rep. 706; Gillis v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 59 Pa. St. 141; Lary v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 78 Ind. 323; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 498; 41 Am. Rep. 572 (party taking refuge from a storm in an old freight building); Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Birmingham, 29 Ohio St. 364; 23 Am. Rep. 751; Burbank v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1156; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593 (mere wayfarer); Williams v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 96 Mo. 275; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 329 (by playing in switch-yard). CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 51; RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 933-938; Shear. & Red. on Neg. (4th ed.), §§ 702 et seq.

A party entered the station to take a train, but finding it had gone, remained there while waiting for a horse car. It was held that he was not a person to whom the company owed the duty of keeping the station premises lighted. Heinlein v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 147 Mass. 136; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500.

In Sweeny v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 372; 87 Am. Dec. 644, the court, by Bigelow, J., said: "The owner of land is not bound to protect or provide safeguards for wrong-doers; so a licensee who enters on premises by permission only, without any enticement, allurement, or inducement being held out to him by the owner or occupant, cannot recover damages for injuries caused by obstructions or pitfalls. He comes there at his own risk and enjoys the license subject to its concomitant perils. No duty is imposed by law on the owner or occupant to keep his premises in a suitable condition for those who come there solely for their own convenience or pleasure, and who are not either expressly invited to enter or induced to come upon them for the purpose for which the premises are appropriated and occupied." Hounsell v.

Smyth, 7 C. B. N. S. 731; 97 E. C. L. 731; Knight v. Abert, 6 Pa. St. 472; 47 Am. Dec. 478; Carleton v. Franconia Iron, etc., Co., 99 Mass. 216; Corby v. Hill, 4 C. B. N. S. 556; 93 E. C. L. 556.

1. Passenger's Friends.—In other words, the invitation of the company extends to all who come "to welcome the coming or speed the parting guest." Hamilton v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 64 Tex. 251; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 336; 53 Am. Rep. 756; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Best, 66 Tex. 116; Langan v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 72 Mo. 392; 3 Am. and Eng. R. Cas. 355; Pierce on Railroads, p. 275; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, pp. 413-414. Thus, in McKone v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 51 Mich. 601; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 29; 47 Am. Rep. 596, the plaintiff had gone to the station to meet his wife, expected on the next train. While there he walked to an obscure part of the station premises to relieve a call of nature, the regular urinals having been destroyed by fire. He was injured by falling into a hole negligently left unguarded. It was held that he was one to whom the company owed a duty to use care, and he was therefore allowed to recover.

2. Langan v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 72 Mo. 392; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 355.

3. In the case of Tobin v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 59 Me. 183; 8 Am. Rep. 415, it was held that "a hackman carrying passengers to the railroad depot for transportation, and aiding them to alight upon the platform of the company, is as rightfully upon the same as the passengers alighting. It would be absurd to protect the one from the consequences of corporate negligence and not the other." Barrett v. Black, 56 Me. 498; 96 Am. Dec. 497.

So in Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Grush, 67 Ill. 262; 16 Am. Rep. 618, a party who went upon the station platform to look for certain freight belonging to his employer, was held to be entitled to recover for injuries received because of a hole in the platform, the company having been negligent in allowing the hole to remain there.

such duty. His right to recover may be lost by his having been guilty of contributory negligence. The law in this connection has been treated elsewhere, and it will be enough here to state illustrative cases.¹

See also St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Fairbairn, 48 Ark. 491; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 166, where a party was injured who had entered the station in order to read for another a notice of stock that had been killed, which a statute required the company to publish; it was held that the company was liable. Ingalls v. Adams Exp. Co., 44 Minn. 128, where a police officer who usually visited the station at the time of the arrival of trains was held to be lawfully there; Sullivan v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 39 La. Ann. 800; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Rose, 65 Md. 485; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125 (party injured while on pier connecting two carrier lines); Tebbutt v. Bristol, etc., R. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 73 (similar facts).

Where the company maintains a telegraph office at its station for the use of the public, it is responsible to a passenger who is injured because of the company's neglect to keep a platform erected by them, over which the passenger, in alighting from the cars, must pass to reach the telegraph office, in proper condition and repair. Clusman v. Long Island R. Co., 9 Hun (N. Y.) 618.

Passengers, Licensees and Trespassers—Summary.—A review of the foregoing cases in this section will show that by "passengers," are meant those who come by express or implied invitation; by "licensees," those who come there with the express or clearly implied permission of the company; while "trespassers" includes all those who are there without invitation or the undoubted permission of the company. One may be a trespasser although the company seeing him on the premises has not ordered him off, so that the term includes all that class of persons who loiter around the station at the time of incoming trains from motives of curiosity or idleness and whose presence has not been objected to by the company. A good instance of the class represented by the licensee is the hackman or the hotel drummer who is at the station to solicit patronage. It will be seen, therefore, that the relationship existing between the company and each of these various classes of persons is very different in each case; and its measure of duty is therefore graded according to the relationship. See NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 402, note 1, 427; RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 933, 935. See also Lucas v. Taunton, etc., R. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 70; Cooley on Torts, p. 605.

1. See the general law of negligent injury discussed in COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, vol. 3, p. 367; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 15; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 386; MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 14, pp. 804-841.

Instances Where Recovery Has Been Allowed.—Thus, a person at the train to meet his wife being injured by falling into a hole on the station grounds was held entitled to recover. McKone v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 51 Mich. 601; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 29; 47 Am. Rep. 596. So where there was a hole in the depot grounds so near the recognized way that a person traveling at night fell into it, the company was held liable for the injury, the plaintiff having used proper care. Cross v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 69 Mich. 363; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 476; 13 Am. St. Rep. 399.

In Osborne v. London, etc., R. Co., 21 Q. B. Div. 220; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 483, a passenger was injured by falling on steps leading to the station, the steps being slippery. He was allowed to recover, although it was shown that he knew there were other steps which he might have used and that the ones he did use were dangerous.

A passenger injured by the company's servant sliding a trunk against him was allowed to recover in Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Johns, 36 Kan. 769; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; 56 Am. Rep. 609.

Where a person walking along the platform was injured by the fall of a truck, it was held that there was no willful negligence and that the party was bound to show himself free from contributory negligence. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Shanks, 94 Ind. 598; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 28.

In Keefe v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 142 Mass. 251; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137, a passenger started to leave the platform at a place not intended for that purpose. While still on the platform she received an injury caused by the negligence of the company's servants. She was allowed to recover.

In Sullivan v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 39 La. Ann. 800; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168, a party standing on a platform was injured by a projecting brake from a passing train. It was held that the company's employes seeing the plaintiff there were bound to recognize the danger and guard against it, and were guilty of negligence for not doing so. See also Dobiecki v. Sharp, 88 N. Y. 203; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 485 (passenger injured by projecting platform of train); Archer v. New York, etc., R. Co., 106 N. Y. 589; Langan v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 72 Mo. 392; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 355 (injury caused by projecting bumper of engine); Buchanan v. West Jersey R. Co., 52 N. J. L. 265; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59 (woman injured in trying to avoid projection).

In Moses v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 39 La. Ann. 649; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 556; 4 Am. St. Rep. 231, a person walking to board a sleeping car was injured by falling from a walk leading thereto by reason of insufficient lights. He was allowed to recover.

In Boyce v. Manhattan R. Co., 118 N. Y. 314; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 111, a passenger at an elevated station fell into an unguarded hole in the platform while getting on the train. It was held that the case was for the jury.

In Patten v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 32 Wis. 524; 36 Wis. 413, the plaintiff, a woman of seventy-two years, was put off with her trunk at a depot between nine and ten o'clock at night. The depot was not upon any public highway, was not open or lighted, nor was there anyone there to give her information. Being ignorant of the locality, and seeking in the dark the highway on which she knew the house in which she was to stay was situated, she failed to find the way of access to it, and, becoming bewildered, returned to the station, and afterwards, in trying to reach the other end of the platform to shelter herself from the cold and wind, she fell down a flight of three steps from the platform and was injured. There was no defect in the platform or steps, and the injury occurred more than an hour after she had left the platform. It was held that the question of negligence and of proximate cause was properly left to the jury. The verdict for $2,538 was set aside as excessive; but a subsequent one for $1,500 was sustained.

In Bennett v. New York, etc., R. Co., 57 Conn. 422; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 184, it was said that a passenger using an unlighted stairway when there were lighted stairways leading to the same place must be considered to have assumed the risk of accident.

In Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Trautwein, 52 N. J. L. 169; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 187; 19 Am. St. Rep. 442, a party was injured owing to a defective stairway. It was held that the company was not absolved from the duty of keeping the stairway in repair by the fact that it provided another passage way and that the passenger was justified in using it, since it was held out by the company as one of its passage ways. Knight v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 56 Me. 234; 96 Am. Dec. 449; McElroy v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 400; 50 Am. Dec. 794.

In numerous cases the whole matter has been left to the jury to determine from the facts whether or not the party should recover. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Neiswanger, 41 Kan. 621; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 471; 13 Am. St. Rep. 304; Stafford v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 22 Mo. App. 333; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fox (Tex.), 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 543.

See also for other cases Nicholson v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 3 H. & C. 534; Longmore v. Great Western R. Co., 19 C. B. N. S., 183; 115 E. C. L. 183; Toomey v. London, etc., R. Co., 3 C. B. N. S. 146; 91 E. C. L. 146 (recovery denied); Pickard v. Smith, 10 C. B. N. S. 470; 100 E. C. L. 468; Burbank v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1156; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593; Wallace v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co. (Del. 1889), 18 Atl. Rep. 818 (proper instructions where passenger alighting at a strange place submitted himself to the guidance of a third person); Stoaks v. Suffolk, etc., R. Co., 107 N. Car. 178; Watson v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 66 Iowa 164; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 114.

Instances Where Recovery Was Denied.—In Reed v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 84 Va. 231; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 503, it was said to be not only negligence, but recklessness, for a passenger, who is staying at a railway station, on a dark night, when the platform lamp has been temporarily removed, to go out on the platform and walk to the end of it, and, therefore, she can not recover if in so doing she falls off and is injured.

In Ryan v. Manhattan R. Co., 121 N. Y. 126; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 426, the passenger alighting from the train was injured by falling through the open space between the station platform and the car. It was held error in the court to instruct the jury to find as a fact that an opening eight inches in width was negligence, in the face of the uncontradicted evidence that such an opening at that point was absolutely necessary for the safe operation of the train, owing to the platform being built on a curve. So in Lafflin v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 106 N. Y. 136; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 60 Am. Rep. 433, a woman injured in attempting to alight from a car at night was not allowed to recover, knowing that the platform had been used for several years and no one had been seriously injured.

In Potter v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 92 N. Car. 541; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 328, a girl about to take passage on a train caught her foot on a rail and fell down, breaking her arm. The rail was not defective, and had the girl looked she could have avoided injury. It was held that the company was not liable.

Cases of Contributory Negligence.—In Kalembach v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 87 Mich. 509, the plaintiff was at the railroad station unloading barrels from his wagon onto a car. His team became frightened by the moving car and ran away, throwing him from the wagon, thereby causing him injury. The team had run away with him and with others before. It was held proper for the jury to consider whether or not he had been guilty of contributory negligence in having the team where they might become frightened. And held, also, that a verdict of $150 would not be set aside as inadequate, the court having properly charged as to the measure of damages, and there being nothing to show that the plaintiff was for more than two weeks unable to work, or that he was at any expense for medical aid. See also Edwards v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. (Pa. 1892), 23

Atl. Rep. 894, where it was held to be negligence per se to leave a horse standing unfastened and unattended at a railroad station. See also Olson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 81 Wis. 41, where plaintiff, wishing to get to his team, which he had left unhitched, hurriedly jumped from the platform, and in so doing landed on a rapidly moving engine. Recovery was denied. Forsyth v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 103 Mass. 511.

In Toomey v. London, etc., R. Co., 3 C. B. N. S. 146; 91 E. C. L. 146, it appeared that on the platform of the station there were two doors in close proximity to each other; the one (a water-closet) had painted over it the words "For Gentlemen;" on the other were the words "Lamp Room." The plaintiff having occasion to go to the urinal inquired of a stranger where he should find it, and, having received direction, by mistake entered the lamp room, and was injured there by falling down some steps. It was held that, in the absence of evidence that the place was more than ordinarily dangerous, the judge was justified in nonsuiting the plaintiff, on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the company.

Where a person, on leaving a railroad station, in order to reach the highway, is compelled to walk along the company's tracks or go through private property by a way over which travel is forbidden, and while walking along the tracks towards the highway, steps from one track to another to avoid a train and is struck by a train coming from the opposite direction and killed, it is proper for the court to refuse to adjudge him guilty of contributory negligence in using the tracks, as no safe way is provided by the company for reaching the highway. Reid v. New York, etc., R. Co., 63 Hun (N. Y.) 630. And see Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Kane, 69 Md. 11; 9 Am. St. Rep. 387.

Ferryboat Landing.—Where the bridge of a ferry and the deck of a ferryboat are required to be, and usually are, kept as nearly even as possible, one scarcely ever projecting above the other more than an inch and a half, and a passenger who has used the ferry for years and always found the deck and bridge on a level, steps from the bridge, when dimly lighted, to the deck, without looking, and sustains a fall, the deck being eighteen inches below the bridge, he is not guilty of contributory negligence in not looking before stepping, for under the circumstances he is justified in assuming the safety of the step. Race v. Union Ferry Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 675.

5. Assault by Station Servants.—Most of the cases arising in this connection are those in which a person was ejected from the station premises by the agent in charge, because of a violation of a regulation of the company. Such cases turn upon the right of the company to make such a regulation; if the right to expel exists and is exercised properly, no cause of action arises for the expulsion.¹ If, however, the expulsion is made in a rude and unnecessarily violent manner, the person expelled may recover damages due to such excess of violence.²

Evidence.—See generally NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 386. Evidence of other accidents at the same place was held admissible in Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Neiswanger, 41 Kan. 621; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 471, 477, note; 13 Am. St. Rep. 304. Contra, Early v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 66 Mich. 349; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 163; Central R., etc., Co. v. Smith, 80 Ga. 526; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 456.

Where the injury occurred in December, evidence of the condition of the platform in March following is not competent, unless it can be shown that its condition was unchanged during that time. Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 132.

In Cross v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 69 Mich. 363; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 476; 13 Am. St. Rep. 399, evidence of a civil engineer was admitted to show that the hole on the station premises was in a dangerous place and needed protection.

In Railway v. Barger, 52 Ark. 78, an action against a railroad company for injuries received from falling into a hole in the station platform, the statement of the station agent of the company, made at the time of the accident, that the hole "ought to have been fixed," was held incompetent to show unreasonable delay on the part of the company in repairing the platform, and its admission was, therefore, a reversible error.

Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Herrick (Ohio, 1892), 29 N. E. Rep. 1052, was an action against a railroad company to recover damages for injuries received at one of the stations by being struck by an incoming train. The plaintiff claimed that he had been misled by information that the train which struck him was late, whereas, in fact, it was on time or nearly so, and that, acting upon such information, he was crossing its track when it suddenly ran upon him and struck him. It was held competent to rebut any inference of contributory negligence that might arise from the circumstances of the accident to introduce to the jury declarations of strangers to the record made in his presence that the train was late. It was held, also, that in such a case, if it becomes material to establish that the plaintiff was at the station to take passage on one of its trains, a declaration made by him as he left his house on the way to the station that he was going to another station of the same railway is competent evidence to establish his character as a passenger. In such case, the condition of the place of crossing at the time of the accident, whether thronged with people or otherwise, is evidence tending to prove its condition in this respect and is, therefore, competent.

1. See this question discussed in the various sections, supra, this title, Rules and Regulations Regarding Stations. Com. v. Power, 7 Met. (Mass.) 596; 41 Am. Dec. 465.

2. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 907-910; Johnson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 58 Iowa 348; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 206 (master liable only for acts of servant within the scope of his employment); People v. McKay, 46 Mich. 439; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 205; 41 Am. Rep. 169 (passenger ejected for spitting on floor; undue violence having been used, a conviction for assault was sustained); Beeson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 62 Iowa 173; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 45 (prostitute ejected from depot).

The mere fact that a woman is a prostitute does not authorize her expulsion if she conducts herself in an

As to other assaults upon passengers waiting at the station the general rule applies, that the railroad company is not liable in damages unless the assault was committed by a servant in the scope of his employment, or unless the company was guilty of negligence in failing to provide against such injuries.¹

VI. CONDEMNATION OF LAND.—The railroad station is an essential part of the railroad, so that land may be condemned for station sites, this being a public use.²

orderly and proper manner. Brown v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 51; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 247, aff'g 5 Fed. Rep. 499.

1. In Christian v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 79 Ga. 460; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 261, a party lawfully at the station on business with the railroad company, while transacting his business with the company's agent was assaulted by the latter and killed. It appeared that the agent was subject to temporary fits of insanity and the company knew of this when they employed him. It was held that the company must respond in damages. In Dean v. St. Paul Union Depot Co., 41 Minn. 360; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360, the depot company leased to a tenant a room in the depot where he carried on the business of storing for hire the light baggage of travelers. The plaintiff arriving in one of the trains went to the said room to get his valise checked and while there was assaulted and beaten by an employé of the company's tenant. It appeared that this employé was of savage and vicious propensities and had more than once in times past attacked and beaten persons on the premises, all of which was known to the defendant company. It was held that the plaintiff had a good cause of action. See also Batton v. South, etc., Ala. R. Co., 77 Ala. 591; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; 54 Am. Rep. 80 (company not liable for assault by third parties).

In Mulligan v. New York, etc., R. Co., 14 L. R. A. 791, a railroad ticket-agent to whom a bill had been handed in payment for a ticket, believing it to be counterfeit, procured the arrest of the person who tendered him the bill. After the arrest and imprisonment of the party it was discovered that the bill was a good one and the arrest was therefore without cause. It was held that the ticket-agent was not acting within the scope of his business in procuring the arrest so as to make the company liable to an action for false imprisonment, admitting that the arrest was wrongful. Nor could the plaintiff recover on the ground that the railroad company owed him the duty to protect him from injury while occupying its accommodations in the relation of passenger. Compare Carpenter v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 97 N. Y. 494; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331; 49 Am. Rep. 540.

Where a complaint alleges that plaintiff was lawfully entering defendant's coach as a passenger when one of defendant's employés violently jerked him off the car so as to cause him to fall between the moving cars and the station platform, in consequence of which he received serious injuries, it states a cause of action consisting of an unlawful assault directly causing the injuries complained of. Harrold v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 47 Minn. 17.

2. Condemnation of Land for Stations.—See EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 524; Lawrence v. Morgan's La., etc., R., etc., Co., 39 La. Ann. 427; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 309; 4 Am. St. Rep. 265. Compare Plymouth R. Co. v. Colwell, 39 Pa. St. 337; 80 Am. Dec. 526.

See, also, as to the quantity of land to be taken, the province of the jury, court, and company respectively, as to determining the proper amount. Smith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 105 Ill. 511; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 384.

In Connecticut the statute authorizes railroads to take a street for depot purposes in altering its line of road, subject, however, to the right of the railroad commissioners to approve or disapprove it. State v. Railroad Com'rs, 56 Conn. 308; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 510.

So in Iowa, the railroad commissioners have jurisdiction of application for lands for additional station grounds. Jager v. Dey, 80 Iowa 23; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 683.

The Wisconsin statute is construed

Definition. STATUTE MILE—STATUTE OF WILLS. Definition.

Station grounds have been taken for highway purposes under the exercise of the power of eminent domain.¹

STATUTE MILE.—See MILE, vol. 15, p. 389.

STATUTE OF DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.—See SUCCESSION.

STATUTE OF FRAUDS.—See FRAUDS (STATUTE OF), vol. 8, p. 657.

STATUTE OF JOFAILS.—See AMENDMENT, vol. 1, p. 546; JOFAILS, vol. 11, p. 926; PLEADING, vol. 18, p. 467.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 667.

STATUTE OF USES.—See REAL PROPERTY, vol. 19, p. 1028; TRUSTS; USES.

STATUTE OF WILLS.—See WILLS.

to allow railroad companies to occupy highways with their roads in certain cases, but never with their depots. Bussian v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 56 Wis. 325; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 716.

Laws of Mississippi (1888, ch. 26, § 2) provide that the railroad commissioners are authorized to designate the site of any new depot, and to prescribe the number and dimensions of the rooms therein, and provide for a penalty of $50 a day against a railroad for neglecting to comply with such order. The penalty cannot be enforced where a new depot was ordered to be built, but the number of rooms was not prescribed. State v. Alabama, etc., R. Co., 67 Miss. 647; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 681. The court, by Woods, C. J., said: "The obvious and reasonable construction of the statute shuts us up to the conclusion that before the railroad company can be required to erect a new depot or station house (not to see that a suitable reception room is provided, nor to have additions or alterations in existing depots made), the railroad commissioners shall 'prescribe the number and dimensions of the rooms therein for passengers, designating and providing, if deemed proper, separate rooms for the sexes and for the races.'"

1. Station Grounds Taken for Highway.—State v. Drummond, 46 N. J. L. 644; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 13; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 563 (company entitled to damages in such case); Sackett v. Greenwich, 38 Conn. 526; Albany Northern R. Co. v. Brownell, 24 N. Y. 345; RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 865-7; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, pp. 535-7. Station premises may not be condemned for highway purposes under the General Railroad act of New York. Prospect Park, etc., R. Co. v. Williamson, 91 N. Y. 552; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 34. The court, by Rapallo, J., said: "Reference has also been made to the statutes relating to laying out highways, and among others to the provisions of 1 R. S. 514, §§ 58, 64, which prohibit laying out highways through improved lands without compensation. The lands in question are certainly improved lands, and the title of the plaintiff thereto is unquestionable. But we do not rest our decision upon that point, but upon the fact that these lands having already been lawfully appropriated, under the right of eminent domain, to a public purpose, express and direct legislative authority is necessary to justify their appropriation by proceedings in invitum to a different public purpose, and that general laws authorizing the laying out of highways are not sufficient. In respect to the crossing of railroad tracks by highways, such express authority is contained in the General Railroad Act, but this authority does not extend to lands taken for depot purposes." Compare Albany, etc., R. Co. v. Brownell, 24 N. Y. 345.

STATUTES.

- I. Definition, 143.
- II. Classification, 143.
 1. In Respect to Nature and Object, 143.
 - a. Declaratory, 143.
 - (1) Affirmative, 143.
 - (2) Negative, 144.
 - b. Remedial, 144.
 - c. Penal, 144.
 2. In Respect to Subject-matter, 144.
 - a. Public, 144.
 - b. Private, 146.
 - c. General, 148.
 - d. Local, 152.
 3. In Respect to Compliance Required, 153.
 - a. Mandatory, 153.
 - b. Directory, 153.
 - c. Prohibitory, 154.
 - d. Permissive, 154.
 4. In Respect to Time of Passage, 154.
 - a. Ancient and Modern, 154.
 5. In Respect to Time of Taking Effect, 154.
 - a. Prospective, 154.
 - b. Retrospective, 155.
 6. In Respect to Duration, 155.
 - a. Perpetual, 155.
 - b. Temporary, 155.
- III. Enactment, 155.
 1. The Legislature, 155.
 - a. Status, 155.
 - b. Organization, 158.
 - c. Extra Sessions, 159.
 - d. Powers and Limitations, 161.
 - e. Rules, 162.
 2. Introduction, 163.
 3. Readings, 166.
 4. Passage, 168.
 - a. Actual Passage, 168.
 - b. Yeas and Nays on Final Passage, 171.
 5. Signing by Presiding Officers, 173.
 6. Presentation to Executive, 176.
 7. Legislative Power of Recall, 179.
 8. Executive Functions, 180.
 - a. In General, 180.
 - b. Time Allowed for Deliberation and Action, 182.
 - (1) Effect of Adjournment, 182.
 - (2) Specific Time; How Computed, 184.
 - c. Approval, 184.
 - d. Return, 186.
 - (1) In General, 186.
 - (2) Mode, 187.
 - (3) Prevention by Adjournment, 188.
 9. Enactment Without Executive Approval, 189.
 10. Passage Over Veto, 190.
 11. Authentication, 190.
 12. Filing of Enrolled Bills, 190.
 13. Legislative Journal, 191.
 - a. In General, 191.
 - b. Conclusiveness, 193.
 - c. Proof, 195.
 - d. Journal as Evidence (See infra, this title, The Enrolled Bill), 196.
 14. The Enrolled Bill, 196.
 - a. Prima Facie Validity, 196.
 - b. Evidence to Impeach, 199.
 - (1) First View—Conclusiveness of Bill, 202.
 - (2) Second View—Impeachment by Journal, 208.
- IV. Time of Taking Effect, 213.
 1. Early Rule, 213.
 2. When No Time Is Fixed, 213.
 3. From Passage, 214.
 4. From Future Day Named, 217.
 5. From Publication, 219.
 6. Upon a Contingency, 221.
 7. When Containing Emergency Clause, 222.
 8. Postponement of Operation of Part, 223.
- V. Validity and Effect, 224.
 1. Generally, 224.
 2. Statutes Unconstitutional in Part, 225.
 3. Statutes Ambiguous, Defective, or Inconsistent, 228.
 4. Statutes as Evidence, 229.
- VI. Titles and Subjects Under Constitutions, 229.
 1. Constitutional Provisions, 229.
 2. Title Broader than Statute, 232.
 3. Statute Broader than Title, 232.
 4. General Rules, 234.
 5. Illustrations, 241.
 - a. Miscellaneous Instances, 241.
 - b. Municipal Corporations, 247.
 - c. Counties and County Officers, 250.
 - d. Railroad Companies, 253.
 - e. Streets and Highways, 255.

- f. Schools, 257.
 - g. Taxation, 258.
 - h. Intoxicating Liquors, 260.
 - i. Crimes and Criminal Procedure, 262.
 - j. Civil Procedure and Courts, 265.
- 6. Amendatory and Repealing Acts, 268.
- 7. One or More Subjects, 268.
- VII. Amendment, 276.
 - 1. General Rules, 276.
 - 2. Form, 277.
 - a. In General, 277.
 - b. By Reference to Title, 278.
 - 3. Effect, 284.
 - 4. Construction, 285.
- VIII. Pleading, 286.
 - 1. Public Statutes, 286.
 - 2. Private Statutes, 288.
 - 3. Foreign Laws, 289.
 - 4. Misrecitals, 291.
- IX. Proof, 293.
 - 1. Public, 293.
 - a. Domestic, 293.
 - b. Foreign, 293.
 - 2. Private, 296.
- X. Interpretation and Construction, 296.
 - 1. Meaning of the Terms, 296.
 - 2. Object, 297.
 - 3. Literal Construction, 298.
 - 4. Where Meaning Is Ambiguous, 305.
 - 5. General Means of Learning Intent by Reference to, 306.
 - a. Context, 306.
 - b. Statutes in Pari Materia, 311.
 - c. Purpose and Object, 319.
 - d. Subject-Matter, 322.
 - (1) In General, 322.
 - (2) Technical Words, 324.
 - (3) Popular Meaning, 326.
 - 6. Aids to Construction, 327.
 - a. Title, 327.
 - b. Preamble, 329.
 - c. Chapter and Section Headings; Marginal Notes, etc., 332.
 - d. Punctuation, 334.
 - e. Legislative Journals, 335.
 - f. Contemporaneous Circumstances and the History of the Bill, 336.
 - g. Opinions and Motives of Legislators, 337.
 - h. Usage and Contemporaneous Construction, 339.
 - i. Legislative Construction, 343.
 - 7. Presumptions, 346.
- a. Against Undue Exercise of Power, 346.
 - (1) In General, 346.
 - (2) In Favor of Constitutionality, 349.
 - b. As to Jurisdiction of Courts, 353.
 - c. Against Unnecessary Change of Law, 357.
 - d. Against Unreason, Inconvenience, Injustice, Absurdity, and Ineffectiveness, 358.
 - e. As to Including Government, 365.
 - f. As to Grammatical Construction, 368.
 - g. Same Language and Change of Language, 370.
 - h. Against Repeal by Implication (See infra, this title, Repeal), 374.
 - i. Against Retroaction (See infra, this title, Retropective Laws), 374.
- 8. Strict, Liberal, and Exceptional Construction, 374.
 - a. Strict Construction, 374.
 - (1) Definition, 374.
 - (2) Penal Statutes, 375.
 - (3) In Derogation of Common Right, 383.
 - (4) In Derogation of Common Law, 386.
 - (5) Statutes Delegating Powers, 394.
 - (6) Grants of Monopolies, 398.
 - (7) Exemptions from Liabilities, 399.
 - (8) Statutes Creating Liabilities, 400.
 - (9) Statutory Remedies and Proceedings, 402.
 - (10) Statutes Imposing Taxes, 403.
 - (11) Statutes Conferring Right to Sue State, 406.
 - (12) Statutes Affecting Jurisdiction of Courts, 406.
 - (13) Private Acts, 407.
 - b. Liberal Construction, 409.
 - (1) Definition, 409.
 - (2) Early Application of Rule, 410.
 - (3) The Modern Rule, 410.
 - (4) Remedial Statutes, 414.
 - c. Exceptional Construction, 417.
 - (1) In General, 417.

- (2) Interpolation and Elimination, 418.
 - (3) Correction of Obvious Errors, 421.
- 9. Special Classes, 422.
 - a. Private and Special, 422.
 - (1) In General, 422.
 - (2) General and Particular Statutes and Clauses, 422.
 - b. Adopted Statutes, 432.
 - c. Provisos, Exceptions, and Saving Clauses, 435.
 - d. Inconsistent Clauses and Statutes (See infra, this title, In Pari Materia; Repeal; Context), 439.
- 10. Associated Words, 439.
 - a. Noscitur a Sociis, 439.
 - b. Inferior Does Not Include Superior, 443.
 - c. Reddenda Singula Singulis, 444.
 - d. Expressio Unius Est Exclusio Alterius, 446.
- 11. Retrospective Laws, 447.
 - a. Definition, 447.
 - b. Rules of Construction, 448.
 - c. Declaratory Statutes, 449.
 - d. Statutes Affecting Judicial Procedure, 450.
 - e. Remedial and Curative Statutes, 452.
- 12. Mandatory or Directory, 453.
 - a. In General, 453.
 - b. Affirmative and Negative Terms, 455.
 - c. Statutes Prescribing Time and Mode of Proceeding by Public Officers, 458.
 - d. Conferring Powers, Privileges, or Immunities, 465.
 - e. Regulating Judicial Procedure, 468.
 - f. Particular Words—"Shall," "May," "Must," 469.
- 13. Evasions, 472.
- XI. Repeal, 473.
 - 1. General Rules, 473.
 - 2. Express, 476.
 - 3. Implied, 479.
 - a. By Repugnant Act, 479.
 - (1) In General, 479.
 - (2) Negative and Affirmative Terms, 483.
 - (a) In General, 483.
 - (b) Prescribing Different Powers, Privileges, or Duties, 483.
 - (c) Prescribing Exclusive Rule—Conflicting Rights, 484.
 - b. By Act Covering Same Subject, 485.
 - (1) In General, 485.
 - (2) Revisions, 487.
 - (3) By Amendments "So as to Read," 488.
 - c. By Removing Reason of Law, 489.
 - d. Implied Repeals Not Favored—Reconciliation.
 - e. Penal Acts, 495. [489.
 - (1) In General, 495.
 - (2) By Change in Nature of Offense, 497.
 - (3) By Change in Degree of Punishment, 497.
 - f. General and Special Laws (See supra, this title, Private and Special), 498.
 - 4. Effect, 499.
 - a. General Rules, 499.
 - b. On Interests Under Repealed Statute, 500.
 - (1) In General, 500.
 - (2) On Interests Past and Closed, 501.
 - (a) In General, 501.
 - (b) Transactions Invalid Under Repealed Statute, 501.
 - (3) On Interests Pending, 502.
 - (a) Dependent on Repealed Statute, 502.
 - (1) In General, 502.
 - (2) Remedies, 504.
 - (3) Contracts, 505.
 - (4) Jurisdiction—Powers and Privileges, 506.
 - (5) Penalties and Forfeitures, 507.
 - (6) Criminal Offenses, 512.
 - (7) Judgments—Appeals, 513.
 - (b) Connected With, but Independent of, Repealed Statute, 514.
 - c. Of Repeal and Re-enactment, 515.
 - d. Of Repeal of Repealing Act—Revivor, 517.

I. DEFINITION.—A statute is the written will of the legislature solemnly expressed according to the forms necessary to constitute it the law of the state.¹ In the United States it is an act of Congress, or of a state or territorial legislature passed and promulgated according to the constitutional requirements; in England it is an act of Parliament made by the sovereign by and with the advice and consent of the Lords and Commons.² In the civil law the term statute is applicable to any particular municipal law or usage, though resting for its authority on judicial decisions or the practice of nations.³ The term statute generally is used to designate the written law in contradistinction to the common or unwritten law.⁴

II. CLASSIFICATION—1. In Respect to Nature and Object—a. DECLARATORY.—A declaratory statute is one which is passed in order to put an end to a doubt as to what is the common law or the meaning of another statute, and which declares what it is and ever has been.⁵ A statute in affirmance of the common law is to be construed as was the rule by that law.⁶ Declaratory statutes are in form either affirmative or negative.

(1) Affirmative.—An affirmative statute is one enacted in affirmative terms.⁷ Such a statute does not take away the common law in relation to the same matter.⁸ Thus, a statute without negative terms declaring that deeds shall have in evidence a certain effect provided certain requisites are complied with, does not prevent their being used in evidence, though the requisites are not complied with, in the same manner as they might have been prior to the statute.⁹ Nor does an affirmative statute repeal a precedent statute if effect can be given to both.¹⁰ A party may waive his benefit by an affirmative statute and take his remedy by the common law, which, however, does not mean that the statute is not binding, but that the party has his election to proceed upon the statute or at the common law.¹¹ But if an affirmative statute, introductive of a new law, direct a thing to be done in a certain manner, that thing may not, even though there are no negative words, be done in any other manner.¹²

1. Bouv. L. Dict.

2. Century Dict.

3. 2 Kent's Com. 456.

4. Bouv. L. Dict.

5. Bouv. L. Dict.

Statutes are declaratory where the old custom of the kingdom has almost fallen into disuse or become disputable; in which case Parliament has thought proper in perpetuum rei testimonium, and for avoiding all doubts and difficulties to declare what the common law is and ever has been. Thus, the Statute of Treasons, 25 Edw. III., ch. 2, does not make any new species of treason, but only for the benefit of the subject, declares and enumerates those several kinds of offenses which, before, were treason at the common law. 1 Bl. Com. 86.

6. Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 87; Miles v. Williams, 1 P. Wms. 252; Arthur v. Bokenham, 11 Mod. 150.

7. 1 Bouv. Inst. 105.

8. 2 Co. Inst. 200; Fairchild v. Gwynne, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 126.

9. Jackson v. Bradt, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 169.

10. Potter's Dwarries 69.

11. 2 Co. Inst. 200; Cro. Eliz. 104.

12. Cook v. Kelley, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; District Township v. Dubuque,

(2) Negative.—A negative statute is one expressed in negative terms, and so controls the common law that it has no force in opposition to the statute.¹ A statute which is an entire revision of the subject is negative, and repeals the common law with which it is inconsistent.²

b. REMEDIAL.—A remedial statute is one made to supply defects or abridge superfluities in the common law arising from the general imperfections of human laws, the change of time and circumstances, or from any other cause whatever. This being done either by enlarging the common law where too narrow or circumscribed, or by restraining it where too lax and luxuriant, has occasioned a subdivision of remedial statutes into enlarging and restraining statutes.³ In this sense remedial statutes are contrasted with declaratory statutes. But according to modern classification remedial statutes are contradistinguished from penal; a recent definition being as follows: A remedial statute is one, the main object of which appears directly beneficent by supplying some defect in the law, or removing inconveniences, as distinguished from those, the immediate aspect of which is to impose a punishment or penalty, which are called penal statutes.⁴ It has been held that where an act gives a penalty to the party aggrieved it is to be regarded as remedial,⁵ but if the penalty is given to the public it is penal.⁶

c. PENAL.—A penal statute is one which imposes a penalty or forfeiture for transgressing its provisions, or for doing a thing prohibited.⁷ But every law which imposes a penalty or forfeiture is not, legally speaking, a penal law—that is, a law to be construed with great strictness in favor of the defendant. Laws enacted for the prevention of fraud, for the suppression of a public wrong, or to effect a public good, as, for instance, the revenue laws, are not in this sense penal laws.⁸

2. In Respect to Subject-Matter—a. PUBLIC.—A public act,

7 Iowa 262. See infra, this title, Mandatory and Directory Statutes.

1. Bacon's Abr. Statute (G); Bouv. L. Dict.; State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 33.

The difference in operation of affirmative and negative statutes is illustrated as follows: "If a statute were to provide that it should be lawful for a tenant in fee simple to make a lease for twenty-one years and that such lease should be good, an affirmative statute could not restrain him from making a lease for sixty years; but a lease for more than twenty-one years would be good, because it was good by the common law; and to restrain him it ought to have words negative, as that it shall not be lawful for him to make a lease for above twenty-one years, or that a lease for more shall not be good." Potter's Dwarries 70.

2. State v. Wilson, 43 N. H. 415.

3. 1 Bl. Com. 86.

4. Cent. Dict.

5. Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; 28 Am. Rep. 455. A statute creating a right of action and recovery in individuals, or a particular class of individuals is remedial. Neal v. Moultrie, 12 Ga. 104.

6. Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; 28 Am. Rep. 455. A statute authorizing a third person to recover treble the value of money lost by gaming is penal. Cole v. Groves, 134 Mass. 471.

7. Potter's Dwarries 74.

8. Taylor v. U. S., 3 How. (U. S.) 197.

according to Blackstone, is a universal rule that regards the whole community.¹ If by this it is meant that the act must apply to the whole territory, or the entire people subject to the legislative jurisdiction, the definition has undergone considerable modification in this country, as it is now held that an act which in any wise affects the public at large, though operating within the limits of a particular locality, is as much a public act as one operating throughout the entire state.²

Acts creating public corporations,³ regulating the disposal of public funds,⁴ authorizing the sale of state lands,⁵ taxing bank stock,⁶ imposing penalties or providing for forfeitures to the state,⁷ authorizing a foreign private corporation to carry on business in the state, and providing that it shall have an office and place of business therein, and that it may sue and be sued, like a

1. 1 Bl. Com. 86.

2. Winooski v. Gokey, 49 Vt. 282. In State v. Chambers, 93 N. Car. 600, it is said that public statutes are such as affect the public at large, whether they apply to the whole state or only to a locality in it.

In other cases the same principle is thus stated: "It is not necessary in order to give a statute the attributes of a public law that it shall be equally applicable to all parts of the state: all that is necessary to make it a public law is that it shall apply to all persons within the territorial limits described in the act." State v. Baltimore County, 29 Md. 516; Pierce v. Kimball, 9 Me. 54; 23 Am. Dec. 537; Levy v. State, 6 Ind. 281.

In West v. Blake, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 234, the court says: "The objects and purposes of these laws (referring to Indiana statutes authorizing the agent of the state for the town of Indianapolis, to lay off lands belonging to the state into lots, and offer the same for sale) are public; that the subject of them is local does not change their character. Statutes incorporating counties, fixing their boundaries, establishing courthouses, canals, turnpikes, railroads, etc., for public uses all operate upon local subjects: they are not for that reason special or private acts."

See also infra, this title, Local Acts.

3. Portsmouth Livery Co. v. Watson, 10 Mass. 91; Louisiana State Bank v. Flood, 3 Martin N. S. (La.) 341; Young v. Bank of Alexandria, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 384; White Water Valley, etc., Co. v. Boden, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 130; Hankins v. Lawrence, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 266; Russell v. Branhams, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 277; Crawford

v. Planters', etc., Bank, 6 Ala. 289; Douglas v. Bank of Missouri, 1 Mo. 24; Bank of Utica v. Smedes, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 662; Prell v. McDonald, 7 Kan. 426; 12 Am. Rep. 423; Stier v. Oskaloosa, 41 Iowa 353.

4. State v. Hoeflinger, 31 Wis. 257.

5. West v. Blake, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 234.

6. Den v. Helmes, 3 N. J. L. 600; People v. Stephens, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 350.

7. Rex v. Baggs, Skin. 429; Rex v. Morgan, 2 Stra. 1066; Rogers' Case, 2 Me. 303; Jenkins v. Union Turnpike Road, 1 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 86; Com. v. M'Curdy, 5 Mass. 324; State v. Cobb, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 115; Burnham v. Acton, 4 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 1.

In Herida v. Ayres, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 334, Chief Justice Shaw, for the court, said: "The last objection is, that the statute (Mass. St. 1829, ch. 2, regulating pilotage for Boston harbor) is a private act and ought to have been recited in the declaration. Without going minutely into this subject, which sometimes involves distinctions of much nicety and difficulty, there is one consideration which renders it decisive that this is a public act, which is, that the first section in terms imposes a penalty upon every person who violates its provisions. It is therefore binding upon every citizen of the commonwealth, and upon every stranger who, coming within its jurisdiction, owes a temporary allegiance, and is bound by its laws."

Where a statute provided that it should be a felony to steal the notes of a particular incorporated bank, it was held that this constituted the statute by which such bank was incorporated a public statute. U. S. v. Porte, 1 Cranch (C. C.) 369.

domestic corporation,¹ giving to an individual the privilege of improving a water highway, and of charging and taking tolls for its use,² regulating rates of railroad speed within a city,³ are public acts. An act supplementing, or amending,⁴ or repealing⁵ a public act, is itself public. The terms "public" and "general" in this connection are synonymous,⁶ and are opposed to "private."⁷

b. PRIVATE.—A private statute relates to, concerns, and affects particular persons, or something in which individuals or classes of persons are interested in a way and degree peculiar to themselves, and not common to the whole community.⁸ Such statutes

1. Fall Brook Coal Co. v. Lynch, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 520.

2. Calking v. Baldwin, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 667; 21 Am. Dec. 168.

3. Horn v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 38 Wis. 463.

4. State v. Bergen, 34 N. J. L. 438; Hawthorne v. Hoboken, 32 N. J. L. 172; Bank of Utica v. Magher, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 341; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 447.

5. State v. Hoeflinger, 31 Wis. 257.

6. From the earliest times the words "public" and "general," as applied to statutes, have been used as convertible terms. In Holland's case, Coke, pt. 4, 75, the question was whether the act involved was a public act, such as the court should take notice of. It is called a general law throughout the case. In the notes referring to other cases on the same question, statutes are spoken of as "public" and "private." In Samuel v. Evans, 2 T. R. 569, the act in question is said in the head-note to be a "public act." In the arguments of counsel the decisions upon it are presented. Several of the judges had held it to be a "general law," others a "private law." And throughout the case the words "general" and "public" are used as synonymous. Chancellor Kent, in his Commentaries (vol. 1, p. 506), classifies all statutes as "public or private;" and says, "the most comprehensive, if not the most precise, definition in the English books is, that public acts relate to the kingdom at large." And on the next page he says, "public statutes are a part of the general law of the land," etc. Again, in Stephen's Commentaries (vol. 1, p. 67), the author classifies statutes as "either public or private;" and says, "a public act is a universal rule that regards the whole community." Both of these commentators evidently use the word public as synonymous with general.

So in Dwarris on Statutes 629, it is said, "public acts relate to the kingdom at large;" and again, on page 630, "a general or public act then regards the whole community;" using the words as synonymous; and also "a private act, if recognized by a public act, must afterwards be noticed by the courts as a general law." In Sedgwick on Statutory Laws, etc., p. 30, it is said the leading division of statutes is into "public or general, and private or special." And the author then proceeds: "Public or general statutes are, in England, those which relate to the kingdom at large. In this country they are those that relate to or bind all within the jurisdiction of the law-making power, limited as that power may be in its territorial operation or by constitutional restraints."

In Bouvier's Law Dictionary we find "public" or "general" statutes defined. And this use of the word is in accordance with common understanding, and the definitions of standard lexicographers; thus Webster defines "general" as meaning, among other things, "public," "common," "extensive, though not universal," etc. So one definition of "public" is "general."

See also Brooks v. Hyde, 37 Cal. 366; Allen v. Hirsch, 8 Oregon 412; Mills v. Gleason, 11 Wis. 493; 78 Am. Dec. 721; Rains v. Oshkosh, 14 Wis. 372; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136; State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279.

In Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Arnold, 46 Wis. 214, the act under consideration was adjudged to be local, but the court expressly declines to say whether it is "private or general"—evidently using the latter term in the sense of public.

7. See infra, this title, Private Acts.

8. State v. Chambers, 93 N. Car. 600.

A private act is one which does not affect the public at large, but bears.

are, however rare, constituting the exception rather than the rule in legislation.¹

A private statute may embrace provisions of a public nature, and vice versa,² but such intermixture does not change nor modify their respective natures; whether the statute or some enactment in it, is private or public, is a question of law, to be determined by the court, in the absence of a statute declaring and settling its nature.³

The fact of the publication of a private act among the public acts will not, in legal contemplation, affect its nature.⁴ The charter of a private corporation is a private act;⁵ so also are acts relating to a particular trade, or to a particular person of that trade;⁶ authorizing one private corporation to guarantee the paper of another;⁷ declaring that loans and contracts previously made by any person with a particular corporation shall not be deemed usurious by reason of the corporation's agreeing to pay more than the legal rate of interest;⁸ empowering the local authorities of a particular city or county to raise money by tax for the payment of certain claims against it;⁹ authorizing the sale of property of infants and others under disability;¹⁰ relieving a particular feme covert of the disabilities of coverture.¹¹ And it has been held that an act of Congress for the relief of insolvent upon individuals only, such as an act changing a person's name; settling the title to, or authorizing the sale of, a particular parcel of land; allowing one's claim against government and directing payment thereof. Abbott's L. Dict., Private Acts.

The line between private and public acts is not always clear. Blackstone shows the distinction thus: "The statute 13 Eliz., ch. 10, to prevent spiritual persons from making leases for longer terms than twenty-one years, or three lives, is a public act: it being a rule prescribed to the whole body of spiritual persons in the nation; but an act to enable the Bishop of Chester to make a lease to A B for sixty years is an exception to this rule; it concerns only the parties and the bishop's successors; and is therefore a private act." 1 Bl. Com. 86.

1. 1 Bl. Com. 86.

2. People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 10; Bretz v. New York, 4 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 258; McLain v. New York, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 32; Bacon's Abr., Statutes (F).

3. Humphries v. Baxter, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 437; State v. Wallace, 94 N. Car. 827; Durham v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 108 N. Car. 399; Potter's Dwarris 53. See also infra, this title, Interpretation.

4. Durham v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 108 N. Car. 399.

5. Drake v. Flewellen, 33 Ala. 106; First Nat. Bank v. Gruber, 87 Pa. St. 468; 30 Am. Rep. 378; Mandere v. Bosignore, etc., Sav. Inst., 28 La. Ann. 415; Durham v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 108 N. Car. 399; Perdicaris v. Trenton City Bridge Co., 29 N. J. L. 367. And the fact that the state is a stockholder in the corporation does not have the effect of making the act of incorporation a public act. Durham v. Richmond, etc. R. Co., 108 N. Car. 399; Marshall v. Western North Carolina R. Co., 92 N. Car. 322; State Bank v. Clark, 1 Hawk. (N. Car.) 36.

6. Bacon's Abr., Statutes (F).

7. Timlow v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 99 Pa. St. 284.

8. Handy v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 1 Phila. (Pa.) 31.

9. Bretz v. New York, 3 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 478.

10. Carroll v. Olmsted, 16 Ohio 251; Boon v. Bowers, 30 Miss. 246; 64 Am. Dec. 159; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 295; Labrano v. Nelligan, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 295; Rice v. Parkinan, 16 Mass. 326; Moore v. Maxwell, 18 Ark. 469; Stewart v. Griffith, 33 Mo. 13; 82 Am. Dec. 148.

11. Ashford v. Watkins, 70 Ala. 156.

debtors in the District of Columbia, is, as regards the Union at large, a private act.¹

c. GENERAL.—As stated elsewhere in this article the term “general” is synonymous with “public” and opposed to “private,” when reference is had to the subject-matter of the statute.² When, however, regard is had to the extent of territory over which the statute operates, the term is opposed to “local,” and describes a statute operative throughout the legislative jurisdiction and not confined to a particular locality.³ It is also used as contradistinguished from “special,” and then it means relating to all of a class instead of to one or a part of that class.⁴ In many of the states there are constitutional inhibitions against the enactment of special or local laws in enumerated cases, and in all others where a general law may be made applicable. In the latter case the legislature is to decide whether a given subject which is not expressly named in the constitution will admit of general legislation;⁵ and the passage of a special act is evidence that it was thought that a general law could not be made applicable, and clear evidence of mistake is required to invalidate the enactment.⁶

In order to determine whether or not a given law is general, the purpose of the act and the objects on which it is intended to operate must be considered. If these objects are distinguished from others by characteristics evincing a peculiar relation to the legislative purpose, and showing the legislation to be reasonably

1. Wright v. Patin, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 299.

2. See supra, this title, Public Laws.

3. Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 180.

General laws are those which relate to or bind all within the jurisdiction of the law-making power, limited as that power may be in its territorial operation or by constitutional restraint. People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585. A statute that cannot be reduced to a general rule, to operate in all parts of the state alike, is not a general law. King v. State, 87 Tenn. 304.

In Healey v. Dudley, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 115, it was said that the true criterion whereby to determine whether an act is local or general, is to inquire whether under it the people of the state may be affected; if they may be, it is general; if not, it is local.

4. Wheeler v. Philadelphia, 77 Pa. St. 348; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 180; Porter v. Thomson, 22 Iowa 391; Hymes v. Aydelott, 26 Ind. 431.

The term “general” does not import that the law designated operates upon all persons or all things: it is derived from genus, and relates to a whole genus or kind; or, in other words, to a whole class or order; accordingly a law that affects a class of persons or things less than all may be a general law. Brooks v. Hyde, 37 Cal. 366. See also People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585; People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 398.

5. Longworth v. Common Council, 32 Ind. 322; State v. Tucker, 46 Ind. 355; Gentile v. State, 29 Ind. 409; overruling Thomas v. Clay County, 5 Ind. 4; Vickery v. Chase, 50 Ind. 461; Kelly v. State, 92 Ind. 236; Johnson v. Wells County, 107 Ind. 15; People v. McFadden, 81 Cal. 489; 15 Am. St. Rep. 66; Edmonds v. Herbrandson, 2 N. Dak. 270.

6. Richman v. Muscatine County, 77 Iowa 513; 14 Am. St. Rep. 308.

While the Iowa legislature cannot, in view of art. 3, § 30, of the constitution of the state, which prohibits that body from passing special laws in certain cases, and in all others where a general law may be made applicable, pass a special law incorporating an independent school district, it nevertheless has the power to pass a curative act legalizing the defective organization of a school district already in existence under the general law authorizing the creation of independent school districts. Though such curative act is special, appropriate to the former and inappropriate to the latter, the objects will be considered, as respects such legislation, to be a class by themselves, and legislation affecting such a class, to be general.¹ But if the characteristics used to distinguish the objects to which the legislation applies from others be not germane to the legislative purpose, or do not indicate some reasonable appropriateness in its application, or if objects with similar characteristics and like relation to the legislative purpose have been excluded yet it is a case where a general law cannot be applicable. State v. Squires, 26 Iowa 340.

1. State v. Sloane, 49 N. J. L. 356; Hudson County v. Buck, 51 N. J. L. 156.

Tennessee Act of 1887, releasing all druggists from liquor dealers' privilege taxes, incurred by them under acts of 1881 to 1886, inclusive, is not obnoxious to the constitutional inhibition against special legislation. The class provided for by the act is a natural, and not an arbitrary one. Demoville v. Davidson County, 87 Tenn. 214.

In State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, a distinction or classification of dealers in medicines, based on the location of their places of business in respect to distance from drug stores, was held a reasonable one.

Insurance companies, for the purpose of taxation, may be classified according to the amount of premiums received. State v. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co., 40 La. Ann. 463. And railroads, for the purpose of prescribing the rates of charges, according to length. Dow v. Beidelman, 49 Ark. 325; Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. Hanniford, 49 Ark. 291.

An act for the incorporation of towns not exceeding four miles' square and having a population not exceeding 5,000, is based upon a proper principle of classification. State v. Clayton, 53 N. J. L. 277.

So also is an act authorizing towns in which are located toll roads, to purchase the same. Gilson v. Rush County, 128 Ind. 65. A law giving the right of eminent domain to corporations engaged in mining petroleum, etc., and in supplying patrons within the state, is general. Consumers' Gas Trust Co. v. Harless, 131 Ind. 446.

A law applying only to railroads "organized under the general railroad law," is general, as they are a class unto themselves. State v. Bergen Neck R. Co., 53 N. J. L. 108.

A law defining rights and liabilities for libel, and limited to the publishers of newspapers, is not special. Allen v. Pioneer Press Co., 40 Minn. 117; 12 Am. St. Rep. 707; nor is a law reducing the fees of all executors and administrators throughout the state. Dewar's Estate, 10 Mont. 426; nor one relating to every receivership. Dillingham v. Putnam (Tex. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 303.

A law providing for a bridge to be built by adjoining counties where waters divide and join again within not more than 500 yards, is general. State v. Hunterdon County, 52 N. J. L. 512.

An act relating to ordinary public roads, is not special because it excepts turnpikes and county roads. Harrington Tp. Road Commission v. Collector, 54 N. J. L. 274. Nor an act providing for the enforcement of individual liability of stockholders of corporations and exempting suits for labor. Ripley v. Evans, 87 Mich. 217.

An act providing for the taxation of corporations is general, notwithstanding the exception of certain corporations to be taxed as individuals. Coal Run Coal Co. v. Finlen, 124 Ill. 666. See also State v. Yard, 42 N. J. L. 357.

There is such a relation between the population of counties and the amount of services rendered by the judges thereof, that the judges may, for the purpose of regulating their compensation, be classified on the basis of the number of inhabitants within their jurisdictions. State v. Bogert, 42 N. J. L. 407; State v. Reitz, 62 Ind. 159.

In State v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 435, the court, by Beasley, C. J., said: "But the true principle requires something more than a mere designation by such characteristics as will serve to classify, for the characteristics which thus serve as the basis of classification must be of such a nature as to mark the object so designated as peculiarly requiring exclusive legislation. There must be a substantial distinction having a reference to the subject-matter of the proposed legislation between the objects or places embraced in such legislation and the objects or places excluded. The marks of distinction on which the classification is founded must be such in the nature of things as will in some reasonable degree at least account for or justify the restriction of the legislature." And in State v. Spaude, 37 Minn. 322, Gilfillan C. J., for the court, said: "A law to be general need not operate alike upon all the inhabitants of the state, or all the cities, or all the villages in the state; to require that, would be utterly impracticable. A law is general which operates alike upon all the inhabitants, or all the cities, or all the villages, or other subjects of a class of such subjects of legislation. That for the purpose of legislation it may be necessary to make and that the legislature may make such classification is undoubted. The only practical limitation to this power is that the classification shall be based upon some natural reason—some reason suggested by necessity, by some difference in the situation and circumstances of the objects classified suggesting the necessity of different legislation with respect to them, and shall not be merely arbitrary with no apparent reason except a desire to evade under the forms of a general law the constitutional inhibition of special legislation."

from the operation of the law, then the classification is incomplete and faulty, and the legislation not general, but local and special.¹

For further illustrations see the following cases: State v. Dalrymple, 49 N. J. L. 530; State v. Donovan, 29 Neb. 75; Costello v. Wyoming (Ohio 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 613; Wyoming Street, 137 Pa. St. 494; Weinman v. Wilkinsburg, etc., R. Co., 118 Pa. St. 192; Ayar's Appeal, 122 Pa. St. 266; Ruan St., 132 Pa. St. 257; Straub v. Pittsburgh, 138 Pa. St. 356; People v. Wallace, 70 Ill. 680; Elder v. State, 96 Ind. 162; Heanley v. State, 74 Ind. 99; Hanlon v. Floyd county, 53 Ind. 123; Groesch v. State, 42 Ind. 547; U. S. v. De Amador (N. Mex. 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 488; U. S. v. De Lujan (N. Mex. 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 489; U. S. v. Chaves (N. Mex. 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 489; Jensen v. Fricke, 133 Ill. 171; Farris v. Vannier, 6 Dakota 186; State v. Hughes, 104 Mo. 459; State v. Orrick, 106 Mo. 111;

State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606; Ex Parte Swann, 96 Mo. 44; Wheeler v. Philadelphia, 77 Pa. St. 348; Land, etc., Co. v. Brown, 73 Wis. 294; Kilgore v. Magee, 85 Pa. St. 401; State v. New Brunswick, 42 N. J. L. 51; State v. Moore, 54 N. J. L. 121; State v. Hoagland, 51 N. J. L. 62; In re Cleveland, 52 N. J. L. 188; Youngs v. Hall, 9 Nev. 226; State v. Hunter, 38 Kan. 578; Holmes v. Smythe, 100 Ill. 413; West Chicago Park Com'rs v. McMullen, 134 Ill. 170; Lancaster county v. Trimble, 33 Neb. 121; State v. Berka, 20 Neb. 375; People v. Judge, 17 Cal. 548; People v. Henshaw, 76 Cal. 436.

1. Edmonds v. Herbrandson, 2 N. Dak. 270; Lorentz v. Alexander, 87 Ga. 444; Lodi Tp. v. State, 51 N. J. L. 402; State v. Somers' Point, 52 N. J. L. 323; State v. Bergen County, 52 N. J. L. 303; Bray v. Hudson, 50 N. J. L. 82; State v. Camden, 50 N. J. L. 87; State v. Wood, 49 N. J. L. 88; State v. Mullica Tp., 51 N. J. L. 412; State v. Ramsey County (Minn. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 112; State v. Boyd, 19 Nev. 43; Scowden's Appeal, 96 Pa. St. 422; Davis v. Clark, 106 Pa. St. 377; Pasadena v. Stimson, 91 Cal. 238; Topeka v. Gillett, 32 Kan. 431; Utsy v. Hiott (S. Car. 1889), 9 S. E. Rep. 338.

Interdicted special laws are those that rest upon a false or deficient classification. Their vice is that they do not embrace all the class to which they are naturally related; they create preferences and establish inequalities; they apply to persons, things or places possessed of certain qualities or situations, and exclude from their effect other persons, things or places which are not dissimilar in these respects. State v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 1.

There is no reason why an officer known as "city physician" in cities of the second class should have a different appointment, with a term fixed by the mayor, and an annual salary to be allowed by the legislative body confirming the appointment, from a physician to be appointed and compensated in a city of the first or third classes; population cannot have any just reference to such a distinction. State v. Simon, 53 N. J. L. 550; State v. Bogert, 42 N. J. L. 407.

Nor is there any natural connection between the number of inhabitants in a city and its right to fund its floating debt; therefore a statute conferring power to issue bonds for that purpose, limited in its operation to cities of not less than 25,000 population, is special. State v. Trenton, 42 N. J. L. 486.

And a law declaring that all cities containing a certain population shall have a certain system of laying out streets, and all having a smaller population, a different one, is special, inasmuch as the law bears no affinity to the qualities or attributes forming the principle of classification. State v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 11. See also State v. Plainfield (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 494.

No characteristics mark boroughs with a population under 3,000 as a class peculiarly requiring legislation conferring upon the courts of common pleas therein the power to license taverns, etc., which do not apply to boroughs with a population in excess of that number, and therefore the standard of classification is illusory. State v. Glenn, 47 N. J. L. 105. See also State v. Trenton, 48 N. J. L. 438; State v. Gaddis, 44 N. J. L. 363.

A statute providing that all county warrants which are not paid when presented shall bear interest, but excepts the warrants of a single county, is special. Hotchkiss v. Marion (Mont. 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 821. So also an act making a different rule for certiorari in a single county. Maxwell v. Tumlin, 79 Ga. 570.

And an act providing a different method of levying taxes in boroughs which are seaside resorts from that of other boroughs having all but this feature, is special. State v. Philbrick, 50 N. J. L. 581.

New Jersey Act of March 9, 1891, Pamp. L. 101, providing that "no person now holding an appointive position in any city or county of this state and receiving a salary from such city or county, who is an honorably discharged soldier or sailor, having served in the war of the rebellion, shall be removed from such position except for cause," is special, in that it fails to include within its provision all the members which constitute the selected class. State v. O'Connor, 54 N. J. L. 36.

In Earle v. Board of Education, 55 Cal. 489, the law relating to salaries of public school teachers was held special, because it selected from the general class of public school teachers of the state those within certain cities and counties, and regulated their salaries in a manner different from that of others without such locality.

New Jersey Act of 1882, Rev. Supp., p. 983, which provides that mortgages made to the chancellor in his official capacity shall be assessed to the person having the beneficial interest therein, or who is entitled to the interest or income thereof, is unconstitutional, because of its special character in not including in its operation all mortgages made to officers of the court, the interest or income of which is payable to the beneficiary. State v. Dalrymple, 49 N. J. L. 530.

In State v. Trenton (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 478, the act directed that in all cities where a German newspaper has been published once a week for three years, such paper shall be selected as the official paper, and it was held that the characteristic thus made the basis of classification was not one of sufficient importance to warrant the classification, and the statute was therefore special. And where the statute by its terms applied to cities of less than 10,000 inhabitants divided into not less than two nor more than three wards, and which at the time of the act had twelve councilmen, it was held that the three incidents on which the classification was attempted were too unimportant and restrictive to form the basis of a general law. State v. Wood, 49 N. J. L. 88.

The effect and not the form of the law determines its character. State v. Newark, 53 N. J. L. 4; Com. v. Patton, 88 Pa. St. 258; State v. Tolle, 71 Mo. 645; Humes v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 82 Mo. 231; 52 Am. Rep. 369; Marmet v. State, 45 Ohio St. 63; State v. Smith, 48 Ohio St. 211; Fellows v. Walker, 39 Fed. Rep. 651; McAnnich v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 20 Iowa 338; Haskel v. Burlington, 30 Iowa 232.

Thus, an act requiring county commissioners in any county having a population at the census of 1880 of a certain number and containing a city of the second class, third grade, to provide a depository for county funds is general in form but special in its operation, as there is only one county of the description, and no other can ever come within the operation of the act. State v. Ellett, 47 Ohio St. 90; 21 Am. St. Rep. 772. To the same effect are State v. Anderson, 44 Ohio St. 247; Devine v. Cook County, 84 Ill. 590. Such a law could

d. LOCAL.—The term “local” as applied to statutes is of modern origin,¹ and is used to designate an act which operates only within a single city, county, or other particular division or place, and not throughout the entire legislative jurisdiction.² In this sense the term “local” is the antithesis of “general.”³

By some authorities the term is considered as synonymous with “private,”⁴ but in one instance it was held that the word “private” referred to persons, and “local,” to territory, but both not be more special had the county been designated by name instead of by the circumlocution employed. State v. Mitchell, 31 Ohio St. 592.

1. McGregor v. Baylies, 19 Iowa 43.

2. State v. Chambers, 93 N. Car. 600.

A local statute touches but a portion of the territory of a state, a part of its people, or a fraction of the property of its citizens. Anderson's L. Dict.; People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 15; Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Arnold, 46 Wis. 214; Kerrigan v. Force, 68 N. Y. 381. An act regulating the fees of local officers is local. State v. Judges, 21 Ohio St. 1; Gaskin v. Anderson, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; Gaskin v. Meek, 42 N. Y. 186.

An amendment of the charter of the city of New York relating to the term of office of councilmen, and the time, etc., of their election, was held to be local and the court said: “It is clear that it relates only to the officers of the municipal corporation of New York, and has no force outside of the territory embraced in the corporation, nor any possible effect upon property not within the corporate limits, nor upon persons not for the time being within such limits. It would seem to follow necessarily that the act in question is local as contradistinguished from general.” People v. O'Brien, 38 N. Y. 193.

To the same effect is People v. Hills, 35 N. Y. 449.

An act to enable the supervisors of the city and county of New York to raise money by tax is local. Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. New York, 8 N. Y. 241; Sharp v. New York, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 572; Pullman v. New York, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 169.

In People v. Allen, 42 N. Y. 378, the meaning of the word “local” as used in art. 1, § 9, New York constitution, making a two-thirds' vote of the members elected to each branch of the legislature requisite to a bill appropriating public moneys “for local or private purposes,” being under consideration, the court said: “An appropriation of money by the legislature must generally be regarded as for a local purpose when the money is to be expended in a particular locality, and the people of that locality are to be directly and mainly benefited, notwithstanding the public are incidentally and remotely benefited also.”

In discussions on the relative authority of state and United States laws, “local statute” frequently refers to the statute law of one state, in contradistinction to a law on the same subject of another state, or of Congress, or the general commercial law. Anderson's L. Dict., Statute.

3. See supra, this title, General Acts. In People v. O'Brien, 38 N. Y. 193, it is said that local acts are confined to the persons or property of a specified locality, while general acts embrace either the persons or property of the people of the state generally, or of some class of persons or species of property, not limiting the operation to any particular locality less than the whole.

4. Bouviér defines “local” as fixedness in a place (Bouv. L. Dict. Local); and at the word “statute” he does not mention in his division of statutes those which are local, but defines private acts as those relating to any particular place, or to several particular places, or to one or several particular counties. So in his view, local and private, in this connection, would seem to be convertible terms.

And in Dwarris' Statutes, page 463, it is said that acts relating to any particular place, or to divers particular towns, or to one or divers particular counties, are private acts. And, again, at page 354, the author says that every bill for the particular benefit of a person or company, or a locality, in which the whole community is not interested, is, in a parliamentary sense, a private bill.

as signifying a narrowing or restricting of purpose.¹ Again, "local" has been contrasted with "public"² but unhappily so, as a statute may be both local and public, local in its application and public in its object—indeed, statutes which operate alike and in the same degree, although within a prescribed locality, upon all individuals and classes of persons and their interests, subject to the law, where they are in the same condition and circumstances, possess this dual character.³ Thus, acts establishing counties and towns,⁴ prescribing their boundaries,⁵ for the location or removal of a county seat,⁶ relating to a road in a particular county,⁷ to the preservation of fish in a particular river,⁸ prohibiting the sale of liquor in a particular county,⁹ or in several townships of a county,¹⁰ authorizing the issue of municipal bonds,¹¹ limiting suits against a certain city to a specified period of time,¹² are of this kind. A proviso repealing a general law, in so far as it may affect a particular locality, is itself local.¹³

The duration of a statute has no bearing upon its character as being local or general—a local statute may be perpetual, and a general one temporary, and vice versa.¹⁴

3. In Respect to Compliance Required—a. MANDATORY.—A statute is mandatory when non-compliance therewith will render the act done under it absolutely void.¹⁵ Statutory directions which are of the essence of the thing required to be done are mandatory.¹⁶

b. DIRECTORY.—If a statute is such that disregard of its provisions will constitute an irregularity, but one not necessarily

1. People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 15.

2. Abbott's L. Dict., Statute.

3. State v. Chambers, 93 N. Car. 600; Orr v. Rhine, 45 Tex. 345; Illinois v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 730; Manning v. Klippel, 9 Oregon 367.

4. Winooski v. Gokey, 49 Vt. 282; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136; Gorham v. Springfield, 21 Me. 58. Compare Johnson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 469; 31 Am. Rep. 648; Loper v. St. Louis, 1 Mo. 681.

5. State v. Jackson, 39 Me. 291; Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; 46 Am. Dec. 489; Com. v. Springfield, 7 Mass. 9.

6. State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279.

The requirement of the constitution of Tennessee that "the ayes and noes shall be taken in each house upon the final passage of every bill of a general character" does not apply to an act changing two counties from their respective judicial circuits to others, and fixing the time of holding courts therein and in one other county. Such an act is of a public local nature. State v. Algood, 87 Tenn. 164.

7. State v. Baltimore County, 29 Md. 516. But see Allen v. Hirsch, 8 Oregon 412.

8. Burnham v. Webster, 5 Mass. 266.

9. Van Swartow v. Com., 24 Pa. St. 131; State v. Chambers, 93 N. Car. 600.

10. Levy v. State, 6 Ind. 281.

11. State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136; Rochester v. Alfred Bank, 13 Wis. 432; 80 Am. Dec. 746; Burhop v. Milwaukee, 21 Wis. 260; Knox County v. Aspinwall, 21 How. (U. S.) 539.

12. Covington v. Voskotter, 80 Ky. 219.

13. Fire Department v. Bacon, 2 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 127.

14. People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 398. See also infra, this title, Temporary Statutes; Perpetual Statutes.

15. Abbott's Law. Dict.; Black's Law Dict.

16. Rex v. Locksdale, 1 Burr. 447. See infra, this title, Interpretation of Statutes, where the subject is discussed at length.

fatal to acts done or proceedings had thereunder, it is said to be directory.¹

Statutory regulations designed for the information of public officials, and intended to promote method, system, uniformity and dispatch in the modes of proceeding, are generally deemed directory.² Officers may be liable to legal animadversion, perhaps to punishment for non-compliance, yet compliance is not a condition precedent to the validity of their acts.³

c. PROHIBITORY.—A prohibitory statute is one which forbids an act, whether it be a crime or a misdemeanor, or something which disturbs the public repose, or injures private rights, or relates to the transmission of estates, or the capacity of persons, or other objects.⁴

d. PERMISSIVE.—A permissive statute is one which allows certain acts or things to be done without commanding them, as, for example, allowing certain persons to make wills, to pre-empt lands, to vote, or to form corporations.⁵ But the act when done is as valid as if done in obedience to a legislative command, and rights acquired thereby are entitled to the same protection.⁶

4. In Respect to Time of Passage—a. ANCIENT AND MODERN.—The statutes from Magna Charta to the end of the reign of Edward II are known as vetera statuta, or ancient statutes. Those passed in the reign of Edward III, and subsequently, are termed nova statuta.⁷ English statutes passed before the emigration of the American colonists, and which were applicable to their condition, and not inconsistent with the government instituted by them, constitute a part of the common law adopted by them.⁸

5. In Respect to Time of Taking Effect — a. PROSPECTIVE.—A

1. Black's Law. Dict.

2. Torrey v. Milbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64; Cooley's Const. Lim. 92.

3. Torrey v. Milbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64. See infra, this title, Interpretation of Statutes, where the subject is fully treated.

4. 1 Bouv. Inst. 109; Philpott v. St. George's Hospital, 6 H. L. Cas. 338. In this case it was said: "Prohibitory statutes prevent you from doing something which formerly it was lawful for you to do, and whenever you can find that anything done is substantially that which is prohibited, I think it is perfectly open to the court to say that it is void, not because it comes within the spirit of the statute or tends to effect the object which the statute meant to prohibit, but because by reason of the true construction of the statute, it is a thing or one of the things actually prohibited."

5. Potter's Dwarris 74.

Permissive statutes confer privileges or licenses which the donee may exercise or not at pleasure, having only his own interest or convenience to consult. Sutherland on Stat. Const., § 205. See also Nicholl v. Allen, 1 B. & S. 935.

6. Slack v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1.

7. Bouv. L. Dict.

8. Com. v. Leach, 1 Mass. 60; Com. v. Knowlton, 2 Mass. 534; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 198; State v. Rollins, 8 N. H. 561; Doe v. Winn, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 233; O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4 Iowa 400; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 128; Webster v. Morris, 66 Wis. 366; 57 Am. Rep. 278; Dodge v. Williams, 46 Wis. 92; Carter v. Balfour, 19 Ala. 814; Nelson v. McCrary, 60 Ala. 301; 1 Kent's Com. 473. But see 1 Min. Insts., p. 47, where it is said: "A pernicious and, as is believed, an unwarrantable doctrine has been propounded, that English statutes passed before the emigration of our ancestors and applicable to our constitution, law is said to be prospective when it is applicable only to cases which arise after its enactment.¹

b. RETROSPECTIVE.—It is retrospective when it applies to cases existing, as those which destroy or impair vested rights, create new obligations, impose new duties, or attach new disabilities in regard to transactions already passed.²

6. In Respect to Duration—a. PERPETUAL.—A perpetual statute is one for the continuance of which there is no time limited, although this be not expressly declared.³ If, however, a statute which does not itself contain any limitation is to be governed by another which is temporary merely, the former will also be temporary and dependent upon the existence of the latter.⁴

b. TEMPORARY.—A temporary statute is one limited in duration at the time of its enactment, either expressly, or by force of its character.⁵ An ordinary appropriation bill is an instance of the latter kind.⁶ A temporary statute is not necessarily a special statute; the limitation is merely in regard to time, and its character may be such that it is also a general statute.⁷ An act may be temporary in some of its parts, and permanent in others.⁸ If a statute, temporary when enacted, is made permanent by a subsequent act, it is to be deemed permanent ab initio.⁹ Rights acquired under a temporary statute may continue after its expiration.¹⁰

III. ENACTMENT—1. The Legislature—a. STATUS.—It is essential to the enactment of a valid statute that the legislature should have been constituted legally, and that it should act in conformity to constitutional provisions. Its members must have been elected and their election certified in accordance with the requirements of the constitution, and this instrument must be followed also in convening and organizing the legislature.¹¹ and in amendment of the common law, constitute a part of the common law of this country.”

1. Black's L. Dict.

2. Society, etc. v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 105.

See infra, this title, Retrospective Laws.

Retrospective and Ex Post Facto Distinguished.—Retrospective and ex post facto are not synonymous terms, the former being the more comprehensive, and including the latter. All ex post facto laws are of necessity retrospective, but the converse is not true; thus a curative statute is retrospective, but not ex post facto, that phrase referring only to criminal laws such as make acts, innocent when done, criminal; or if criminal when done, aggravate the crime, increase the punishment or reduce the measure of proof. Constitutions of nearly all the states contain inhibitions against ex post facto, but only a few prohibit retrospective laws in specific terms. Black, Const. Prohib., §§ 170, 172, 222; Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 172; State v. Squires, 26 Iowa 340.

3. Bouv. L. Dict.

In Ex parte Wellington et al., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 87; 26 Am. Dec. 631, it was said that, in legal contemplation, all statutes are perpetual unless limited by their terms, which means that they are of force until duly repealed or amended.

4. Bacon's Abr., Statutes (D).

5. 1 Bouv. Inst. 112.

6. Bouv. Law. Dict.

7. People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 388.

8. Warren v. Windle, 3 East 205.

9. Rex v. Swiney, 1 Alc. & Nap. 139.

10. Steavenson v. Oliver, 8 M. & M. 234.

11. The proclamation for convening

Where the legislature is regularly organized, fully recognized by the political department of the government, has no rival organization, and has existed and performed duties as a legislature, it is presumed, as far as the judiciary is concerned, that such a legislature is legally constituted.¹

Of the election and qualification of its members, the legislature, after its organization, is the sole judge.² And when it has determined that its members are regularly elected, the question cannot, as a rule, be raised afterwards in testing the validity of a law.³ But it has been held that where it appears from the journal of the legislature itself that the number of members exceeds the constitutional limit, and that an act was passed only by the assistance of the votes of those not entitled to seats in the legis-the legislature must be issued by the proper officer. People v. Parker, 3 Neb. 409; 19 Am. Rep. 634.

A proclamation issued by the governor calling an extraordinary session of the legislature, may be revoked by a subsequent proclamation issued before the convening of the legislature under the first proclamation; and any act done by the legislature under the first proclamation is void. People v. Parker, 3 Neb. 409; 19 Am. Rep. 634.

Reconvening of the Legislature.—Where the legislature is dispersed by any sudden irruption or insurrection, or by any external force, the power might, perhaps, remain and the duty also, to reassemble without previous votes for such purpose. But when such dispersion is the result of its own action, as any acquiescence in an unauthorized proclamation of the executive assuming to adjourn the house, without any formal resolution on its part, the legislature cannot be brought together again as a legislative body in the absence of a previous vote to reassemble, without a call from the executive. The spontaneous reassembling of the members will not have that effect. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 1.

See generally State v. Judge, 29 La. Ann. 223; Gormley v. Taylor, 44 Ga. 76; Rohrbacher v. Jackson, 51 Miss. 748.

1. Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 1; Ex parte Dorr, 3 How. (U. S.) 104; State v. Judge, 29 La. Ann. 225; Gormley v. Taylor, 44 Ga. 85; Hughes v. Felton, 11 Colo. 489.

2. Cooley Const. Lim., pp. 173, 624; State v. Gilmore, 20 Kan. 551; 27 Am. Rep. 189; Hughes v. Felton, 11 Colo. 489; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; People v. Fitzgerald, 41 Mich. 2; People v. Goodwin, 22 Mich. 496;

Alter v. Simpson, 46 Mich. 138; Doran v. De Long, 48 Mich. 552; People v. Harshaw, 60 Mich. 200; Weston v. Probate Judge, 69 Mich. 600; Nau-mann v. Board of City Canvassers, 73 Mich. 252; Dalton v. State, 43 Ohio St. 652; Kerr v. Trego, 47 Pa. St. 292; O'Ferrall v. Colby, 2 Minn. 180; State v. Kenney, 9 Mont. 223.

3. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481. Where the right to a seat in the legislature was contested, and the person legally entitled to the claim ousted and his opponent seated by a vote of the members of the legislature, but against the protest of certain of them, when, as a matter of fact, less than a quorum was present, though the presence of a quorum was recited in the journal, and the person so illegally seated as a member was allowed to continue for some months, acting and voting as such, a bill passed by his vote, where otherwise a quorum would not have been present, being contested on the ground that a quorum had not voted for it, it was held that the court was bound by the journal entry and that by the acquiescence of the members of the legislature who alone could judge of the election and qualification of its members, the illegally seated person was a de facto member of the legislature, and that the bill in question was validly passed. Auditor Gen'l v. Menominee County, 89 Mich. 552.

Where the legislature has failed to determine whether or not one of its members is legally entitled to his seat, the courts, when the question comes before them, will regard the person who has a certificate of election from the legally constituted canvassing board as being a member. State v. Kenney, 9 Mont. 223.

lature, the court must recognize the fact and declare the act so passed invalid.¹

Where the legal status of the legislature—or either of its branches—as a whole is questioned, the judiciary, when the matter is properly before it, has jurisdiction to inquire into and determine whether the body referred to is legally constituted;² or, if there are two rival organizations, to determine which of them is so constituted.³ While it is true that a fraudulent legislature which succeeds in driving out its de jure rival and forcing it to retire would, by continuing in the field and performing the duties

1. State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724. This decision rests on the theory that the court may inquire into the legal existence of the legislature, though it may not pass on the fact of an election of a member to such legislature. Poultry v. Stover, 11 Kan. 238; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 737.

2. When Kansas was admitted into the Union, the governor-elect was required by the constitution, upon receiving final information of the admission of Kansas into the Union, to proclaim the same and convene the legislature elected under it. This proclamation was issued several weeks after the admission of Kansas into the Union. It was also provided by the constitution that the "governor, secretary, and judges and all other officers, both civil and military," under the territorial government should continue in the exercise of the duties of their respective departments until the said officers were superseded under the authority of the constitution. The legislature which was elected under the territorial organization, and which was in session when Kansas was admitted, passed a law two days thereafter but before the proclamation of the governor was issued. On the question as to whether or not the legislature was legally constituted for the purpose of passing the aforesaid law, it was held that the members of the legislature were "officers" within the meaning of the constitutional provision above referred to, and that the law was therefore valid. State v. Meadows, 1 Kan. 91.

In Georgia, an act known as the "Relief Act," passed October 13, 1870, was attacked on the ground that it was invalid because the session of the legislature at which it was passed was a "session of the general assembly after the second under the constitution," and that at the time of the passage of the act, that legislature had been in session more than forty days without having prolonged the session by a vote of two-thirds of each house, as required by the constitution. This constitution was adopted by a provisional legislature, called by the government of the United States under the Reconstruction Acts, which legislature continued in power after the adoption of the constitution; and it was urged that thereby its sessions constituted sessions of the general assembly under the constitution. If this were so, the act referred to was undoubtedly unconstitutional. But the court decided that the aforesaid sessions of the provisional legislature, the members of which were elected or appointed before the adoption of the constitution, were not those of a general assembly under the constitution, but those of the legal provisional legislature, and that, therefore, the provisions of the constitution had not been violated and the act was valid as an act of the provisional legislature. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Little, 45 Ga. 370.

3. In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471. See also Hughes v. Felton, 11 Colo. 489; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Little, 45 Ga. 371.

"The cases in which the official acts or votes of members of a legislative body, who are such de facto only and not de jure, have been held valid, are all cases in which there has been no question as to the legality of the body in which they sat. They are cases in which the body admitting such persons was, in doing so, acting within its admitted jurisdiction, and in such cases the courts will not inquire into the title of such members as to their seats. The courts in such cases will go no further than to inquire as to the legal status, and the authority of the body as a whole; but where there are two bodies, each claiming to be the legislature, then the court whose duty it is to respect and execute the acts of such legislature, must of necessity decide which is the

and exercising the powers of the legislature, become, when recognized, a de facto legislature,¹ still if the de jure organization continues to exist and to assert its rights without cessation, it is impossible for a legislature de facto, though recognized by the political power in the state, to usurp and destroy its title.² In the case of dual state governments the courts recognize that legislature as legal which belongs to that government of which the court is a part.³

b. ORGANIZATION.—It is contemplated that each house of the legislature shall be organized by the persons who are prima facie members thereof, as shown by the duly authenticated certificates issued by the proper canvassing officers.⁴

legislature." McCrary on Elections, § 517, quoted in In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 478.

"When different bodies of men, each claiming to be and to exercise the functions of the legislative department of the state appear, each asserting their title to be regarded as the law-givers for the people, it is the obvious duty of the judicial department, who must inevitably at no distant day be called to pass upon the validity of the laws that may be enacted by the respective claimants to legislative authority, to inquire and ascertain for themselves, with or without questions presented by the claimants, which of these bodies lawfully represent the people from whom they derive their power. There can be but one lawful legislature. The court must know for itself whose enactments it will recognize as the laws of binding force when brought judicially before it. In a thousand ways it becomes essential that the court should forthwith ascertain and take judicial cognizance of the question which is the true legislature." Opinion of the Judges, 70 Me. 609.

1. "The body of men which the counsel for the defendant terms by courtesy a de facto legislature, though its house was composed of men who were and who were not elected, both classes not constituting a quorum, and of a senate a part of whom, less than a quorum, were duly elected, and a part were not elected, could not legally act as legislative bodies. While this condition of affairs remained there was no legal legislature. The greater portion of the members of the bodies thus illegally constituted subsequently took their seats, respectively, in the rightful house and senate—a house and senate composed of members unquestionably elected. They participated in its legislative action until its final adjournment. They received and acknowledged the receipt of the compensation to which by law they were entitled as members of the legislature. There was no other body claiming to exercise legislative functions. What the counsel calls the de facto legislature became merged into the rightful legislature, by which a governor was chosen in the accustomed manner, who entered upon and is now discharging, without interference or obstruction, the duties of that office. All this is well known as matter of current history, as well as by the legislative journals." Prince v. Skillin, 71 Me. 369; 36 Am. Rep. 325.

2. In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471.

"A legally organized legislature being now in existence, and exercising its constitutional functions, it follows that no convention of members-elect of either house can exist which can be treated as a nucleus for another organization. Two governments are claiming to be in existence as valid and entitled to the obedience of the people. Both cannot rightfully exist at the same time; but one government can be recognized and obeyed." Opinion of the Justices, 70 Me. 612.

3. State v. Judge of Superior Court, 29 La. Ann. 223; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 40.

4. State v. Van Camp (Neb. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 114; In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471. See ELECTIONS, vol. 6, p. 373.

"It may seem plausible, without full consideration, to say that only those members of the legislature who are actually elected whether having certificates or not, are the persons that should organize or hold seats in either

In determining the existence of a constitutional quorum for organization only those members can be counted who have recognized the temporary organization.¹

To form a quorum for the organization of the house, the presence only of the number of members required by the constitution is necessary; and the presence of such a number of persons alone, participating in the organization, gives the necessary power without regard to the manner in which the fact is ascertained.² Less than the required number of persons has no power to act in the organization; and, on the withdrawal of a major portion of the whole number of members in the body so as to leave no quorum, the power of a minority to act ceases.³

c. EXTRA SESSIONS.—Where an extra session is convened by special proclamation, a constitutional prohibition against legislation concerning matters not mentioned in the proclamation is mandatory, and legislation attempted in disregard of it is void.⁴

house; but some method of organization is necessary; some written title must be created or exhibited before any person can be regarded as having a prima facie right to a seat in the legislature. Those persons having certificates and only those must be permitted to organize, and no authority can change or overthrow that right or prima facie written title of a member except the house itself; and the members of the house cannot be regarded as a legal constitutional house until there is some temporary or permanent organization by a majority thereof. . . . The certificates of election give a title to the members holding the same which must govern their associates until there can be an adjudication by the house itself to the contrary; that is, by a constitutional house having a quorum." Wharton, C. J., in Re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 474.

1. In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471. When this question came before the court in the above case, it was asserted that the prevailing practice in Washington in the House of Representatives under what is known as the Reed rule, that in any assembly or in any legislature or in any convention, if members are present and do not vote or answer to their names, the speaker or the clerk may count them in order to make a quorum, should be followed in organizing the House of Representatives; but it was decided that the Reed rule was not applicable for either of two reasons; first, that the action of the speaker of the House of Representatives in Washington was not a matter of his own volition, but was especially authorized by a rule adopted by the House, thus allowing him so to count as present those members who did not answer to their names, though in the chamber, and second, that, in order to constitute a quorum, the speaker of the House could not call the name of any person in the House who refused to consider and recognize him as speaker, or to recognize the House as the constitutional body—the legal House.

2. In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471; U. S. v. Ballin, 144 U. S. 1.

3. Brown v. Dist. of Columbia, 127 U. S. 579; In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471.

Where, in the organization of a house of the legislature, the constitution requires that the secretary of state shall lay before the body a roll of the names of those persons whose certificates of membership have been filed in his office, the withdrawal of the secretary of state with the roll, after having brought it to the proper place, and the subsequent use by the legislative body of a duplicate of the same roll, was held to be a sufficient compliance with the constitutional provision so that the valid organization of the house was not affected by the failure to use the original roll. In re Gunn (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 471.

4. Wells v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Mo. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 530; St. Louis v. Withaus, 90 Mo. 646; Davidson v. Moorman, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 575; Jones v. Theall, 3 Nev. 233.

The restriction, however, is on legis-

In the absence of such a constitutional provision the field of legislation at an extra session is as broad as at the regular session.¹

A provision that after a bill has been rejected no bill having the same substance shall be passed at the same session of the lation alone; and in the case of the election of a United States senator under the duty imposed on a state legislature by the federal constitution, a special legislature called by proclamation of the governor may proceed with such an election. Election of Senator Faulkner of West Virginia, Senate Report, Lth Congress. So appointments of the governor may be confirmed, though not mentioned in the proclamation. People v. Blanding, 63 Cal. 333.

Where the proclamation of the governor convened the legislature to "provide the legislative enactments necessary or expedient to enforce those laws and practices with reference to railways and railroad companies, which the people themselves have enacted and declared in their constitution," it was held that this proclamation did not authorize the passage of "an act to provide for the prevention of accidents to railroad employes and others, by requiring that switches, frogs and the guard rails be properly blocked." Wells v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Mo. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 530.

Where a city charter provided that ordinances could be passed by the city council at extra sessions only on the subjects stated to them by the mayor when assembled, it was held that the city council could not consider matters stated to them by the mayor after they had assembled. St. Louis v. Withaus, 90 Mo. 646; and that they could not consider such matters, though in his opening message the mayor stated that he would afterwards propose further legislation. St. Louis v. Withaus, 16 Mo. App. 247.

Extended Sessions.—Constitutions in some states prescribe that the sessions of the legislature shall not exceed a certain number of days, unless extended by a vote of two-thirds of all the members elected to each house. Where this is the case, after a session has been once properly extended, it seems that the constitutional restriction is satisfied, and a majority vote is thereafter sufficient to protract the session from time to time. In that case laws passed after the limited time are valid. Speed v. Crawford, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 214; Mitchell v. Franklin, etc., Co., 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 456.

A proclamation of the governor, convening a legislature in special session "to reduce the taxes," was held sufficient to authorize the legislature to pass a bill levying a tax on those who engage in the sale of certain specified newspapers, on the ground that the subject of taxation, generally, was before the legislature. Baldwin v. State, 21 Tex. App. 591.

Where the governor convened the legislature "to protect public treasuries against unnecessary expenditure, by regulating the cost, charges and proceedings in criminal cases before justices of the peace and circuit court," it was held that an act which in effect gave the prosecuting officer two peremptory challenges of jurors in criminal trials where before he had had none, came within the meaning of the proclamation, on the ground that the right of challenge given the prosecution would reduce the number of "hung juries," consequently the cost of subsequent trials. State v. Shores, 31 W. Va. 491; 13 Am. St. Rep. 875.

The governor, by proclamation, convened the general assembly in special session, and recommended to their consideration an act of Congress, entitled, "an act to regulate the deposits of public money" (a portion of the money belonging to the United States being deposited by said act with the state of Tennessee) and recommended the reception and judicious investment of such sums as might be deposited with the state in works of internal improvement: Held, that the state, being interested to the extent of one-third in all turnpike companies, a resurvey or change in the location of the routes of such public improvements might be a material step to the judicious investment of the funds alluded to; and, therefore, an act providing for such resurvey and change in the location of the road of the Franklin and Columbia Turnpike Company was valid." Mitchell v. Franklin, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 456.

1. Cooley's Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 187; Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa 82.

legislature, does not prevent the passage, at an extra session, of a bill rejected at the regular session.¹

d. POWERS AND LIMITATIONS.—As to form and mode of legislation the provisions of the constitution must be followed,² otherwise acts passed in disregard of them are, as a rule, invalid.³ This is the rule in those states where it is held that courts can go behind the enrolled statute and inquire whether the constitutional provisions have been complied with. In other states it is held that, while the constitutional provisions regarding the legislative

1. Williams v. Nashville, 89 Tenn. 487. Under a constitutional provision that an enumeration shall be made under the direction of the legislature at the end of every tenth year, and that the legislative districts shall be reapportioned by the legislature at the first session after the enumeration, it has been held that an extra session of the legislature, called by the governor, was not a part of the regular session which had been adjourned without date, and so terminated, and was such a session as permitted the apportionment referred to. People v. Rice, 135 N. Y. 473.

2. See generally, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670. See also Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 670; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203; Moog v. Randolph, 77 Ala. 597; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 542; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Jones v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 479; In re Bernstein, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 20; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; 58 Am. Dec. 571; People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 121; 85 Am. Dec. 348; Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160; State v. Gaines, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 734; Martin v. Borgman, 21 Kan. 672; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724; In re Vanderberg, 28 Kan. 243; Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545; State v. Patterson, 98 N. Car. 660; Boyers v. Crane, 1 W. Va. 176; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683; Brown v. Nash, 1 Wyoming Ter. 85; Allen v. Hall, 14 Bush (Ky.) 85.

"Generally under affirmative and mandatory constitutional provisions, the legislature may do more than is required, but it cannot do less if it does its duty. Under negative and prohibitory constitutional provisions, however, the legislature may often refrain from doing things which are not prohibited, but it can never do what is prohibited." Valentine, J., in State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 737.

A concurrent resolution adopted by the senate and the house of representatives, but not passed by bill nor approved by the governor, nor passed, notwithstanding his disapproval, by a two-thirds vote in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, was held insufficient to authorize a contract for the printing of copies of the state engineer's report for distribution among the people of the state. Collier, etc., Lith. Co. v. Henderson (Colo. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 417.

3. See, for illustrations of this general doctrine, Mosely v. Tuthill, 45 Ala. 648; Dane v. McArthur, 57 Ala. 454; Sayre v. Pollard, 77 Ala. 608; Stein v. Leeper, 78 Ala. 517; Smithee v. Campbell, 41 Ark. 471; Webster v. Little Rock, 44 Ark. 536; Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496; State v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 31 Ark. 701; State v. Crawford, 35 Ark. 237; Vinsant v. Knox, 27 Ark. 266; Smithee v. Garth, 33 Ark. 17; Burr v. Ross, 19 Ark. 250; Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; San Mateo County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S.) 238; Miller v. Goodwin, 70 Ill. 659; People v. De Wolf, 62 Ill. 253; People v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 191; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; Green v. Graves, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 351; Attorney Gen'l v. Joy, 55 Mich. 94; Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330; State v. Hastings, 24 Minn. 78; Burt v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 472; State v. McLelland, 18 Neb. 236; State v. Liedtke, 9 Neb. 462; People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 276; Opinion of Justices, 35 N. H. 579; 52 N. H. 622; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; State v. Smalls, 11 S. Car. 262; State v. Hagood, 13 S. Car. 46; Walker v. State, 12 S. Car. 200; Williams v.

proceedings are mandatory on the legislators themselves, yet they are, as far as their effect on the validity of a duly authenticated law is concerned, directory only.¹

Rules and usages regarding forms for the passage of laws, when settled and known at the time of the adoption of the constitution, may be deemed adopted into it by implication.²

c. RULES.—Each legislative house has power to make its own rules not in disregard of constitutional provisions, and to change and suspend them at will; and, generally, courts will not inquire whether such rules have been complied with in the enactment of a statute.³

State, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 549; Gaines v. Horrigan, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 608; Memphis Freight Co. v. Memphis, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 419; State v. Patterson, 98 N. Car. 660; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343; Blening v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641; Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 396; overruling Blessing v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641, and Usener v. State, 8 Tex. App. 177; Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667; Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499; Luther v. Borden, 7 How. (U. S.) 38; Lyman v. Martin, 2 Utah 136; Meracle v. Down, 64 Wis. 323; Bound v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 45 Wis. 543; Brown v. Nash, 1 Wyoming Ter. 85.

1. See infra, this title, The Enrolled Bill.

In Kilgore v. Magee, 85 Pa. St. 412, the court said: "In regard to the passage of the law and the alleged disregard of the forms of legislation required by the constitution, we think the subject is not within the pale of judicial inquiry. So far as the duty and the consciences of the members of the legislature are involved the law is mandatory. They are bound by their oaths to obey the constitutional mode of proceeding, and any intentional disregard is a breach of duty and a violation of their oaths. But when a law has been passed and approved and certified in due form, it is no part of the duty of the judiciary to go behind the law as duly certified to inquire into the observance of form in its passage. The presumption applies to the act of passing the law, that applies generally to the proceedings of any body whose sole duty is to deal with the subject. The presumption in favor of regularity is essential to the peace and order of the state."

2. Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 156. In Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, Harlan, J., said: "Although the constitution does not expressly require bills that have passed Congress to be attested by the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses, usage, the orderly conduct of legislative proceedings, and the rules under which the two bodies have acted since the organization of the government, require that mode of authentication." See also State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 33.

3. McDonald v. State, 80 Wis. 407; In re Ryan, 80 Wis. 414. In these cases Lyon, J., said: "The courts will take judicial notice of the statute laws of the state, and to this end they will take like notice of the contents of the journals of the two houses of the legislature far enough to determine whether an act published as a law was actually passed by the respective houses in accordance with constitutional requirements. Further than this the courts will not go. When it appears that an act was so passed, no inquiry will be permitted to ascertain whether the two houses have or have not complied strictly with their own rules in their procedure upon the bill, intermediate its introduction and final passage. The presumption is conclusive that they have done so. We think no court has ever declared an act of the legislature void for non-compliance with the rules of the procedure made by itself, or the respective branches thereof, and which it or they may change or suspend at will." See also St. Louis R. Co. v. Gill, 54 Ark. 101.

Where the joint rules of the two houses of the legislature provided for an adjournment sine die by joint resolution, and, in fact, they dispersed and separated without any such resolution, the question arising whether or not the legislature had legally adjourned, it was decided that the rule regarding the joint resolution of adjournment was

2. Introduction.—The first step in the enactment of a statute is the introduction of the bill.¹ Sometimes constitutions require before introduction that notice be given a certain time in advance; this requirement is limited usually to special or local bills. As a rule, courts will not inquire whether this requirement has been observed.² A bill when introduced requires a title.³

A statute, as a rule, must contain an enacting clause, without which it is generally held to be void.⁴ The style of the clause is usually prescribed by the constitution, but the provision in this not a constitutional provision and not mandatory, and was, therefore, not necessary to a valid adjournment of the legislature. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 1.

The legislature may suspend its own rule that a bill shall not have its third reading on the last day of the session, and a bill so read and passed on that day will be valid. State v. Brown, 33 S. Car. 151.

1. The bill is the form or draft of a law presented to a legislature but not yet enacted, or before it is enacted a proposed or projected law. May v. Rice, 91 Ind. 549.

2. Brodnax v. Groom, 64 N. Car. 247; Walker v. Griffith, 60 Ala. 361; Harrison v. Gordy, 57 Ala. 49; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44; 9 Am. Rep. 103; Day v. Stetson, 8 Me. 365; McClinch v. Sturgis, 72 Me. 288; Davis v. Gaines, 48 Ark. 370.

In Georgia, it was said: "It appears from the paragraph of the constitution and the act of the legislature just cited (Code, § 193*a*) that the legislature itself is made the judge of the evidence as to whether the proper notice has been given or not before the introduction of the bill. It is proposed in this case to show by extrinsic evidence that the proper notice had not been given for a sufficient length of time before the bill was introduced into the legislature. We do not think that courts are authorized to receive such evidence and upon it to decide whether or not the legislature, a co-ordinate branch of the government, has made an erroneous decision, and allowed a bill to be introduced without the notice required by the constitution and the law." Speer v. Athens (Ga. 1890), 85 Ga. 49.

The question of the giving of notice of the introduction of a special or local bill is not disputable, unless the lack of notice is affirmatively shown by the journals of the general assembly. McKemie v. Gorman, 68 Ala. 442.

Where the constitution provided that no local or special bill shall be passed unless notice of the intention to apply therefor shall have been published in the locality where the matter or thing to be affected shall be situated, it was held that a bill allowing a certain debt owing by the state to a third party to be set off against the debt owing by the third person to the state was not such a bill as required notice of intention to be published. State v. Crawford, 35 Ark. 237.

3. Binz v. Weber, 81 Ill. 290, overruling doctrine in Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 11, and Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361.

4. Seat of Government Case, 1 Wash. Ter. 115; State v. Patterson, 98 N. Car. 660. See constitutions in the various states. Contra, Cape Girardeau v. Riley, 52 Mo. 424; followed in Watson v. Corey, 6 Utah 150, the court in the last case expressing doubt.

Wood, C. J., said, in Barton v. McWhinney, 85 Ind. 487: "Doubtless this clause (Be it enacted) should precede everything which is made and declared to be law; but this, by no means, forbids the use of a preamble."

In State v. Wright (Oregon), 12 Pac. Rep. 708, there appeared in the original enrolled bill on file in the office of the secretary of state a single heavy pen stroke through the words "Be it enacted." It was claimed that the bill lacked an enacting clause on this account; but the court said that "while the absence of an enacting clause would render the act void, that the said erasure was doubtless done surreptitiously by some irresponsible party and not by the authority of the legislative assembly, and no legal effect could be given to such unauthorized act."

In Dew v. Cunningham, 28 Ala. 466, it was contended that the laws in the revised statute adopted by reference were invalid because each of them was not preceded by the words "Be it enacted," etc., as prescribed by the constiparticular has been held directory only and a substantial compliance therewith sufficient.¹ If, however, the words used, besides being a variation from the constitutional style, also indicate that the will of the legislature is expressed as a joint resolution rather than as a law, the change in the phraseology is fatal to the validity of the enactment, unless it can be effective as a resolution merely.²

By the constitutions of many states no law can be passed except by bill.³ Generally, bills may originate in either house, and may be amended, altered, or rejected in the other house. There tution; but it was held that as the bill adopting the revised statutes was preceded by the words designating the style of the laws, that was sufficient. See also Mathis v. State (Fla. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 681.

Where publication of a law was necessary to put it in force, a publication omitting the enacting clause was held insufficient. In re Swartz (Kan.), 27 Pac. Rep. 839.

1. McPherson v. Leonard, 29 Md. 377, distinguishing Hordesty v. Taft, 23 Md. 512; Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 268. Contra, State v. Rogers, 10 Nev. 250, in which case, the enactment clause prescribed in the constitution being "The people of the State of Nevada represented in senate and assembly do enact as follows," the words "senate and" were omitted, and the constitutional style was held mandatory and the omission of the said words fatal.

In Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 292, the words "Resolved by," etc., instead of the form "Be it enacted," etc., were used in the enacting clause and held sufficient, the court by Ellett, J., in respect to the necessity of literal adherence to the formula prescribed by the constitution, saying: "The question is one that does not seem to have received judicial decision, so far as we have been able to discover; but in a work cited on the law and practice of legislative assemblies, by Mr. Cushing, the opinion is expressed that this form of enactment must be strictly pursued and that no equivalent language will be sufficient. In the absence of any authoritative adjudication, we are not prepared to adopt this conclusion. The argument against requiring a literal compliance with any form of words in the enacting clause, as a condition of giving effect to a statute, would be very strong on the score of convenience; for the plainest expressions of the legislative will, and the most urgent in their character, would be constantly liable to be defeated by the slightest omission or departure from the established phraseology. No possible good could be achieved by such strictness, and the greatest evil might result from it. There are no exclusive words in the constitution negating the use of any other language, and we think the intention will be best effectuated by holding the clause to be directory only. It is necessary that every law should show on its face the authority by which it is adopted and promulgated, and that it should clearly appear that it is intended by the legislative power that enacts it that it should take effect as a law. These conditions being fulfilled, all that is absolutely necessary is expressed."

Where it was provided that an act "be and the same is hereby enacted," these words were held a sufficient compliance. Mathis v. State (Fla. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 681. The omission of the words "by the general assembly" in the enactment clause was held immaterial in McPherson v. Leonard, 29 Md. 377.

2. Burritt v. Com'rs, 120 Ill. 322; Boyers v. Crane, 1 W. Va. 176; May v. Rice, 91 Ind. 546. In the cases aforesaid it appeared that the legislature endeavored by resolution beginning, "Be it resolved" to accomplish what could be constitutionally done only by bill, and the resolutions were held invalid for the purpose, because they violated the constitutional provision that all laws should receive their force from the words "Be it enacted," etc., contained in them.

In State v. Delesdenier, 7 Tex. 76, it was held that the provision as to style of laws, applied to "bills" and not to "resolutions," and that an expression of the legislative will beginning "Be it resolved," was valid as a resolution. See also State v. Bailey, 16 Ind. 49.

3. See various state constitutions.

is a general exception, however, to the effect that bills for raising revenue must originate in the lower house.¹

Some constitutions provide that a bill which has been once introduced cannot be so altered or amended on its passage through either house as to change its original purpose.²

In some states it is provided, in order to prevent lack of deliberation in the enactment of laws and to allow time for publicity and protest, that no bill shall be introduced after a certain specified time in the session.³ Attempts have been made to evade this provision by calling a new measure an amendment. When the so-called amended bill has in view the same general object as the first bill, it may be valid,⁴ but where the substitute has no

1. Where a bill originated in the senate and, having been passed, was sent to the house where it was passed with amendments and then placed in the hands of the committee of conference for adjustment, and was reported by them with a change of title, its sections having been reduced from twenty-six to twenty-two, and some of them transposed, it was held that these changes did not make it a new bill originating in the conference committee, and that it did not violate the article of the constitution which only provided that bills may originate in either house. Nelson v. Haywood County (Tenn. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 1.

In Texas, an act authorizing towns and villages incorporated for free-school purposes to levy taxes originated in the senate, and it was held not to be in conflict with the constitutional provision that all bills for raising revenue should originate in the house of representatives. Gieb v. State (Tex. 1893), 21 S. W. Rep. 190.

In Massachusetts, the exclusive privilege of the house of representatives under the constitution to originate money bills is limited to bills that transfer money or property from the people to the state, and does not include bills that appropriate money from the treasury of the commonwealth to particular uses of the government or bestow it upon individuals or corporations. Opinion of Justices, 126 Mass. 557.

2. Hall v. Steele, 82 Ala. 562; In re Senate Resolution, 9 Colo. 624.

A bill introduced to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the county of Montgomery alone and afterwards amended by extending the prohibition to other designated places, was held not to violate the constitutional provision that no bill shall be altered or amended so as to change its original purpose. Hall v. Steele, 82 Ala. 562.

The original purpose of a bill to create Logan county out of Wild county is changed by an amendment to create Montezuma county out of La Plante county. In re House Bill No. 231 (Colo. 1886), 21 Pac. Rep. 472.

The constitution of Alabama provides that no bill shall be so altered or amended on its passage through either house as to change its original purpose; and this is said to be so provided to prevent "hodge-podge and injurious combinations by confining each law to one subject." State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 612.

3. Michigan Const., art. 4, § 28, provides that no new bill shall be introduced in the legislature after the first fifty days of the session.

In Maryland it is provided that no new bill shall be introduced in the last ten days of the session. Const., art. 3, § 26. And in Arkansas, not within the last three days of the session. Const., art. 5, § 24.

4. Powell v. Jackson Common Council, 51 Mich. 131; Attorney Gen'l v. Amos, 60 Mich. 372; People v. McElroy, 72 Mich. 446.

So in Michigan, where the period for the introduction of new bills is limited to the first fifty days of the session, a bill properly introduced to organize certain territory into a township was amended after the expiration of the fifty days into one to organize the same territory into a county, and such amendment was held valid. Pack v. Barton, 47 Mich. 520.

In the same state a bill was introduced to organize a specified township and amended after fifty days to organize a different township, and this was also upheld. Attorney Gen'l v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385.

connection with the original, but is a palpable attempt to evade this provision, it is invalid.¹

3. Readings.—Constitutions generally require that a bill shall be read in each house by sections three times on different or successive days.²

1. A bill entitled "To discontinue that portion of the Midland and St. Claire state road in the township of Midland, Midland county," introduced in the Michigan legislature before the expiration of the constitutional fifty-day limit was thereafter amended to provide for the construction and maintenance of stone, gravel, macadamized and dirt roads in the county of Saginaw. This the court held unconstitutional and void. Sackrider v. Saginaw County, 79 Mich. 59. In this case, which seems to mark the limit of the bald attempts to violate the constitutional provision, the court said: "If a constitutional provision can ever be evaded or violated by the reporting and passing of a substitute for an original bill, it certainly has been evaded and violated in this case; and if this legislation can be upheld, it would seem that the constitutional provision above quoted is worthless to prevent the evil against which it is manifestly directed. If a new bill can be reported as a substitute for a bill, the subject-matter of which has no connection with or relation in the remotest degree to the subject-matter of such bill under the guise of a substitute, then it is difficult to perceive the use or value of this constitutional provision. No one will admit for a moment that the framers of the constitution ever intended that this provision should be rendered nugatory in this way. Courts have gone a great ways to uphold legislation that apparently trenched on this, or similar provisions in constitutions, and have sometimes, it seems to me, strained the constitution almost to breaking to sustain laws that in their passage came close to, if not within, the line of the prohibition of the fundamental law. I, for one, have gone as far in this direction as my conscience and duty will permit me. Let the consequences as to laws already on our statute books be what they may, it is time to call a halt in this direction. If the constitutional provision is in the way of legislation, and the people desire that new bills may be introduced at any time during the session, there is a constitutional way to get rid of this provision; but it is the duty of the courts, while it remains in the constitution, to see that it is obeyed."

2. Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330.

There is no constitutional objection to the first reading of a bill in the senate being on the same day of its final passage in the house. Burks v. Jefferson County, 40 Ark. 200.

Where a bill was regularly read three times in the house and then reported to the senate, where it was read twice, and the house recalled the bill from the senate for reconsideration, and after again passing the bill on the reconsideration, returned it to the senate, where it had its third reading in that body, this was held a sufficient compliance with the statutory provision. State v. Crawford, 35 Ark. 237.

When a bill has been read at length in the committee of the whole, the report of that fact and the recording of it upon the journal will be deemed sufficient as one of the required three readings. In re Senate Resolution, 9 Colo. 641.

The rule that a bill shall not be read on the last day of the session, not being a constitutional provision, in South Carolina, may be suspended. State v. Brown, 33 S. Car. 151.

Where an act was introduced, read a first and second time, referred to a committee, reported back with amendments, was engrossed for a third reading and finally passed upon the call of the ayes and noes, it was held the bill was properly read and passed. Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 11.

Where an original bill was read a first and second time and referred, a substitute reported and adopted in lieu of the original bill, read a third time and passed, the journal not showing the first and second reading of the substitute, the contrary not appearing however, it was presumed that the substitute was read three times as the constitution required. Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496.

Reference to Committees.—It is provided in the constitution of Alabama that no bill shall become a law until it

This provision is sometimes directory,¹ but generally mandatory, so that an act not so read is void.² In the states where the latter rule obtains, constitutions allow this rule to be dispensed with in cases of urgency, on a specified vote of the legislature.³ The question whether the circumstances present a case of urgency is for the house of the legislature in which the bill is depending and not for the courts.⁴ The aforesaid requirement of three readings does not apply to amendments,⁵ even though something not embodied in the original bill is thereby made a law.⁶

The constitutional provision, so far as it concerns the specific manner of reading bills, is generally considered to be directory shall have been referred to a committee of each house and returned therefrom, and a bill not so referred is invalid. State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599.

1. Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Pim v. Nicholson, 6 Ohio St. 176.

In Illinois the constitution requires the three readings, but does not in terms command their entry in the journal. In a case where no entry in the journal appeared, it was presumed that the bill was read as provided for. Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 181.

2. Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330; People v. Campbell, 8 Ill. 466; Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160; Burritt v. Com'rs of State Contracts, 120 Ill. 322; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Amoskeag Nat. Bank v. Ottawa, 105 U. S. 667.

3. Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 429; Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330.

4. Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545; Hull v. Miller, 4 Neb. 503.

Where a bill was introduced in the senate and read the first and second time on the same day, and the senate journal does not show whether a case of urgency existed or not, it was held that each house was the exclusive judge whether the case of urgency did exist or not, and it was not necessary that the emergency should be stated upon the journal. Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545.

5. People v. Wallace, 70 Ill. 680; State v. Brown, 33 S. Car. 151; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 433; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 476.

6. Dew v. Cunningham, 28 Ala. 467; 65 Am. Dec. 362. See infra, this title, Amendments.

Where a bill after having been read twice was amended by striking out "all after the enacting clause" and inserting "a new bill," and was then read the third and last time, it was held that the constitutional provision had been complied with; the court saying that the journal, not showing the contrary, it would be presumed that the amendment was on the same subject as the original bill even though the amendment was called in the journal "a new bill." Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 476.

Where a bill passed the three readings required in the senate and was sent to the house, where it also passed the three readings but under a somewhat different title, and it was afterwards placed in the hands of the committee of conference of both houses and was reported by them under a slightly different title with the sections somewhat transposed and reduced in part, the report of the committee asking leave to propose "in lieu" of the original bill, a bill "embracing substantially all the provisions of both houses," and giving as a reason that the original bill had been "much disfigured by amendments, interlineations, and erasures," and the bill was then passed without further readings, it was held that the bill reported from the committee was not a new bill such as would require three further readings in both houses, but was such an amendment to the old bill as to do away with the requirement. Nelson v. Haywood County (Tenn. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 1.

An act was introduced in the legislature to amend "section 63" of a specified previous act, was read twice and then amended by striking out "63" and inserting "25" and ordered to a third reading after being engrossed. But on the third reading, the journal showed that an act to amend "section only.¹ It is not necessary, in absence of distinct constitutional requirement, that the three readings be in full.² It is customary in many legislatures to read a bill by its title;³ in some it is considered unnecessary to read at length documents referred to in a bill, provided that the references thereto are sufficiently certain.⁴

4. Passage—a. ACTUAL PASSAGE.—It is essential to the validity of an enactment that the bill shall have been actually passed by the concurrence of the number of the members of each house

63" was read and passed, although the enrolled act amending "section 25" was presented to the governor, approved by him and promulgated. It was contended that while the act to amend "section 63" had been read three times and passed, that the act to amend "section 25" had not been. It appeared that the "section 25" of the original act was designated in the revised statutes, where it appeared as part of a chapter, as "section 63." The court presumed and held, therefore, that one and the same section was intended to be designated by the legislature by both "section 63" and "section 25," and that the act was properly read three times and passed. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People (Ill. 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 173.

1. Pim v. Nicholson, 6 Ohio St. 176, where the constitution requires the reading to be "distinct." That provision is directory only, for the degree of distinctness cannot be judicially determined.

2. In California, it is required that the bill be read three times at length or otherwise it is void. Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111.

In Minnesota, a bill must be read twice at length prior to its passage. Supervisors v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330.

Under the constitution of Arkansas 1874, it is probable that bills must be read at length. Burks v. Jefferson County, 40 Ark. 207.

In the constitution of Alabama it is provided that no bill shall become a law unless on its final passage it be read at length. State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599.

3. Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200.

As to the reading of the bill and substitute twice by titles and only once at length, it cannot be considered at this late day a violation of the constitution which provides, "Every bill and joint resolution shall be read three times in each house before the final passage thereof." The legislative practice of reading the same twice by title and only once at length has been maintained too long in this state to be now overthrown by the courts. It would deprive us of all statutory law. The constitution in terms does not direct that the reading shall be at length, and while such reading might be the better practice, we cannot hold that it is imperatively required that it should be so read more than once. People v. McElroy, 72 Mich. 446.

In Indiana, the provision of the constitution governing the reading of bills in the legislature was: "Every bill shall be read by sections on three several days in each house, unless in cases of emergency two-thirds of the house where such bill may be depending shall by a vote of yeas and nays deem it expedient to dispense with this rule; but the reading of a bill by sections on its final passage shall in no case be dispensed with, and a vote on the passage of every bill shall be taken by yeas and nays." Under this provision it was held sufficient to read the bill twice by its title only, provided it was fully read on the third reading. McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424.

Suspension of Rules.—The constitution of Arkansas of 1868 provided that under a suspension of rules a bill could be read by its title only, and that as the constitution did not require the suspension to be entered in the journal, in the absence of such entry the rules will be considered to have been suspended in a proper case. Burks v. Jefferson County, 40 Ark. 200; overruling Smithee v. Garth, 33 Ark. 17, where an act read by title was held to be excluded because the rules were not suspended. See English v. Oliver, 28 Ark. 317; Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496.

4. In Georgia, the legislature incorporated the building and loan association already organized, by a mere reference to its constitution and by-laws, without setting out or reading the constitution and by-laws. And this was held sufficient, the court saying: "While required by the constitution.¹ If it appears that this has not been done, the act is invalid.² Sometimes the constitution requires for the passage of ordinary bills a majority vote of all elected members, while, again, a majority vote of a quorum only

I may question the wisdom and prudence of this species of legislation, I do not for a moment doubt its validity." Bibb County Loan Assoc. v. Richards, 21 Ga. 592.

1. Amoskeag Nat. Bank v. Ottawa, 105 U. S. 667; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640; Prescott v. Illinois, etc., Canal, 19 Ill. 324.

2. People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 142; 85 Am. Dec. 348; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; Opinion of Justices, 52 N. H. 622; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203. See also infra, this title, Impeachment of the Validity of Enactment.

So where a bill was passed by one house in which it originated, sent to the other house where it was materially amended and passed, which amendments were concurred in by the house where the bill originated, but when prepared for the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses said amendments were omitted, and it was so signed by the presiding officers and approved by the governor without said amendments, such act of the legislature is invalid and void. Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721.

A resolution passed only by one house, authorizing the governor to employ counsel, is void. Field v. Auditor, 83 Va. 882.

Mere change in the title after a bill has passed one house, does not make the enactment void, if the change is immaterial. Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361.

A statute containing sections which have not passed both houses is void as to such sections and good as to the rest of the bill, if the subject-matters of the different sections are distinct so as to permit of division. State v. Van Duyn, 24 Neb. 586; State v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293; 12 Am. St. Rep. 204.

Where the constitutional number of the house of representatives was one hundred and twenty-five members, and it appeared from the journal that one hundred and twenty-nine members actually occupied seats in the house, a bill passed by the legislature, but only by the votes of four irregularly elected members, was held void. State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724. Where a bill was regularly passed by one branch of the legislature, and then sent to the other where it was amended and returned, the concurrence by the house first mentioned in the amendments of the other branch of the legislature was held sufficient. McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424.

In Michigan, on the ground that the legislature is the sole judge of the qualification and election of its members, the court held that an act of the legislature could not be declared void because a portion of the members voting for it, and whose votes were necessary to its passage, were not legally elected and were retained in their seats by a decision of the legislature opposed to the constitution. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 489; Auditor Gen'l v. Menominee County, 89 Mich. 552. See also State v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 348.

The constitution of the State of West Virginia provided that no bill should be passed by either branch of the legislature without an affirmative vote of a majority of the members elected thereto, and this was construed to mean a majority of those elected to the legislature who continued to be members at the time the vote was taken, and a bill passed by the vote of eleven senators, the full number elected being twenty-two, but one having resigned prior to the vote, was held valid. Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640.

Effect of Protest on Passage.—In Michigan, it is the constitutional right of any member of either house of the legislature to dissent from and protest against any act, proceeding, or resolution which he may deem injurious to any person or the public and the reason of his dissent entered on the journal; but this right is a mere personal privilege, and has no force as legislative action, and does not affect the validity of the law passed in spite of the protest. Auditor Gen'l v. Menominee County, 89 Mich. 552.

Under the constitution of Missouri it is provided that in case an objection is raised to the signature of a bill by the presiding officer by any member of

is necessary.¹ It is customary for constitutions to require, on the passage of bills for a private, local or special purpose, a two-thirds vote of the legislators, or a vote greater than a majority, and such a provision is mandatory.²

In the absence of a constitutional provision regulating the method of ascertaining the presence of a constitutional quorum of a house of the legislature, it is proper for the house to regulate the matter by a rule of its own; and a rule providing that "on demand of any member, or at the suggestion of the speaker, the names of members sufficient to make a quorum in the hall of the house who do not vote shall be noted by the clerk and recorded in the journal, and reported to the speaker with the names of the

the legislature, and this objection shall not be sustained, then any five members may embody the same over their signatures in a written protest under oath against the signing of the bill; said protest when offered in the house shall be noted upon the journal and the original shall be annexed to the bill to be considered by the governor in connection therewith. State v. Mead, 71 Mo. 269.

1. Cooley's Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 168. See various state constitutions.

Under the charter of San Francisco in 1853, no ordinance could have any validity, unless it received the votes of a majority of all the members elected to the board of aldermen. The board consisted of eight members. One of the members elected that year was an alien, and ineligible, yet he was sworn in, and entered upon the discharge of his duties; held, that there were eight members elected, and that it required five votes to pass an ordinance. Satterlee v. San Francisco, 23 Cal. 315; Southworth v. Palmyra, etc., R. Co., 2 Mich. 287. A constitutional amendment which is ratified by two-thirds of a quorum of one house of the legislature, which quorum is composed of two-thirds of all the members elected, is ratified by two-thirds of that house, within the meaning of the constitution. State v. McBride, 4 Mo. 303; 29 Am. Dec. 636.

Where a constitution provides that a majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business, the word "house" means the members present doing business, there being a quorum, and not a majority of all the members elected; and an act of incorporation passed by two-thirds of the members present, there being a quorum, is constitutional. Southworth v. Palmyra, etc., R. Co., 2 Mich. 287.

2. People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 276; Corning v. Greene, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 33.

Where certain swamp lands which had been granted to a state by act of Congress were appropriated for the construction of a state road by act of the legislature of the state, the act was held not to be one appropriating public property for local or private purposes within the section of the constitution requiring the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each house of the legislature for the passage of such bills. McRae v. Shaffer, 89 Mich. 463.

An act to establish and maintain a water department in the city of Syracuse, which authorizes the said city to take water from a lake appropriated by the state for a reservoir and feeder to the Erie Canal, is not a local or private bill, or one taking public property for private use without compensation, and therefore requiring the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the legislature to make it valid. Sweet v. Syracuse, 129 N. Y. 316; Comstock v. Syracuse, 129 N. Y. 643.

In New York, where it is provided that the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the legislature is requisite to every bill appropriating the public moneys or property for local or private purposes, it was held that a bill which empowers the commissioners of the land office to grant to the proprietors of adjacent lands so much of the lands under waters of navigable rivers or lakes as they shall deem necessary to promote the commerce of this state, or proper for the purpose of beneficial enjoyment of the same by the adjacent owner, is one requiring the assent of two-thirds of the members of both houses of the legislamembers voting, and be counted and announced in determining the presence of a quorum to do business," is a constitutional mode of ascertaining the presence of a quorum empowered to act as the house.¹

b. YEAS AND NAYS ON FINAL PASSAGE.—Constitutions usually provide that the vote on final passage of a bill shall be by yea and nay, which shall be entered in the journal.² The failure ture. Rumsey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 130 N. Y. 88.

An act permitting persons to commute for military services by the payment of a sum of money is not an act imposing a tax within the meaning of the constitution so as to require the presence at its passage of three-fifths of all the members elected to either house. People v. Chenango County, 8 N. Y. 317.

The act of May 14, 1840, excluding aldermen of the city of New York from the right of sitting as judges of the court of general sessions, is one for altering the charter of that city, and not having received the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the legislature, it is void. Purdy v. People, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 384.

Associations formed pursuant to the act entitled "An act to authorize the business of banking," passed April 13, 1838, are corporations. And the act is therefore within the provision of the constitution of the State of New York declaring the assent of two-thirds of all the members elected to each branch of the legislature to be requisite to every bill creating any body politic or corporate; the assent of two-thirds of the legislature not having been obtained to the bill, it was held void. De Bow v. People, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 9.

An act creating a new judicial circuit, and providing for the election of a judge therefor, etc., is not a law which "creates a debt or charge, or makes, continues, or renews an appropriation of public money," within the meaning of the section of the constitution which requires that on the passage of laws of that nature the question shall be taken by yeas and nays which shall be duly entered on the journal; and that three-fifths of all the members elected to each house shall in all such cases be required to constitute a quorum therein. McDonald v. State, 80 Wis. 407.

1. In U. S. v. Ballin, 144 U. S. 1, the court said: "The constitution provides that 'a majority of each (house) shall constitute a quorum to do business.' In other words, when a majority are present the house is in a position to do business. Its capacity to transact business is then established, created by the mere presence of a majority, and does not depend upon the disposition or assent or action of any single member or fraction of the majority present. All that the constitution requires is the presence of a majority, and when that majority are present the power of the house arises. But how shall the presence of a majority be determined? The constitution has prescribed no method of making this determination, and it is therefore within the competency of the house to prescribe any method which shall be reasonably certain to ascertain the fact. It may prescribe answer to roll call as the only method of determination; or require the passage of members between tellers, and their count as the sole test; or the count of the speaker or the clerk, and an announcement from the desk of the names of those who are present. Any one of these methods, it must be conceded, is reasonably certain of ascertaining the fact, and as there is no constitutional method prescribed, and no constitutional inhibition of any of those, and no violation of fundamental rights in any, it follows that the house may adopt either or all, or it may provide for a combination of any two of the methods. That was done by the rule in question; and all that that rule attempts to do is to prescribe a method for ascertaining the presence of a majority, and thus establishing the fact that the house is in a condition to transact business."

2. The purpose of the requirement that the yeas and nays on the final passage of a bill be entered at large in the journal, is to make the members of the legislative body feel the responsibility of their action when important measures are upon their passage, and to compel each member to bear his share in the responsibility by a record of his action, to comply with such a provision, as a rule, renders the law void.¹ When no provision is made either by the constitution or by a which should not afterwards be open to dispute. Steckert v. East Saginaw, 22 Mich. 103.

The "final passage" of a bill is a vote on its passage in either house of the legislature after it has received three readings on three different days in that house. State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599.

An act permitting a private person to sue the State of Kentucky, and directing the proper officers of that state, in case a judgment was recovered against it, to pay the amount of the said judgment, being over one hundred dollars, to the person recovering it, was held not to be in contravention of a section of the state constitution declaring that "the general assembly shall have no power to pass any act or resolution for the appropriation of any money or the creation of any debt exceeding the sum of one hundred dollars at any one time, unless the same on its passage shall be voted for by a majority of all the members then elected to each branch of the general assembly, and the yeas and nays thereon entered on the journal." Com. v. Jackson, 5 Bush (Ky.) 680.

1. Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 296; 58 Am. Dec. 571; People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 142; 85 Am. Dec. 348; Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 163; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640; Burritt v. Com'rs of State Contracts, 120 Ill. 322; Amoskeag Nat. Bank v. Ottawa, 105 U. S. 667; State v. McBride, 4 Mo. 303; 29 Am. Dec. 636; Steckert v. East Saginaw, 22 Mich. 103; Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451; State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 605; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260.

Apart from a constitutional provision requiring the aye and nay vote, the ordinary method of taking the vote upon a question is by the voices, show of hands, or by a rising vote, affirmative and negative. It may also be done by roll call. But where the object is to ascertain the names as well as the number voting on each side, with a view to having them entered on the journals, this method, when resorted to to obtain such list of names, is denominated "the taking the yeas and nays on a question." Vanderberg, J., in Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451.

A bill was properly passed by the house, and then also was passed by the senate with sundry amendments in which the house refused to concur. The senate then by a vote of yeas and nays properly entered on the journal, receded from its amendments, and no further action on the bill was taken. It was held that, as this manner of passing bills has always been considered sufficient in the State of Kansas, and has always been acted upon, it will be considered that the constitutional provision requiring that the yeas and nays shall be taken and entered immediately on the journal upon the final passage of every bill or joint resolution, was sufficiently complied with. Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 194.

The constitution of Minnesota providing that "no law shall be passed unless voted for by a majority of all the members elected to each branch of the legislature, and the vote entered upon the journal of each house," does not require the yeas and nays to be entered. Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451.

The constitutional requirement that "the yeas and nays shall be taken in each house upon the final passage of every bill of a general character" has no application to an act changing two counties from their respective judicial circuits to others, and fixing the time of holding courts therein, and in one other county, such act being of a local, not of a general character." State v. Algood, 87 Tenn. 163.

Unless the ayes and nays are entered in the journal as required by the Illinois constitution, the act is void. Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 163; Amoskeag Nat. Bank v. Ottawa, 105 U. S. 667; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724.

Where the journal recited the names of those members present, and that they all voted unanimously for a bill without reciting the names voting, it was held that the requirement above referred to had not been fulfilled. Steckert v. East Saginaw, 22 Mich. 103.

Amendments.—In New York, it has been held that the requirement of the constitution that the question on the final passage of an act shall be taken by yeas and nays entered on the journals, is directory merely, and does not apply to a vote taken on receding from amend-statutory rule to govern the case, it must be regulated by the rules of each house.¹

5. Signing by Presiding Officers.—It is provided frequently that the presiding officers of the legislative houses shall sign bills when passed.² This provision, in those states where the enrolled bill duly authenticated is considered conclusive evidence of the valid enactment of a law, is of necessity mandatory, for in such case the signatures of the presiding officers are a part of the constitutional method of authentication.³ In some of the states in which the journal may be looked to for the purpose of investigating the compliance of the legislature with constitutional provisions, it is ments once adopted by the requisite vote and in the prescribed form, to which the other house has disagreed. People v. Chenango County, 8 N. Y. 317.

Where an amendment was offered in the house to a bill properly passed in the senate, it was held that the senate must concur in the amendment by a yea or nay vote entered in the journal. Norman v. Kentucky Board of Managers (Ky. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 901.

In Alabama, it is provided that no amendment to bills by one house shall be concurred in by the other except by a vote of a majority thereof taken by yeas and nays, and the names of those voting for and against recorded on the journals, and reports of committees of conference shall in like manner be adopted in each house. State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 612.

1. When in a state where there is no constitutional requirement that a bill shall be passed by a yea and nay vote, a rule was adopted by the senate that it should be competent for any member to call for the yeas and noes, which should be entered in the journal, and if it did not appear that the ayes and noes were called for, the omission to enter in the journal the name of members voting was not fatal to the law passed. Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451.

2. The constitution of Nevada requires that all bills or joint resolutions passed shall be signed by the presiding officers of the representative houses and by the secretary of the senate and clerk of the assembly, and it was held that signatures by presiding officers and by an assistant secretary were sufficient. State v. Glenn, 18 Nev. 34.

Enrollment of Bills.—In Minnesota the constitution provides that "every bill passed by both houses shall be carefully enrolled, as well as be signed by the presiding officers of each house, in order to put it in condition to be sent to the governor for his action." Burns v. Sewell (Minn. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 224.

3. Scarborough v. Robinson, 81 N. Car. 418; State v. Glenn, 18 Nev. 38; State v. Swift, 10 Nev. 176; 21 Am. Rep. 721; Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 364; 66 Am. Dec. 673; State v. Mead, 71 Mo. 269; Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 523; 95 Am. Dec. 710; Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 396. (This case allows consultation of the journal, but has since been overruled in that particular.) See Ex parte Tipton, 28 Tex. App. 438.

"In our opinion the signatures of the presiding officers of the two houses under and by force of the words used in our constitution, are an essential prerequisite to the existence of the statute—the finishing and perfecting act of legislation—and must be affixed during the session of the general assembly. An enrolled bill is not that considered and adopted by the concurring action of the two houses, but is a substituted copy transcribed to take the place of the original, and becomes the final expression of the legislative will. Its accuracy is secured by the examination, comparison and report of a committee in each house, and then each house ratifies that it accepts and adopts the enrolled bill as the embodiment of its own action and the correct expression of its will. Ratification is the act of the house, and its presiding officer in attesting the same acts on behalf of and by its authority. This is a necessary safeguard against fraud in the insertion of new matter, or the omission or change of existing provisions in the bill, not to be lost sight of or surrendered. Each body gives its direct and positive sanction to the enrolled bill, as its act, when its presiding officer signs; and he is but its agent acting in its stead when he does also essential that the signatures of the presiding officers of the legislature be affixed to bills in order to make them valid.¹ In other states of the latter class the requirement of the constitution regarding the signature of presiding officers is considered to be directory only.²

The signatures of the presiding officers have been held unnec-

so. In other words this is the consummation of legislative action, which is incomplete and inoperative without it." Smith, C. J., in Scarborough v. Robinson, 81 N. Car. 418.

"The provision of the constitution that every bill having passed both houses shall be signed by the speaker of the house of representatives and by the president of the senate, is the constitutional mode adopted for the authentication of every bill, and furnishes the evidence of its passage by the two houses in the first instance. The governor's signature to a bill is not required as a means or part of its authentication, but as evidence of his approval. The governor being no member of either house, and in contemplation of the constitution not being present during the deliberations, could not know whether a bill had passed the two houses or not. The constitution itself contemplated that there might be laws without the signature of the governor, and therefore the mode of authentication adopted was the evidence of the passage of all bills in the first instance by the two houses as well those passed with his approbation as those passed against his consent." Scott J., in Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 364; 66 Am. Dec. 673. This case was overruled by State v. Mead, 71 Mo. 270 in another point.

In Scarborough v. Robinson, 81 N. Car. 409, it was decided that the presiding officers of the legislature could not be compelled after the adjournment of the legislature to affix their signatures to a bill properly passed by that body, for the duty placed on the speakers is not ministerial but legislative, and must be exercised, if at all, during the session.

1. State v. Kiesewetter, 45 Ohio St. 263; Burritt v. Com'rs of State Contracts, 120 Ill. 322; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; State v. Bank of S. Car., 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 609. See Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 221.

It is urged that to declare the signature of presiding officers essential to the bill would be to clothe the presiding officers of the general assembly with a veto power, and that such result cannot have been intended by the convention which framed the constitution. It is certain that that body did not so intend, and the obvious answer to the objection is that confidence must be reposed somewhere. It is not to be presumed that men selected to fill places of such high trust will intentionally violate the constitution and prove false to their oaths. State v. Kiesewetter, 45 Ohio St. 254.

"This signing in open session may incidentally serve to fix the attention of members to the bill being signed, but it has a much more important purpose. It authenticates a bill and affords a sure means of identification. No official copy is required of a bill introduced, nor is it required to be copied on the journal, and a legal standard of comparison is wanting. The signatures of the presiding officers, therefore, furnish the evidence that that which the journals show by title and number passed the general assembly is this identical measure. The act thus authenticated is to be given the force of law, is to be treated as such, and to prove itself upon inspection; and this verification by the officers designated by the constitution is conclusive evidence to the secretary of state that the act so signed is a law and entitled to be filed as such in the office of that officer and under his direction to be published, duly certified by him for the information and guidance of all the people of the state. The signing is, therefore, for the benefit of the people in their examination to ascertain what is and what is not law." Spear, J., in State v. Kiesewetter, 45 Ohio St. 258. In this state, constitutional provisions requiring the reading of a bill, etc., were held to be merely directory, and the provisions requiring the signatures of the presiding officers were held to be mandatory.

2. Leavenworth County v. Higgenbotham, 17 Kan. 62; State v. Robert- essary when the act has been passed over the governor's veto. The passage through both houses with the necessary vote completes the enactment in such a case.¹

son, 41 Kan. 200; Cottrell v. State, 9 Neb. 128.

"The signature of a presiding officer to a bill is a mere certificate to the governor that it has passed the requisite number of readings and been adopted by the constitutional majority of the house over which he presides. . . . And when it appears from the journals that a bill has passed by the requisite majority and has been approved by the governor, the failure of the presiding officer to affix his signature thereto will not invalidate the act, as it will be presumed that the governor had sufficient evidence before him of the passage of the bill at the time he approved the same." Maxwell, C. J., in Cottrell v. State, 9 Neb. 125.

"Does the failure of the presiding officer of the senate to sign said bill invalidate everything connected therewith? If it does, then the presiding officer of the senate has more power to veto bills than the governor or than any other person or officer of the state. The legislature may pass a bill over the veto of the governor; but if the plaintiff in error is correct, they cannot pass a bill over the veto, so to speak, of the lieutenant-governor so as to make the bill become a valid law. The lieutenant-governor is the president of the senate; he holds his office independent of the legislature; they have no power to remove him from office, except by the slow and tedious proceeding of impeachment; they have no power to compel him to sign a bill except by the equally slow and tedious proceeding of mandamus, and this can only be done in the courts; and if the plaintiff in error is correct, they have no power to make a valid law except with the aid of his signature so long as he is the acting presiding officer of the senate. . . . The signatures of the presiding officers do not constitute any portion of the law. It is not necessary that the consent of the presiding officers should be had in order to enact the law. The only office that the signatures of the presiding officers is intended to perform, is to furnish evidence of the due passage and validity of the bill; such signatures are only portions of the many evidences of the due passage and validity of the bill, and a bill may in some instances, as we think, be valid although the signatures of one of the presiding officers be omitted. With one of such signatures gone the evidence of the passage and the validity of the bill would, of course, be somewhat weakened; if the signatures of both of the presiding officers were gone, the evidence, of course, would be weaker still. If in addition to this the journals did not show the passage of the bill, then the evidence of its passage would be almost wholly gone, and taking the whole of the evidence together, if it should not clearly appear to the courts that the bill had been passed by the legislature and approved by the governor, it would be the duty of the courts to declare that the bill had never become a law. The courts must decide as to the passage and validity of a bill upon the whole of the legal evidence applicable in such cases. If the enrolled bill were perfect and formal in every particular, then the courts might say that the bill had passed and become a law, although there might be omissions from the journals, or, if the journals were perfect in every particular and showed that the bill had been regularly and duly passed, then the courts might say that the bill had passed and become a law, although there might be some omissions from the enrolled bill." Valentine, J., in Leavenworth County v. Higginbotham, 17 Kan. 74, 76.

The failure of the presiding officer of the senate to sign a bill, which was afterwards approved by the governor, and which the journal of the senate shows passed the senate by the constitutional majority, does not affect the validity of the act. Taylor v. Wilson, 17 Neb. 88.

1. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449.

Where the constitution provides that the passage of an act by a certain vote over the veto of the governor, shall be officially certified by the chief clerk of the house of representatives and the secretary of the senate, and these officers are prevented from so certifying by the fact of their retirement from office, the validity of the bill would not be affected by their failure to certify its passage in the proper time, if the fact of its passage appears from the published

In states where the courts are permitted to look behind the enrolled statute, the bills signed by the presiding officers, to be valid, must be the bills actually passed by the legislature,¹ though immaterial variances will be disregarded.² If the constitution does not require the signature of bills, it is not vital.³ Though it seems that usage in all cases would require it.⁴

6. Presentation to Executive.—After the passage of a bill and its authentication by the signatures of the presiding officers, or by the great seal, where such authentication is required,⁵ the bill must be presented to the executive, unless the constitution dispenses with such presentation.⁶ As to whether this presentation must be made to the governor personally, or whether it is enough to leave the bill at his office, the authorities are not in accord.⁷ In Massachusetts it has been decided that the bill must be personally presented to the governor, or, in his absence from the state, to journals of the legislature. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343.

1. Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647. See infra, this title, Approval of Bill.

So where an act signed by the presiding officers of the legislature and approved by the governor, omitted material amendments made and passed by both houses, it was held void. Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28.

2. People v. Onondaga, 16 Mich. 254.

3. Speer v. Plank Road Co., 22 Pa. St. 376. In Pennsylvania there is no constitutional requirement concerning the signature of bills by presiding officers of the legislature.

4. See Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 671; State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 33.

5. In Maryland the constitution requires that every bill passed by the general assembly shall be sealed with the great seal of the state before it is presented to the governor; he may refuse to consider it if not so authenticated. Hamilton v. State, 61 Md. 14.

6. It has been held in Indiana that the court may not look beyond the enrolled act of the legislature to ascertain whether there has been a compliance with the constitutional requirement that "no bill shall be presented to the governor within two days next previous to the final adjournment of the general assembly." Bender v. State, 53 Ind. 254. Compare Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 434.

In Arkansas a bill may be presented to the governor after the adjournment of the legislature; and the return of such a bill is held to be "prevented by the adjournment" of that body. Dow v. Beidelman, 49 Ark. 333.

It was held in State v. Crounse (Neb. 1893), 55 N. W. Rep. 246, that such presentation was necessary, even though the bill was passed by a majority, which would be sufficient to pass it over the governor's veto. The ground of the above decision was that the governor is a part of the law-making power of the state, and it is therefore necessary that every bill shall be presented to him as a part of its legal enactment.

Where, however, a city charter required that all ordinances passed by the city council should be presented to the mayor, and if vetoed by him then passed by a two-thirds vote of the council over his veto, in order to give them the force of law, it was held that where, to pass a specified law, a three-quarters vote was required in the original passage, presentation to the mayor was, under the circumstances, unnecessary. Hall v. Racine, 81 Wis. 72.

7. In Hamilton v. State, 61 Md. 27, Stone, J., said: "The first of these objections raises the distinct question of a personal presentation of a bill to the governor before he can be required to consider it, or whether a proper delivery in the executive chamber, although the governor may be absent therefrom at the time, is sufficient. This is a very important question, but one which we do not now mean to decide, because the determination of that question is not necessary to the decision of this case, and because there the person officially filling his position;¹ while in New Hampshire the courts have held that the bill may be left at the usual office of the governor for receiving bills with the person there in charge.² Whatever the specific mode of presentation may be, it seems at least reasonable that the bill must be left with the gov-is a wide and irreconcilable difference of opinion among the different members of the court on that point.

1. In Opinion of Judges, 99 Mass. 636, the court said: "As the duty of revisal by the governor is a personal duty, with which he alone is intrusted, when his chair is not vacant, it is necessary that the bill should be laid before him personally. A bill is not laid before him or presented to him, within the meaning and intent of these provisions, by being sent from the senate to the secretary of the commonwealth. The constitution makes the secretary an independent officer, and prescribes his duties, and his possession of a bill sent by the senate to be presented to the governor is not the possession of the governor. A bill must be laid before the governor, or the person who for the time being is clothed with the powers of governor, under the constitution, for his revision. The individual whose duty it is to sign the bill is entitled to have it before him that he may have the opportunity to sign it or return it, with his objections thereto, to the branch of the legislature in which it originated."

2. In Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 611, the court said: "But it would be absurd to hold that the officers of the senate and house of representatives are obliged, in order to perform their duty, to follow the governor wherever he may chance to go, whether in the state or out of it, upon his private business as well as public, and present bills to him in person wherever he may happen to be. . . . Now it is perfectly apparent that, in order that the business of legislation may be conducted with sufficient order and the necessary despatch, there should be some place where it can be understood that communications can be made to the governor, and where it shall be his duty to attend, either in person or by some private secretary or agent, authorized to receive bills, papers and communications for him in his absence, at least during the sessions of the legislature; and we know of no more appropriate place, during the sessions, for the presentation of bills and making other communications to the governor than in the executive chamber, where it may be understood that such presentations may be made at reasonable hours, and where they will be received and attended to, and where it may be expected that the governor will attend in person or otherwise, at such proper times as to see that the public interests do not suffer, and that all the duties imposed upon him by his high office may be seasonably performed. Still this is not necessarily the place where the governor receives communications from the two houses; that must depend upon the usage. If it had been customary, both for the two houses to make these communications there, and for the governor to receive them there; if they both understood that this was the proper place where such communications were to be made and received, then the assent of both would be implied; and if such was the usage, and it was continued down to the time of the presentation of the bill in question, then it would be the duty of the governor to attend at such chamber and receive such communications, or to have some one there for that purpose, and the depositing of a bill there in the usual place by an officer of one of the houses, and calling the attention of the governor, secretary, or other person in charge of the room to the fact would, we think, be a good presentation, although, in consequence of the temporary absence of the governor for a few hours, or his attention being directed to other things, he may not have seen or known of its presentation on the day it was made. This usage, though of long continuance, might probably be changed by the governor, and he might make, by special appointment, and a notice thereof to both houses, a private apartment in his own house, or at a hotel, or some other room in the state house, or in any other building, if within proper distance, and in other respects reasonably convenient, the place for receiving such communications, and then such apartment would be the proper place for making such presen-

ernor, for his approval and consideration, out of the possession or control of the legislature or its messengers.¹

The fact of the presentation of the bill to the executive ought to be somewhere preserved or recorded;² an entry in the journal of the legislature, is in some states where it can be appealed to, provided for;³ in other states, where no mode of record is prescribed, the entry of the governor on the bill itself is the practice followed.⁴ It has also been held that no record at all is nec-tations, and would so continue until otherwise ordered. But when he has thus changed the place and established a new one for this purpose, and such communications are habitually made there, his temporary absence for an hour, or for an afternoon, ought not to affect the presentation, and we think that in law it could not."

1. See Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 199; 2 Am. Rep. 432; McKenzie v. Moore (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 483. In the first of these cases, Wallace, J., said: "The bill must, before it becomes a law, be 'presented to the governor;' it might be merely exhibited to that officer, and even if it should be immediately thereafter taken away or withdrawn, it might be contended that it had, nevertheless, been 'presented' within the very letter of the constitution. But when we come to reflect that the only purpose for which the bill is to be 'presented to the governor' is to afford him an opportunity to deliberately consider its provisions and prepare his objections, if any he have to its passage, we would instinctively reject such a presentation as being fictitious—merely spurious—and certainly not that one contemplated by the constitution, because it would defeat rather than promote the very object intended."

2. See Danielly v. Cabaniss, 52 Ga. 223.

3. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 149; White v. Hinton, 3 Wyoming 753. In the first of these cases, the court said: "The tenth joint rule of the two houses requires that before a bill shall have been signed by the speakers of both houses it shall be presented by the committee on enrolled bills to the governor for his approbation. The said committee shall report the day of presentation to the governor, which time shall be carefully entered on the journal of each house. That this rule has the force of a law will not be questioned; it was made to give full operation to the constitution, and, taken in connection with it, requires that the legislature shall be in session when a bill is presented to the governor, and the reason is obvious; when it is presented the responsibility of the governor commences, and from the entry on the journal of the time when, the ten days are to be computed."

By the Maryland Code it is provided that "every bill when passed by the general assembly shall be returned to the house in which the same originated, and shall as soon thereafter as practicable be sealed with the great seal by the secretary of the senate, or chief clerk of the house of delegates, as the case may be, and presented to the governor for his approval, and in his presence such clerical officer, having custody of the same, shall make on the back of every such bill a memorandum in writing of the day and hour when the same was presented to the governor for his approval; and such officer so presenting the same shall sign his name to such memorandum, and shall make a corresponding entry upon the journal of the house in which the same originated." Lankford v. Somerset County, 73 Md. 105.

4. In Danielly v. Cabaniss, 52 Ga. 223, the court said: "There seems to be no law or rule of either houses of the general assembly providing any mode in which it is authoritatively to be ascertained when a bill is presented to the governor for his signature, and the practice on the subject is not uniform. The fact ought in some way to appear of record and on the act itself. Some of the governors seem to have made an entry on the enrolled bill, others have left it to the legislature to preserve the evidence."

The record of the official acts and proceedings of the executive department kept by the secretary of state, as required by the constitution, is competent evidence to show that a bill indorsed by the secretary of the senate as having been presented on a particular day was in fact presented on a different

Essary to be kept of the presentation of a bill to the governor for approval.¹

7. Legislative Power of Recall.—After presentation of a bill to the executive, it would seem that the legislature is without power to demand a recall for further consideration, though in practice bills have been recalled and the legality of the practice conceded.² It has been held that a bill cannot be recalled by a single branch day. Lankford v. Somerset County, 73 Md. 105.

1. State v. Hitchcock, 1 Kan. 178.

2. Wolfe v. McCaull, 76 Va. 876.

In People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 277; 88 Am. Dec. 377, Potter, J., said: "If they do possess the power, it is not found in the constitution, it is not found in the statute, it is not shown to be the custom or usage. Although each house shall determine the rules of 'its own proceedings,' no rule for such a proceeding as that of sending for a bill in the possession of the governor has been shown to exist; besides, the bill at that time had become the act of both houses, and neither had then any further control over it. The act of courtesy of the governor in returning to the assembly the bill at their request conferred no power upon the house of assembly to act further upon it. Even if the governor had intended to allow them so to act (as by his subsequently signing the bill in the form he first received it, it seems he did not), it is still a question of power. No authority is shown to be possessed by the governor to perform such an act as a part of the law-making power."

In Re Senate Resolution, 9 Colo. 630, the court said: "We discover nothing in the constitution or statutes that forbid the legislatures requesting, by joint or concurrent resolution of both houses, the return of a bill in the hands of the governor for his approval, or which directs or controls the action of his excellency in response to such request. Neither do we find any provision in the constitution or statutes which inhibits a reconsideration and amendment, if in accordance with the parliamentary practice adopted by the respective houses, of a bill thus returned."

Again, in People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 277; 88 Am. Dec. 377, Potter, J., said: "After the passage of a bill in the legal and constitutional form by both houses of the legislature, and the same has been transmitted by them to the governor in the manner provided by the constitution, have the two houses exhausted their power over it, or can they, or can either of the said houses without the consent of the other, recall the bill by resolution and revest themselves with power further to act upon it? . . . When both houses have finally passed upon a bill and sent it to the governor, they have exhausted their powers upon it, except the power of sending it to the governor by the house in which it originated, according to parliamentary law."

In Wolfe v. McCaull, 76 Va. 890, Christian, J., said: "As was so well said by one of the able counsel for the petitioner in a brief filed by him: 'The constitution, moreover, provides that all bills shall be presented to the governor—that is, presented to the governor in such a way that he will be able to consider the merits and demerits of a bill, deliberate upon it, and finally determine whether he will approve or disapprove. The constitution contemplates that he shall exercise this power without let or hindrance from any source whatever. He could not properly perform this duty and fully enjoy this privilege, if at any moment the bill under consideration could be recalled from his hands by a resolution passed by a minority of both houses, who avail themselves of a temporary ascendancy caused by the absence of the friends of the bill, or even by a majority of both houses. To allow such a power to the legislature would tend to produce a constant conflict between it and the executive, and in the unequal contest that would ensue, the executive would have to succumb to its more powerful opponent. In the exercise of this power, although a legislative function, the independence of the executive should be guarded with the same zealous care as his independence in the exercise of his ordinary executive duties; and to allow the legislature the power claimed by them in this instance would be entirely subversive of that independence.'" of the legislature,¹ and that, in the absence of a rule permitting it, both branches, after voting down a motion to reconsider, immediately before the presentation of the bill to the governor, cannot recall it by joint resolution.²

8. Executive Functions—a. IN GENERAL.—The executive, upon presentation of the bill to him, may approve it or disapprove it and return it with his objections to the legislative branch in which it originated, or he may allow it to become a law by inaction and a failure to approve or disapprove within the time prescribed by the organic law.³

"There must be a time when this right to reconsider terminates, and that is when the bill or law has passed from the custody or control of the department of the body seeking to reconsider." People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 288.

Practice of Permitting Recall.—In People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 288, Cator, C. J., said: "Instances are not wanting in the history of our legislation where bills which have been laid before the governor for his approval, have been returned to one of the houses of the general assembly and then finally defeated, and no one has ever thought of questioning the legality of such a proceeding."

So in Kentucky, where the governor, after the presentation of a bill to him, said that he should veto it, and the member who introduced it obtained leave of the house of which he was a member to veto the bill, and it was delivered to him by the governor, it was held that the bill did not become a law by reason of the failure of the governor to act upon the bill within the time limited by law. McKenzie v. Moore (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 483.

1. In People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 277; 88 Am. Dec. 377, Potter, J., said: "By no rule or custom shown, nor by the exercise of common reason, could one house by their action undo, annul, or change what both had solemnly done under their solemn legislative sanction, according to all constitutional forms, and according to their published rules and forms of law."

2. In Wolfe v. McCaull, 76 Va. 889, Christian, J., said: "There must be a time in all parliamentary proceedings when the controlling power of the legislative body must come to an end. If the general assembly had the power to recall the bill it must have been for the purpose of a reconsideration. The object of requiring possession of the paper must have been for a reconsideration, because no motion to reconsider it is in order unless the paper is before the body in which the motion to reconsider is made. But in Virginia the rules of both houses of the general assembly fix the time and mode by which the bill passed may be reconsidered. By the constitution each house is allowed to adopt its own rules. House rule 70 provides that 'when a question has been decided it may be reconsidered on the motion of any member who voted with the prevailing side, provided the motion be made on the same day, or the next two days of actual session.' Rule 61 of the senate is to the same effect. According to these rules and general practices a motion to reconsider the same vote cannot be made twice, and if made at all must be made upon the day of the vote or upon one of the two ensuing days. In the case before us a motion to reconsider was made in each house within the proper time, and was lost. After this was done, and after it was sent to the governor the legislature had no further control over the bill; it was then before the governor for his action or non-action, and was beyond the control of the legislature."

3. Birdsall v. Carrick, 3 Nev. 156; State v. Crouse (Neb. 1893), 55 N. W. Rep. 256; Seven Hickory v. Ellery, 103 U. S. 423. In this last case Waite, C. J., said: "Under the constitution of Illinois, if a bill is passed by both houses of the legislature it becomes a law: first, when approved and signed by the governor within ten days after its presentation to him; second, when the legislature being in session, the governor fails to sign the bill or return it with his objections to the house in which it originated within the ten days; third, when, after being returned within the ten days, it is passed by the requisite majorities over his objections; fourth, when, if the session of the legislature terminates by an adjournment before the expiration of the ten days, he fails to return the bill with his objections the first day of the next session; and, fifth, when, having returned it with objections on the first day of the next session, it is again passed by the requisite majorities in both houses. And it becomes a law at the time when the event happens which is to give it validity."

In some states the power of the governor is merely a qualified veto power exercised in requiring a further consideration by the legislature of bills disapproved by the governor; in these states his approval is not a component part of the law.¹ In other states the executive function is broader.² From this distinction follow corollaries concerning the necessity of presentation to the governor, his right of approval after a legislative adjournment, and the time when a statute takes effect.³

1. In State v. Mounts, 36 W. Va. 186, Lucas, J., referred to the constitutional separation of the legislative and executive departments, and said: "The governor has no legislative functions to perform. His approval of the law passed by the legislature does, it is true, give it vitality as a law; but, should he decline to approve, a bare majority in each of the two houses may pass the law over his veto, thus showing that it was not intended that he should have any legislative power, not even the casting vote. His veto amounts to an appeal for 'reconsideration' by the legislative branch, and not to a defeasance of the passage of the bill."

In Illinois, the council of revision, as such, as a power to revise all laws passed by the general assembly, is not abolished by the present constitution of the state. The power, instead of being deposited with the governor and justices of the supreme court, is now deposited with the governor alone. He is, to all intents and purposes, if the design of such a power is regarded, and not a tenacious adherence to terms, the council of revision. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9.

2. Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165, since overruled on another point; State v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293; 12 Am. St. Rep. 204; State v. Crounse (Neb. 1893), 55 N.W. Rep. 246. See People v. Bowen, 21 N. Y. 521.

In the territories, by the organic law, it is provided that the legislative power is vested in the governor and the two houses of the legislature. School Trustees v. Ormsby County, 1 Nev. 340; Thornbury v. Hermann, 1 Nev. 473.

In Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 173, the court said: "The executive is, by the constitution, a component part of the law-making power. In approving a law he is not supposed to act in the capacity of the executive magistrate of the state, whose duty it is to see that the laws are properly executed, but as a part of the legislative branch of the government. This power is a unit, though distributed; and the parts can only act in unison. Whenever a part ceases to act, the whole becomes inoperative. The executive act owes its vitality to the existence of the legislative body."

In Florida, the governor asked the opinion of the justices of the court as to his duty to disapprove certain bills, as beyond the power of the legislature to pass at its then pending session, though otherwise unobjectionable. The constitution makes it a duty of the courts to interpret the constitution, at the request of the governor, upon any question affecting his "executive powers and duties." The court declined to give the opinion, because the question asked affected a legislative and not an executive, duty of the governor, and said: "Is the opinion you desire one relating to your 'executive powers and duties?' The exact legal meaning of the word 'executive' has been many times authoritatively fixed and defined. It means a duty appertaining to the execution of the laws as they exist. It would follow that the law must be enacted according to all the terms prescribed by the constitution before the duty of executing it can exist. Any duty imposed by the constitution on the governor in reference to a bill, before it becomes a law, is not an executive duty. The enactment of laws is a legislative duty, and when your excellency is required by the constitution to do any act which is an essential prerequisite thereto, such act is legislative, and is performed by you as a part of the law-making power, and not as the law-executing power." Opinion of Judges, 23 Fla. 298.

3. See various subdivisions of this title.

b. TIME ALLOWED FOR DELIBERATION AND ACTION—(1) Effect of Adjournment.—Sometimes the constitutional provision is that “if the governor approves the bill he must sign it,” nothing being said about a specified time, and no provision being made for the effect of an adjournment of the legislature on the right of executive approval. Here, an approval after adjournment is generally invalid.¹

The rule which prevails more generally, and which is perhaps more satisfactory, is that the same length of time limited by the constitution for returning the bill with objections, to the legislature when in session, is given the governor for deliberation, and a bill approved by him after the adjournment of the legislature, but within the said time, is valid.² In some states it is provided that where the legislature adjourns before the time for approval

1. Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165; since overruled, but not on this point. The following language of Alvey, C. J., in Lankford v. Somerset County, 73 Md. 115, is pertinent. “It seems that the general practice of requiring bills to be presented to and signed by the President of the United States before the adjournment of congress has been established and adhered to from the first congress under the constitution to the present. That practice, however, seems to have originated in the operation of certain joint rules of the two houses of congress, adopted on the 6th of August, 1789, whereby all enrolled bills are placed under the charge of a joint standing committee of the two houses, and whose duty it is to procure the bills to be signed in each house by the presiding officer thereof, and then to present the same to the President for his approval, and report the fact and time of such presentation to their respective houses. (Joint Rules 6, 7, 8 and 9 of two houses of congress. See also Jefferson’s Manual, § 48, tit. Assent.) But while such is the congressional practice, in placing bills before the President for his approval, we are not aware of any judicial construction of the clause of the constitution which affirms that a bill presented to the President after the adjournment of congress, and signed by him within ten days from the time of such presentation, would not be valid as a law of congress. On the contrary, we think it may be fairly inferred from the reasoning and judgment of the supreme court of the United States in the case of Seven Hickory v. Ellery, 103 U. S. 423, that a bill so presented and signed, if by congressional authority would be maintained as a valid law.”

In School Trustees v. Ormsby County, 1 Nev. 340, and Thornbury v. Hermann, 1 Nev. 477, it was held that the territorial governor could not approve a bill after the legislative adjournment, the provision of the organic law being that the legislative power and authority of the territory should be vested in the governor and the legislative assembly.

2. People v. Bowen, 21 N. Y. 520; Solomon v. Cartersville, 41 Ga. 157; State v. Fagan, 22 La. Ann. 545; Seven Hickory v. Ellery, 103 U. S. 423; State v. Coahoma County, 64 Miss. 365.

In Mississippi, the provision is that “every bill passed by the two houses is to be presented to the governor. If he approves he shall sign it; if not, he shall return it with objections within five days (Sunday excepted) to the house in which it originated, or it shall be a law without his signature, unless the legislature by adjournment prevent, in which case it shall be a law at the end of three days after the next meeting of the legislature, if not sent back by the governor with his objections in that time.” The court said, concerning this provision: “If the legislature, by an adjournment, before the governor has had five days to act on the bill, prevent a return of it with his objections, he is allowed all of the time before the three days after the next meeting of the legislature shall expire, to send back the bill disapproved, and if he does not so return it, it shall be a law by mere effluxion of time. A fortiori should it be a law when the governor approves and signs it. . . . The finishing act expires, the governor shall have a further specified time to approve bills presented to him before the adjournment.¹

by which a bill is transformed into a law, is the governor's approval, as shown by his signing, and that may be as long as he has the bill in his hands for his official action. So long as he may return it with his objections he may convert the bill into a law by his approval and signing. So long as he may disapprove and return the bill with his objections he may assent to the expressed will of the two houses, and, as governor, unite with the legislature in passing a bill into a law." State v. Coahoma County, 64 Miss. 365.

In Louisiana, the constitution provides that the governor shall return all bills which he does not approve, with his objections thereto, to the house in which they may have originated, in five days from the day of presentation, except where such return is prevented by an adjournment. In that case the governor is required to return all such bills as he does not approve, on the first day of the next general assembly. It has been held that by this article of the constitution, the governor has until the meeting of the next general assembly to deliberate as to whether he will approve or disapprove any bill that has passed less than five days before adjournment, and in case he approves any bill thus situated, he may sign it at any time before the meeting of the next general assembly, and such act becomes a law from the moment he signifies his approval by affixing his signature thereto. State v. Fagan, 22 La. Ann. 545.

In Solomon v. Cartersville, 41 Ga. 161, Warner, J., said: "If this was an original question, independent of any construction heretofore given by the executive department of the state government to this clause of the constitution, we should be inclined to hold that the governor could not approve and sign any bill after the adjournment of the general assembly; but on looking into the past history of our legislation, we find that it has been the practice for many years for the governor to take five days after the adjournment of the general assembly, for the revision of bills passed by that body, and to approve and sign the same within that time, but not afterwards, and that a large number of the most important acts now upon the statute books of the state have been so approved and signed, which usage and practice of the executive department of the state government should not now, in our judgment, be disturbed or set aside."

An act was regularly passed by both houses of the general assembly; but in its enrollment two provisions, which had been reported by a conference committee and incorporated in the act by way of amendment, were omitted. In this form the act was sent to the governor and was approved by him; on the following day the legislature adjourned, after which the omissions were discovered; a correct enrollment was then made, and the bill signed by the president of the senate and speaker of the house was again laid before the governor, who approved it. It was held that under the constitution it is not required that all bills be presented to the governor before the adjournment of the assembly, and the first presentation of the bill being ineffectual, because it was not the same that had been passed, the legislative officers had the power after the adjournment to submit to the governor for his approval a correct enrollment of the bill as it was passed. Dow v. Beidelman, 49 Ark. 325.

In Maryland, where the constitution requires an act when passed by both houses of the legislature "to be sealed with the great seal, and to be presented to the governor as soon thereafter as practicable," it has been held that an act may be presented to the governor and approved by him after the adjournment of the legislature. Lankford v. Somerset County, 73 Md. 105, distinguishing Hamilton v. State, 61 Md. 14.

1. See various state constitutions. See as bearing upon their provisions, Burns v. Sewell (Minn. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 224; People v. Bowen, 21 N. Y. 520; Arnold v. McKellar, 9 S. Car. 335; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; State v. Coahoma County, 64 Miss. 358; McKenzie v. Moore (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 483.

In Darling v. Boesch, 67 Iowa 706, it was held that a bill presented to the governor within the last three days of the legislative session, and neither signed nor returned with objections before the adjournment, became a law only in case of his subsequent approval.

(2) Specific Time; How Computed.—The time allowed varies generally from three days to ten.¹ In computing the time the day of presentation is excluded and the last day included.² An intervening Sunday is generally excluded.³ A day, in this connection, means twenty-four hours generally beginning and ending at midnight.⁴ Whether a bill was returned in time is a question of fact.⁵

c. APPROVAL.—The executive when he approves a bill signs

1. See various state constitutions.

2. Iron Mountain Co. v. Haight, 39 Cal. 540; Price v. Whitman, 8 Cal. 412; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 139; Beaudeau v. Cape Girardeau, 71 Mo. 392; Corwin v. Comptroller Gen'l, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 390; In re Senate Resolution, 9 Colo. 632; McNeil v. Com., 12 Bush. (Ky.) 727. But see Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 613.

3. See Stinson v. Smith, 8 Minn. 366; Farwell Co. v. Matheis, 48 Fed. Rep. 363; Ex parte Cowert, 92 Ala. 94; In re Senate Resolution, 9 Colo. 633; Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 607; Corwin v. Attorney Gen'l, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 390; Price v. Whitman, 8 Cal. 412.

4. Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 610; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 137.

Where the constitution provided that a bill presented to the governor one day previous to the adjournment of the legislature, and not returned to the house where it originated before its adjournment, should become a law and have the same force and effect as if signed by the governor, the day and hour of adjournment being customarily fixed by a resolution passed several days prior thereto, it was held that the question of time was one of intention, and the governor must be allowed the twenty-four hours prior to the fixed hour of adjournment; and that therefore, a bill presented to him the day before the adjournment, but within the last twenty-four hours of the session, did not become a law by his failure to return it to the legislature before adjournment. Hyde v. White, 24 Tex. 137.

5. U. S. v. Allen, 36 Fed. Rep. 174; citing Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499. Here it appeared that a vetoed measure, in order to prevent a bill from becoming a law under the constitution, should have been returned to the legislature on February 24, 1887. The journal of the legislature contained an entry under date of February 25, 1887, that the bill and message in question was "laid before the house by the speaker." There was no other entry in the journal tending to show when the message was actually received. On the other hand a minute book, kept by the journal clerk of the same house, under date of February 24, 1887, contained the following memorandum: "A message in writing was received from the President of the United States, which was laid on the speaker's table." Concerning this minute book and the entry therein the journal clerk testified that such memorandums were usually made by him in his minute book on receipt of messages from the President, for the purpose of identification in case of several messages being received on the same day; and that a careful search of the journal of the house, as well as the clerk's minute book, showed that no message was received from the President on that day to which the memorandum could relate except the one in question. The journal clerk further testified that the message to which the entry in his minute book, under date of February 24, 1887, related, was undoubtedly the one containing the President's veto; that it was received between four and five o'clock on February 24, 1887; was opened for identification and laid on the speaker's table, and that according to the practices under the house rules a message received at that hour in the day would not be laid before the house by the speaker until the next day. It was therefore held, that the clerk's minute-book was not inconsistent with the journal entry, and that the evidence established conclusively the fact that the vetoed message was received on February 24, 1887, in due time.

In Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165, parol evidence was admitted for the purpose of showing that a bill purporting on its face to have been signed on the last day of the session was in fact signed on the next day; but this decision was overruled in Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 280; 89 Am. Dec. 93.

it.¹ When he intentionally parts with the control and gives up the possession of a signed bill to the person authorized by law to receive and take charge of bills approved, the signature is conclusive as to the fact of approval, even though he may afterwards wish to withdraw it, as, for instance, by sending a message to the house in which the bill originated expressing his objections to it.² But until he so parts with the bill he may withdraw his approval, even though he has signed the bill.³

The return of an approved bill or notification of the fact of approval is usually an act of courtesy rather than a legal duty.⁴ The bill approved must be that passed. A change made after the passage and before the approval invalidates the act in those

1. In National Land, etc., Co. v. Mead, 60 Vt. 257, it appeared that the bill was presented to the governor in due time, and that he signed it immediately below the signatures of the presiding officers of the legislature; that he afterwards discovered that the signatures were at the bottom of the first page of the bill, at the end of a section thereof, and not at the end of the entire bill; and that he then had all the names erased and sent the bill back to the officers of the legislature for re-signature, and it was by them so signed in the proper place, all before the time for the governor's approval had passed. In the hurry at the end of the session the governor failed to sign the bill a second time, but later, after the prescribed time had expired, signed the bill as of the date of the first signature. The validity of the bill was attacked, on the ground that it was not approved within the constitutional time, but its validity was sustained on the ground that the first signature of the governor's was sufficient, the court saying: "This bill passed both the senate and house, was presented to the governor, was carefully examined by him, and was by him approved and signed intentionally and understandingly. The bill thereby became a law. That which took place afterwards did not annul this enactment. It was not even so intended if the power existed. The governor did not attempt to withdraw his approval. The place of signing was as effectual as though it had been at the end of the bill; the fact appearing that it was intended as a signing and approval of the whole bill. The constitution does not require that a bill shall be signed at the end, or subscribed."

2. State v. Whisner, 35 Kan. 271; People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 281.

3. In People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 290, the governor had inadvertently placed his approval and name to an act of the legislature, which signing and approval had been announced by his private secretary in his routine of business, but without the knowledge of the governor, to the legislature, and it was held that this did not deprive the governor of his privilege of striking his approval from the act if the bill remained in his custody, the court saying: "The prominent fact in this case is that the bill in question was not, for a moment, out of the possession and control of the governor, after he had placed his name to it, as the facts show inadvertently, until he had erased his name, and returned the bill, with his objections, to the house in which it originated. During all this time he had complete control of it, and had he placed his approval to it, designedly and understandingly, he could withdraw it. As in every other department of the government, so in the executive, whilst the matter before it is in fieri, there is the locus pœnitentiæ—the right to reconsider—to change an opinion expressed, and to cancel a signature of approval. A power to rectify an error at the proper time, exists with all departments of the government, for they are all liable to err; it is an infirmity of our nature, from which the governor cannot claim exemption. The executive, in his judgment on a bill, is only concluded by his final act upon it."

4. State v. Whisner, 35 Kan. 271; People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 287; State v. Coahoma County, 64 Miss. 366.

In Burns v. Sewell (Minn. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 224, it was said that if the governor approves a bill he shall sign and deposit it in the office of the secretary of state, and notify the house where it originated; but this was a dictum only.

states where the enrollment is not conclusive.¹ If, however, that added or changed is distinguishable from and independent of the rest, the statute may be good in part.² The omission in the enrolled bill of words not essential to its substance or effect will not render the act invalid.³ A material variance between the subject expressed in the title of the bill passed as shown by the legislative journal and that approved, is fatal, otherwise if the variance is immaterial.⁴

d. RETURN—(1) In General.—Generally it is required that the executive, if he disapproves a bill, shall return it to the house in

1. Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; Moog v. Randolph, 77 Ala. 597; State v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293; 12 Am. St. Rep. 204; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; Smithee v. Campbell, 41 Ark. 471.

In Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721, a bill making judgments of courts of record a lien on all the property of the judgment debtor throughout the state was passed in the senate; in the house it was amended by restricting the lien to property in the county where the judgment should be recorded. The senate refused to concur in the amendment, and later both houses receded from the amendment and passed the original bill by itself. The enrolled bill presented to the governor, and signed by him, contained the said amendments, and the law was held invalid as a whole, on the ground that as signed it was an entirely different act from that passed by the legislature.

The rule in the text was upheld in Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 68. This case, however, was overruled in Ex parte Wren, 63 Miss. 512; 56 Am. Rep. 825, on the ground that the enrolled law approved by the governor and signed by the presiding officer of the legislature, was conclusive evidence of its valid enactment, and that therefore the courts could not look behind the statute to see whether or not the bill as approved differed from that passed by the legislature.

2. Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; State v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293; 12 Am. St. Rep. 204; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647. See infra, this title, Statutes Unconstitutional in Part.

In State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647, the 19th section of "an act to revise, simplify and abridge the rules, practices, pleading and form of the courts" of the state as approved by the governor, provided among other things that the courts for the county of Barnwell should be held at "Barnwell," but the act as passed by the legislature provided that the courts in the said county should be held at "Blackville." So much of section 19 as attempted to designate the place of holding court was held invalid as being different in legal effect from that passed by the legislature, while all the rest of the act was held valid.

Where a railroad company was granted a charter which provided that its road, commenced in 1873, must be finished within four years thereafter, or in 1877, or the charter would be forfeited, and in 1874 an amendatory act was passed, extending the time to finish the railroad, as its preamble showed, one section of such act as signed by the governor providing that if the said railroad was not finished within five years from 1870 (thus diminishing the time), the charter and amendment would be void, and the amendatory bill as passed had contained the date 1875 instead of 1870, this clause of the bill was held invalid while the rest of the act being distinct and severable was held valid. Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69.

Bracketed words not in the bill as it was approved by the governor have no part in the law. Robertson v. Baxter, 57 Mich. 127.

3. Sharp v. Merrill, 41 Minn. 492; State v. Robertson, 41 Kan. 200; Territory v. O'Connor, 5 Dakota 397; State v. Rabbitts, 46 Ohio St. 178; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683.

4. Stein v. Leeper, 78 Ala. 517. An immaterial change not altering the sense of the title will be disregarded. Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361; People v. Onondaga, 16 Mich. 254.

which it originated with his objections expressed in writing.¹ He must treat the bill as a whole; he cannot approve part and object to part.² Usually the time within which the return must be made is limited, and if the return is not made within such time, the bill becomes a law as it would if approved.³

Courts cannot inquire into the sufficiency of the objections of the governor to a bill, and a disapproval for any reason, however trivial or unsound, authorizes a return of the bill to the legislature, and prevents its becoming a law by lapse of time.⁴

(2) Mode.—The mode of return of a bill, like that of its presentation to the governor, must be such that his time for deliberation is ended and that of the legislature begun; the bill with objections must pass from the possession and control of the executive into the possession, actual or potential, of the legislature itself, so that the latter may have the opportunity for reconsideration.⁵ In returning a bill the governor may make

1. See various state constitutions.

2. In Porter v. Hughes (Arizona, 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 165, the governor signed the approved bill, and added after his signature that he approved the same, except as to a specified subdivision of a specified section, and returned the bill to the house in which it originated, where the veto was sustained. It was held, however, that the bill as a whole was approved, since the governor had no power to veto a single item of it.

3. Purpose of Limitation as to Time.—"The spirit of these limitations as to time was not to either disparage the importance of the functions of the governor as to legislation, or relieve him from a faithful performance of his duty in considering and forming an intelligent opinion of the bill presented, but it was to secure promptness of action on his part, and, in the case of the ten-day limitation, the purpose was also to extend his powers as to legislation beyond the end of the session of the legislature, whereas without it his powers would have expired with the session. The purpose of the section of the constitution was to require of the governor careful consideration of every bill before it can become a law, and the exercise of his judgment as a public official as to the wisdom of the proposed legislation, in the light of public interest, and to require an indication of such judgment by express approval, or by silent acquiescence after investigation, or by express disapproval. The authorities speak of the governor as being a component part of the law-making power in the exercise of these functions." Opinion in State v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293; 12 Am. St. Rep. 204.

The provision as to the time was intended to prevent the possibility of the governor withholding a bill and thus preventing its becoming a law. Tarlton v. Peggs, 18 Ind. 25.

4. Where the objection was, that the bill had not been signed by the secretary of state, the governor believing that this was fatal to the validity of the bill, the objection was held sufficient. Birdsall v. Carrick, 3 Nev. 154.

5. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 199; 2 Am. Rep. 432. In this case the messenger of the governor stepped into the senate chamber with the intent to return a bill and objections to the senate, but that body having adjourned for the day he returned the bill with the objections to the governor, who kept them in his control; this was held not a proper return to prevent the bill becoming a law.

Where an enrolled bill was, within the time prescribed for his action, delivered by the governor, with his objections thereto in writing, to the lieutenant-governor, by him to be presented to the senate, where it originated, on the first day of the next session thereof, which was the constitutional time for its proper return, who delivered the same to the secretary of state for safe custody only, till required for such presentation, with directions to keep the same in a secure and private place till that time, subject to be redelivered to the lieutenant-governor, or other person authorized by the governor to reuse of a messenger in sending it, provided the messenger properly announces his message.¹ Where it is important that a return shall be made on a particular day, and the legislature has adjourned for that day, or taken a recess, the bill and message can be delivered to the presiding or other officer of the legislature, to be called to its attention as soon as an opportunity thereafter may occur.²

(3) Prevention by Adjournment.—Where the return within the time prescribed is prevented by adjournment, an extension of

ceive and present them, it was held, that the secretary of state could not be compelled by mandamus to give a copy of it even, much less to certify it as a law, because the bill was not in his possession as secretary of state, as a law. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9.

1. "We are also of the opinion that the governor might send this message by any officer or member of the house, or other proper person, and if properly announced, as in this case it was, we see no reason why that would not be sufficient. If the governor returns the bill to the house in which it originated, and the house is properly notified that it is a message from the governor, neither the house nor the speaker can prevent its effect by refusing to receive it. The duty of the governor is performed when he returns the bill with his objections to the house in which the bill originated and gives them proper notice, whether it is received or not." Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 609. See Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 199; 2 Am. Rep. 432. So where a bill was returned, with objections, to the proper house and given to the minute-clerk thereof, though it was not announced to the house until the next morning, such a return was considered sufficient. U. S. v. Allen, 36 Fed. Rep. 174.

2. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 203; 2 Am. Rep. 432; Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 610; Corwin v. Comptroller Gen'l, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 390.

In Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 203; 2 Am. Rep. 432, the court said: "It was the duty of the messenger to communicate to the senate the message which he bore from the executive on that occasion. This was to be done in the most direct manner that circumstances would permit. It was impossible for him to immediately announce it to the senate, for that body was not in session. It had a right to be in recess, if it desired so to be, and it was not in the power of the executive or his messenger to recall it to its sittings. But its right to be in recess was no greater or higher than was the right of the executive to return the bill in question for its reconsideration; nor is there any reason why the free exercise of these admitted rights upon the part of the senate and governor, respectively, should bring them into collision. The senate has the unqualified constitutional power to adjourn for three consecutive days. (Art. IV, § 15, Constitution.) It must often happen that these three days will include the last day allowed the executive for the exercise of the veto power against the passage of a particular senate bill. Now, if the mere fact of the recess of the senate, thus constitutionally taken, does operate to defeat, in a measure, the exercise of the veto power conferred on the executive by the constitution, then we have the strange spectacle of an irreconcilable conflict between the several clauses of that instrument itself, by which the senate, by the mere exercise of its own admitted constitutional authority to adjourn, violates the equally clear constitutional right of the executive to have it kept in session. We are of the opinion that the adjournment of the senate on March 31st did not curtail the veto power of the executive over the bill in question, nor should it even have embarrassed him in its exercise. The return should have been made in such manner as the circumstances would permit; it should, at all events, have left the bill and message beyond the executive control, and, if need be, in the immediate custody of some proper person who would be likely to deliver it to the senate at the first opportunity. The best return that the circumstances would admit would, in our judgment, be a proper return. The maxim lex non cogit ad impossibilia would be applicable to such a condition of affairs. We know of no other rule, either, upon which the clear right of the governor time is usually provided for.¹ The adjournment must be a final adjournment, and not an adjournment from day to day.² It has been held that the fact of adjournment might be shown by parol evidence.³ Where the executive takes action on a bill, or by failing to act allows it to become a law after adjournment has precluded a return, he is required usually to file the bill in the office of the secretary of state;⁴ thus he precludes himself from changing his decision, even though the time within which he might have acted has not expired.⁵

9. Enactment Without Executive Approval.—If the executive neither signs a bill approving it, nor returns it to the house where it originated, with his objections, within the time allowed him, the bill, as a rule, becomes a law.⁶ The bill is none the less to make the return to the senate can be reconciled with the equally clear right of the senate to be in recess at the time."

1. See various state constitutions.

The Massachusetts Constitution declares that "in order to prevent unnecessary delays, if any bill or resolve shall not be returned by the governor within five days after it shall have been presented, the same shall have the force of a law;" nothing being said as to the effect of an adjournment of the legislature within the prescribed five days. But it was held in Opinion of the Justices, 3 Mass. 567, that where the bill was laid before the governor for his approval less than five days before the final adjournment of the legislature and not acted on by him, it had not the force of law.

2. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 205; 2 Am. Rep. 432; Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 610; Corwin v. Comptroller Gen'l, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 390; Opinion of Justices, 3 Mass. 567.

"Upon this point there can be no doubt; the adjournment referred to in a provision of the constitution is not, we think, the ordinary recess, or adjournment from time to time during the session, but the final adjournment at the end of the session; in fact this is the only adjournment, we think, which can prevent a return of a bill within the time limited." Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 610.

A bill retained by the governor for more than three days while the legislature was in actual session, thereby became a law under the constitution of Nebraska, notwithstanding that soon after it was presented to him for his approval the legislature adjourned from the 29th of March to the 30th of May of that year. "The constitutional restriction applies to an adjournment sine die and not to one from time to time." Muller v. Hurford, 11 Neb. 377.

A case of importance arose in Illinois. The two houses of the legislature could not agree as to the time of adjournment, and the governor assuming that a sufficient disagreement existed to justify a resort to his constitutional power, attempted to adjourn the legislature by proclamation. Both houses formally protested against this, but most of the members settled their accounts with the state and left the capital. No sessions of the legislature were held and no entries made on the journal for more than ten days. It was held that even though there had been no formal joint resolution for adjournment in accordance with the rules of the legislature, the legislature, having no power to take a recess for more than two days at a time, had, under the constitution, finally adjourned and prevented a return of the bill by the governor. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 153.

3. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9.

4. See infra, this title, Filing of Enrolled Bills.

5. Tarlton v. Peggs, 18 Ind. 24; Corwin v. Comptroller Gen'l, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 390.

6. Danielly v. Cabaniss, 52 Ga. 211; McNeil v. Com., 12 Bush. (Ky.) 727; Tarlton v. Peggs, 18 Ind. 24. See Seven Hickory v. Ellery, 103 U. S. 423. Where a bill was presented to the governor which he stated that he should veto, and which the legislature allowed the member offering it to withdraw, and the member kept possession of it for a long time, it was held that under the circumstances the governor's time for disapproval had been unduly shortened, and that the bill did not become a law although the executive may have sent a veto message after the time had expired.¹

10. Passage Over Veto.—If a bill is returned with objections from the executive, it may still become a law by passage through both houses with the necessary majority required by the constitution. In such a case the enactment is complete upon the prescribed vote of both houses.²

11. Authentication.—An enrolled bill duly passed and approved is authenticated sufficiently by the signatures of the presiding officers of each legislative branch and of the governor.³ The legislative journal may be appealed to to show that an act has been vetoed and passed over the veto.⁴ In such case the bill need not be attested by the presiding officers of the legislature a second time.⁵

12. Filing of Enrolled Bills.—Under constitution, statute or usage, it is usually the duty of that person, or body, at whose hands a bill receives its final sanction, to deliver it for filing to the officer authorized to receive and preserve it; this is usually the secretary of state.⁶

a law by the failure of the governor to return it within the prescribed time. McKenzie v. Moore (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 483.

The rule in the text is not necessarily applicable where the return by the executive is prevented by the adjournment of the legislature. See supra, this title, "Prevention by Adjournment."

1. Corwin v. Comptroller Gen'l, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 390; Tarlton v. Peggs, 18 Ind. 25.

2. See various state constitutions; also Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449.

3. Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes, 38 Ill. 185. See State v. Kiesewetter, 45 Ohio St. 258; Scarborough v. Robinson, 81 N. Car. 418; Speer v. Plank Road Co., 22 Pa. St. 276.

4. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 434, distinguishing Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 515; 95 Am. Dec. 710; Bender v. State, 53 Ind. 254; Madison County v. Burford, 93 Ind. 383; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449. See also Ex parte Wren, 63 Miss. 535; 56 Am. Rep. 825; In re Welman, 20 Vt. 656.

5. State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449.

6. Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 208; 2 Am. Rep. 432; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9.

In Illinois it is provided by statute that "all public acts, laws and resolutions which have been or shall be passed by the general assembly of this state, shall be carefully deposited in the office of secretary of state, and the secretary of state is hereby charged with the safe-keeping of said office and all laws, acts, resolutions and records deposited, or which shall hereafter be deposited therein.' This law does not prescribe the mode in which the laws shall be conveyed to the secretary's office, but that duty imperatively devolves upon that department in whose hands or by whose action they become finished and acquire vitality. If a law receives the last sanction required by the constitution to give it vitality, in the hands of the governor, either by being approved and signed by him or remaining in his hands for ten days, then the duty of depositing it in the secretary's office may reasonably devolve upon him, while a law which has been vetoed by the governor, and subsequently passed by both houses, with the constitutional majority, would properly be sent to the secretary's office from the house in which it was last passed." Caton, J., in People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 286.

In Kansas there is a similar statute and ruling. State v. Whisner, 35 Kan. 280.

In State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 33, the court said: "From the earliest times, so far as I have been able to ascertain, it has been the invariable course of legislative practice in this state, for the speaker of each house to sign the bill as finally engrossed and passed. It is likewise certified by indorsement by the clerk of the house in which it originated. With these attestations of authenticity upon it, it is then filed in the office of the secretary of state. This has been the course of proceeding from certainly a very remote period to the present time; under our present constitution the written approval of the governor is requisite. There seems, therefore, to be no doubt whatever that these copies, thus authenticated and filed, are to be regarded as enrolled bills, corresponding in their general character, and partaking, if not in all, at least in most respects, of the nature of parliamentary rolls. In the statute book they are frequently referred to as enrolled bills; and if we go back to provincial times, we find indorsed upon these copies, with the executive approval, a direction to enroll them, which meant nothing more than that they were to be filed. These are the characteristics and nature of the copies of legislative bills deposited according to the ordinary routine in the office of the secretary of state."

13. Legislative Journal—a. IN GENERAL.—That each house of the legislature must keep a journal of its proceedings is a common requirement in state constitutions,¹ and where the record therein of specific action taken, as, for instance, of a yea and nay vote on the final passage of a bill, or the signature of the presiding officers to the bill, is also required by the constitution, the failure of

In New York, "it is the duty of the secretary of state to receive and deposit in his office every bill which shall have passed the senate and assembly and which shall have been approved and signed by the governor. (1 R. S. 187. §§ 10, 11.) 'He shall certify and indorse upon every such bill the day, month and year when the same became a law, and such certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the facts therein declared.' The fact that the bill has passed the senate and assembly is evidence to the governor by the certificates of both the presiding officers of those houses, and then when the governor approves and signs the bill and the same is deposited in the office of the secretary of state, and by him indorsed, the record is made up and completed, the bill has become an act, and the act has become one of the statute laws of the state." Campbell, J., in People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 282; 88 Am. Dec. 377.

1. The constitution of Missouri does not expressly require a journal to be kept, though one is evidently contemplated. Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 365; 66 Am. Dec. 673.

The provision of the Illinois constitution does not require that the officers of the general assembly shall sign a record of the proceedings of either house, or that the copying clerks shall certify to the accuracy of their work. Miller v. Goodwin, 70 Ill. 659.

A supplement to the journal printed as part thereof by order of the legislature constitutes a portion of the journal. Detroit v. Assessors, 91 Mich. 78.

The constitution of Minnesota provides that each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings and from time to time publish the same; and the yeas and nays when taken on any question, shall be entered in such journals. And this provision requires that when the yeas and nays are taken, they must be so entered in the journal. Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451.

Where the constitution provided that "each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings and cause the same to be published immediately after the close of the session; and when practicable the minutes of each day's session shall be printed and placed in the hands of members on the day following; and the original journal shall be preserved after publication in the office of secretary of state, but there shall be required no other record thereof," and in pursuance of that article the legislature enacted that "the state printers shall supply each house of the general assembly with proof sheets of its official journal containing the proceedings of the previous day of meeting; and that within two days after the journal of each house shall have been approved the state printer shall publish the same as so approved once in the official journal of the state, and the same matter so published shall be made up in book form as provided elsewhere in the act;" it was held that the journals published in the official journal and afterwards bound in volumes constituted the official journal, and not the proof sheets furnished to the legislators as provided. State v. Mason, 43 La. Ann. 590.

a journal to show compliance with such a requirement is, in states where the journal is evidence, fatal to the validity of the bill passed.¹ In such states the journal is a public record, of which the courts take judicial notice.²

While courts differ as to the propriety of resorting to the journal for the purpose of impeaching the validity of an act passed by the legislature, the courts of all states agree in asserting their right to consult the journal for the purpose of ascertaining the existence of specific facts not tending to bring in question the validity of a legislative enactment.³

1. Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 396; State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599; Perry v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; 58 Am. Dec. 571; Turley v. Logan County, 17 Ill. 153; People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 131; 85 Am. Dec. 348; Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes, 38 Ill. 175; Glidewell v. Martin, 51 Ark. 559; Smithee v. Garth, 33 Ark. 17; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 92; 13 Am. Rep. 640; Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 1; Hull v. Miller, 4 Neb. 506; Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 364; 66 Am. Dec. 673. See infra, this title, The Enrolled Bill.

2. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 602; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Wren, 43 Ill. 77; Bedard v. Hall, 44 Ill. 91; Grob v. Cushman, 45 Ill. 119; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch, 67 Ill. 149; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; 58 Am. Dec. 571; Turley v. Logan County, 17 Ill. 151; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; State v. Moffitt, 5 Ohio 358; Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 1; Southwark Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446; People v. Chenango County, 8 N. Y. 317; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 430; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Gardiner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499; McDonald v. State, 80 Wis. 407; In re Ryan, 80 Wis. 414.

In Iowa the journals certified by the secretaries of the respective houses are by statute made proof of legislative proceedings. Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 552.

In Illinois, it is held that although for some purposes the court may take judicial notice of legislative journals, yet it is not the province of the court, at the suggestion or request of counsel, to undertake to explore the journal for the purpose of ascertaining the manner in which a law, duly certified, went through the legislature and into the hands of the governor. If the party desires to raise this question, he must make the requisite proof of the fact by means of the legislative journals and introduce that proof into the record. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Wren, 43 Ill. 77, citing Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 299; 58 Am. Dec. 571; Grob v. Cushman, 45 Ill. 119.

The journals will not be judicially noticed on appeal when not put in evidence at the trial. Bedard v. Hall, 44 Ill. 91.

Journal Not a Record in Other States.—In other states where the enrolled bill is held to be conclusive, the journal is not a public record. See Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. St. 190; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650. In this latter case it was held that the journals did not import absolute verity.

"If a bill of this character did not receive the vote of a majority of all the members, or was not passed in the manner required by the constitution, the only mode of reaching the question is by an allegation of that fact in an appropriate pleading, and copies of the journals of the general assembly printed by the public printer offered as evidence to sustain the defense. Such seems to have been contemplated by the general statutes, and a proper construction of those statutes would repel the idea that the courts of the state can take judicial notice of what appears on the legislative journals." Auditor v. Haycraft, 14 Bush (Ky.) 288.

3. U. S. v. Ballin, 144 U. S. 1; Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 364; 66 Am. Dec. 673; Hollingsworth v.

b. CONCLUSIVENESS.—Where the journal is consulted, whether to ascertain the existence of a collateral fact or to impeach directly the validity of a law, the record there found is conclusive as to the facts recited. They cannot be impeached in the courts by parol evidence for either mistake, fraud, or collusion. The legislature alone has the power to correct its record.¹

Thompson (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 1; Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 295; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 434.

In Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 678, which case is the leading one of the United States Supreme Court, declaring that a duly authenticated enrolled law in the secretary of state's office cannot be impeached as to its validity by the journals of Congress, the rule in the text was declared, and Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 511, distinguished, on the ground that in that case the date of taking effect, not the validity or invalidity of the law, was to be ascertained from the journals.

"Whenever a question arises in a court of law of the existence of a statute, or of the time when a statute took effect, or of the precise terms of a statute, the judges who are called upon to decide it have a right to resort to any source of information which, in its nature, is capable of conveying to the judicial mind a clear and satisfactory answer to such question; always seeking first for that which in its nature is most appropriate, unless the positive law has enacted a different rule." Miller, J., in Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499, quoted by Bradley, J., in U. S. v. Ballin, 144 U. S. 3, where it was decided that the constitution providing that "the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal," it could be assumed by reason of this clause that reference may be had to the journal to see whether the yeas and nays were ordered, and if so, what was the vote disclosed thereby.

In Ex parte Wren, 63 Miss. 535; 56 Am. Rep. 825, which case decided that the courts could not go behind the enrolled act and inspect the journal for the purpose of impeaching the validity of the act, the court said: "Undoubtedly the journals may be evidence and may be resorted to in some cases and must be as to some matters. They were properly looked to in Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499, in the effort to fix the date of approval of a bill by the President. They must furnish the evidence that a bill returned by the governor without his signature and with his objections was so dealt with as to become a law, for it is only by the approval of two-thirds of both houses determined by yeas and nays entered on the journal of each house that such a bill can become a law. And as the constitution so provides and has not prescribed any means of attesting or authenticating the concurrence of those requisites to such a bill becoming a law, it rests necessarily on the journal, which must show that although the bill was not signed by the governor but returned with objections it nevertheless became a law according to the constitution. The case is peculiar and extraordinary and not governed by the rules applicable to the ordinary case where the governor signs the bill. The provision for the signing of bills by the presiding officers does not apply here, and whether the bill on reconsideration became a law may depend on those things prescribed and which cannot be shown except by the journals of both houses. Had the constitution provided any means of authentication of such action by the two houses, as to make a bill returned by the governor with his objections a law, it would have been exclusive, but in the absence of such provisions the journals are the memorial of the action which converts a bill returned by the governor with his objections into a law."

In Edgar v. Randolph County, 70 Ind. 338, the journals were looked to for the purpose of ascertaining the intent of the legislature in passing a bill which was being construed by the court.

So the legislative journals are evidence for the purpose of identifying a bill to which another act passed by the legislature referred. Southwark Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446.

1. McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 514; 95 Am. Dec. 710; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 44 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; Annapolis v. Harwood, 32 Md. 471; Attorney Gen'l v. Menominee County, 89

Mich. 552; Attorney Gen'l v. Rice, 64 Mich. 391; Detroit v. Assessors, 91 Mich. 84; Wise v. Bigger, 79 Va. 269; Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 543; Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 194; State v. Moffitt, 5 Ohio 363; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 1; White v. Hinton, 3 Wyoming 753; State v. Swift, 10 Nev. 176; 21 Am. Rep. 721; Weeks v. Smith, 81 Me. 538. See Andrews v. Boylston, 110 Mass. 214.

"Assuming, though without deciding, that the facts which the constitution requires to be placed on the journal may be appealed to on the question whether a law has been legally enacted, yet, if reference may be had to such journal, it must be assumed to speak the truth. It cannot be that we can refer to the journal for the purpose of impeaching a statute properly authenticated and approved, and then supplement and strengthen that impeachment by parol evidence that the facts stated on the journal are not true, or that other facts existed which, if stated on the journal, would give force to the impeachment." Brewer, J., in U. S. v. Ballin, 144 U. S. 4.

The journal must be held conclusive evidence of the facts which appear on its face, because it must be presumed that the members as a body inspected it and made all necessary corrections before they allowed it to assume the character of a journal of their proceedings. . . . The house keeping the journal is the only tribunal by which it can be corrected, and until corrected by such authority it must be considered conclusive as to the facts which it contains. McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; quoted with approval in Detroit v. Assessors, 91 Mich. 85.

"By a consensus of authority almost unanimous, these records (journals and records in the secretary of state's office) are conclusive. Parol testimony cannot be admitted to impeach them. From these records the statutes are published for the information of the people and the courts. To these records resort is had in case of any question as to the correctness of the published statutes. On these records reliance is had by the bench, the bar, and the public, of necessity and of right. Resort cannot be had to the recollection of individuals to show what the law is or is not, or to impeach these solemn records made by the members and officers of the legislature, and by the governor and the secretary under the sanction of their official oaths, and to prove against the records, and in spite of them, the astounding proposition that the governor and both houses of the legislature falsely and illegally concerted together to falsify the record of the two houses and of the secretary's office. It is possible that all this might, in the course of history, occur. It is much more probable that parol testimony to that effect would, in any particular instance, be mistaken or false. If it should result from these principles that on rare occasions validity should be given to legislation not strictly regular in its enactment, the evil would be much less than the unsettling of the evidentiary foundation of all statutory law, and the weakening of public faith in all existing legislative enactments, which would result from throwing open the records of legislative action to impeachment by parol testimony whenever the interest or caprice of individuals may prompt them to such a course. It is not to be tolerated that the courts or the people should depend upon or resort to the recollection of individuals for the statutory law." Conaway, J., in White v. Hinton, 3 Wyoming 753.

"Out of a multitude of citations not one is found in which any court has assumed to go beyond the proceedings of the legislature, as recorded in the journals required to be kept in each of its branches, on the question whether a law has been adopted. And if reasons for this limitation upon judicial inquiry in such matters have not generally been stated, it doubtless arises from the fact that they are apparent. Imperative reasons of public policy require that the authenticity of laws should rest upon public memorials of the most permanent character. They should be public, because all are required to conform to them; they should be permanent, that rights acquired to-day upon the faith of what has been declared to be law shall not be destroyed to-morrow, or at some remote period of time, by facts resting only in the memory of individuals. . . . The possible consequences of limiting judicial inquiry to what is shown by the journal is much exaggerated. It is not perceived how any limited number of members, without the acquiescence, or such indifference as would amount to acquiescence, of the majority, could make up a journal that would revolutionize the legislature and deprive the people of their duly elected representatives. The sup-

The same legislature which passed the law may correct its journals at the same or a subsequent session so as to make the truth appear.¹

c. PROOF.—The printed journals of the legislature made up and printed pursuant to a statute of the state and published by its authority, are competent evidence of the contents of the original journals.² Where the original written journals on file in the office of the secretary of state differ in any material particular from the posed case of less than a majority of this court causing a judgment to be entered of record is not apropos. For if it were done the only remedy would be in this court, for the reason that there is no other tribunal or department of the government that could afford one. And by parity of reasoning the only correction that can be made in a legislative journal is by the body that caused it to be made. The suggestion that fraud or bad motives in those who caused it to be made might defeat the remedy would apply to the one case as well as to the other. But confidence must be reposed somewhere, and why not in a legislative body, as to the keeping of its journals, as well as in this court, as to the keeping of its records? Besides, the people are the final tribunal before whom, as a rule, such delinquencies must be settled." Minshall, J., in State v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 348.

Compare State v. Secretary of State, 43 La. Ann. 625, which case apparently allowed evidence to be admitted for the purpose of altering the journal, though the court said: "Of course the official journals import absolute verity and form conclusive proof as to the proceedings themselves, when considered in reference to any other evidence of such proceedings; but the question here is as to what constitutes the journals, and whether the printed journals have been made the actual repository of the proceedings of the two houses of the assembly as they transpired. . . . It is quite clear to our mind that we should most certainly assume much too great and too grave a responsibility, and extend the doctrine of legal presumptions much too far if we were to venture the assertion that legislative journals form conclusive proof of legislative proceedings, and decline to entertain and consider evidence of unauthorized alterations and interpolations in the journals whereby it could be made to appear that they did not faithfully and truthfully recite the proceedings as they did transpire. The true distinction to be taken, in our opinion, is that no extrinsic proof is admissible to contradict the facts which are established by the journal; but fraud, error, mistake, or the improper exercise of judgment on the part of a state agent or representative existing intrinsically may be shown. This is not a question of what proof is furnished by the journals as contradistinguished from other proof of a given state of facts; but it is a question of the journals being in themselves a correct exposition of the facts as they happened."

1. Turley v. Logan Co., 17 Ill. 150; Detroit v. Assessors, 91 Mich. 86; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424.

Under a resolution of the state senate dispensing with the reading of the daily journal before the session, and authorizing the secretary of the house to make all necessary corrections in the journal from day to day, he is held authorized to correct an entry which by mistake stated that the vote taken on the passage of a bill was reconsidered, by stating, at the close of the journal on a page before his certificate under the head of "errata in the record of bills," that the vote reconsidered was that by which the senate had concurred in certain house amendments to the bill, which correction might be so made at any time prior to the final adjournment. People v. Burch, 84 Mich. 408.

Where the secretary was so authorized to make corrections in the journal, and it does not affirmatively appear at what time the secretary made the correction, it will be presumed to have been made on or before the date of his certificate; and if the final adjournment was had on that day, it will also be presumed to have been made before such adjournment, and that it was authorized by the senate, and that the true journal entry of the proceeding is as corrected by the "errata." People v. Burch, 84 Mich. 408.

2. Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451; printed journals, the original written journals are the authentic official records and must control.¹

d. JOURNAL AS EVIDENCE.—See infra, this title, The Enrolled Bill.

14. The Enrolled Bill—a. PRIMA FACIE VALIDITY.—The enrolled bill is the original act,² and is to be looked to when the act as printed in the statute book is attacked.³ If the two differ, the bill as enrolled controls.⁴ If authenticated properly, it is presumed Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667; Miller v. Goodwin, 70 Ill. 659. See Root v. King, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 613. So a transcript from the journal record of either house of the legislature, of its proceedings, properly certified, is admissible in evidence to prove the facts therein recorded. It is not necessary to produce the original minutes made by the officers of the respective houses, or copies thereof. Miller v. Goodwin, 70 Ill. 659; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Wren, 43 Ill. 77.

1. Santa Clara County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 385; Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200.

Where the bound volume of the journal at the end of the session differs from the parts thereof officially published from day to day during the session, it will be presumed that the differences are the result of amendment by the house, and the bound volume is held conclusive. Detroit v. Assessors, 91 Mich. 86.

In Missouri, by statute, it is declared that the printed journals of the senate and house of representatives and all public documents and reports therein contained, and all reports or documents printed by order of the state or of either house of the general assembly, or purporting to be printed by authority thereof, shall be prima facie evidence to the same extent that duly authenticated copies of the originals would be. And where the validity of a statute was questioned for the first time on an appeal on the ground that it was not passed by the necessary constitutional majority, and, to establish that fact, the journals of the legislature were referred to, the court held that the question not having been raised in the circuit court it could not be considered for the first time on appeal; giving as a reason that the printed journals were only prima facie evidence under the statute, liable to be rebutted, and that on an appeal the right of rebuttal could not be allowed. Bradley v. West, 60 Mo. 33.

2. Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 554.

In Iowa, it is provided by statute that the original acts of the general assembly shall be deposited with and kept by the secretary of state. There is no provision in the constitution or by statute for the enrollment of a bill, act, or joint resolution which has passed the general assembly. "There is an implication in the constitution that the bills which are introduced shall be signed by the presiding officers of each house, but the legislative practice has always been to enroll a bill or joint resolution, and it is such that are always presented to the presiding officers of each house, signed by them, and filed and preserved in the office of the secretary of state. This practice existed prior to the adoption of the present constitution and no doubt was well known to the members of the constitutional convention. We, therefore, incline to think the enrolled bill is and should be regarded as the original act; but it is difficult to say enrollment is essential to the validity of a law or statute. If the enrollment was omitted, and the original bill, as introduced and passed by the general assembly, was signed by the presiding officers of the two houses and approved by the governor, we are not prepared to say it would not be a valid and constitutional law." Seevers, J., in Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 554.

3. Purdy v. People, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 384; De Bow v. People, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 9; Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. St. 192.

Where there are errors in copies of the act, the court will inform itself by appealing to the original act on file in office of the secretary of state. State v. Clare, 5 Iowa 509.

4. Epstin v. Severson, 79 Ga. 718; Potter v. State, 92 Ala. 37.

The punctuation of a printed act which had been accepted by the legislature has been preferred to the punctuation of the enrolled act. Ward v. Beale (Ky. 1889), 14 S. W. Rep. 967.

"It will be noticed that the legislain all the states, in the absence of proof to the contrary, to have been enacted in conformity to constitutional provisions.¹ To contradict the enrolled bill in those states where it is not conclusive, the legislative journals are the best evidence.² In some states, tive journals and the enrolled bills are the only records required by law to be kept for the purpose of showing any of the legislative proceedings. There is no provision for preserving the engrossed bills as a record of the legislative proceedings; and, as the legislative journals and the enrolled bills are, by law, records, and the only records, of legislative proceedings, they must of course import absolute verity, and be conclusive proof as to whether any particular bill has passed the legislature, when it passed, how it passed, and whether it is valid or not." Valentine, J., in Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 166.

1. Jennings v. Russell, 92 Ala. 603; Walker v. Griffith, 60 Ala. 361; Harrison v. Gordy, 57 Ala. 49; Worthan v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 516; English v. Oliver, 28 Ark. 317; In re Roberts, 5 Colo. 525; Eld v. Gorham, 20 Conn. 7; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 121; Turley v. Logan Co., 17 Ill. 151; Bedard v. Hall, 44 Ill. 91; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Wren, 43 Ill. 77; Binz v. Weber, 81 Ill. 288; Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 181; Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160; Hensoldt v. Petersburg, 63 Ill. 157; Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 11; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; Duncombe v. Prindle, 12 Iowa 1; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Manhattan, 45 Kan. 419; Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 194; In re Vanderberg, 28 Kan. 243; Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545; Hollingsworth v. Thompson (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 1; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203; Annapolis v. Harwood, 32 Md. 471; People v. McElroy, 72 Mich. 446; State v. Hastings, 24 Minn. 78; Lowell v. North, 4 Minn. 32; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143; Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 68; Bradley v. West, 60 Mo. 33; State v. Wray, 109 Mo. 594; Hull v. Miller, 4 Neb. 503; State v. Swift, 10 Nev. 176; Opinion of Justices, 35 N. H. 579; Opinion of Justices, 52 N. H. 622; People v. Chenango County, 8 N. Y. 317; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 558; State v. Rabbits, 46 Ohio St. 178; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Currie v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Oregon 566; Erie, etc., R. Co.

v. Casey, 26 Pa. St. 287; Speer v. Plank-Road Co., 22 Pa. St. 376; State v. Brown, 33 S. Car. 151; State v. McConnell, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 332; Gains v. Horrigan, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 608; Usener v. State, 8 Tex. App. 177; Blessing v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People (Ill. 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 174.

The enrolled statute on file in the office of the secretary of state is very strong presumptive evidence of the regularity of the passage of the statute and of its validity; and it is conclusive evidence of such regularity and validity, unless the journals of the legislature fairly, concisely, and beyond a doubt show that the act was not passed regularly or legally. State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724.

The certificate of the secretary of state indorsed on the enrolled bill, showing what proceedings were had in either branch of the general assembly in relation to the passage of a bill, is competent evidence to show whether or not the same was passed in the constitutional mode. And where such certificate in due form purports to give all the proceedings, there can be no inference that any further proceedings were had in relation to the passage of the bill. Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160.

Where the journals of the legislature were not before the court, and from a certified copy of the original draft of an act of the legislature it appeared that the draft was upon paper headed "a joint resolution," which words were marked but and the words "a bill" substituted, it was presumed, in the absence of marginal notes, that the substitution was made by the draftsman and that the original paper was introduced as a bill and not as a joint resolution. State v. Browne, 33 S. Car. 151.

Where an indictment was demurred to on the ground that the statute on which it was based was not constitutionally passed, in the absence of the legislative journals the law was presumed to be validly enacted, and the indictment was sustained. State v. Wray, 109 Mo. 594.

2. As to the states in which the enrolled bill is conclusive, and as to those where the journal is evidence, but not the only evidence, the original engrossed bill has been admitted in evidence.¹ In either case the evidence must be clear and convincing and show the defect beyond doubt, or the statute will be upheld.² If, however, the

in which the journals may be resorted to, see, infra, this title, First View—Second View.

1. Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 463; 20 Am. Rep. 69.

It has been held that only the enrolled statute, the engrossed bills, and the journals can be admitted. Hughes v. Felton, 11 Colo. 489, citing Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 195.

In Hollingsworth v. Thompson (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 1, the original engrossed house bill with all indorsements thereon, including the original senate amendment attached thereto, was received in evidence against the objection that "the journals of the house are the best and exclusive evidence of the proceedings of said house, and that no other of any kind is admissible." And the court decided on appeal that the bill was properly admitted.

In Arkansas, where the engrossed bill is filed by law in the office of the secretary of state, it was held admissible. Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 212; Loftin v. Watson, 32 Ark. 414; Haney v. State, 34 Ark. 263; Scott v. Clark County, 34 Ark. 283.

"But, at all events, it is urged that we cannot go behind the journals for the purpose of examining the draft of the bill. In Loftin v. Watson, 32 Ark. 414, and in Haney v. State, 34 Ark. 263, this court did examine the original bills introduced into the legislature. The true rule upon this subject was enunciated in Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499: 'We are of opinion, therefore, on principle as well as authority, that whenever a question arises in a court of law of the existence of a statute, as of the time when a statute took effect, or of the precise terms of a statute, the judges who are called upon to decide have a right to resort to any source of information which, in its nature, is capable of conveying to the judicial mind a clear and satisfactory answer to such question; always seeking first for that which, in its nature, is most appropriate, unless the positive law has enacted a different rule.'" Smith, J., in Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 211.

Parol Evidence.—In California, parol evidence was admitted to show that the governor approved of a bill one day later than the time appearing for such approval on the face of the enrolled bill. Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 155. Afterwards overruled by Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253; 89 Am. Dec. 93.

Where the time of the return of a bill by the governor with his objections to the legislature was in question, the testimony of the journal clerk and his private minute book were admitted in evidence to determine the fact, but not to contradict the journal. U. S. v. Allen, 36 Fed. Rep. 174, citing Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499.

2. State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143; Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 18. See cases cited in the preceding notes.

Where a bill was duly passed by both branches of the legislature many years before an attempt to impeach it was made, and the senate journal showed that the senate concurred in certain slight amendments made to the bill by the house, but does not show affirmatively whether the yeas and nays were taken on said concurrence, and the yeas and nays on such concurrence are not entered in the journal, the act was held valid; it having been generally considered so, and many rights having accrued thereunder. Leavenworth County v. Higginbotham, 17 Kan. 62.

"If there is any room to doubt as to what the journals of the legislature show, if they are merely silent or ambiguous, or if it is possible to explain them upon the hypothesis that the enrolled statute is correct and valid, then it is the duty of the courts to hold that the enrolled statute is valid." Valentine, J., in State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 731.

In Tennessee, an act was passed on Feb. 8, 1870, and on the following day steps were taken under it, on which the validity of bonds issued rested, and afterwards the validity of the bonds was attacked on the ground that the bill was not actually signed by the presiding officers of the legislature until after the aforesaid steps were taken. The journal entries of the senate showed, one on Feb. 18th that the committee on enrolled bills reported to enrolled bill is not properly authenticated, the presumption of regularity is gone, and the court usually looks behind the act to the journals of the legislature to ascertain the facts.¹

In Illinois, it has been held that where an act was not authenticated as prescribed by the revised statutes, the court had no legal evidence of the existence of the law before it, and therefore would not take notice of such law, or act thereon.²

b. EVIDENCE TO IMPEACH.—The validity of an enactment depends on whether constitutional provisions governing the mode of enactment have been complied with. Generally speaking, if this has been done, the act is valid; otherwise, it is void.³ The rule generally accepted is that the only competent evidence to the senate that they had examined the bill and found "it correctly enrolled;" and one on Feb. 21st, that a message was received by the senate from the house returning the said bill signed. It was contended that it appeared from this that the bill was not enrolled in the senate until Feb. 21st, at which date the house transmitted the bill to the senate. For the support of this proposition it was asserted that a bill is never signed by the speaker until it is enrolled or engrossed. The court held that the above entries did not necessarily prove the date of the enrollment of the bill, for it might have been enrolled prior to that date, or it might have been signed before it was enrolled; there being, therefore, doubt as to the matter, the act was held valid. Nelson v. Haywood County, 91 Tenn. 596.

1. Rumsey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 130 N. Y. 92; Ewing v. Duncan, 81 Tex. 230; People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 276; 13 Am. Rep. 581; Leavenworth County v. Higgenbotham, 17 Kan. 62; Burr v. Ross, 19 Ark. 250.

"But if the record of the act itself carry its death's wound in itself, then, it is true, that the parchment—no, nor the great seal, either, to the original act or to the exemplification of it—will not serve, as in the 4 H. 7, 18, where the act was by the king, with the consent of the lords (omitting the commons), and was judged therefore void." Rex v. Arundel, Hob. 110.

In Burr v. Ross, 19 Ark. 250, doubt of passage of the bill appeared on the face of the act itself, and the court, looking to the journal, discovered that the bill had not been passed, and declared the act void.

Where, however, an act duly passed by the legislature was not in any way authenticated, the court refused either to enforce it or to compel its authentication. State v. Robinson, 81 N. Car. 409.

Where there is a manifest error in the certificate of the secretary of one of the houses of the legislature attached to the bill, the journal of that house will be examined. Ewing v. Duncan, 81 Tex. 230.

In New York, it is provided that the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the legislature is requisite to every bill appropriating the public moneys or property for local or private purposes, and no bill shall be deemed to have passed by the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each house unless so certified by the presiding officer of each house. And where the enrolled statute stated that it had been passed by a two-thirds' vote, but the certificate of the presiding officer of the assembly failed to state whether it had so passed, it was held that, the certificate being defective, the enrolled act was not conclusive to overcome the presumption created by the statement of the secretary in the session laws; and that in such case the journal of the house whose presiding officer had made the defective certificate must be resorted to for the purpose of determining the fact. Rumsey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 130 N. Y. 88. But see People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 276; 13 Am. Rep. 581.

2. Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes, 38 Ill. 189; Burritt v. Comr's of State Contracts, 120 Ill. 332. The Arizona court follows the same rule, Graves v. Alsop, 1 Arizona 274.

It was held incompetent to show by parol evidence that an act had passed where the journal only stated that the bill had been reported. Covington v. Ludlow, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 295.

3. Currie v. Southern Pac. Co., 21

impeach the enrolled bill, is the legislative journal, and that parol evidence of what actually was done by the legislature is incompetent to contradict either the enrolled bill or the journal.¹ The legislative motive in passing the bill may not be shown.²

The decisions may be classified into those where the enrolled bill is deemed conclusive, and those recognizing the doctrine that the bill may be impeached by the legislative journals.³ The fed-

Oregon 566; State v. Rogers, 22 Oregon 348; State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 602; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721.

1. See infra, this title, The Enrolled Bill—Prima Facie Validity.

Parol testimony of members of the legislature, of the proceedings in that body, and of the contents of a bill for which a substitute was introduced, is inadmissible. Sackrider v. Saginaw County Supervisors, 79 Mich. 59.

The draftsman of a bill was not permitted to testify to words of an original statute omitted from the amendatory act by inadvertence. Combined Saw, etc., Co. v. Flournoy, 88 Va. 1029.

2. Wichita v. Burleigh, 36 Kan. 34; State v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 348; Slack v. Jacob, 8 W. Va. 613; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 431; Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 514; 95 Am. Dec. 710; Sunbury, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, 33 Pa. St. 278; Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 202; 2 Am. Rep. 432; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 484; Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 168; State v. Fagan, 22 La. Ann. 545; People v. Bigler, 5 Cal. 23; Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 266; 89 Am. Dec. 93; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 303; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 131; People v. Petrea, 92 N. Y. 139.

The courts cannot inquire into the motives and purposes of the legislature in order to attribute to it a design contrary to that clearly expressed or fairly implied in a bill enacted. It must be assumed that the legislature acted in good faith and meant what the bill expressed, although it may be possible to show outside of its language in terms that in fact all or the larger part of its benefits will inure to a few individuals. Waterloo, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 128 N. Y. 345.

The fact that a certain bill was inspired by private persons for their own advantage, and was the result of an agreement between such persons and members of the legislature, furnishes no ground for the interference of the courts, they having nothing to do with either the policy or the motives of legislation. Williams v. Nashville, 89

Tenn. 487; Lynn v. Polk, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 293; Ballentine v. Pulaski, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 634.

When the legislature determines that a public improvement will be a benefit to the adjacent property, and that the expense of making the same shall be paid by the owners of such adjacent property, the courts have nothing to do with the correctness or incorrectness of the determination, but must assume the facts to be as the legislature assumes or declares them. People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; affirmed 41 N. Y. 137.

The courts cannot, even on the complaint of the state, inquire into the motives by which members of the general assembly were governed in the enactment of a statute. McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298.

Where the legislature violates sound political principles in the passage of an act, but not the constitution, the act cannot be declared void. People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 489.

3. In Ex parte Wren, 63 Miss. 527, 56 Am. Rep. 825, the court stated that there were three theories upon which the decisions of different states might be arranged, adding to those in the text a third, based on a dictum in People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 136, to the effect that in Illinois "the journals must affirmatively show conformity to every requirement of the constitution in the progress of a bill through its several stages to become a law, or else the presumption will hold that these requirements have been disregarded and the bill will never become a law."

But in Illinois v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 761, the second view in the text was followed, and it was decided that the failure of the journal to show compliance with constitutional provisions, not required to be recorded therein, did not invalidate the law. In the opinion, the court distinguished the Illinois cases on this point as follows: "The earliest case in the Supreme Court of Illinois upon this general subject to which our attention has been called is Spangler v. Jacoby, 4 Ill. 297. The court there said: 'In our opinion, it is clearly competent to show from the journals of either branch of the legislature that a particular act was not passed in the mode prescribed by the constitution, and thus defeat its operation. The constitution requires each house to keep a journal, and declares that certain facts made essential to the passage of a law shall be stated therein. If those facts are not set forth, the conclusion is that they did not transpire. The journal is made up under the immediate direction of the house, and is presumed to contain a full and complete history of its proceedings. If a certain act receive the constitutional assent of the body, it will so appear on the face of the journal, and, when a contest arises as to whether an act was thus passed, the journal may be appealed to to settle it. It is the evidence of the action of the house, and by it the act must stand or fall. It certainly was not the intention of the framers of the constitution that the signatures of the speakers and executive should furnish conclusive evidence of the passage of a law. The presumption, indeed, is that an act thus verified became a law pursuant to the requirements of the constitution; but that presumption may be overthrown. If the journal is lost or destroyed, this presumption will sustain the law, for it will be contended that the proper entry was made in the journal; but when the journal is in existence, and it fails to show that the act was passed in the mode prescribed by the constitution, the presumption is overcome, and the act must fall.' This decision is cited by counsel to support the proposition that the mere silence of the journal as to whether a bill was or not read on three different days—the journal not being lost or destroyed—is itself fatal to the validity of the act. But we are not satisfied that the court intended to express an opinion upon that precise point. Although it did not appear, in that case, that the bill was read the third time before it went to the senate, or that the ayes and noes were called, no special comment was made by the court upon the silence of the journal as to the bill not being read the third time. Plainly, its language had reference to the fact that the journal did not show the passage of the bill by ayes and noes. It was with reference to the fact that the language above quoted was used. In Turley v. Logan County, 17 Ill. 152, the court said that 'the journals should show the readings, and the passage of the law by a constitutional vote;' but nothing was said as to what would be the result where the journal did not show that each of the required readings was had. The general language above quoted seems to have been unnecessary to the decision, for the court finally sustained the validity of the act there in question, upon the ground that the same legislature, in extra session, caused its journals to be amended so as to show what, according to the minutes of the clerk of the house, was the fact—that the bill had been read the required number of times. That we do not misinterpret these decisions is shown in Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 181, where one of the grounds of objection to an act was that the senate journal did not show that the bill was read three times before it was put on its final passage. The court said: 'The constitution does require that every bill shall be read three times in each branch of the general assembly before it shall be passed into a law; but the constitution does not say that these several readings shall be entered on the journals. Some acts performed in the passage of laws are required by the constitution to be entered on the journals, in order to make them valid, and among these are the entries of the ayes and nays on the final passage of every bill; and we held in the case of Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297, that, where the journal did not show this, the act never became a law. But, where the constitution is silent as to whether a particular act which is required to be performed shall be entered on the journals, it is then left to the discretion of either house to enter it or not; and the silence of the journal on the subject ought not to be held to afford evidence that the act was not done. In such a case we must presume it was done, unless the journal affirmatively shows that it was not done.' This decision was expressly reaffirmed in Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes, 38 Ill. 186. Nothing to the contrary was decided in People v. Starne 35 Ill. 141, or in Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 161, which is relied upon as modifying or overruling Schuyler Co. v. People. The case in 35 Ill. recognizes the doctrine of the Schuyler Co. Case, and goes upon the ground that the ayes and the noes were not called, and spread upon the journals of the house, eral courts apply the rule of the courts of the state.¹ The two views are set forth in the next ensuing sections.

(1) First View—Conclusiveness of Bill.—The first view is that the enrolled act, signed by the presiding officers of both houses and by the executive, is the sole expositor of its own contents and the conclusive evidence of its existence and valid enactment, and that it is not allowable to look to the journals of the houses or to other extrinsic sources for the history of the act or its provisions, or to attack the manner of its enactment.²

on the passage of the bill. In Ryan v. Lynch it appeared from the journal that the bill was read twice in the senate; but the journal was silent as to a third reading, and did not show any call of the ayes and noes on the final passage of the bill. The decision was that as the proceedings in the senate, certified by the secretary of state, were competent proof of the facts therein stated, the failure of the journal to show a call of the ayes and noes was fatal to the bill. Nothing was said as to the effect to be given to the mere silence of the senate journal as to the third reading of the bill. Indeed, we do not find that any of the numerous decisions of the state court relating to the passage of bills by the legislature have modified or overruled the doctrine announced in Schuyler Co. v. People, 25 Ill. 181. With that doctrine we are entirely satisfied. It is in harmony with the adjudications in many of the states whose constitutions have provisions similar to those in the constitution of Illinois which we have been considering."

In Burritt v. Com'rs of State Contracts, 120 Ill. 332, the court recognized the rule in Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 181, that where the journal is silent as to matters not specifically required to be entered in it, the requisite facts will be presumed to exist, but decided that the act under consideration not being authenticated was not even prima facie valid, and therefore the doctrine of presumption could not apply.

1. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683; Ohio v. Frank, 103 U. S. 697; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667.

In South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260, Bradley, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It is declared by the judiciary act as a fundamental principle 'that the laws of the several states, except where the constitution, treaties, or statutes of the United States shall otherwise require or provide, shall be regarded as rules of decision in trials at common law in the courts of the United States in cases where they apply.' And this court has always held that the laws of the states are to receive their authoritative construction from the state courts, except where the federal constitution and laws are concerned; and the state constitutions, in like manner, are to be construed as the state courts construe them. This has been so often laid down as the proper rule and is in itself so obviously correct that it is unnecessary to refer to the authorities. If, therefore, the law in question had never been passed upon by the state courts, the courts of the United States would nevertheless be bound to give to the constitution of Illinois the same construction which the state courts give to it, and to hold a pretended act of the legislature void, and not a law which the state courts would hold to be so. Otherwise, we should have the strange spectacle of two different tribunals, having co-ordinate jurisdiction in the same state, differing as to the validity and existence of a statute of that state, without any power to arbitrate between them. In speaking, however, of their jurisdiction as being co-ordinate, it is only meant that one has no power to enforce its decision upon the other. As a matter of propriety and right, the decision of the state courts on the question as to what are the laws of the state is binding upon those of the United States."

2. The following authorities tend to support this view:

United States.—Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649. In this case the validity of the Tariff Act of 1890, as officially promulgated, was attacked, on the ground that it appeared from the congressional records of proceedings, reports of committees of each house, reports of committees of conference, and other papers printed by act of Congress having reference to the act (House bill 9416) that a section of the bill, as it finally passed, was not in the bill authenticated by the signatures of the presiding officers of the respective houses of Congress and approved by the President. Harlan, J., who delivered the opinion of the court, after observing that the precise question before the court was the nature of the evidence upon which a court may act when the issue is made as to whether a bill was or was not passed by Congress, and that the question was presented for the first time in that court, continued: "The signing by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and by the President of the Senate, in open session, of an enrolled bill, is an official attestation by the two houses, through their presiding officers, to the President, that a bill, thus attested, has received, in due form, the sanction of the legislative branch of the government, and that it is delivered to him in obedience to the constitutional requirement that all bills which pass Congress shall be presented to him. And when a bill thus attested, receives his approval, and is deposited in the public archives, its authentication as a bill that has passed Congress should be deemed complete and unimpeachable. As the President has no authority to approve a bill not passed by Congress, an enrolled act in the custody of the Secretary of State and having the official attestations of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, of the President of the Senate, and of the President of the United States, carries, on its face, a solemn assurance by the legislative and executive departments of the government, charged, respectively, with the duty of enacting and executing the laws, that it was passed by Congress. The respect due to coequal and independent departments requires the judicial department to act upon that assurance, and to accept, as having passed Congress, all bills authenticated in the manner stated; leaving the court to determine, when the question properly arises, whether the act, so authenticated, is in conformity with the constitution." The court distinguished the case of Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 511, on the ground that in that case the journals were looked to only to ascertain the time when an act of Congress took effect, not to impeach the validity of the act. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683; and Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667, were also distinguished on the ground that the principle in the text was not passed on, but, in deference to the decisions of the Supreme Court of Illinois interpreting the constitution of that state, the United States courts decided that the journals might be examined to determine the validity of an enrolled act.

California.—Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253; 89 Am. Dec. 93, overruling Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165; People v. Burt, 43 Cal. 560. But after these decisions a new constitution was adopted, and in San Mateo County v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 722, Sawyer, J., said: "While we think the case of Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253, correctly decided under the constitution as it then was, we are of the opinion that the change in the constitution requires a change in the rule. When California adopted from other states the provision now found in its constitution, substantially as found in the constitution of Illinois, it must be deemed to have adopted with the provision the settled construction put upon it by the courts of the state from which it was taken."

In Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111, the journals were examined, though the question at issue was neither discussed nor decided. In a later case, Oakland Paving Co. v. Hilton, 69 Cal. 489, the court asserted its right to examine the journals as to the proper passage of a constitutional amendment, but expressly distinguished Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253, on the ground that that case concerned only the enactment of statutes.

In People v. Dunn, 80 Cal. 212, it was decided that if the journals were looked to, a defect in the enactment of a law must affirmatively appear in order to render the latter void; but the court said: "The case does not present the question as to the power of this court to go behind the enrolled bill in order to determine from the journals of the two houses whether the bill was properly passed or not." It would, therefore, appear that Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253; 89 Am. Dec. 93, is still law in this state.

Connecticut.—Eld v. Gorham, 20 Conn. 8.

Indiana.—Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 514; 95 Am. Dec. 710; Bender v. State, 53 Ind. 254; Madison v. Burford, 93 Ind. 383; Stout v. Grant County, 107 Ind. 343.

In Edger v. Randolph County, 70 Ind. 331, the rule in the text was upheld, but the journals were consulted to ascertain the intent of the legislature in passing the bill which the court was construing. In Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 434, the journals were examined to ascertain if a bill had passed over the governor's veto, but the court expressly distinguished the leading cases above, recognizing the general principle in the text.

It was formerly the rule in Indiana to consult the journal to impeach the enrolled bill, but the doctrine was overruled. See Skinner v. Deming, 2 Ind. 558; 54 Am. Dec. 463; Coleman v. Dobbins, 8 Ind. 156; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; Coburn v. Dodd, 14 Ind. 347.

Louisiana.—Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Richoux, 23 La. Ann. 743; 8 Am. Rep. 602; Whited v. Lewis, 25 La. Ann. 568. Compare Hollingsworth v. Thompson (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 1. In this case the journals were admitted in evidence, no objection being made to them, so that the appellate court did not directly decide the question of admissibility, but relying on the dictum in Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499 (since distinguished and disapproved on the point in question, in Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 678), and without citing or mentioning Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Richoux, 23 La. Ann. 743; 8 Am. Rep. 602 (relied on in Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 678), decided that the original engrossed house bill was admissible in evidence in connection with the journals kept of legislative proceedings, to determine the true character and value of the published volumes which purport to be the official journals. See also State v. Secretary of State, 43 La. Ann. 613.

Maine.—Weeks v. Smith, 81 Me. 538; relied on in Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 676.

Mississippi.—Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650; Greene v. Weller, 33 Miss. 735; Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 268; Ex parte Wren, 63 Miss. 512; 56 Am. Rep. 825 (overruling Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 68, and relied on in Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 676).

Nevada.—State v. Swift, 10 Nev. 176; State v. Rogers, 10 Nev. 250; 21 Am. Rep. 738; State v. Glenn 18 Nev. 34. Constitutional amendments, however, must be entered at length on the journals and the compliance with this requirement will be investigated by examining the journal. State v. Tufly, 19 Nev. 391.

New Jersey.—State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 29; chiefly relied on in Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 673; Passaic County v. Stevenson, 46 N. J. L. 184; Standard Underground Co. v. Attorney-Gen'l, 46 N. J. Eq. 276; 19 Am. St. Rep. 394.

New York.—In this state the question of the conclusiveness of the enrolled bill seems never to have been squarely met and decided. Nearly all the cases attacking the validity of the enactments of laws have arisen on the point whether or not bills, requiring by the constitution for their passage a two-thirds vote, have been validly passed. Peculiar provisions of the constitution and statutes have influenced the decisions. In such cases, it is provided by statute that the addition of the words "by a two-thirds vote" to the certificate of the secretary of state inserted in the published laws shall be presumptive evidence that the bill was certified by the presiding officers as having been passed by the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each house, and the absence of such words shall be presumptive evidence that the bill was not so certified by the presiding officers. Under this statute, the courts decided that the printed statute book was not conclusive, and that the enrolled act on file in the office of the secretary of state could be examined to see whether it was properly certified. People v. Purdy, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 34; 4 Hill (N. Y.) 394; De Bow v. People, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 9; Commercial bank v. Sparrow, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 97; Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 103; Hunt v. Van Alstyne, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 603.

It is also provided by statute that "no bill shall be deemed to have been passed by the assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each house unless so certified by the presiding officer of each house." And under this statute it was held that where the passage by a proper vote was not shown on the face of the enrolled bill, the law was invalid. People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 276; 13 Am. Rep. 581.

In a later case, however, where the indorsement of the presiding officer of one house of the legislature failed to state either that the bill had passed by the requisite majority, or that it had not, it was held that the journal of that house could be examined to ascertain the fact, and, the journal showing that the bill had been properly passed, the law was held valid. Rumsey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 130 N. Y. 92, apparently overruling People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 276; 13 Am. Rep. 581, on the effect of the defective certificate,

It will be seen that in these cases it has been decided only that where the printed statute is attacked, the original bill can be inspected; and also, where the bill is defective on its face, that either the law is void or that the journal may be examined to ascertain the facts. In none of them was it decided that the duly authenticated bill, valid on its face, on file in the office of the secretary of state, could be impeached by the journal.

In People v. Petrea, 92 N. Y. 128, the verdict of the jury in a criminal case was attacked on the ground that the law under which the grand jurors, who found the indictment, were appointed, was invalid, under the constitutional provision forbidding the passage of a "local or private bill for selecting, drawing, summoning, or impaneling grand or petit jurors," and an offer was made to show by the legislative journals that the said act had not been reported to the legislature by the commissioners appointed by law to revise the statutes, and so was not within the exception of a section of the constitution exempting from the operation of the aforesaid provision bills reported by the said commission. The offer was rejected, and on appeal held to be error, though the case was decided against the appellant, on the ground that an amendment to a "local bill" is not in the same category with the local bill itself as far as its passage is concerned. The court said that the case was of the same nature as People v. Purdy, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 31, but arose upon a different limitation of legislative power, and continued: "The proof offered did not contradict any fact asserted on the face of the statute, nor, so far as appears, in any legislative record. On the contrary, the offer was to show by the journal of the legislature and by the original act the facts averred in the plea. The constitution would afford very slight protection against legislative usurpation; and the objects sought to be accomplished by the amendment in question could be easily frustrated if the mere fact that the legislature had passed a local or private bill in one of the enumerated cases created a conclusive presumption that the bill was originally reported by commissioners and was within the exception of the constitution. The tendency of judicial authority supports the proposition that whenever a question arises as to the constitutionality of a statute, the court may resort to any source of information which in its nature is original evidence of any fact relevant to the inquiry." This statement is a dictum, as are those to the same general effect in Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 125; People v. Purdy, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 384; De Bow v. People, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 14.

To the contrary is the following from opinion in People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 279; 88 Am. Dec. 377. Here the court said: "I am of opinion that the legislative journals were not legitimate evidence to impeach the statute produced. They are not made evidence by the constitution. They are not made so by the statute; they were never made so at common law. They are doubtless evidence from the necessity of the case, on grounds of public convenience and from the public character of the facts they contain, to prove the proceedings of the body whose records they are, because the constitution requires them to be kept. Whenever any act of proceedings of such a body becomes necessary to be shown as evidence, such journals may be received; but to impeach the force and effect of a solemn statute duly certified, no authority can be found within the limits of common research to admit them to be legitimate evidence, but much authority may be found to the contrary;" citing cases in other states to the effect that the journal cannot be used to impeach the validity of an enrolled bill. See also People v. Chenango County, 8 N. Y. 327.

Again in People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 279; 13 Am. Rep. 581, the words of Johnson, J., were: "When it is necessary to inquire by what vote a law was passed, the judges are to determine from the printed statutes, or from the laws on file in the secretary of state's office, whether the requisite vote was received; upon such an inquiry the printed volume is presumptively correct and the original act is conclusive." While in Rumsey v. New York, etc., R. Co., 130 N. Y. 92, this expression of opinion was given by Haight, J.: "It is quite possible, however, that the courts would not be justified in going back of the original act on file in the secretary of state's office and the

In England, the enrolled statute on file in the proper office has long been held conclusive,¹ and such, it may be said, was the rule of the common law in the United States.²

By most constitutions it is provided that a journal must be kept, but the particular method of keeping it and of its authentication certificates thereto attached for the purpose of impeaching them ;" citing People v. Devlin, 33 N. Y. 269; 88 Am. Dec. 377.

The weight of opinion, therefore, in New York seems to be in favor of the conclusiveness of the enrolled bill.

North Carolina.—Brodnax v. Groom, 64 N. Car. 244; State v. Robinson, 81 N. Car. 409, disapproving dictum in Gatlin v. Tarboro, 78 N. Car. 119.

Pennsylvania.—Kilgore v. Magee, 35 Pa. St. 412; Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. St. 185; Speer v. Plank Road Co., 22 Pa. St. 376.

In Southwark Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446, the journals were looked to, but not to impeach the validity of the statute.

Texas—Central R. Co. v. Hearne, 32 Tex. 546; Blessing v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641; Houston, etc., Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343; Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526; Usener v. State, 8 Tex. App. 177.

In Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 396, it was decided that the courts could go to the journals to ascertain whether matters affirmatively required by the constitution to be entered in journals were so entered, though as to other matters the enrolled bill was said to be conclusive.

In Ex parte Tipton, 28 Tex. App. 438, the courts asserted the general principle that the enrolled bill is conclusive, citing the leading cases in this note, but also cited Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 396, without expressly disapproving it, and decided that the principal case did not come within the doctrine of Hunt v. State. But in Williams v. Taylor, 84 Tex. 667, it was definitely decided in a well-considered opinion that the enrolled bill is conclusive.

Vermont.—The law on this point is not settled in this state. There is, however, an intimation as to the rule by Prentiss, J., of the United States district court, In re Welman, 20 Vt. 656, where it is said: "By a standing general enactment, the act, when approved and signed, is to be forthwith lodged in the department of state and published; and the act so lodged in the department of state, or a certified transcript or authorized printed copy of it, is, of course, the only proper evidence, not only of its existence as a law, but of the time of its commencement."

1. Rex v. Arundel, Hob. 110; 12 Coke 58; College of Physicians, etc., v. Herbert, 3 Keb. 587.

"But now suppose that the journals were in every way full and perfect, yet it hath no power to satisfy, destroy, or weaken the act. which, being a high record, must be tried by itself, teste meipso. Now, journals are no records, but remembrances for forms of proceedings to the record; they are not of necessity—neither have they always been. They are like dockets of prothonotaries, or the particular to the king's patent. . . . The journal is of good use for the observation of the generality and materiality of proceedings and deliberations as to the three readings of any bill, the intercourse between the two houses and the like; but when the act is passed the journal is expired. And in this journal there appears but one reading of the bill in the upper house when it passed, which is unlikely." Rex v. Arundel, Hob. 110.

2. Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 253, 275; 89 Am. Dec. 93; People v. Burt, 43 Cal. 560; Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 363; 66 Am. Dec. 673.

In State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 29, Beasley, C. J., said: "This doctrine, which is founded on still earlier decisions, reported in the year books, has been, I am satisfied, the undisputed law of the English courts from that day to the present. . . . Nor can it, I think, be denied that a statute properly attested by seal, everywhere in the common law, is regarded as a method of evidence, equal and equivalent to the copy of the judgment formally exemplified. They each import absolute verity; to neither can the plea of nul tiel record be applied; their existence and contents can be tried only by inspection. No English judge, as far as I am aware, has ever dropped a hint that, as an instrument of evidence, a statute does not stand on the same level with a judgment. I think that is not generally specified; while, on the other hand, the method of authenticating and filing the enrolled bill is either so specifically prescribed, or was so well established,¹ that it may be presumed that the framers of the constitutions intended that the authenticated bill and not the journals should constitute the solemn record.² The constitutional requirement that journals shall be kept, is rather to insure publicity to legislative proceedings than to all persons must admit that this is the rule of the common law."

See in 37 Albany L. J. 428, an article by Guy C. H. Corliss, Esq. See also cases cited infra, this title, Second View—Impeachment by Journal.

1. "From the earliest times, so far as I have been able to ascertain, it has been the invariable course of legislative practice in this state, for the speaker of each house to sign the bill as finally engrossed and passed. It is likewise certified by the indorsement of the clerk of the house in which it originated. With these attestations of authenticity upon it, it is then filed in the office of the secretary of state. This has been the course of proceeding from certainly a very remote period to the present time; under our present constitution the written approval of the governor is requisite. There seems, therefore, to be no doubt whatever that these copies, thus authenticated and filed, are to be regarded as enrolled bills, corresponding in their general character to, and partaking, if not in all, at least in most respects of, the nature of parliamentary rolls. In the statute book they are frequently referred to as enrolled bills; and if we go back to provincial times, we find indorsed upon these copies, with the executive approval, a direction to enroll them, which meant nothing more than that they were to be filed. These are the characteristics and nature of the copies of legislative bills deposited according to the ordinary routine in the office of the secretary of state." Beasley, C. J., in State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 33.

2. Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 363; 66 Am. Dec. 673; Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 278; 89 Am. Dec. 93; Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 533; 95 Am. Dec. 710.

In State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 35, Beasley, C. J., said: "The first consideration which naturally suggests itself in this connection is, that the legislature has, with care and a wise precaution, adopted a mode of certifying its own acts in an authentic form. And, indeed, so completely has this purpose been effected, that it appears hardly practicable to suggest additional safeguards. To the correctness of the present bill, for example, we have the signature of the presiding officer of each house. In its present form, it was exhibited to the governor as the bill which had been enacted, and as such received his approval, as is evidenced by his signature. It was then immediately made public by being filed in the office of the secretary of state. These are the sanctions which the legislature has provided for the authentication of its own acts, both to the public and to the judicial tribunals; and the question is therefore presented, whether such authentication must not be deemed conclusive, or in other words, whether the legislature does not possess the right of declaring what shall be the supreme evidence of the authenticity of its own statutes. This question, in my opinion, must be answered in the affirmative. How can it be otherwise? The body that passes a law must of necessity promulgate it in some form. In point of fact, the legislative power over the certification of its own laws is of necessity almost unlimited, as will appear from the circumstance that, with regard to the body of an act, there is no evidence of any kind but that which the legislature itself furnishes in the copy deposited in the state archives. The journals do not purport to contain more than the amendments, so that the legislative control is absolute with regard to the essential parts of the law which are enacted. We are also to reflect that it is the power which passes the law, which can best determine what the law is which itself has created. The legislature in this case has certified to this court, by the hands of its two principal officers, that the act now before us is the identical statute which it approves, and, in my opinion, it is not competent for this court to institute an inquiry into the truth of the fact thus solemnly attested."

In Williams v. Taylor, 84 Tex. 667, make the journals the best or the conclusive evidence on the question whether a bill was in fact passed.¹

(2) Second View—Impeachment by Journal.—The second view is that the journals may be looked to in order to ascertain whether constitutional provisions have been complied with² and

Gaines, J., said: "Our constitution provides that after the passage of a bill it shall be signed by the presiding officer of each house, in the presence of the house; and we are of the opinion that when a bill has been so signed, and has been submitted to and approved by the governor, it was intended that it should afford conclusive evidence that the act had been passed in the manner required by the constitution. Such being the rule of the common law, we think, in the absence of something in the constitution expressly showing a contrary intention, it is fair to presume that it was intended that the same rule should prevail in this state. There is no provision of the constitution indicating in any direct manner such contrary intention; and the fact that it is provided that journals shall be kept, and that certain things shall be entered thereon, we think insufficient to show any such purpose."

1. Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 670; Williams v. Taylor, 84 Tex. 667; Passaic County v. Stevenson, 46 N. J. L. 184. See also Ex parte Wren, 63 Miss. 533; 56 Am. Rep. 825; State v. Young, 32 N. J. L. 29; Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 369; 66 Am. Dec. 673; Evans v. Browne, 30 Ind. 526; 95 Am. Dec. 710.

In Weeks v. Smith, 81 Me. 438, it was said by Haskell, J.: "Legislative journals are made amid the confusion of a dispatch of business, and are therefore much more likely to contain errors than the certificates of the presiding officers are to be untrue. Moreover, public policy requires that the enrolled statutes of our state, fair upon their faces, should not be put in question, after the public have given faith to their validity. No man should be required to hunt through the journals of a legislature to determine whether a statute, properly certified by the speaker of the house and president of the senate and approved by the governor, is a statute or not."

In Williams v. Taylor, 84 Tex. 667, Gaines, J., said: "The journals are the work of the clerks, perhaps hastily performed, and, as the official copies in this state, in some instances at least, will show, their reading is frequently dispensed with by vote. When such is the case, the journals are merely the work of the recording clerk, and even when read there is no assurance that the reading has led to the correction of every error."

2. The following authorities tend to support this view:—

Alabama.—Dew v. Cunningham, 28 Ala. 466; 65 Am. Dec. 362; State v. Buckley, 54 Ala. 599; Harrison v. Gordy, 57 Ala. 49; Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; Walker v. Griffith, 60 Ala. 361; Moog v. Randolph, 77 Ala. 597; Sayre v. Pollard, 77 Ala. 608; Abernathy v. State, 78 Ala. 411; Stein v. Leeper, 78 Ala. 517; Hall v. Steele, 82 Ala. 562; Jones v. Hutchinson, 43 Ala. 721; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Henderson v. State, 94 Ala. 95.

Arkansas.—Burr v. Ross, 19 Ark. 250; Vinsant v. Knox, 27 Ark. 266; English v. Oliver, 28 Ark. 317; State v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 31 Ark. 701; Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496; Smithee v. Garth, 33 Ark. 17; State v. Crawford, 35 Ark. 237; Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200; Smithee v. Campbell, 41 Ark. 471; Webster v. Little Rock, 44 Ark. 536; Davis v. Gaines, 48 Ark. 370; Dow v. Beidelman, 49 Ark. 325; Glidewell v. Martin, 51 Ark. 559.

Colorado.—In re Roberts, 5 Colo. 525; Hughes v. Felton, 11 Colo. 489. Compare In re General Appropriation Bill, 16 Colo. 539.

Dakota.—The question under discussion seems not to have been determined in this state, though it has been decided that where the journal is silent, compliance with provisions not required to be entered therein will be presumed. Territory v. O'Connor, 5 Dakota 397.

Florida.—State v. Brown, 20 Fla. 407; State v. Deal, 24 Fla. 293.

Illinois.—Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; Turley v. Logan County, 17 Ill. 151; People v. Hatch, 19 Ill. 283; Prescott v. Illinois, etc., Canal, 19 Ill. 324; Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 181; People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 121; Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes, 38 Ill. 174; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Wren, 43 Ill. 77; Bed- ard v. Hall, 44 Ill. 91; Grob v. Cushman, 45 Ill. 119; People v. De Wolf, 62 Ill. 253; Hensoldt v. Petersburg, 63 Ill. 157; Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160; Happel v. Brethauer, 70 Ill. 166; 22 Am. Rep. 70; Miller v. Goodwin, 70 Ill. 659; Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361; Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 11; Binz v. Weber, 81 Ill. 288; People v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 191; Wenner v. Thornton, 98 Ill. 156; Burritt v. Com'rs State Contract, 120 Ill. 332; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. People (Ill. 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 174; Leach v. People, 122 Ill. 420; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683; Ohio v. Frank, 103 U. S. 697; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 667.

Iowa.—Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 543; distinguishing State v. Clare, 5 Iowa 509, and Duncombe v. Prindle, 12 Iowa 1, on the ground that those cases decided only that where there is a conflict between the printed act and the enrolled act, the latter is the ultimate proof of the legislative will. It may be said, however, that Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 543, decided only that the journals might be consulted for the purpose of inquiring into the validity of a constitutional amendment.

Kansas.—Haynes v. Heller, 12 Kan. 384, Reporter's Note; Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 194; Leavenworth County v. Higginbotham, 17 Kan. 62; Prohibitory Amendment Cases, 24 Kan. 700; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724; In re Vanderberg, 28 Kan. 243; Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545; State v. Robertson, 41 Kan. 200; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Manhattan, 45 Kan. 419.

Kentucky.—In this state the question has not been squarely met, but there is an intimation that the journals are evidence. Auditor v. Haycraft, 14 Bush (Ky.) 288. See Com. v. Jackson, 5 Bush (Ky.) 680.

Maryland.—Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203; Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292. Formerly under the old constitution in this state the enrolled bill had been held conclusive. See Fouke v. Fleming, 13 Md. 392; Annapolis v. Harwood, 32 Md. 471.

Michigan.—Southworth v. Palmyra, etc., R. Co., 2 Mich. 287; Green v. Graves, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 351; Hurlbut v. Britain, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 191; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; People v. Onondaga, 16 Mich. 254; Steckert v. East Saginaw, 22 Mich. 104; Pack v. Barton, 47 Mich. 520; Attorney Gen'l v. Joy, 55 Mich. 94; Callaghan v. Chipman, 59 Mich. 610; Attorney Gen'l v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385; People v. McElroy, 72 Mich. 446; Sackrider v. Saginaw County, 79 Mich. 59; Stow v. Grand Rapids, 79 Mich. 595; Rode v. Phelps, 80 Mich. 598; Caldwell v. Ward, 83 Mich. 13; People v. Burch, 84 Mich. 408.

Minnesota.—Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330; State v. Hastings, 24 Minn. 78; Burt v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 472; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143; Lincoln v. Haugan, 45 Minn. 451. But see Comstock v. Tracey, 46 Fed. Rep. 162, where the court refused to consult the journals in a collateral proceeding. State v. Gould, 31 Minn. 189.

Missouri.—State v. Mead, 71 Mo. 270, overruling Pacific R. Co. v. Governor, 23 Mo. 353; 66 Am. Dec. 673, on the ground of a change in the constitution. See Bradley v. West, 60 Mo. 33, where it is intimated that the enrolled bill is not conclusive.

In an early Missouri case the journals were examined to ascertain whether a constitutional amendment received a proper majority. State v. McBride, 4 Mo. 303; 29 Am. Dec. 636.

Nebraska.—Hull v. Miller, 4 Neb. 503; State v. Leidtke, 9 Neb. 462; Cottrel v. State, 9 Neb. 125; Ballou v. Black, 17 Neb. 389; State v. McLelland, 18 Neb. 236; State v. Robinson, 20 Neb. 96; In re Groff, 21 Neb. 647; 59 Am. Rep. 859; State v. Van Duyn, 24 Neb. 586; State v. Moore (Neb. 1893), 55 N. W. Rep. 299.

New Hampshire.—Opinion of Justices, 35 N. H. 579; Opinion of Justices, 45 N. H. 607; Opinion of Justices, 52 N. H. 622.

Ohio.—State v. Moffitt, 5 Ohio 358; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 1; State v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 348; State v. Kiese-wetter, 45 Ohio St. 254; State v. Rabbitt, 46 Ohio St. 178.

Oregon.—Mumford v. Sewall, 11 Oregon 71; 50 Am. Rep. 462; State v. Wright, 14 Oregon 365; Currie v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 21 Oregon 566.

South Carolina.—State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 651; State v. Small, 11 S. Car. 262; Walker v. State, 12 S. Car. 200; State v. Hagood, 13 S. Car. 46.

Tennessee.—State v. McConnell, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 332; Gaines v. Horrigan, whether the enrolled bill is identical with that passed.¹ It is to be presumed that the requirements of the constitution were followed, and an omission in the journals of matters which the constitution does not require to be entered there will not affect the validity of the statute;² otherwise as to those matters, the entry

4 Lea (Tenn.) 608; Williams v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 549; Brewer v. Huntingdon, 86 Tenn. 732; State v. Algood, 87 Tenn. 163; Nelson v. Haywood Co., 91 Tenn. 596.

Virginia.—Wise v. Biggar, 79 Va. 269.

West Virginia.—Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640.

Wisconsin.—Watertown v. Cady, 20 Wis. 501; Bound v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 45 Wis. 543; Meracle v. Down, 64 Wis. 323.

Wyoming.—Brown v. Nash, 1 Wyoming Ter. 85; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Carr, 1 Wyoming Ter. 96.

1. "If the formalities of the enrollment do not prevent us from looking into the journals, in order to see that the bill had its proper readings, of what value will that be to us, if we are estopped by the enrollment from inquiry as to what bill the journals have relation? To give full force and effect to the constitution, if an issue of identity is raised, we must look into the bill or act, at each step of its progress, to determine that that which has received part of the formalities requisite to its validity as law is the same with that which has received the residue of such formalities. Hitherto this question has been considered in the simplest form in which it is likely to arise—that is, upon the supposition that the act, regarded as a whole, is not the same, as appearing by the enrollment, with that which has passed through the preceding pages of enactment. In regard to this assumed case, we have no doubt but that we may look at the journals for the purpose of ascertaining the action of the houses, and into any evidence that may be appropriate to show the nature of the bill, the subject of such action." Willard, J., State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 652.

2. Clarke v. Jack, 60 Ala. 271; Walker v. Griffith, 60 Ala. 361; Webster v. Little Rock, 44 Ark. 536; State v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 31 Ark. 717; English v. Oliver, 28 Ark. 317; Vinsant v. Knox, 27 Ark. 279; Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200; Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496; Smithee v.

Garth, 33 Ark. 1; People v. Dunn, 80 Cal. 211; 13 Am. St. Rep. 118; Territory v. O'Connor, 5 Dakota 397; State v. Brown, 20 Fla. 407; Butler v. State, 89 Ga. 821; Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 11; Wabash R. Co. v. Hughes, 38 Ill. 178; Schuyler County v. People, 25 Ill. 181; McCulloch v. State, 11 Ind. 424; Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 724; Hollingsworth v. Thompson (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 1; Barry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69; State v. Peterson, 38 Minn. 143; State v. Hastings, 24 Minn. 78; State v. Mead, 71 Mo. 266; Taylor v. Wilson, 17 Neb. 88; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475; Currie v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Oregon 566; State v. Algood, 87 Tenn. 163; State v. McConnell, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 333; Williams v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 549; Blessing v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641; disapproved in Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 396; Hays v. State (Tenn. 1887, not reported), cited by Snodgrass, J., in Brewer v. Huntingdon, 86 Tenn. 737; State v. Rogers, 22 Oregon, 348; Glidewell v. Martin, 51 Ark. 559; Hall v. Steele, 82 Ala. 562; Illinois v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 760.

"While the journals furnish evidence of legislative proceedings, so far as they go, yet courts are not bound to hold that nothing was done except what appears therein. Their silence is conclusive only in those matters where the constitution requires them affirmatively to show the action taken. It is notorious that these journals are loosely kept and their entries often unintelligible; that they are constructed out of hasty memoranda made in the pressure of business and amid the distractions of a numerous assembly; that the reading of them each morning is frequently dispensed with, and there is not a single guaranty of their accuracy or their truth, which is not in practice usually ignored. Nobody vouches for them, and upon the final passage of a bill, they are not searched to know whether they contain enough to insure the law's validity." Smith, J., in Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 215.

In Glidewell v. Martin, 51 Ark. 559, of which is required and which the journals do not show.¹ If it appears from the journals that the requirements of the constitution were not observed, the statute may not stand, even though the

the court said: "From considerations of public policy and because of the respect due the action of a co-ordinate department of government, the courts long since began to supply the omissions of journal clerks by presumptions as to the regularity of the proceedings of the general assembly. This has been found most salutary; and the attitude assumed by the judiciary in this regard has gone far towards establishing and maintaining public confidence in the stability of legislative action. . . . The courts are gravitating towards the English rule; . . . for while they say that the enrolled bill is not conclusive of the valid enactment of a law, and that we may look beyond it to the journals, they supply, by presumption, everything necessary to its validity, save when the journal affirmatively shows a violation of the constitution."

The constitution of Oregon requires that every bill shall be read section by section on its final passage, and the vote on the final passage of every bill or joint resolution shall be taken by yeas and nays. But there is no provision that either of these facts shall be entered in the journal except the vote shall be entered when demanded by two members, or upon the passage of a bill notwithstanding the objections of the executive. Where the journal failed to state the compliance with these constitutional provisions, it was held that it would not be presumed from the mere silence of the journal that either house had exceeded its authority or disregarded constitutional requirements in the passage of legislative acts. State v. Rogers, 22 Oregon 348.

Where the journals of the two houses failed to show the passage of a bill at the time it purported to have been passed, this was held not to indicate that it was not in fact passed at that time, for the omission might have been accidental. Nelson v. Haywood County, 91 Tenn. 596.

It has been held that since an amendment to a pending bill is not required by either the constitution or the statute to be printed in the journals, and since the constitution requires that concurrence by one house in an amendment made by the other shall be evidenced by a vote of a majority only of all the members, the absence of one of the amendments to a bill from the journal of the house does not make the act void. Hollingsworth v. Thompson (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 1.

Where an entry appeared in the bound volume of the journal as of a date prior to the clerk's certificate made and dated on the day of adjournment, the entry was presumed to have been made before the adjournment, and to have been authorized. Detroit v. Board of Assessors, 91 Mich. 78.

1. See supra, this title, Legislative Journal. See also cases cited in last note.

"In the instance we are considering the constitution expressly requires that the journal shall show the fact of the signing of the bill by the presiding officer of each house, etc. This is an imperative requirement and as plain as the English language could make it. . . . Such fact cannot be presumed or established by any other evidence while the journals are in existence, because the constitution expressly requires the journals to show the fact and thereby, as long as said journals exist, makes them the best, the only, and the conclusive evidence of the fact. If there was not an express requirement that the journals should show the fact of signing, then the mere silence of the journals as to such signing would not affect the validity of the statute, because in such case, the legal presumption would prevail that the bill had been signed in the manner required." Wilson, J., in Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 401.

"We think the only safe rule for interpreting clauses of the constitution which command certain things to be done or certain methods to be observed in the enactment of statutes, is to hold that when it is affirmatively shown by legal evidence that in the attempt to legislate, some mandate of the constitution has been disregarded, such attempt never becomes a law. We do not mean to be understood as affirming that in all cases the silence of the journals proves some constitutional requirement was omitted. It is only when the constitution requires that certain things shall be spread on the journal that its silence affects the constitutionality.

journals need not have shown this.¹ If the journals are lost or destroyed, the presumption is that the act is valid.²

This second view of the question is more or less the result of peculiar provisions in constitutions or statutes, which expressly or by implication make the journals evidence.³ And even where the rule is followed, an inclination toward the first view has been expressed.⁴ A reason for the rule has been said to be that the

The presumption in the absence of proof is always in favor of official propriety, and except as to those matters which the constitution declares shall appear in the journal, the rule is to infer everything was rightly done unless the journals show affirmatively that some constitutional command was disregarded." Stone, J., in Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; quoted in Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 401.

1. Brewer v. Huntingdon, 86 Tenn. 737; Perry County v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 58 Ala. 546; Currie v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Oregon 566; State v. Rogers, 20 Oregon 348; State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 734; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 20 Am. Rep. 69.

Although an enrolled bill, bearing the signatures of the presiding officers of the senate and house and the approval of the governor, was filed in the office of the secretary of state, it was held that it was not a law because the journal of the senate showed that "the bill failed to pass." Currie v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Oregon 566.

2. Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297.

3. Simonton, J., in Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. St. 192, said: "There are, it is true, some [cases] which hold a contrary doctrine, but most of these are influenced by the provisions of the modern constitutions on the subject of legislation, and hold doctrines which are opposed to those in our own recent cases declaring that 'when a bill has received the sanction of the senate and house of representatives and the executive's approval, it is a law, and the highest evidence of its authenticity is the enrollment in the secretary's office.'"

In New Hampshire, the constitution provides that the journals of the legislature shall be printed and published with the statutes passed. And, therefore, the court held that the journals were evidence of the history of the bill. Opinion of Justices, 35 N. H. 579.

In Iowa, journals certified by the secretaries of the houses of the legislature are made by statute proof of legislative proceedings. Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 552.

In Sherman v. Story, 30 Cal. 277; 89 Am. Dec. 93, the court, after stating that the common law made the enrolled bill a conclusive record, said: "There has been no departure from the principles of common law in this respect in the United States, except in instances where a departure has been grounded on or taken in pursuance of some express constitutional or statutory provision requiring some relaxation of the rule in order that full effect might be given to such provisions, and in such instances the rule has been relaxed by judges with great caution and hesitation, and the departure has never been extended beyond an inspection of the journals of both branches of the legislature."

"Were it not for the somewhat peculiar provision of our constitution, which requires that all bills, before they can become laws, shall be read three several times in each house, and shall be passed by a vote of a majority of all the members elect, a bill thus signed and approved would be conclusive of its validity and binding force as a law." Walker, C. J., in People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 361.

In Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 677, where the enrolled bill was held conclusive, the court said: "There are cases in other state courts which proceed upon opposite grounds from those we have indicated as proper, but it will be found upon examination that many of them rested upon constitutional or statutory provisions of a peculiar character which expressly or by necessary implication required or authorized the court to go behind the enrolled act when the question was whether the act as authenticated and deposited in the proper office was duly passed by the legislature."

4. "We are not, however, prepared to say that a different rule might not have subserved the public interest equally well, leaving the legislature and requirement that a journal should be kept imported that it should be evidence;¹ so it has been said that the rule is required by public policy.²

IV. TIME OF TAKING EFFECT—1. Early Rule.—By the common law, statutes took effect from the first day of the session of Parliament at which they were enacted, unless another day were named.³ Even where an act declared that it should take effect “from and after the passing of the act,” it was held to operate by legal fiction from the first day of the session.⁴ This doctrine of relation was calculated to work gross injustice—in one instance having the effect of rendering that murder which was not so at the time it was committed.⁵ The common-law rule was followed in several of the states of the Union until changed by statute.⁶ And in England by Stat. Geo. III, ch. 13, it was declared that statutes should take effect only from the time they received the royal assent, and the former rule was abrogated, to use the words of the statute, because of “its great and manifest injustice.”⁷ Under this statutory rule, although the act expressly declares that it shall operate from a day named therein, yet if the royal assent is not given until a later day, it will not take effect until then.⁸

2. When No Time Is Fixed.—If no time is specified when a statute shall be in force, it becomes effective from and after its passage; that is, from and after the point of time when its existence is perfected.⁹ When the governor’s approval is necessary, an act the executive to guard the public interest in this regard, or to become responsible for its neglect.” Walker, C. J., in People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 136.

“The courts are gravitating toward the English rule, so thoroughly discussed by Mr. Justice Smith, in Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 200; for, while they say that the enrolled bill is not conclusive of the valid enactment of a law, and that we may look beyond it to the journals, they supply by presumption everything necessary to its validity, save where the journal affirmatively shows a violation of the constitution.” Sandels, J., in Glidewell v. Martin, 51 Ark. 566.

1. State v. Francis, 26 Kan. 731; Opinion of Justices, 35 N. H. 580; Hunt v. State, 22 Tex. App. 404; Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 79; State v. McClelland, 18 Neb. 243; Chicot County v. Davies, 40 Ark. 211; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 651; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 221; Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 91; 13 Am. Rep. 640.

2. Brady v. West, 50 Miss. 68; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 462; 20 Am. Rep. 69; Rode v. Phelps, 80 Mich. 598.

3. Rex v. Thurston, 1 Lev. 91; Partridge v. Strange, 1 Plow. 79; Attorney Gen’l v. Panter, 6 Bro. P. C. 553. Formerly in England the rolls of Parliament were strung together as one act, the only date being that of the assembling of Parliament. In that case the presumption was that the act took effect from the first day of the session, the record being the sole guide. Latless v. Holmes, 4 T. R. 660.

4. Latless v. Holmes, 4 T. R. 660.

5. Rex v. Thurston, 1 Lev. 91.

6. North Carolina.—Weeks v. Weeks, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 111; 47 Am. Dec. 358; Hamlet v. Taylor, 5 Jones (N. Car.) 36; State v. Bank of S. Car., 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 609.

New Jersey.—Austin v. Nelson, 6 N. J. L. 381.

7. Tomlinson v. Bullock, 4 Q. B. Div. 230.

8. Burn v. Carvalho, 4 N. & M. 893.

9. State v. Click, 2 Ala. 26; Matthews v. Zane, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 164; The Brigg Ann, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 62; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Heard v. Heard, 8 Ga. 380; Weatherford v. Weatherford, 8 Port. (Ala.) 171; Rathbone v. Bradford, 1 Ala. 312.

is considered perfected from the time of such approval ; ¹ if passed over his veto, then from the date of the final vote.²

3. From Passage.—There are three distinct doctrines as to the precise time of the taking effect of a statute, when, by its terms, it is declared to be in force “from its passage.” According to one view the day of the passage of the act is excluded, and its operation dates from the day following.³ It is claimed that this rule has the advantage over the one next stated in that it does not give a retroactive effect to the statute, thereby avoiding hardship and injustice in many cases ; and over the third view, in that it obviates the necessity of resorting to conjecture or the uncertainty of parol proof, or anything extrinsic to the law itself, and the authenticated recorded proceeding in passing it, in order to ascertain the exact hour of executive approval.⁴

An act of the legislature is passed only when it has gone through all the forms made necessary by the constitution to give it force and validity as a binding rule of conduct for the citizen. It is of no force while pending before the governor. Whether it receives the signature of the governor or remains in his hands unreturned the requisite number of days, or being vetoed is carried by the requisite majority of both houses, its passage is dated from the time it ceased to be a mere proposition or bill and passed into a law. Wartman v. Philadelphia, 33 Pa. St. 202.

Legislative Intent.—The Texas Act of Feb. 14, 1860 (Paschal's Dig., art. 3962), which required judgment, before it could operate as a lien, to be filed for registration, took effect from its passage. The act being complete in itself, and clearly indicating the legislative intent that it should be operative from the time of its passage, such intent may not be defeated by a failure in the act to make a specific designation of the time it should go into effect as required by a pre-existing statute. Baker v. Compton, 52 Tex. 252.

1. People v. Clark, 1 Cal. 406; Malory v. Hiles, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 53; Dowling v. Smith, 9 Md. 242; Goodsell v. Boynton, 2 Ill. 555; Logan v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 442; Hill v. State, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 725.

But in Ohio, where the constitution does not provide for executive approval of bills, an act is perfected when it has been signed by the presiding officers of the legislature. State v. O'Brien, 47 Ohio St. 464.

2. Biggs v. McBride, 17 Oregon 640; Logan v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 442.

3. King v. Moore, Jeff. (Va.) 9;

Parkinson v. Brandenburg, 35 Minn. 294; 59 Am. Rep. 326.

4. In Parkinson v. Brandenburg, 35 Minn. 294; 59 Am. Rep. 326, Mitchell, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: “When a legislature declare that an act shall take effect ‘from and after its passage,’ or ‘from and after the day of its passage,’ it may be fairly presumed that they used these terms as exclusive of the day of the passage of the act. This furnishes a certain and convenient rule which avoids serious practical difficulties resulting from holding that the day of the passage of the act is to be included. Some of the authorities which hold that such a statute takes effect on the day of its passage take the position that it is to be deemed in force from the earliest moment of that day, and that any inquiry as to the exact hour of its passage is inadmissible. But it would seem wrong in principle that laws designed as rules of conduct should be by a mere legal fiction made retroactive even for a fraction of a day. To avoid this result the tendency now is to hold that the statute takes effect only from the exact moment of its approval, and that when necessary to determine conflicting rights, courts of justice will inquire as to the exact hour of its passage. The objection to this is, that while all right in theory, it is difficult of application in practice. There is usually no satisfactory means of ascertaining the exact hour at which the executive approved any given statute. The question must generally be decided on mere conjecture or by indulging in presumption. . . . It certainly does not seem fit and proper that the time

A second view is that such a statute becomes effective from the day of its approval, and has relation to the first moment of the day—this upon the principle that the law will not take cognizance of the fractions of a day.¹ The third view, and the one which seems to be supported by the weight of authority, is that a bill becomes operative only from the time of its approval; that the doctrine, that in law there is no fraction of a day, is a legal fiction which may be overthrown by the fact when necessary in order to accomplish substantial justice. Accordingly, whenever a question arises as to the time when a statute took effect, the court may resort to any source of information which, in its nature, is capable of conveying to the judicial mind a clear and satisfactory answer to the question, the best and most satisfactory evidence in all cases being required.² for the commencement of a law, whenever the question arises, should be left to depend upon the uncertainty of parol proof or upon anything intrinsic to the law itself, and the authenticated recorded proceeding in passing it. By excluding the day of the passage of the act and holding that it takes effect at the beginning of the following day, all these practical difficulties are avoided, and the rule established, which is not only certain and convenient, but, as we think, entirely in accord with recognized canons of construction. It is also in harmony with the usual method of computing time in other cases." See also Duncan v. Cobb, 32 Minn. 460.

1. In Mallroy v. Hiles, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 53, a judgment was rendered on the 24th of May, 1861, for debt due by note, the same day on which the governor approved the act entitled "An act to suspend the circuit and other courts in this commonwealth and for other purposes," by which the rendition of such judgments was prohibited from the passage of the act until the 1st day of January, 1862. It did not appear at what hour the act was approved, nor at what hour the judgment was rendered. It was held that the judgment was improperly rendered, because the act was in force during the whole of the day.

The statute repealing the bankrupt act took effect the day it was approved, which was March 3, 1843, and as there can be no fractions of a day in a question of this nature, it must be considered as being in force from the first moment of that day. In re Howes, 21 Vt. 619; In re Welman, 20 Vt. 654.

And where two statutes went into effect the same day, it was said that there was no doubt that they took effect the same instant. Griswold v. Atlantic Dock Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 225.

In Wood v. Fort, 42 Ala. 641, the court said: "Upon authority and principles of policy and convenience . . . we decide that a public statute remedial in its character, and not prescribing punishments and penalties, is of force during the entire day of its approval, and that the law in reference thereto does not recognize any fractions of a day; yet we concede that the decisions are not entirely harmonious."

2. Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292; Louisville Tp. v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 104 U. S. 469.

In Kennedy v. Palmer, 6 Gray (Mass.) 316, it was held that an action commenced before a justice of the peace on the day of the passage of a statute which vested exclusive jurisdiction of all such actions, not already pending, in a police court, and which took effect from and after its passage, cannot be dismissed for want of jurisdiction without proof that it was commenced at a later hour than the approval of the act by the governor.

In People v. Clark, 1 Cal. 406, the facts were as follows: Clark was elected county judge at an election regularly appointed and held. On that day the legislature passed an act repealing the one by virtue of which the election was held, and conferring upon the governor the power of appointment. The repealing act was approved the same day, but at what hour of the day did not appear. Some days thereafter the relator was appointed county judge by the governor. The court sustained the validity of the election, remarking that "the time of the approval of the executive is a fact which can be ascertained and proven, and in all cases where the rights of parties are in any manner to be affected by the time of the approval, an investigation of the question when the event (the passage of the act) occurred, should be had."

The question was discussed with fullness by Mr. Justice Story in Richardson's Case, 2 Story (U. S.) 571. There a petition for the benefit of the bankrupt act was filed in the district court on the 3d day of March, 1843, about noon. The act of the 3d of March, 1843, repealing the bankrupt act, passed Congress and was approved by the President late in the evening of the same day. It was held that the court had jurisdiction of the petition at the time when it was filed and acted upon, and that it had full jurisdiction to entertain all proceedings thereon to the close thereof, according to the provisions of the bankrupt act. After reviewing the English cases, the court said: "So that we see that there is no reason to assert that any such general rule prevails as that the law does not allow of fractions of a day. On the contrary, common sense and common justice equally sustain the propriety of allowing fractions of a day whenever it will promote the purposes of substantial justice."

In Lapeyre v. U. S., 17 Wall. (U. S.) 198, it was said that an act of Congress, unless it is otherwise declared by law, becomes operative from the first moment of the day of its passage; and, further, that "fractions of a day" are not recognized, and "an inquiry involving that subject is inadmissible." But it will be seen upon an examination of this case that the question presented for determination was not as to the fractions of a day, but whether a proclamation of the President bearing date June 24, 1865, took effect on that day or on the 27th of June, 1865, when it was first promulgated by publication in the newspapers. And in Louisville Tp. v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 104 U. S. 469, the court says that the language above quoted from the opinion must, therefore, be taken as a declaration of the general rule which obtains when the evidence does not show the necessity of regarding fractions of a day.

In U. S. v. Norton, 97 U. S. 170, the court, while declaring upon the authority of Lapeyre v. U. S., 17 Wall. (U.

S.) 198, that the President's proclamation took effect as of the beginning of June 24, 1865, and covered all the transactions of that day to which it was applicable, said: "We do not think this is a case in which fractions of a day should be taken into account." "This language of the chief justice," it is said in Louisville Tp. v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 104 U. S. 469, "implies that there are cases in which the court would regard fractions of a day. Besides there was no question in that case, nor any proof made as to the particular hour of the day when the proclamation of the President was issued."

In Plowman v. Williams, 3 Tenn. Ch. 181, it is said: "A day is in legal contemplation punctum temporis, without fractions, yet for the ends of justice a day may be divided."

And in In re Ankrine, 3 McLean (U. S.) 285, the court says: "Like many technicalities which have grown out of judicial action, the fiction is sustained neither by justice nor reason." Again, in Grosvenor v. Magill, 37 Ill. 239, it was held, that while for many purposes the law knows no divisions of a day, yet whenever it becomes important to the ends of justice, or in order to decide upon conflicting interests, the law will look into the fractions of a day as readily as into the fractions of any other unit of time. See also Metts v. Bright, 4 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 173; Savage v. State, 18 Fla. 970; Burgess v. Salmon, 97 U. S. 381.

The provisions of the New York laws 1891, ch. 215, extending the collateral inheritance tax act to legacies or distributive shares of the widow and immediate relatives when exceeding $10,000 in value, do not apply to the estate of a decedent who died on the morning of the day on which the act was signed by the governor, but before the time of such signing, although § 4 of the act declared that it should take effect immediately. In such case, the rights of the legatee having vested and the act not being intended to be retroactive, the legacy is not subject to the tax. In re Dreyfous, 28 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 27.

In Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499, it was held that whenever a question arises as to the time when a statute took effect, the court may resort to any source of information, unless the positive law has enacted a different rule.

There are decisions in the English courts in line with the above. Thus, in

4. From Future Day Named.—When by virtue of a provision of the constitution, a statutory rule, or by force of its own terms, a statute is to take effect a certain number of days after its enactment, the day of enactment is to be excluded in computing the time.¹ When there is a general law providing that statutes shall take effect a certain number of days after passage, unless a different time be named therein, and there is nothing in a given statute indicating a legislative intent that it is to be excepted from the general rule, it may not be excepted.² A statute passed to take effect at a future day must be understood as speaking from the Roe v. Hersey, 3 Wils. 274, the court characterized as a mere fiction of law the general proposition that there are no fractions of a day; that "by fiction of law the whole time of the Assizes and the whole session of parliament may be, and sometimes are, considered as one day;" yet the matter of fact shall overturn the fiction in order to do justice between the parties.

In Combe v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1423, Lord Mansfield expresses similar views. He said: "But though the law does not in general allow of fractions of a day, yet it admits it in cases where it is necessary to distinguish, and I do not see why the very hour of the day may not be so too when it is necessary and can be done, for it is not like a mathematical point which cannot be divided."

Presumption—But Not Conclusive.—April 18, 1883, the Ohio legislature passed an act (80 Ohio Laws 169) amending section 6710 of the Revised Statutes, which allowed petitions in error to be filed in the Supreme Court without leave, so as to require leave to be first granted. It repealed the original section and enacted that the section "shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage, and apply to all cases hereafter brought in or into the Supreme Court." On the same day, but whether before or after this act was passed it did not appear, a petition in error was filed in this case without leave of the Supreme Court. On motion to dismiss it was held, 1st. This act took effect on the day of its passage, and by presumption of law from the commencement of the day, and not from its expiration. 2d. This presumption will not prevail where its application would work injustice. In such case the exact time of the day may be shown. 3d. In the absence of proof by the plaintiff in error showing that his case was pending on that day before the act was passed and took effect, the presumption of law will prevail that the act took effect from the commencement of the day. Arrowsmith v. Hamering, 39 Ohio St. 573.

1. Thus if a statute is to take effect in thirty days from and after its passage, passing on the 1st of March, it would go into operation on the 31st of March. Sutherland Stat. Constr., § 111; Bemis v. Leonard, 118 Mass. 502; 19 Am. Rep. 470; Bigelow v. Willson, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 494.

And when a statute is to take effect thirty days after the recess of the legislature, the day of adjournment is to be excluded in computing the time. Simmons v. Jacobs, 52 Me. 147.

In computing the ninety days required by the West Virginia Const., art. 6, § 30, it is immaterial whether the day of passage is counted, and the ninetyeth day rejected, or whether the ninetyeth day is included and the day of passage excluded. An act passed on the 27th of February, 1891, will, under said constitutional provision, take effect on the 28th day of May following. State v. Mounts, 36 W. Va. 179.

2. Jackman v. Garland, 64 Me. 133.

The New York Collateral Inheritance Act (ch. 483, New York Laws 1885), is covered by the provision of the Revised Statutes (1 N. Y. Rev. Stat. 157, § 12), declaring that "every law, unless a different time shall be prescribed therein, shall commence and take effect . . . on and not before the 20th day after the day of its final passage as certified by the secretary of state." Accordingly, where a testatrix died after the passage of the act, but before the expiration of the 20 days, it was held that no tax was payable upon a legacy contained in the will. In re Howe, 112 N. Y. 100.

But where there is a legislative intent that a particular statute shall be taken out of the general rule and made operative immediately, such intent need not time it goes into operation and not from the time of passage: Thus, the words "heretofore," "hereafter" and the like, have reference to the time the statute becomes effective as a law, and not to the time of passage.¹ Before that time no rights may be acquired under it, and no one is bound to regulate his conduct according to its terms—it is equivalent to a legislative declaration that the statute shall have no effect until the designated day. For example, where the act creating a new county provided that it should not take effect until a future day mentioned, an appointment by the executive of the commonwealth to an office in the county before such day, was adjudged void;² and where a statute made an act a crime, a person committing the forbidden act after be affirmatively expressed; it may be inferred from the intention of the legislature in passing the statute. Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 269.

1. Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318; Rice v. Ruddiman, 10 Mich. 125; Davenport v. Davenport, etc., R. Co., 37 Iowa 624; Charless v. Lamberson, 1 Iowa 435; 63 Am. Dec. 457; Bennett v. Bevard, 6 Iowa 82; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Barbee, 74 Ind. 169. The exception of injuries "already sustained," in the Maine Act of 1874, ch. 215, must be referred to the time when the act took effect, and not to its date. In legal contemplation the words are spoken when the act becomes a law. Jackman v. Garland, 64 Me. 133. The Iowa act January 24, 1857, repealed all prior acts permitting a pre-emption on swamp lands, but with a proviso saving actual settlers on said lands at the time of the passage of the act. It was held that said proviso referred to the time of taking effect of the act, and not to that of its passage. Rogers v. Vass, 6 Iowa 405.

Constitution of Colorado, art. 5, § 19, provides that no act shall take effect until 90 days after passage, except in case of emergency. General statutes of the state, § 2621, provides that "the state board of medical examiners, within 90 days after the passage of the act shall," etc. It was held that the phrase "after the passage of the act," refers to the time when the act takes effect. Harding v. People, 10 Colo. 387.

The 30th section of art. 6 of the constitution of West Virginia concludes as follows: "And no act of the legislature, except such as may be passed at the first session under this constitution, shall take effect until the expiration of 90 days after its passage, unless the legislature shall, by a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each house taken by yeas and nays, otherwise direct. It was held that the word "passage" in this section relates to the date of the passage of the act by the two houses, and not to the date of its approval by the governor, and that the act in question having passed both houses on the 27th of Feb., 1891, became effective on the 28th day of May following. State v. Mounts, 36 W. Va. 179.

2. Com. v. Fowler, 10 Mass. 290.

In Price v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318, it was said that the period intervening between the time of passage and the day fixed for the statute to take effect is allowed to enable the public to become acquainted with its provisions.

In Rice v. Ruddiman, 10 Mich. 125, it was said that a law passed to take effect on a future day must be construed as if passed on that day, and ordered to take immediate effect.

The late Bankrupt Law of the United States was enacted on August 19, 1841. It expressly provided that it should take effect only from and after February 1, 1842. This is equivalent to declaring that it should have no effect until that day, and hence it did not suspend the operation of the Maryland Insolvent Laws until that day. Larabee v. Talbott, 5 Gill (Md.) 426; 46 Am. Dec. 637.

By section 323 of the Political Code of California, an act of the legislature, not in terms prescribing when it shall take effect, does not go into operation until the 60th day after its passage. Therefore, the California act of March 9, 1885, authorizing municipal corporations of the fifth class to obtain public water works, not prescribing when it should take effect, did not become a law until May 8, 1885; and bonds issued by a municipality of that class for the passage of the statute, but before the day appointed for its operation, was held not punishable thereunder.¹

But it seems that a code regulating proceedings in penal actions, which is to go into effect on a future day, operates when the day arrives upon indictments found before it.² The statute is not rendered inoperative by the fact that the designated day falls on Sunday, as the legislature has full power to regulate what shall be done or prohibited on that day.³

5. From Publication.—When a statute provides that it shall take effect “from and after its publication,” the day of its publication is to be included in computing the time when it takes effect; but the precise time of its publication may be shown, if the hour of publication affects in any wise an act done on the same day.⁴

If the act is to take effect from its publication in two newspapers, it will not become effective upon publication in one only.⁵ The publication in two local papers will not satisfy a requirement that it be published in the state paper.⁶

But a general law has been regarded as duly published, although printed in the volume of private laws, instead of the volume of public laws as provided by statute.⁷

Where a statute is, by its express terms, not to take effect until publication in a certain newspaper, every one is charged with notice of this fact, and if before such publication negotiable paper is issued under it, the purchasers can acquire no rights thereby.⁸

A mere verbal omission or inaccuracy in the publication of a statute, which does not change its substance or legal meaning, does not invalidate the publication.⁹ But the publication of a the purchase of water works in pursuance of authority attempted to be conferred by an election held prior to the taking effect of the act, were null and void. Santa Cruz Water Co. v. Kron, 74 Cal. 222.

Where, by an act of the general assembly, a vote was to be taken “after the present war is over,” and it was taken the fourth Thursday of May, 1866, before the proclamation of the President of the United States, declaring that the war was at an end and that peace and tranquillity reigned throughout the whole country (issued on the 20th day of August, 1866), such vote is a nullity, being taken before the act had validity. Conley v. Calhoun County, 2 W. Va. 416.

Notice from Date of Passage—Though Operation Postponed.—Though a general law, by its terms, is not to go into operation until a future day, all persons are required to take notice of its existence from the date of its approval, or at any rate from its publication. Stine v. Bennett, 13 Minn. 153.

1. State v. Bond, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 9.

2. Laughlin v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 261.

3. Bloomington v. Seligman, 22 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 98.

4. Leavenworth Coal Co. v. Barber, 47 Kan. 29. See supra, this title, From Passage.

5. Welch v. Battern, 47 Iowa 147. In this case, it was further held that the certificate of the secretary of state that the act had been published in one newspaper would not justify the inference that it had been properly published.

6. Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136. See also Hendrickson v. Hendrickson, 7 Ind. 13; McCool v. State, 7 Ind. 378.

7. In re Boyle, 9 Wis. 264.

8. McClure v. Oxford, 94 U. S. 129.

9. In the original publication of chap. 220, Wisconsin Laws, 1859, there were the following omissions: In section 3, providing for the notice of sale of mortgaged premises, it is first required that such notice shall be published in a newspaper in the county where the premises are situated, if there be one, statute omitting entirely the enacting clause obviously does not constitute a valid publication.¹

A constitutional provision that "no act shall take effect until the same shall have been published and circulated in the several counties," etc., means that such act shall not take effect in any county until it has been distributed and published in all.²

In some of the states, a joint resolution of a general nature requires the same publication as any other law.³

and then proceeds as follows: "And if no newspaper be printed or published in said county," then it is to be printed in an adjoining county, etc. In the above quotation the words "printed or" are left out, so that it reads: "If no newspaper be published in said county," etc. In reference to this omission the court said: "It does not seem that this could change substantially the meaning of the provision. For whatever distinction there may be between printing and publishing the laws as applied to our system of first publishing them in a newspaper and then printing them in a volume, it can hardly be supposed, though they use the disjunctive form of speech, that the legislature had in view any real distinction between the printing and publishing of a newspaper, so far as the object of publishing the notice of sale of mortgaged premises was concerned. For the language fairly implies that the notice might be published in a newspaper that was 'printed' in the county. And assuming that the paper was merely 'printed' there, and not published, it is difficult to see how the notice could be considered 'published,' or how such an insertion would at all subserve the purposes of the statute. The word 'published' would apply as well to a paper printed in the county and circulated there, as to one where the mere printing might be done elsewhere, but which was first published or circulated there. So that this word really expressed the whole meaning of the legislature." The act contained a proviso that "the provisions of this act shall not apply," etc. In the first publication the word "this" was omitted. The court held that the meaning was obviously the same without this word, as no court would hesitate to say even without it that the act referred to was the one of which the proviso was a part. Smith v. Hoyt, 14 Wis. 252.

The same question was involved in Mead v. Bagnall, 15 Wis. 156, and the above ruling was followed.

1. In re Swartz, 47 Kan. 157. But it has been held that an act was duly published so as to give it effect, notwithstanding the signatures of the presiding officers of the legislature affixed thereto were not published. Leavenworth County v. Higginbotham, 17 Kan. 62.

2. Jones v. Cavins, 4 Ind. 305. Whenever the acts, or any portion of them, are distributed in a bound volume in a manner and shape not substantially contrary to the statute on that subject, by the secretary of state, through his agents appointed for that purpose, in all the counties of the state, they are distributed or published by authority. And the fact that directory provisions as to the form and binding, character or color of material, division into volumes, etc., may not be strictly followed by the secretary of state, does not make the distribution of such as are prepared and distributed by him any the less a publication by authority. State v. Bailey, 16 Ind. 46; 79 Am. Dec. 405.

Under the former constitution of Indiana a statute took effect in every part of the state from the time it was published by authority at any place within the state, unless the act itself directed otherwise. Tredway v. Gapin, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 298.

The constitution of Maryland, art. 3, § 34, providing that every law shall be recorded, printed, published and certified to the courts, was not intended to prevent a law from going into operation until publication thereof. Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 185; 74 Am. Dec. 522.

In Louisiana a law is not obligatory until promulgated. Thus, a court created by statute continues to exist until the act repealing that statute has been promulgated. And the mere publication of a legislative act in the official journal is not necessarily a promulgation of the act. Promulgation must be made by the officers, and in the manner prescribed by law. State v. Judge, 29 La. Ann. 223.

3. State v. Board of Com'rs, etc., of School Fund, 4 Kan. 261.

Where the act published is a verbatim copy of the original law as filed with the secretary of state, it takes effect according to its terms as published, although the act as published subsequently in the session laws may not correspond with it.¹

6. Upon a Contingency.—It is competent for the legislature to enact a law, the ultimate operation of which, may, by its own terms, be made to depend upon a contingency.² And the contingency may be some action on the part of the legislature of another state,³ or the result of a vote of the people of the locality to be affected by the law,⁴—indeed, it makes no essential difference what the nature of the contingency is, so it be an equal and

1. State v. Donehey, 8 Iowa 396.

Ultimate Proof of the Law—Original Act.—In State v. Clare, 5 Iowa 509, it was held that the original act on file in the office of the secretary of state is the ultimate proof of the law, whatever errors there may be in what purports to be copies thereof.

In State v. Donehey, 8 Iowa 396, it was deemed unnecessary to go to the extent of holding that in any event the original act in the secretary's office is the ultimate proof of the law, as the offense was charged to have been committed after the publication of the law in newspapers, and before the publication in pamphlet form, and it could make no difference to the defendant that a mistake was made in the publication of the law after he had committed the offense charged.

True Date of Publication—Certificate of Secretary of State.—In the absence of any suggestion which might lead to a more accurate inquiry, the date of the certificate of the secretary of state appended to the published volumes of the laws will be taken to be the true date of their publication. In re Boyle, 9 Wis. 264; State v. Foote, 11 Wis. 15; Berliner v. Waterloo, 14 Wis. 378; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 119.

2. Brig Aurora v. U. S., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 382; In re Olliver, 17 Wis. 682; Lathrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583; Peck v. Weddell, 17 Ohio St. 271; State v. Kirkley, 29 Md. 85; Walton v. Greenwood, 60 Me. 356; Baltimore v. Clunet, 23 Md. 449; Crease v. Babcock, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 334; 34 Am. Dec. 61; Burlington v. Leebrick, 43 Iowa 252; State v. Hunter, 38 Kan. 578; Guild v. Chicago, 82 Ill. 472.

3. Section 17 of the Kansas Act relating to insurance, ch. 50a, Compiled Laws 1879, so far as it provides that when the laws of any other state impose upon the corporations of this state applying to transact business within its limits other and more onerous burdens and conditions than those prescribed by the general provisions of said chapter for corporations seeking to transact business in this state, the same burdens and conditions shall be imposed upon corporations from that state applying to enter this, is a complete and absolute expression of the legislative will, and though its operation depends upon the contingency of legislative action in other states, is nevertheless valid. The contingency named in said section arises when the laws of another state impose additional burdens and conditions, and is not delayed until some corporation of this state is actually subjected to such burdens and conditions. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Welch, 29 Kan. 672. In pronouncing judgment in this case, Mr. Justice Brewer observed that: "Our laws abound in cases in which a statute is made dependent upon the action of some tribunal or body, or upon some other contingency, and is therefore practically dormant until such action takes place or contingency happens." To same effect is Home Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 104 Ill. 653. But in Alabama a similar law was adjudged void. Clark v. Mobile, 67 Ala. 217.

4. People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 37; State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606; St. Louis v. Alexander, 23 Mo. 483; State v. Noyes, 30 N. H. 279; Bank of Chenango v. Brown, 26 N. Y. 467; Noffziger v. McAllister, 12 Kan. 315; In re Petition of Cleveland, 52 N. J. L. 188; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 491, 13 Am. Rep. 716; Groesch v. State, 42 Ind. 547; Caldwell v. Barrett, 73 Ga. 604; Com. v. Weller, 14 Bush (Ky.) 218; 29 Am. Rep. 407; State v. Cooke, 24 Minn. 247; 31 Am. Rep. 344; Alcorn v. Hamer, 38 Miss. 653; Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 27; 11 Am. Rep. 304; State v. Wilcox, a fair one, a moral and legal one, and so far connected with the purpose of the statute as not to be a mere idle and arbitrary one.¹ But the statute must be a complete and absolute expression of the legislative will—a law in presenti, to take effect in futuro.² And the statute cannot be made effective before the event happens, by any acts or series of supplements passed upon the assumption that the event has happened, and that the law is in force.³

7. When Containing Emergency Clause.—In many of the states a discretion is vested in the legislature, in cases of emergency, to dispense with the constitutional provision fixing the time for statutes to take effect, and direct that a law shall have effect before that time. In such a case, the legislature is the sole judge of the emergency which shall induce them to anticipate the constitutional period, and their discretion may not be reviewed by the courts.⁴ But the direction must be made in a clear, distinct, and 42 Conn. 364; 19 Am. Rep. 536; Bancroft v. Dumas, 21 Vt. 456; Boyd v. Bryant, 35 Ark. 69; 37 Am. Rep. 6; People v. Butte, 4 Mont. 179; 47 Am. Rep. 346; People v. Fleming, 10 Colo. 553; Clarke v. Jack, 60 Ala. 271; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton County, 1 Ohio St. 77; Nichol v. Nashville, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 252; New Orleans v. Graihle, 9 La. Ann. 561; Stone v. Charlestown, 114 Mass. 214; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78; State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33; Slinger v. Hennerman, 38 Wis. 504; Smith v. Janesville, 26 Wis. 291.

Compare Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 164; 63 Am. Dec. 487; State v. Geebrick, 5 Iowa 491; State v. Beneke, 9 Iowa 164; State v. Weir, 33 Iowa 134; 11 Am. Rep. 115; Rice v. Foster, 4 Harr. (Del.) 479; Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279; 17 Am. Rep. 425; State v. Swisher, 17 Tex. 441; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342; where it is held that the result of a vote of the people is not a contingency upon which a law may be made to depend.

But the decided preponderance of judicial opinion is otherwise. And in Sutherland Stat. Constr., p. 82, it is said that these cases "are now exceptional, and are simply out of harmony with the law as generally held throughout the country."

1. State v. Parker, 26 Vt. 357. A statute may be passed to take effect upon the failure of a corporation to make up a deficiency in its assets. Lathrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583. And the operation of a statute in regard to the stopping of railroad trains may be made conditional upon the erecting of a station at a particular place by the inhabitants. State v. New Haven, etc., Co., 43 Conn. 351.

2. Alcorn v. Hamer, 38 Miss. 652. The act which was adjudged unconstitutional in Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483; 59 Am. Dec. 506; Cole v. Stevens, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 676; Thorne v. Cramer, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 112; Bradley v. Baxter, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 122, was submitted to a vote of the people in the following terms: By the tenth section, it was provided, that "the electors shall determine by ballot, at the annual election, to be held in November next, whether this act shall or not become a law," and by the fourteenth section, "that in case a majority of all the votes of the state shall be cast for the new school law, then this act shall become a law, and shall take effect." The act was held to be a plan or project prepared by the legislature "to be submitted to the people to be passed or rejected," and therefore did not derive its sanction from the legislative will, but depended upon the popular vote for its force as law.

3. State v. Kirkley, 29 Md. 85.

4. Carpenter v. Montgomery, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 415; Gentile v. State, 29 Ind. 409; Wheeler v. Chubbuck, 16 Ill. 361; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Oregon 640. In this case it is said, the constitution has vested in the legislature the power to declare in the body or preamble of an act the emergencies by which it may be put in force less than 90 days after the adjournment of the legislature, and when the emergency is specified in the act, the same is conclusive upon the courts.

In Colorado, the emergency clause, unequivocal provision, and cannot be helped out by any sort of intendment or implication.¹

If the emergency must be declared in the preamble or body of the act, it may not be incorporated with effect, in a supplementary act.²

It has been held that the fact that the legislative journals show that a bill contained an emergency clause, when the final vote in both houses was taken thereon, cannot control in the absence from the bill of such clause at the time it was signed by the executive and presiding officers of the two houses.³

8. Postponement of Operation of Part.—There is no legal objection to different provisions of the same statute taking effect at differ-in order to be effective, must receive a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to each branch of the legislature, and if not so adopted it should be struck out before enrollment, even though the bill be otherwise constitutionally passed. In re Emergency Clause (Colo. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 647.

1. Wheeler v. Chubbuck, 16 Ill. 361. A declaration by the legislature that an act shall take effect on a future day specified, is not of itself a declaration of the emergency in the constitutional sense. Hendrickson v. Hendrickson, 7 Ind. 13. See also McCool v. State, 7 Ind. 378; Mark v. State, 15 Ind. 98.

In order to take an act out of the operation of § 23, art. 3, of Illinois constitution of 1848, that no public act of the general assembly shall take effect or be in force until the expiration of 60 days from the end of the session at which the same may be passed, unless in case of emergency the legislature shall otherwise direct, the legislature must direct that the act as a whole and entirety shall take effect at a different time, and it is not sufficient that certain parts of it might bear a construction which would, taken separately, give those parts effect at an earlier period.

Where, therefore, an act to authorize an election for the removal of a county seat, directed an election to be held on a day prior to the termination of the session, and the election was so held, but the act contained no emergency clause, it was held that an emergency had not been sufficiently declared—that the act had not taken effect when the election was held, and, therefore, the election was unauthorized. Iriquois County v. Keady, 34 Ill. 293.

The emergency clause in the Indiana act of June 14, 1852, regulating the remission of fines and forfeitures, declared the act to be in force from and after its being filed with the clerks of the circuit courts in their respective counties. It was held that the legislature intended the act to be brought into force as soon as it could be distributed to the several counties, and though there is no express direction to the secretary of state to distribute it, the emergency clause implies such a direction; also, that the secretary of state is presumed to have done his duty, and, hence that the act was in force on the 20th day of December 1852. State v. Dunning, 9 Ind. 20.

An act which passes both houses of the legislature, and which contains an emergency clause followed by the words, that the same "shall take effect and be in force from and after its approval by the governor," but which the governor never approves, but vetoes, and the same is then duly passed by both houses by the requisite majorities, notwithstanding the veto, takes effect and is in force from and after its passage. Biggs v. McBride, 17 Oregon 640.

When the legislature, on the day of its final adjournment, in the due course of legislation sends a bill to the governor for his official action, and he on the same day and after the final adjournment of the legislature files the bill in the office of the secretary of state, without approval or objections thereto, it becomes a law, and he may not thereafter file objections, and if the bill contains an emergency clause requiring it to take effect from and after its passage, it must be deemed to be in force from and after such filing. Tarleton v. Peggs, 18 Ind. 24.

2. Cain v. Goda, 84 Ind. 209.

3. In re General Appropriation Bill, 16 Colo. 539.

ent times, at the will of the legislature.¹ And the circumstance, that before the time appointed for the operation of the deferred parts they are rendered inoperative by the adoption of a new constitution, will not affect the parts already in force.²

V. VALIDITY AND EFFECT—1. Generally.—The principle of the English law that Parliament is omnipotent, and that an act of that body delivered in clear and intelligible terms may not be questioned, or its authority controlled in any court of justice,³ does not obtain in the United States, where, on the contrary, a legislative act, to have the force of law, must conform to the constitution.⁴ A statute may be within the inhibitions of the constitution as well by implication as by expression.⁵ In several early cases, the courts went so far as to declare that statutes passed against the plain and obvious principles of common right and common reason were void so far as calculated to operate in contravention thereto.⁶ But the more recent authorities are opposed to this view.⁷ In dealing with constitutional objections to a statute, heed must be given to the canon of construction that

1. Plummer v. Jones, 84 Me. 58. In this case it was held that the Maine Laws 1891, ch. 34, §§ 1 and 2, providing for the appointment of a board of registration, etc., "immediately upon the approval of this Act" became operative by their own terms upon the approval of the act; while the remaining provisions of the act, as to which no time was mentioned, took effect, by virtue of Maine R. St. ch. 1, § 5, thirty days after the recess of the legislature. Massachusetts St. 1873, ch. 286, uniting the cities of Charlestown and Boston, is not void for providing that it shall take effect for different purposes at different times. Stone v. Charlestown, 114 Mass. 214. See also Clarke v. Rochester, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 446.

2. People v. Whiting, 64 Cal. 67. See infra, this title, Statutes Unconstitutional In Part.

3. 1 Bl. Com. pp. 91, 160, 186.

4. 1 Kent Com. 448; Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 655; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137. In Com. v. Maxwell, 27 Pa. St. 456, it is said a law is unconstitutional because it is either an assumption of power not legislative in its nature, or because it is inconsistent with some provision of the federal or state constitution.

5. Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426; Page v. Allen, 58 Pa. St. 338; 98 Am. Dec. 272. See generally CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670.

6. Hamm v. M'Claws, 1 Bay. (S.

Car.) 93; University of Maryland v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 365; 31 Am. Dec. 72; Hoke v. Henderson, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 1; 25 Am. Dec. 677.

In Bowman v. Middleton, 1 Bay. (S. Car.) 252, a statute taking away the freehold of one man and vesting it in another without any compensation or any previous attempt to determine the right, was adjudged void as against common right and the principles of Magna Charta.

And in Morrison v. Barksdale, Harper (S. Car.) 101, it was held that if consequences manifestly against common reason, arise collaterally out of a statute, it is void pro tanto.

7. In Maxwell v. Fulton, 119 Ind. 23, it was held that the court may not overthrow a statute upon the ground that it encroaches upon the natural rights of a citizen, unless such rights are guaranteed by constitutional provisions.

In Whittington v. Polk, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 236, an act which the court regarded as "incompatible with the principles of justice" was adjudged valid.

It is said by the court in People v. Gallagher, 4 Mich. 244, that it is questionable whether the judiciary has power to pronounce an act void because it is repugnant to fundamental principles not expressly declared, but necessarily implied, in a republican constitution.

And in Cooley's Const. Lim. (6th ed.) p. 197, et seq., it is laid down that a

when a statute is challenged as in conflict with the fundamental law a clear and substantial conflict must be found to exist, to justify its condemnation.¹ A statute unauthorized by the state constitution at the time of its passage, is void and may not be validated by the subsequent adoption of a constitutional amendment.² A territorial statute contrary to the Federal constitution, or the organic act, is invalid without the express disapproval of Congress.³

2. Statutes Unconstitutional in Part.—Part of a statute may be unconstitutional and void, and the residue constitutional and valid.⁴ The test is not whether the void and valid parts are contained in statute may not be declared unconstitutional and void by the courts "solely on the ground of unjust and oppressive provisions, or because it is supposed to violate the natural, social, or political rights of the citizen, unless it can be shown that such injustice is prohibited, or such rights guaranteed or protected by the constitution; except where the constitution has imposed limits upon the legislative power, it must be considered as practically absolute, whether it operate according to natural justice or not in any particular case. . . . While the parliament of Britain possesses completely the absolute and uncontrolled power of legislation, the legislative bodies of the American states possess the same power, except, first, as it may have been limited by the constitution of the United States; and, second, as it may have been limited by the constitution of the state. A legislative act cannot, therefore, be declared void unless its conflict with one of these two instruments can be pointed out."

1. Sweet v. Syracuse, 129 N. Y. 350; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 518. See infra, this title, Interpretation.

2. State v. Tufty, 20 Nev. 427; 19 Am. St. Rep. 324.

But it has been held that an act which is defective on constitutional grounds may be cured by subsequent enactment in the form of an amendment or supplement. State v. Ryno, 49 N. J. L. 603; State v. Yard, 42 N. J. L. 357; Sweet v. Syracuse, 129 N. Y. 337.

And In re Van Vliet, 43 Fed. Rep. 765, it was said that an act of a state legislature passed in the exercise of the police power of the state, inoperative on liquor in the original package, when passed, for want of congressional license, is rendered operative and effectual by a subsequent act of Congress declaring that such act shall be subject to the state law. Such an act removes the impediment to the enforcement of the law against such packages and has the same effect as a precedent authority of Congress to pass it.

3. People v. Clayton, 4 Utah 421; People v. Clayton, 4 Utah 449; Williams v. Clayton, 6 Utah 86.

4. In re Metropolitan Gas Light Co., 85 N. Y. 526; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 553; Slauson v. Racine, 13 Wis. 398; State v. Dousman, 28 Wis. 541; Dells v. Kennedy, 49 Wis. 555; Gordon v. Cornes, 47 N. Y. 617; People v. Bull, 46 N. Y. 69; 7 Am. Rep. 302; Packard v. Lewiston, 55 Me. 456; Cole v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 532; People v. Hall, 8 Colo. 485; Keokuk Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 377; Ex parte Frazer, 54 Cal. 94; Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 548; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 361; 35 Am. Dec. 326; Clark v. Ellis, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 8; People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 585. To same effect, Ex parte Towles, 48 Tex. 413; State v. Clinton, 28 La. Ann. 201; Ex parte Wells, 21 Fla. 280; Lombard v. Antioch College, 60 Wis. 459; Christy v. Sacramento County, 39 Cal. 3; State v. Perry County, 5 Ohio St. 507; O'Brien v. Krenz, 36 Minn. 136; Slinger v. Henneman, 38 Wis. 504; Sparhawk v. Sparhawk, 116 Mass. 315; Central Branch U. P. R. Co. v. Atchinson, etc., R. Co., 28 Kan. 453; State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606; Campan v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 276; Willard v. People, 5 Ill. 461; State v. Newton, 59 Ind. 173; Rood v. McCargar, 49 Cal. 117; State v. Ramsey County, 48 Minn. 236; Benedict v. Columbus Constr. Co., 49 N. J. Eq. 23; State v. Snow, 3 R. I. 64; State v. Clarke, 54 Mo. 1; 14 Am. Rep. 471; Muldoon v. Levi, 25 Neb. 457; Albany

the same section, for the distribution into sections is purely artificial; but rather, whether they are essentially and inseparably connected;¹ as it would be inconsistent with all just principles of constitutional law to adjudge enactments not obnoxious to any just constitutional exceptions, void, because they are associated in the same act, but not connected with or dependent on, others which are unconstitutional.² The rule is that where the provisions are so interdependent that one may not operate without the other, or so related in substance and object that it is impossible to suppose that the legislature would have passed the one without the other, the whole must fall; but if when the unconstitutional portion is stricken out, that which remains is complete in itself and capable of being executed in accordance with the apparent legislative intent, it must be sustained.³

County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305; Mills v. Sargent, 36 Cal. 379; Nelson v. People, 33 Ill. 391; In re De Vancene, 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289; Campbell v. Mississippi Union Bank, 6 How. (Miss.) 625; Exchange Bank v. Hinds, 3 Ohio St. 1; Allen v. Silvers, 22 Ind. 491; Wakely v. Mohr, 15 Wis. 609; Lyman v. Martin, 2 Utah 136; State v. Rosenstock, 11 Nev. 128; Gamble v. McCrady, 75 N. Car. 509; Bucky v. Willard, 16 Fla. 330.

1. Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.) 482; Fisher v. McGin, 1 Gray (Mass.) 1; 61 Am. Dec. 381; People v. Kenney, 96 N. Y. 294; Deryee v. New York, 96 N. Y. 477; State v. Marsh, 37 Ark. 356; Powell v. State, 69 Ala. 10; People v. Nally, 49 Cal. 478; Tripp v. Overocker, 7 Colo. 72.

2. Com. v. Clapp, 5 Gray (Mass.) 97.

3. Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.) 482; Fisher v. McGin, 1 Gray (Mass.) 1; 61 Am. Dec. 381; Warren v. Charlestown, 2 Gray (Mass.) 84; Com. v. Clapp, 5 Gray (Mass.) 97; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 482; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Burkholz v. State, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 71; Berry v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 446; 60 Am. Rep. 69; State v. Baltimore County, 29 Md. 521; Hagerstown v. Dechert, 32 Md. 369; Darby v. Wilmington, 76 N. Car. 133; White v. Lincoln, 5 Neb. 515; Holmsberg v. Hauck, 16 Neb. 338; State v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 474; 17 Neb. 85; State v. Hurds, 19 Neb. 316; Ex parte Thompson, 16 Neb. 239; In re Groff, 21 Neb. 647; 59 Am. Rep. 859.

The provision of the New York act of 1881, ch. 415, Laws of 1881, to establish the Niagara police district, being an essential part of the act and necessary to accomplish its purposes, and such provisions being invalid, the whole must fail. People v. Porter, 90 N. Y. 68.

The provisions of New York Laws of 1873, ch. 239, for the removal of causes into the supreme court and a change of the place of trial, are not affected by the unconstitutionality of that portion of the chapter which provides for the extension of the jurisdiction of the courts mentioned in it. Darragh v. McKim, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 337.

The Arkansas act of April 3, 1879, distributing portions of the territory of Clark county to other counties, is an indivisible act, and being void in part must fail as a whole. Bittle v. Stuart, 34 Ark. 224.

As the main purpose of the New York act, 1886, ch. 418, laws of 1886, which is to dispense with appeals from judgments of the general term of the city court to the court of common pleas, must fail as unconstitutional, and as all the provisions are connected, being parts of a single scheme, the incidental provisions must fail also. Jones v. Jones, 104 N. Y. 234; Black v. Trower, 79 Va. 123.

That part of Wisconsin Laws of 1879, ch. 235, § 8, which provides that no vote shall be received at any general election, unless the name of the person offering to vote be on the register completed by the board of registry as previously provided in said act, excepting only the case of persons who may have become qualified voters before such election but after the completion of such register, is violative of § 1, art. 3, of the state constitution, which defines the qualifications of electors; and that provision being an essential part of the act, without which it cannot be supposed that the statute would have been enacted, the whole act is invalid. Dells v. Kennedy, 49 Wis. 555.

That part of the 11th section of the California act of 1856 (Stats. 1856), "for the protection of actual settlers and to quiet land titles," which declares that a suit on a patent shall be brought within two years from the date of the patent, is unconstitutional; the general provisions of the act being conceded to be unconstitutional, this particular clause also falls because it is not an independent provision constitutional in itself and capable of enforcement without reference to the body of the act. Lathrop v. Mills, 19 Cal. 514.

If in an act, unconstitutional in its main features, there is found a provision which is constitutional, that provision may be carried out, providing it is entirely disconnected from the vicious portions of the act. And the legislature is presumed to intend that, notwithstanding the invalidity of the other portions of the act, this particular provision shall stand. The saving of the particular provision, even when not upon its face unconstitutional, is matter of legislative intent. Lathrop v. Mills, 19 Cal. 514.

The 9th section of the Ohio act of April 9, 1856, which excepts from its operation certain counties therein named, and limits the operation of the entire act to the jurisdiction of the common pleas in certain counties only, to-wit, those not excepted from its operation, is so essentially connected with the subject-matter and manifest legislative intent of the entire act that it may not be separated and rejected as void, leaving the balance of the act to stand with the uniform operation in conformity with the constitution. Kelley v. State, 6 Ohio St. 269.

Conceding that §§ 9 and 10 of the Michigan Act, 398, of the local acts of 1885, amending the charter of the city of Detroit, to be invalid, they do not impair the validity of the remaining portion of the act, which is capable of enforcement even if these sections are stricken out. Attorney Gen'l v. Amos, 60 Mich. 372.

In State v. Copeland, 3 R. I. 33, it is said: "We suppose there can be no doubt that one portion of an act may be declared unconstitutional and the residue of the same act constitutional and valid. In such a case, the portion so declared to be unconstitutional is as if it had never been passed, even in form, and the portion declared to be constitutional must remain in full force as if that had been the whole of the act originally."

Inasmuch as it is clearly unreasonable and improbable that the legislature would have passed the Ohio Act of 1883, commonly called the Scott Law, 80 Ohio Laws 164, amended in 1884, 81 Ohio Laws 204, with the provision giving a lien for the tax on premises occupied by tenants eliminated therefrom, the whole act, so far as it provides for an assessment or tax, is unconstitutional and void. State v. Sinks, 42 Ohio St. 345.

The first section of the Arkansas act conferring exclusive jurisdiction in misdemeanors upon justices' courts is unconstitutional, but the second section being separate and distinct from the first and not in conflict with the constitution, is valid. State v. Devers, 34 Ark. 188; Morrison v. State, 40 Ark. 448.

So much of the fifth and sixth sections of the Florida act of March 3, 1883, attempting to confer judicial power upon the board of county commissioners, is unconstitutional, but being separable from the remainder of the act, does not taint it with illegality. State v. Brown, 19 Fla. 563.

In Lea v. Bumm, 83 Pa. St. 237, it was held that the main and largely executed parts of an act of assembly will not be rendered void because other portions of the act, not called into life on account of their contingent relation to the main parts of the act, are unconstitutional and void.

Statute Contemplating Two or More Objects.—If a statute attempts to accomplish two or more objects and is void as to one, it may still be in every respect complete and valid as to the other. People v. Cooper, 83 Ill. 584; Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406.

Thus, the act of incorporation of the town of Hagerstown, Maryland, of 1860, is constitutional and valid so far as it confers police powers on the mayor, while it is invalid so far as it vests in him judicial power. Hagerstown v. Dechert, 32 Md. 369.

And an act creating an inferior court in a city and giving jurisdiction within the city, and also in the township without the city, will be valid in conferring jurisdiction within the city, whatever may be considered as to the validity of that portion of the act purporting to extend the jurisdiction outside the ter-

3. Statutes Ambiguous, Defective, or Inconsistent.—Statutes so ambiguous or defective in their terms as to convey no definite or certain meaning are invalid, as, for example, a statute prohibiting the sale of liquor within a specified distance of a certain church, there being two churches answering the description.¹ So a statute directing the widening of streets according to a procedure therein described, but describing no procedure, is to that extent, inoperative;² as is a statute directing the payment of money, but making no appropriation.³ But a penal statute that prescribes punishment in the discretion of the court by imprisonment in either the penitentiary or state prison, and by fine, is not void by reason of the fact that in many of the counties of the state there is no penitentiary.⁴ When two statutes are irreconcilably inconsistent, the one last enacted is considered in force, as being the later expression of the legislative will.⁵

ritorial limits of the city. Reid v. Morton, 119 Ill. 118.

But where an act provides for the dissolution and reincorporation of a municipality, and it is clear that the dissolution was authorized only as a step looking to and a foundation for the reincorporation, if that portion which provides for the reincorporation is unconstitutional, the whole act must fail. State v. Stark, 18 Fla. 255.

A law is entire when each part has a general influence over the rest. Second Municipality v. Morgan, 1 La. Ann. 111; Quinlon v. Rogers, 12 Mich. 168.

The striking out of an unconstitutional part is not necessarily by erasing words, but it may be by disregarding the unconstitutional provision and reading the statute as though that provision were not there. Waite, C. J., in Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schutte, 105 U. S. 118.

Corporate Charter.—If the void portion of a corporate charter was not the inducement to, nor consideration for, the enactment of the other provisions, and by striking out the void part there are still left valid provisions amply sufficient to enable the municipality fully to perform all its functions, the charter is not vitiated. So held in regard to a charter containing an unconstitutional provision relative to the exercise of the power of eminent domain. In re Middletown 82 N. Y. 196. And in regard to a charter containing a provision unconstitutionally restricting the right to vote for officers. State v. Tuttle, 53 Wis. 45.

For further examples of statutes in this connection, see cases cited above: and also the following cases: Utsy v.

Hiatt, 30 S. Car. 360; 14 Am. St. Rep. 910; Faut v. Gibbs, 54 Miss. 396; Reed v. Omnibus R. Co., 33 Cal. 212; Irvin v. Gregory, 86 Ga. 605; Gager v. Prout, 48 Ohio St. 89; Baker v. State, 80 Wis. 416; Dacres v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 1 Wash. 525; Normon v. Boaz, 85 Ky. 557; Wooten v. State, 24 Fla. 335; Rogers v. Jacob, 88 Ky. 502; Jaehne v. New York, 128 U. S. 189; aff'g 35 Fed. Rep. 357; Lawton v. Steele, 119 N. Y. 226; 16 Am. St. Rep. 813; People v. McFadden, 81 Cal. 489; 15 Am. St. Rep. 66; In re Liquors of McSoley, 15 R. I. 608; Wilkins v. State, 113 Ind. 514; Treasurer v. People's, etc., Bank, 47 Ohio St. 503; In re Malone Water Works Co., 38 N. Y. St. Rep. 95; Ex parte Christensen, 85 Cal. 208; Field v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. State, 55 Ark. 200; Mathias v. Cramer, 73 Mich. 5; Romaguano v. Crook, 85 Ala. 226; Dupee v. Swigert, 127 Ill. 494.

1. State v. Bartlow, 91 N. Car. 550; 49 Am. Rep. 652.

2. Chaffee's Appeal, 56 Mich. 244. See also Hughes' Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 46.

3. Pillow v. Gaines, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 466.

4. People v. Borges, 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 132.

5. Hurst v. Hawn, 5 Oregon 276; Grant County v. Sels, 5 Oregon 243; Rex v. Middlesex, 1 Dowl. P. C. 117. See infra, this title, Repeal. The Maryland acts, 1886, chapters 261 and 497, both repealing § 7 of art. 60, of the code, relating to marriage licenses, and irreconcilably inconsistent in their provisions, were passed on different days, but approved on the same day; and it was held that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, they were to be pre-

4. Statutes as Evidence.—A statute reciting a former statute is evidence thereof.¹ Recitals in a public statute may constitute evidence, prima facie or conclusive, of the facts alleged:² as for example, where an information for a libel contained an introductory averment that great outrages had been committed in certain parts of the country, the preamble of an act of parliament reciting the existence of outrages of that description was held admissible for the purpose of proving the averment;³ so a recital of a state of war in the preamble of a public statute may be evidence of the existence of a state of war.⁴ In the case of private statutes, recitals are held to be evidence as between the commonwealth and the applicant or party for whose benefit the act was passed, but not as between the latter and other individuals.⁵ An act of the legislature granting an absolute divorce to the husband obtained pending a suit for divorce a mensa and alimony instituted by the wife, has been held admissible as evidence in the latter proceeding.⁶

VI. TITLES AND SUBJECTS UNDER CONSTITUTIONS—1. Constitutional Provisions.—Many state constitutions contain provisions designed to compel the title of a statute to indicate the subject-matter. The purpose of these provisions is apparent. They are designed to preclude the enactment of omnibus bills embracing irrelevant matters sometimes obscured in the body of the bill, and not infrequently obscured intentionally for the purpose of precluding opposition which might be anticipated in the case of knowledge of the contents of the bill. The substance of these constitutional provisions usually is that no law shall embrace more than one subject, and that that subject shall be expressed in the title. Sometimes the provision is that the subject shall be clearly expressed in the title; sometimes it is qualified by the addition of "and matters properly connected therewith." Sometimes the word "object" is used instead of subject, but in the same sense. Sometimes general appropriation bills are made an exception. In some constitutions it is provided that an act wherein this prosumed to have been approved in their numerical order, and the one bearing the greater number considered the latest expression of the will of the legislature. State v. Davis, 70 Md. 237. See also Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292.

1. Lord v. Bigelow, 8 Vt. 445.

2. Greenl. on Ev. (14th ed.), § 491.

3. Rex v. Sutton, 4 M. & S. 532.

4. Rex v. De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 68.

The Virginia Stat. of 1796, expressly recognizing the proceedings of the commissioners prior to that time relative to the Illinois grant, is sufficient evidence of the previous surrender of title by that state to the commissioners in conformity with her laws. Henthom v. Doe, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 157.

In Bank of U. S. v. Macalester, 9 Pa. St. 475, where a set-off was allowed of coupons payable by a bank out of funds raised by the state for canal purposes and deposited in such bank, it was held to be no ground for reversing the judgment, that the act of Congress in aid of such canal and the act of the state legislature respecting the same were admitted in evidence.

5. State v. Beard, 1 Ind. 460; Elmondorff v. Carmichael, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 472; 14 Am. Dec. 86; Parmelee v. Thompson, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 77; Lothrop v. Stedman, 42 Conn. 583; Branson v. Wirth, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 32.

6. Roberts v. Roberts, 54 Pa. St. 265.

vision is disregarded shall be void only as to that part not expressed in the title. Sometimes a provision is limited in its operation to private and local bills.¹

Usually these constitutional requirements are deemed mandatory.² But the Ohio courts have construed such a provision to be

1. See the constitutions of the various states.

In People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481, the court, by Cooley, J., said, in this connection: "The practice of bringing together into one bill, subjects diverse in their nature and having no necessary connection, with a view to combine in their favor the advocates of all, and thus secure the passage of several measures, no one of which could succeed upon its own merits, was one both corruptive of the legislature and dangerous to the state. It was scarcely more so, however, than another practice, also intended to be remedied by this provision, by which, through dexterous management, clauses were inserted in bills, of which the title gave no intimation, and their passage secured through legislative bodies, whose members were not generally aware of their intention and effect. There was no design by this clause to embarrass legislation by making laws unnecessarily restrictive in their scope and operation, and thus multiply their number; but the framers of the constitution meant to put an end to legislation of the vicious character referred to, which was little less than a fraud upon the public, and to require that in every case the proposed measure should stand upon its own merits, and that the legislature should be fairly satisfied of its design when required to pass upon it."

In Bacon's Abridgment, Statute F, it was said: "Who would expect to find a most material alteration of the statute of distributions in a law, the title of which is 'An act for the renewal and continuance of several acts of parliament.'"

In Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 38, the Yazoo act is spoken of. This act was entitled "An act for the payment of the late state troops;" but its provisions placed a large area of public lands in the hands of speculators.

It is a matter of common knowledge that congressional appropriation bills frequently embrace all sorts of incongruous matters introduced by way of riders and otherwise.

In Walker v. Caldwell, 4 La. Ann.

298, the court said: "The title of an act often afforded no clew to its contents. Important general principles were found placed in acts private or local in their operation; provisions concerning matters of practice or judicial proceedings were sometimes included in the same statute with matters entirely foreign to them, the result of which was that on many important subjects the statute law had become almost unintelligible, as they whose duty it has been to examine or act under it can well testify. To prevent any further accumulation to this chaotic mass was the object of the constitutional provision under consideration."

The purpose of these provisions and the evils at which they were designed to strike are adverted to in Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. New York, 8 N. Y. 241; State v. Davis County Judge, 2 Iowa 280; Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151; Indiana Central R. Co. v. Potts, 7 Ind. 681; Hingle v. State, 24 Ind. 28; People v. Institution of Protestant Deaconesses, 71 Ill. 229; State v. Ah Sam, 15 Nev. 27; 37 Am. Rep. 454; Harrison v. Milwaukee County, 51 Wis. 645; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216; 34 Am. Rep. 737; Hope v. Gainesville, 72 Ga. 246; State v. Ranson, 73 Mo. 78; State v. Govern, 47 N. J. L. 368. And in Cooley's Constitutional Limitations it is said: "It may therefore be assumed as settled that the purpose of these provisions was, first, to prevent hodge-podge or 'log rolling' legislation; second, to prevent surprise or fraud upon the legislature by means of provisions in bills of which the titles gave no intimation, and which might therefore be overlooked and carelessly and unintentionally adopted; and, third, to fairly apprise the people, through such publication of legislative proceedings as is usually made, of the subjects of legislation that are being considered, in order that they may have opportunity of being heard thereon, by petition or otherwise, if they shall so desire."

2. In Cannon v. Mathes, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 504, the court referred to the language of the Tennessee provision, viz., "No bill shall become a law directory only—that is, that a statute in disregard of the provision is not void.¹

which embraces more than one subject,” and said: “This is a direct, positive and imperative limitation upon the power of the legislature.”

In Central, etc., R. Co. v. People, 5 Colo. 39; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 546, it was held that the language of the provision common to Colorado and some other states, viz., “But if any subject shall be embraced in any act which shall not be embraced in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be so embraced,” was decisive of the question. See San Antonio v. Gould, 34 Tex. 49; Cannon v. Hemphill, 7 Tex. 184; State v. McCracken, 42 Tex. 383; Tadlock v. Ecckles, 20 Tex. 782; 73 Am. Dec. 213; Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 224; Montgomery Mut. Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Robinson, 69 Ala. 413; State v. Miller, 45 Mo. 495; Prothro v. Orr, 12 Ga. 36; Phillips v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 221; Sedgwick County v. Bailey, 13 Kan. 607; People v. Fleming, 7 Colo. 230; Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 74; Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330; Huber v. People, 49 N. Y. 134; citing People v. Hills, 35 N. Y. 449; People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 10; People v. Allen, 42 N. Y. 378; Gaskin v. Meek, 42 N. Y. 186; People v. O'Brien, 38 N. Y. 193; Union Pass. R. Co.'s Appeal, 81½ Pa. St. 91; Wall v. Garrison, 11 Colo. 515.

1. The view taken by the Ohio court was supported in Pim v. Nicholson, 6 Ohio St. 176, by the following argument: “The . . . provision . . . that no bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, is also made a permanent rule in the introduction and passage of bills through the houses. The subject of the bill is required to be expressed in the title for the purpose of advising members of its subject, when voting in cases in which the reading has been dispensed with by a two-thirds' vote. The provision that a bill shall contain but one subject was to prevent combinations by which various and distinct matters of legislation should gain a support which they could not if presented separately. As a rule of proceeding in the general assembly, it is manifestly an important one. But if it was intended to effect any practical object for the benefit of the people in the examination, construction, or operation of acts passed and published, we are unable to perceive it. The title of an act may indicate to the reader its subject, and under the rule each act would contain one subject. To suppose that for such a purpose the constitutional convention adopted the rule under consideration, would impute to them a most minute provision for a very imperfect heading of the chapters of laws and their subdivision. This provision being intended to operate upon bills in their progress through the general assembly, it must be held to be directory only. It relates to bills and not to acts. It would be most mischievous in practice to make the validity of every law depend upon the judgment of every judicial tribunal of the state, as to whether an act or a bill contained more than one subject, or whether this one subject was clearly expressed in the title of the act or bill. Such a question would be decided according to the mental precision and mental discipline of each justice of the peace and judge. No practical benefit could arise from such inquiries. We are, therefore, of the opinion that in general the only safeguard against the violation of these rules of the houses is their regard for, and their oath to support, the constitution of the state. We say, in general, the only safeguard; for whether a manifestly gross and fraudulent violation of these rules might authorize the court to pronounce a law unconstitutional, it is unnecessary to determine. It is to be presumed no such case will ever occur.” See also Steamboat Northern Indiana v. Milliken, 7 Ohio St. 383; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 604; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102; Oshe v. State, 37 Ohio St. 500.

On the other hand, in People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177, Emmot, J., in speaking of this provision, said: “It will be found upon full consideration to be difficult to treat any constitutional provision as merely directory and not imperative.” And again in Prothro v. Orr, 12 Ga. 36, Lumpkin, J., said: “It has been suggested that the prohibition in the seventeenth section of the first article of the constitution, ‘Nor shall any law or ordinance pass containing any matter

These provisions do not invalidate existing statutes.¹ Under their general terms they do not apply to city ordinances.²

2. Title Broader than Statute.—A statute is not invalid by reason of the fact that the title expresses more than one subject, if the statute itself does not;³ nor because the title refers to inconsistent matters, if there is nothing in the body of the statute to correspond with the inconsistent matters expressed in the title.⁴ Redundant expressions in the title which do not obscure its meaning will not render the title bad.⁵

3. Statute Broader than Title.—It may be said generally that so much of a statute as is broader than the title is void under these constitutional provisions.⁶ In such case the whole statute need different from what is expressed in the title thereof,' is directory only to the legislative and executive or law-making departments of the government. But we do not so understand it. On the contrary, we consider it as much a matter of judicial cognizance as any other provision in that instrument."

In Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, p. 97, the Ohio view is criticised and the above-quoted language from the New York and Georgia cases approved.

Under the old constitution of California the courts held such a provision to be directory and not mandatory. Washington v. Page, 4 Cal. 388; Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 315; but the existing constitution closes the door on the question by providing generally that the provisions of the constitution are mandatory, unless by express words declared otherwise.

1. Rogers v. Windoes, 48 Mich. 628; State v. Robinson (Neb. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 213.

If, at the time of the passage of an act, the constitution of the state contains no provision that the object of an act shall be indicated in the title, the subsequent incorporation of such act in a compilation of laws will not render it subject to such a provision in a constitution thereafter adopted. Auditor Gen'l v. Lake George, etc., R. Co., 82 Mich. 426.

2. Humboldt v. McCoy, 23 Kan. 249; People v. Hanrahan, 75 Mich. 611; Green v. Indianapolis, 25 Ind. 490; Baumgartner v. Hasty, 100 Ind. 575; 50 Am. Rep. 830.

3. State v. Becker (S. Dak. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 1018; State v. Trolson (Nev. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 930; State v. Hyde, 129 Ind. 296. See also Dromberger v. Reed, 11 Ind. 420.

Powers v. McKenzie, 90 Tenn. 167. In this case the objection was made that the title of the act was more comprehensive than its provisions. The court, in refuting the objection, observed: "We are aware of no adjudicated case, and it is believed that none can be found, that holds an act of the legislature obnoxious to this section of the constitution simply on the ground that the provisions of the act do not embrace or cover the full scope of appropriate legislation admissible under its title. The intent of this provision of our organic law was to secure, in a legislative sense, unity of subject expressed in its title in each legislative act; and this for the protection of the legislative body as well as its constituency. The cases, as well as sound reason, in the exposition of this and similar provisions of written constitutions, condemn acts because their terms and legal import go beyond the scope of their titles, and not because they keep well within them." Judson v. Bessemer, 87 Ala. 240.

4. Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292; State v. Becker (S. Dak. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 1018.

5. In re Haynes (N. J. 1891), 22 Atl. Rep. 923.

6. Messenger v. State, 25 Neb. 674. In this case it was held that the title "An act to provide that all citizens shall be entitled to the same civil rights" could not support a provision that "all persons within this state" should be entitled to the same right, in so far as the statutory provision applied to persons who were not citizens of the state. See also White v. Lincoln, 5 Neb. 505; Tecumseh v. Phillips, 5 Neb. 305; McGee's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 470; Ex parte Cowert, 92 Ala. 94.

The title, "An act making appropriations for general expenses of the not fail if the extraneous provision is so separable from that within the title that the latter can stand alone.¹ Sometimes the constitutional provision is that only that part of the statute not expressed in the title shall be void.² Where two subjects are expressed in the title, and two subjects embraced in the body of the act, the statute as a whole must be held inoperative generally, because of the difficulty of determining which part should stand. If, however, it can be determined from an inspection of the statute which part should be rejected, such part may be void and the rest valid.³ Affirmative legislation may not be attempted state for the year ending December 31, 1874," does not embrace a provision for expenses incurred before that year. State v. Clinton, 27 La. Ann. 40.

The title, "An act to provide for changing the names of minor adopted children, and of other persons" is inconsistent with a provision that the persons adopting a child shall stand in place of the parents and that the child shall be their heir at law. People v. Congdon, 77 Mich. 351.

In People v. Phippin, 70 Mich. 6, it was held that the title "An act to promote public health," would not sustain provisions regulating the practice of medicine by unqualified persons.

The title, "An act concerning bills and notes," will not sustain a provision respecting "other instruments." Mewherter v. Price, 11 Ind. 199.

The title of an act specifically naming five sections of another act to be amended, will not support an amendment of the sixth section of such act. State v. Bankers, etc., Mut. Ben. Assoc., 23 Kan. 499.

The title, "An act providing for the acknowledgment of deeds and other conveyances of land," does not sustain a provision that conveyances not recorded within six months shall be void as against subsequent purchasers. Carr v. Thomas, 18 Fla. 736.

The title, "An act regulating the herding and driving of stock," will not comprehend a provision giving damages for injuries to such stock in certain cases. Ives v. Norris, 13 Neb. 252.

The title, "An act to release the interest of the people of the State of New York in certain real estate [certain designated persons] and for other purposes," is not sufficient to support provisions releasing to such persons an interest in personal estate acquired by the state by escheat. Johnston v. Spicer, 107 N. Y. 185. See also McCabe v. Kenny, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 518.

When the title of a statute is single, the provisions which it covers will be valid—those not covered, void. Williams v. Payson, 14 La. Ann. 7; Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 26.

Only so much of the act as is not indicated by the title is void. Union Pass. R. Co's Appeal, 81½ Pa. St. 91; Alleghany County Home's Case, 77 Pa. St. 77; Carothers v. Philadelphia Co., 118 Pa. St. 468.

1. Ex parte Moore, 62 Ala. 471.

In In re Sackett, etc., Streets, 74 N. Y. 95, the title of the act related to the improvement of three streets, but the body of the act related to five, and it was held that the act was valid as to the three streets mentioned in the title, the improvement of the other two streets not being necessarily connected with that of the other three.

2. As in Indiana, Oregon, Iowa, Illinois, and West Virginia. See Indiana Cent. R. Co. v. Potts, 7 Ind. 681; Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 74.

3. See People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 553; Huber v. People, 49 N. Y. 132; People v. Morgan, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; People v. Phifer, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 682; Prothro v. Orr, 12 Ga. 36; Chiles v. Monroe, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 72; Smith v. New York, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 508; People v. O'Brien, 38 N. Y. 193; Walker v. State, 49 Ala. 329; Boyd v. State, 53 Ala. 601; Ex parte Moore, 62 Ala. 471; Phillips v. New York, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 483; Williams v. Payson, 14 La. Ann. 7; Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 26; Fuqua v. Mullen, 13 Bush (Ky.) 467; Rader v. Union Tp. 39 N. J. L. 509; Jones v. Thompson, 12 Bush (Ky.) 394; Middleport Tp. v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 562; Welch v. Post, 99 Ill. 471; Ex parte Cowert, 92 Ala. 94. In State v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 474, it was held that the entire act was void. Also in State v. McCann, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 1.

In Donnersberger v. Prendergast, under a title disclosing nothing except the repeal of former legislation.¹

4. General Rules.—The provision that an act shall contain but one subject which shall be expressed in its title should be so construed as to support the validity of the act if possible.² A

128 Ill. 234, the court, by Shope, J., said in this connection: "As we have seen, the constitution provides that where a subject is embraced in an act not expressed in its title, 'the act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed.' Therefore, although a portion of the statute under consideration is unconstitutional, it does not follow that the court is authorized to declare its other provisions void, if they are separable from the void provisions and capable of enforcement independently of such void provisions, unless it shall appear that all of the provisions of the act are so dependent on each other, operating together for the same purpose, or are otherwise so connected together in meaning, that it cannot be presumed that the legislature would have passed the one without the other provision. When the constitutional and unconstitutional provisions are distinct and separable, the valid provisions may stand as though the invalid provision had not been introduced. Cooley Const. Lim. 177, 178, and notes. See also Knox County v. Davis, 63 Ill. 405; Myers v. People, 67 Ill. 503; Binz v. Weber, 81 Ill. 288; Middleport Tp. v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 82 Ill. 562; Hinze v. People, 92 Ill. 406; Cornell v. People, 107 Ill. 372; People v. Hazelwood, 116 Ill. 319." See also upon this point, State v. North Plainfield, 43 N. J. L. 349; Dorsey's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 192; In re Metropolitan Gaslight Co., 85 N. Y. 526; Tecumseh v. Phillips, 5 Neb. 305; Stiefel v. Maryland Blind Inst., 61 Md. 144; State v. Palmes, 23 Fla. 620.

If the first subject of an act is expressed in its title and the second subject be not so expressed, the act may be valid as to the first subject, if it appear that the second was not an inducement to the legislature to pass the first. State v. Lancaster County, 17 Mo. 85.

In Skinner v. Wilhelm, 63 Mich. 571, the title was, "An act to provide for the incorporation of merchants' mutual insurance companies, and to regulate the business of insurance by merchants' and manufacturers' mutual insurance companies," and provisions of the act followed the title. The court, by Sherwood, J., said: "We think these two objects have no necessary connection with each other. The regulation of the business of manufacturing companies having an existence when the act was passed, and some of them organized in other states, has nothing to do with, and has no necessary or natural connection with, the formation of merchants' mutual insurance companies. The two objects are distinct and separate, and should have been provided for in separate acts. The defects noticed are fatal to the validity of the whole act. The case is not one in which any part of the act can be retained, and the rest rejected for the infirmity. It is impossible to tell which object was intended by the legislature, and in such case both fall under the same condemnation. There is no room for doubt upon the subject."

1. Stiefel v. Maryland Blind Inst., 61 Md. 144.

2. Harris v. Niagara County, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 279; Bergman v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 88 Mo. 678; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 588; In re Breene, 14 Colo. 401; In re Haynes (N. J. 1891), 22 Atl. Rep. 923. In this case the court, by Beasley, C. J., said: "It has always been held that these statutory titles, with regard to their construction, are to be liberally treated so as to validate the law to which they appertain, if such course be reasonably practicable. In such a connection hypercriticism is utterly out of place, the only requirement being that the title of the statute shall express its object in a general way so as to be intelligible by the ordinary reader."

The title will be sufficient, if by fair construction its language can be deemed to embrace the provisions of the act. Jacksonville v. Bassnett, 20 Fla. 525.

In Henderson v. Jackson County, 2 McCrary (U. S.) 619, it is said that a provision that all bills shall be read at length before final passage, now found in most constitutions, has given additional safeguards against fraudulent legislation and made it unnecessary, except in special cases, to construe the constitutional requirement relating to title with strictness.

See generally Johnson v. Higgins, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 566; People v. Hurlbut, strained¹ or technical² construction should be avoided, and doubtful cases should be resolved in favor of the act.³ It is sufficient if the title states the object of the act according to the understanding of reasonable men.⁴ The provision should be given a reasonable interpretation,⁵ but wherever an intent to avoid it appears, the court must give it effect.⁶

Long acquiescence in the constitutionality of an act in respect of its title is entitled to great weight in determining the sufficiency of the title.⁷ The title of an act should give fair notice of its contents. It should not mislead.⁸ But it is not necessary that the title should particularize the matter of the statute,⁹ nor 24 Mich. 55; 9 Am. Rep. 103; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 553; City Sewage Utilization Co. v. Davis, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 625; Phillips v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 219; People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177.

1. Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1.

2. Johnson v. Higgins, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 566; Municipality No. Three v. Michoud, 6 La. Ann. 665.

3. Gillespie v. State, 9 Ind. 380; Robinson v. State, 15 Tex. 311.

The act will not be declared unconstitutional unless it is in such plain conflict with the constitution as to leave no discretion to the court in the premises. Every reasonable intendment must be made in favor of the act. Dorchester County v. Meekins, 50 Md. 39. See also infra, this title, Presumption in Favor of Constitutionality.

4. Municipality No. Three v. Michoud, 6 La. Ann. 605.

The title, "An act concerning bridges in B County" is sufficient to embrace everything connected with bridges, including their manner of construction, purchase, and payment therefor. Pierce v. Smith (Kan. 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 565.

The title, "An act to provide for a board of assessors in cities," sufficiently indicates provisions relating to the creation of boards to assess property and to award damages and benefits. In re Assessment, etc. (N. J. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 517.

The title of an act expressing its object to be the laying out of a public ground for the purpose of maintaining a sea wall, is sufficient to support provisions for the condemnation of such ground. Sweet v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 79 N. Y. 293.

The title of an act in relation to "expenses" will support provisions relating to a "debt." State v. State Auditor, 32 La. Ann. 89.

5. Allegheny County Home's Case, 77 Pa. St. 79.

6. Johnston v. Spicer, 107 N. Y. 185; Purdy v. People, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 418; People v. Hills, 35 N. Y. 452.

7. Continental Imp. Co. v. Phelps, 47 Mich. 299; Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 81; Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 299; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 646; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 351; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 264; Bank of U. S. v. Halstead, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 51; Westinghausen v. People, 44 Mich. 265; People v. Hammond, 13 Mich. 256; Frey v. Michie, 68 Mich. 323; People v. Goodwin, 22 Mich. 500.

8. Allegheny County Home's Case, 77 Pa. St. 77. Here the title of the act was "An act providing for an equitable division of property between Allegheny county and the city of Pittsburgh." Allegheny county constituted a poor district known as Allegheny County Home, and certain townships of the county were annexed to the city of Pittsburgh; two sections of the act provided that the value of the interest of the annexed townships in the Home property should be ascertained and paid to the guardians of the poor of Pittsburgh; the third section extended the provisions of the act to Allegheny city as provided for Pittsburgh. It was held that the first two sections were constitutional and did not contain more than one subject which was not expressed in the title. The court said: "If the title fairly gives notice of the subject of the act so as reasonably to lead to an inquiry into the body of the bill, it is all that is necessary. It need not be an index to the contents as has often been said." See also State Line, etc., R. Co.'s Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 429.

9. Green v. Mayor, etc., R. M. Charl't. (Ga.) 368; Martin v. Broach, set forth its substance,¹ nor the nature of its provisions;² nor is it necessary that it should amount to an epitome, abstract,³ or index of its contents.⁴ Nor need the title state the means⁵ or mode⁶ of accomplishing the purposes of the act.⁷ Nor does the provision that the object of the act must be expressed in its title

6 Ga. 21; 50 Am. Dec. 306; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; State v. Wilson, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 246; Adler v. State, 55 Ala. 16; Watson v. State, 55 Ala. 158; People v. McCallum, 1 Neb. 182.

In Wrought-Iron Bridge Co. v. Attica, 2 N. Y. Supp. 361, the court, by Bradley, J., said: "The purposes for which the title is required to express the subject of a private or local bill is not to furnish by it the details of the act, but to call attention to the matter to which it relates for the details of which reference must be had to the provisions of the bill. The question is not one of degree of particularity, but whatever comes within the purview of the subject expressed in the title is permissible in the act," citing Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116; Tift v. Buffalo, 82 N. Y. 204; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 553; In re Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 67 N. Y. 372; Kerrigan v. Force, 68 N. Y. 381; Neuendorff v. Duryea, 69 N. Y. 557; 25 Am. Rep. 235; In re Metropolitan Gaslight Co., 85 N. Y. 526.

The title, "An act to remove the seat of government temporarily to Wheeling," is sufficient to sustain a provision accepting the offer of certain citizens to effect such removal without cost to the state. Slack v. Jacob, 8 W. Va. 640.

The title, "An act concerning the dissolution of attachments," may embrace provisions relating to the disposition of an insolvent debtor's estate. Mayer v. Cahalin, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 355.

The title, "An act to regulate the practice of pharmacy . . . and the sale of poisons," is sufficient to sustain a provision regulating the sale of drugs and medicines other than poisons. State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74.

The title of a repealing act expressing its object to be the repealing of an act which provides for the levying of a tax for the purpose of erecting a drawbridge over certain waters, is sufficient to sustain a provision in the repealing act providing for the erection and repair of such a drawbridge. Talbot County v. Queen Ann's County, 50 Md. 245.

1. Lockhart v. Noy, 48 Ala. 579; Falconer v. Robinson, 46 Ala. 347. In this case the court, by Peck, C. J., said: "The title, 'An act to authorize the governor to fill vacancies in certain county offices' is sufficient. The subject of this law is, by whom vacancies in certain county offices shall be filled. The title clearly expresses this. They are to be filled by the governor. The title need not state what particular county offices are to be filled by him. That is a part of the matter and substance of the law, and the body of the law, not the title, is the appropriate place to express it. To require it to be expressed in the title would be to require the title to express not only the subject, but also the matter and substance of the law."

2. People v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 137; State v. Union, 33 N. J. L. 350; State v. Kinsella, 14 Minn. 524.

The title, "An act to provide for the enrollment of contributing members in each company and battery of state troops," sufficiently indicates a provision giving to such members a special exemption from jury duty. Hall v. Burlingame, 88 Mich. 438.

The title, "An act in relation to assignments for the benefit of creditors and to regulate the same and the proceedings thereunder," sufficiently indicates a provision invalidating all liens on stocks of goods exposed for sale in the usual course of trade. Duncan v. Taylor, 63 Tex. 645.

3. People v. McCallum, 1 Neb. 182. It is not intended that the body of an act shall be a repetition of the title, nor that the title shall be a summary or epitome of the body. Montgomery Mut. Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Robinson, 69 Ala. 418.

4. Allegheny County Home's Case, 77 Pa. St. 77; Carter County v. Sinton, 120 U. S. 517; State v. Dariel, 28 La. Ann. 38; Baltimore v. Reitz, 50 Md. 574.

5. People v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 137; Edwards v. Police Jury, 39 La. Ann. 855.

6. Collins v. Henderson, 11 Bush (Ky.) 74; Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116.

7. Edwards v. Police Jury, 39 La. Ann. 855.

imply that the act shall have no operation beyond what is expressed in the title.¹ A brief and concise statement sufficient to indicate the nature of the act is all that is necessary.² If an act relates to a definite locality so particularly that the limits within

1. People v. Wands, 23 Mich. 384. In this case the title of the act was "An act to amend sections 18 and 19 of an act entitled," etc. [reciting the title of the act designed to be amended fully and correctly], which re-enacted at length the two specified sections as amended, and contained no object not embraced in the title of the original act, which latter title was properly framed. The title of the amendatory act was held to sufficiently disclose the object of the act. The court, by Graves, J., said: "The title of the original act was thus fully and correctly recited, and the two specified sections as amended were re-enacted at length. They contained no object not embraced in the title of the original act, and the title of that act is framed in substantial accordance with the clause of the constitution which delineates the legislative power on the subjects to which the act relates, and indicates the purpose to be attained by legislation, and as the amending act stated its object to be the amendment of the two sections, and embraced no object not expressed in the title of the act to be amended, we think no question properly arises on the title. If we were to hold that no act can have any operation further than the title actually expresses, we should outrun the constitution, unsettle much of the legislation of the last twenty years, and throw an obstacle in the path of future legislation which no human wisdom could overcome." Compare Washington County v. Franklin R. Co., 34 Md. 159.

See also McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush (Ky.) 447, where the right to collect tolls was held to be sufficiently included in the title, "An act to incorporate the Green and Barren River Navigation Company," the court saying that such powers as were delegated by the act were given in most instances to all corporations, and that to hold the act unconstitutional on the ground that its object was not sufficiently disclosed by the title, would be, in effect, to annul nearly all the charters theretofore granted by the legislature for internal improvement purposes.

The title, "An act to encourage the growing of hedges," sufficiently indicates a provision conferring a bounty on persons growing hedges. Marion County v. Winkley, 29 Kan. 40.

The title, "An act to establish a water department in and for the city of Syracuse," is sufficient to sustain a provision for obtaining water from a certain lake, and for condemnation proceedings necessary for that purpose. Sweet v. Syracuse (N. Y. 1891), 27 N. E. Rep. 1081.

The title, "An act to regulate the descent of real estate and the distribution of personal property," comprehends a provision that the existing law as to inheritance of the husband and wife from each other shall apply only to the separate property of the decedents and take the place of tenancy in dower and tenancy by the curtesy, which are thereby abolished. Richards v. Bellingham Bay Land Co., 54 Fed. Rep. 209.

The title, "An act to encourage and provide for a general vaccination in the State of California," sufficiently sustains a provision that children shall be vaccinated before they are admitted to any of the public schools. Abeel v. Clark, 84 Cal. 226.

2. Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522. In this case it was held that the fact that an act makes the "giving" away intoxicating liquors an offense, while the title of the act refers to the sale only, does not render the act unconstitutional.

In a statute creating a public office, whatever is regarded by the legislature as requisite to describe or establish the nature of the office, the character, limit and effect of the powers communicated, the extent of the duties intended to be imposed on its incumbent, and the official and personal rights intended to be claimed and exercised by him, as well as all provisions intended to afford means of carrying out the objects contemplated by the establishment of such office, may be regarded as part of the subject-matter and entering into the proper subject of the statute. Morton v. Comptroller Gen'l, 4 S. Car. 430. Provisions regulating the manner of conducting an election to determine a change of location of a county seat may be embraced under the title, "An which it is to apply become an essential feature, it has been held necessary to express the locality in the statute.¹

On the other hand, the title will not be invalidated by the fact that it contains redundant expressions² or is needlessly particular in stating details embraced in the act.³ If subjects embraced by the statute but not specified in the title have congruity⁴ or natural connection⁵ with the subject stated in the title, or are cognate⁶ act to change the location of the county seat of —" specifying the county. The submission of the question of the change of location to the voters, the selection of the new site, and the removal of the county buildings, are all matters properly connected with the "change of the location," which is the subject expressed in the title of the act. Simpson v. Bailey, 3 Oregon 515. See also Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 197; Woodruff v. Baldwin, 23 Kan. 494.

1. Durkee v. Janesville, 26 Wis. 697, where the title, "An act to legalize and authorize street improvements and assessments," was held insufficient because it did not specify the localities to be improved, as shown by the body of the statute. See also Anderton v. Milwaukee, 82 Wis. 279, where the title, "An act to authorize the city of Milwaukee to change the grades of streets," was held insufficient for the same reason. See also Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Arnold, 46 Wis. 214. In Neuendorff v. Duryea, 69 N. Y. 557; 25 Am. Rep. 235, it was held that the title of an act to preserve the public peace within the city of New York on Sunday, need not express the locality mentioned in the body of the act; distinguishing Durkee v. Janesville, 26 Wis. 697.

2. Thus in the title, "An act concerning cities of the first class in this state, and constituting municipal boards of street and water commissioners, and defining the powers and duties of such boards and relating to the municipal affairs and departments of such cities, placed under the control and management of such boards, and providing for the maintenance of the same," that part commencing with the words "and defining the powers," etc., and continuing to the end, was held to consist of harmless redundancies. In re Haynes (N. J. 1891), 22 Atl. Rep. 923.

3. Allen v. Hall, 14 Bush (Ky.) 85; Greaton v. Griffin, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 313.

Where but one general subject is expressed, the fact that the legislature sees fit to incumber the title with two specifications under that subject, will not render the act obnoxious to the constitutional provision against dual subjects. Dallas v. Redman, 10 Colo. 297; State v. Kolsem, 103 Ind. 434; Bitters v. Fulton County, 81 Ind. 125; Crawfordsville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Fletcher, 104 Ind. 97; Barnett v. Harshbarger, 105 Ind. 410; Indianapolis v. Huegele, 115 Ind. 581.

4. De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289.

The title of an act relating to bonds issued in aid of improvements "in this state," will sustain provisions relating to certain improvements, though such improvements are not restricted by the act to the state in question. Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1.

5. State v. Miller, 45 Mo. 495.

The title, "An ordinance to regulate and prohibit the running at large of animals," comprehends a provision prohibiting the unlawful taking of animals from the city pound. Smith v. Emporia, 27 Kan. 528.

The title, "An act to prevent stock from running at large in P. county," sufficiently indicates a provision making the owner liable for all injuries done by the stock while running at large, and that a judgment therefor shall be a lien on the stock committing the injury. Barnhill v. Teague (Ala. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 444.

6. McCaslin v. State, 44 Ind. 151; Bonorden v. Kriz, 13 Neb. 121.

The title, "An act to prevent animals from running at large in a designated county," will sustain a provision prohibiting the running at large of animals in a precinct of that county. Erlinger v. Boneau, 51 Ill. 94.

The title, "An act to provide for the appointment of a land commissioner," sufficiently indicates a provision authorizing a public debt to be contracted for the purposes of the act. Morton v. Comptroller Gen'l, 4 S. Car. 430. Compare State v. Gurney, 4 S. Car. 520.

The title, "An act to provide a homestead for the widows and children of deceased persons," is sufficient to indicate or germane¹ thereto, the requirement of the constitution as to title is satisfied. The fact that the act authorizes many things of a diverse nature to be done will not affect the sufficiency of the title, provided the doing of such things may be fairly regarded as in furtherance of the general subject of the enactment.²

If the subject of the act is embraced in the title, all legal consequences necessarily flowing from it will, for the purposes of the constitutional requirement, be regarded as embraced in the title

a provision that in certain cases such persons shall be entitled to receive a specified sum from the estate of the decedent before his debts shall have been paid. Lanzetti's Succession, 9 La. Ann. 329; Aaron's Succession, 11 La. Ann. 671.

The title, "An act to establish state depositaries . . . and prescribe their duties and liabilities," comprehends a provision for the giving of bonds by the depositaries and the enforcement thereof. Seay v. Bank of Rome, 66 Ga. 609.

1. The general rules are stated in Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 578, where the court, by Mitchell, J., said: "Any construction of this provision of the constitution that would interfere with the very commendable policy of incorporating the entire body of statutory law upon one general subject in a single act, instead of dividing it into a number of separate acts, would not only be contrary to its spirit, but also seriously embarrassing to honest legislation. All that is required is that the act should not include legislation so incongruous that it could not, by any fair intendment, be considered germane to one general subject. The subject may be as comprehensive as the legislature chooses to make it, provided it constitutes, in the constitutional sense, a single subject and not several. The connection or relationship of several matters, such as will render them germane to one subject and to each other, can be of various kinds, as, for example, of means to ends, of different subdivisions of the same subject, or that all are designed for the same purpose, or that both are designated by the same term. Neither is it necessary that the connection or relationship should be logical; it is enough that the matters are connected with and related to a single subject in popular signification. The generality of the title of an act is no objection, provided only it is sufficient to give notice of the general subject of the proposed legislation and of the interests likely to be affected. The title was never intended to be an index of the law."

In Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 74, the title of the act was "An act making appropriations of the public money to pay general charges on the treasury," and it was held that this was a sufficient expression of the object of the act to sustain a provision indicating the officer on whose requisition the money should be paid. And see the following cases: State v. Silver, 9 Nev. 227; De Witt v. San Francisco, 2 Cal. 289; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; State v. State Bank, 45 Mo. 528; Gifford v. New Jersey R., etc., Co., 10 N. J. Eq. 171. As to what is germane to title, see Smith v. State, 19 Fla. 408; People v. Nelson, 133 Ill. 565; Benson v. Christian, 129 Ind. 535; State v. Bush, 45 Kan. 138; In re Pinkney, 47 Kan. 89; Tice v. Bay City, 78 Mich. 209; Campbell v. Kalamazoo, 80 Mich. 655; Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Morton, 83 Mich. 265; Ripley v. Evans, 87 Mich. 217; Frary v. Allen Tp. (Mich. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 78; McPherson v. Blacker, 92 Mich. 377; State v. Starkey, 49 Minn. 503; State v. Macklin, 41 Mo. App. 335; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Lowrey, 32 Neb. 732; Clark Thread Co. v. Hudson County (N. J. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 820; State v. Shaw, 22 Oregon 287; Com. v. Deputy (Pa. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 896; Washington v. McGeorge (Pa. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 222; 29 W. N. C. (Pa.) 251; Ex parte Bacot (S. Car. 1892), 15 S. E. Rep. 204; Magee v. Merriman (Tex. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 1002; Van Houten v. Routhe, 1 Wash. 306; State v. New Whatcom, 3 Wash. 7; Marston v. Humes, 3 Wash. 267; overruling Harland v. Territory, 3 Wash. Ter. 131.

2. Good illustrations of this will be found in the following cases: Magurn v. Board of Education, 133 Ill. 122; Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 504; Larned v. Tiernan, 110 Ill. 173; Mix v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 116 Ill. 502; People v. Hazelwood, 116 Ill. 319.

also.¹ Provisions fairly within the title are not objectionable because improperly classified,² nor because they might have been more explicit³ or more apt,⁴ nor because the court may consider them unjust.⁵

The words "and for other purposes" frequently suffixed to the title of a statute imply purposes not named in the title, and therefore are generally rejected as being without force or effect, and insufficient to indicate matters not otherwise indicated by the title.⁶ "Etc." has also been held to have no meaning as a part of the title of an act.⁷ Clerical errors will not vitiate the title if the object of the statute is apparent.⁸

The constitutional provision may not be construed as to operate an unnecessary restriction on legislative action.⁹

1. Timm v. Harrison, 109 Ill. 193; Mix v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 116 Ill. 102; Magurn v. Board of Education, 133 Ill. 122.

2. Robinson v. State, 15 Tex. 311.

3. Coffman v. Keightley, 24 Ind. 509.

4. Miami County v. Bears, 25 Ind. 110.

5. Mayer v. Cahalin, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 355.

6. Sutherland on Stat. Const., § 89; St. Louis v. Tiefel, 42 Mo. 578; State v. Garrett, 29 La. Ann. 637; Com. v. Green, 58 Pa. St. 233; Fishkill Tp. v. Fishkill, etc., Plank Road Co., 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 634; Johnston v. Spicer, 107 N. Y. 185; Ryerson v. Utley, 16 Mich. 269; Shepherd v. Helmers, 23 Kan. 504; Pitkin County v. Aspen Min.; etc., Co. (Colo. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 717.

In Georgia, where the requirement was that the act should contain no matter "different" from what was expressed in the title, it was held that the words "and for other purposes" were sufficient to sustain provisions not otherwise indicated by the title. Martin v. Broach, 6 Ga. 21; 50 Am. Dec. 306.

7. State v. Hackett, 5 La. Ann. 93. But in Garvin v. State, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 162, it was held that in the title, "An act to punish as felons all parties who may engage in keeping or conducting halls or houses for conduct of games of keno, faro, three-card monte, and mustang, etc.," the phrase "etc." had force as showing that the title applied to other games mentioned in the act, and that it was not equivalent to "and for other purposes."

8. State v. Elvins, 32 N. J. L. 362. In this case, the act set apart the township of Hammonton in Atlantic County from the township of Mullica and Hamilton. The title of the act was "An act to incorporate the town of Hammonton in the township of Mullica in the county of Atlantic." The inaccuracy consisted in a failure of the title to show that a part of Hamilton as well as a part of Mullica was embraced in the bounds of Hammonton. This was held immaterial and that the object of the act was sufficiently expressed in the title.

In State v. McCracken, 42 Tex. 383, the title of an amendatory act merely misrecited the date of the act amended. The error was held immaterial, for the reason that the amended act being the only legislation upon the subject which it embraced, no one could be misled by the error.

In People v. Onondaga, 16 Mich. 257, the title authorized the levy of a "bounty" tax. But in the engrossment of the act, the word "county" was substituted for "bounty." The court held, Cooley, J., delivering the opinion, that the act was not vitiated by this clerical error.

9. Smith v. Com., 8 Bush (Ky.) 108. In this case the title of the act was "An act to separate the offices of commissioner and receiver of the Louisville chancery court and to provide for the appointment of said officers and to define their duties." It was held that a section of the act providing that the receiver and commissioner should be removed at the pleasure of the court and that all laws in conflict therewith should be repealed, was sufficiently indicated by the title and was not unconstitutional; the court saying that while the rule as to expression of the subject of an act in its title should be observed and legislation in violation thereof discountenanced, "no unnecessary restriction should be placed on legislative action, except so far as may be required

A repealing clause in an act may be so germane to the principal subject-matter as to be embraced within a title not making particular reference to the repeal.¹ A repeal by implication need not appear in the title.² It has been held that the title should indicate the retrospective operation of an act.³

5. Illustrations—a. MISCELLANEOUS INSTANCES.—The foregoing principles have been applied in many instances to statutes dealing with subjects as various as is the field of legislation. The application of these principles varies with the language of the various titles and the language of the subject-matter of the statutes introduced by the titles. The classification of these illustrations here must of necessity be somewhat arbitrary, but it is deemed of importance to set out the cases here. It has been held that the constitutional requirement as to the expression of the object of an act in its title does not apply to headings of chapters in the compiled laws.⁴ Additional illustrations relating to codes and compilations of laws are given in the note.⁵

to sustain this provision of the constitution."

In People v. Banks, 67 N. Y. 568, Allen J., said: "It is not allowable for the purpose of invalidating a law, to sit in judgment upon its title, to determine with critical acumen whether it might not have been more explicit and so drawn as more clearly and definitely to indicate the nature of the legislation covered by it. The legislature is not subject to judicial control in respect to the form or mode in which the subject of a bill shall be expressed. If it is expressed the constitution is satisfied."

1. In Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610, the title of the act was, "An act to restore uniformity in the taxation of real and personal property for all purposes in the several counties and cities in this state." It was held that the act in so far as it provided for the repeal of certain other acts was not open to the objection that the constitutional requirement was not observed. See also Timm v. Harrison, 109 Ill. 593.

2. Union Trust Co. v. Trumbull, 137 Ill. 146; Com. v. Godshaw (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 737; State v. Gallagher, 42 Minn. 449.

3. Thomas v. Collins, 58 Mich. 64. Here the title, "An act to provide for the assessment of property and levy and collection of taxes thereon," was held insufficient to support provisions of the act relating to taxes already assessed. In Smith v. Auditor Gen'l, 20 Mich. 406, in which the prospective operation of a statute with precisely the same title, was in dispute, it was decided,

23 C. of L.—16

Cooley, J., delivering the opinion, that the title of the act might be looked to in order to determine a question as to its retrospective operation.

4. Compilations and Codes.—Stewart v. Riopelle, 48 Mich. 177; State v. McDaniel, 19 S. Car. 114; Kaminitsky v. Northeastern R. Co., 25 S. Car. 63.

5. The title, "An act to amend the Code of Civil Procedure," sufficiently indicates a provision fixing the time within which an action for the recovery of real estate may be brought. Gatling v. Lane, 17 Neb. 80. See also People v. Parvin, 74 Cal. 549.

The title, "An act to amend title 3, articles 9 and 10 and to add 10a," omitting the words, "Revised Statutes," where those provisions were found, is sufficient, though there is no other compilation of laws in the state having a title 3. Gunter v. Texas Land, etc., Co., 82 Tex. 496.

The title, "An act to amend title 1, ch. 66, of Hill's Annotated Laws of Oregon relating to pilotage at the Columbia river bar," sufficiently expresses the subject of the act. The Borrowdale, 39 Fed. Rep. 376.

The title, "An act to amend sections 10 and 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and to repeal said original section, which section relates to the time of docketing appeals," sufficiently indicates a section providing a substitute for a provision of the Code of Civil Procedure regulating the practice on appeal from the county justice's court. Muldoon v. Levi, 25 Neb. 457.

The title, an act to amend a specified

The title, "An act concerning drainage," has been held to comprehend a provision establishing a board of drainage commissioners;¹ but a title, "An act to provide for the drainage of" a certain district, has been held not to indicate a provision for the creation of a new drainage district, and the institution of unusual and summary proceedings to enforce the collection of a drainage tax;² so the title, "An act to promote drainage," has been held not to indicate provisions relating to the control of debris from mining and other corporations.³ A general title relating to elections should be given a wide scope.⁴ There are cases in relation to statutes designed to protect laborers,⁵ and to statutes

"section" of a compilation of statutes, sufficiently expresses the object of the act, though the amended law be classified as a "subdivision" of a chapter of such compilation, and not a "section." State v. Babcock 23 Neb. 128.

In Second German, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Newman, 50 Md. 62, the title, "An act to amend article 95 of the Code of Public General Laws, by adding an additional clause thereto," was held sufficient to sustain an amendment containing the whole legislation regulating rate of interest.

The title, "An act to establish a probate code," is sufficient to sustain a provision relating to titles of real property by descent. Johnson v. Harrison, 47 Minn. 576. Here the court said: "The large number of related or enacted matters found treated of under some comprehensive title, such as, 'Criminal Code,' 'Penal Code,' 'Code of Civil Procedure,' 'Private Corporations,' 'Railroad Corporations,' and the like, are familiar illustrations of what may legitimately be included in one act."

1. Drainage.—Ross v. Davis, 97 Ind. 79; Wishmier v. State, 97 Ind. 160.

2. Irwin's Succession, 33 La. Ann. 63.

3. People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624; Doane v. Weil, 58 Cal. 334.

In Hall v. Slaybaugh, 69 Mich. 484, the title, "An act to provide for the construction and maintenance of drains and the assessment and collection of taxes therefor, and to repeal all other laws relating thereto," was held sufficiently to express its object, the court saying: "It would be difficult to conjecture anything pertaining to a drain in any way that would not come properly under this title if made a subject of legislation." See also Gillett v. McLaughlin, 69 Mich. 547; State v. Orange (N.J. 1893), 26 Atl. Rep. 799.

4. Elections.—A title, "An act concerning public elections," has been held sufficient to sustain provisions authorizing the governor to fill certain vacancies in elective offices, State v. Mead, 71 Mo. 266; but insufficient to embrace a provision conferring upon women the right to vote. Harland v. Territory, 3 Wash. Ter. 131; Rumsey v. Territory, 3 Wash. Ter. 332.

The title, "An act regulating elections," is sufficient to support a provision that every qualified elector shall be eligible to hold any office for which he is an elector. People v. Goddard, 8 Colo. 432.

The title, "An act to regulate municipal elections in the city of Louisville," sufficiently indicates a provision that the votes at the election therein specified shall be by ballot. Rogers v. Jacobs, 88 Ky. 502.

The title, "An act to legalize a certain election named therein," though very general and failing to locate the election by designating time and place, nevertheless sufficiently expresses the object of the act. Dows v. Elmwood, 34 Fed. Rep. 114, following Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147.

5. Employees; Laborers; Mechanics' Liens.—The title, "An act to fix the amount of wages of laborers exempt from process," comprehends a provision that wages of others than laborers working with their hands alone should be exempt. Boyle v. Vanderhoof, 45 Minn. 31.

The title, "An act giving labor the right of first lien, and material furnished a second lien on all property," comprehends a provision making it an offense for a contractor to receive full payment under his contract and neglect to pay laboring and material men. State v. Brachvogel, 38 Minn. 265.

The title, "An act to insure payment for the protection of game,¹ and to prevent gambling.² So cases have arisen concerning statutes relating to insurance com-of wages earned and materials used in constructing . . . public buildings and public works," sufficiently indicates a provision that officers contracting for public buildings shall require a bond for the payment by the contractor for labor performed or materials furnished. Plummer v. Kennedy, 72 Mich. 295.

A section of an act creating a mechanic's lien is sufficiently indicated by the title, "An act to revise, simplify and abridge the rules, practice, pleadings and forms in civil cases in the courts of this state; to abolish distinct forms of action at law, and to provide for the administration of justice in a uniform mode of pleading and practice, without distinction between law and equity." Hall v. Bunte, 20 Ind. 304.

The title, "An act to secure the payment of wages or salaries to certain employes of railway corporations," will not sustain a provision giving a lien on the company's property for materials furnished. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co. v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co., 86 Va. 1.

A provision that whenever any person or corporation shall make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, or shall be adjudged insolvent, or shall have his or its property taken possession of by a receiver, all wages or salaries due employes shall first be paid in full, if construed to subject corporations to the insolvency laws, is not indicated by the title, "An act to provide for the payment of the wages and salaries due the employes of insolvent employers." Search v. Ellicott (Md. 1890), 18 Atl. Rep. 863.

The title, "An act to secure the payment of the wages or salaries of certain employes of railway, canal, steamboat and other transportation companies," does not embrace provisions creating liens in favor of the employes of mining and manufacturing companies to secure their wages. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co. v. Shenandoah Iron Co., 42 Fed. Rep. 372.

The title, "An act relating to the liens of mechanics, material men and laborers upon leasehold estates," does not indicate a section relating to liens on freeholds. Dorsey's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 192.

1. Acts for Protection of Game.—The title, "An act to protect game," comprehends provisions making it a misdemeanor to sell or expose for sale, or have in possession for that purpose, any of the game protected by the act. People v. O'Neil, 71 Mich. 325.

The title, "An act to prevent the destruction of fish," sufficiently indicates a provision prohibiting the catching of fish by any other device than of hook and line. People v. Miller, 88 Mich. 383.

The title, "An act to amend an act entitled, an act to establish a penal code . . . by amending § 634, relating to fish and game," sufficiently indicates a provision for the protection of fish and game. People v. Dobbins, 73 Cal. 257.

In State v. Stunkle, 41 Kan. 459, it was held that the title, "An act authorizing the appointment of a commissioner of fisheries, and for the protection of fish in the waters of the State of Kansas," was sufficiently broad in that it specifically applied to the protection of the fish in the waters of the state while providing for a commissioner of fisheries. The case does not show what particular provision of the act was objected to as being not within the constitutional provision.

The title, "An act to regulate the planting and taking of oysters in the waters of the state" sufficiently indicates provisions prohibiting non-residents from taking or transporting domestic oysters and forbidding all persons to ship oysters in the shell within the limits of the state. State v. Harrub (Ala. 1892), 10 So. Rep. 752.

The title, "An act to repeal ch. 193 of the acts of 1872, and re-enacting the same with amendments, so that oysters sold in the shell at Baltimore, and at all packing establishments, shall be measured in an iron measure," is sufficient to sustain a provision that such oysters shall be measured by licensed measurers, in an iron circular tub, of a certain description, and that the measure "shall be even, or struck." McGrath v. State, 46 Md. 631.

2. Acts to Prevent Gambling.—Enactments giving the loser of money at any game a right of action against the winner have been held to be indicated by the title "An act to prevent and punish gaming." O'Keefe v. Weber, 14 Oregon 55; Maling v. Crummey (Wash. 1892), 31 Pac. Rep. 600.

The title "An act to revise the law in relation to criminal jurisprudence," sufficiently indicates a provision for panies, foreign and domestic.¹ And in statutes relating to public the recovery of money lost at gaming. Larned v. Tiernan, 110 Ill. 173.

Under the title, "An act to amend § 214 of the criminal code of the Gen. Sts. of 1873," which section provides the punishment of the offense of gambling, provisions may be contained authorizing a civil action by the loser for the recovery of money lost. Perry v. Gross, 25 Neb. 826.

The title "An act to amend § 1547 of art. 8, of the Revised Statutes relating to offenses against public morals and decency, or the public police, and miscellaneous offenses," is sufficient to sustain a provision raising the offense of gambling from a misdemeanor to that of felony. State v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358.

The title, "An act to punish as felons all parties who may engage in the keeping or conducting of halls or houses for conduct of games of keno, faro, three-card monte, mustang, etc.," is sufficient to support provisions relating to other games than those mentioned in the title. Garvin v. State, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 162.

The title, "An act to prohibit book-making and pool selling," sufficiently indicates provisions that persons keeping a place for book making upon the result of any trial, or decision of speed, skill, or power of man or beast, which is to take place beyond the limits of this city; or who makes books or sells pools on such event; or who makes books or sells pools on the result of any political nomination, appointment or election, wherever made or held; or who makes books with, or sells pools to minors on such events, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. State v. Burgdoerfer, 107 Mo. 1.

The title, "An act to prevent and punish gambling and the making, writing, or selling of books or pools or mutuals on the result of any trotting race of horses, or race of any kind, or any election or any contest of any kind, or game of base ball," is sufficient to sustain a provision making it an offense to keep a house for the purpose of such betting therein. Lescallett v. Com. (Va. 1893), 17 S. E. Rep. 546.

1. Insurance Companies.—The title, "An act for the incorporation of insurance companies, defining their powers and prescribing their duties," does not embrace a provision that an agent of a foreign insurance company shall not transact business in the state without a certificate of authority from the auditor of the state. Igoe v. State, 14 Ind. 239.

The title, "An act for the incorporation of insurance companies, defining their powers and prescribing their duties," cannot include provisions regulating agencies for foreign insurance companies. Grubbs v. State, 24 Ind. 295.

The title, "An act relative to the organization and powers of insurance companies transacting business within this state," sufficiently indicates a provision for the examination of the affairs of an insurance company already organized. People v. State Ins. Co., 19 Mich. 392.

The title, "An act to regulate the manner in which insurance companies not organized under the laws of this state but doing business within it, should transact their business" is sufficient to support a provision for a penalty for violation of the act. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Raymond, 70 Mich. 485.

The title "An act regulating insurance and fire insurance companies," is sufficient to sustain provisions that any person soliciting or procuring applications for insurance, shall be soliciting agent of the company; that such company shall attach to their policies the application of the assured, providing consequences for a failure so to do; that the policy shall be prima facie evidence of the insurable value of the property; that the assured must give notice in writing of a loss, accompanied by affidavit stating the fact; and that no action shall be begun within ninety days after notice of such loss has been given. Christie v. Life Indemnity, etc., Co., 82 Iowa 360.

The title "An act to provide for the incorporation of mutual fire insurance companies, and defining their powers and duties," sufficiently indicates provisions for settling the affairs of such companies upon their insolvency. Wardle v. Townsend, 75 Mich. 385.

In Com. v. Morningston, 144 Pa. St. 103, the title of act Pennsylvania May 7, 188 P. L. 116, imposing a penalty on life-insurance agents, offering a rebate of premium as an inducement to insurance, was held to sufficiently indicate the contents of the act. The case does not show the title of the act.

The title "An act to declare unlawful officers numerous constitutional questions have arisen,¹ and a trusts and combinations in restraint of trade and productions, and to provide penalties therefor," covers a section prohibiting any combination to control the cost of insurance. In re Pinkney, 47 Kan. 89.

1. Public Officers.—Provisions for a county treasurer's tenure of office, duties, compensation and powers, including the right to appoint a deputy, and that such deputy shall act as clerk of the county commissioners, are embraced in the title, "An act to create a treasurer," for a named county. Calvert v. Heelen, 72 Md. 603.

The title, "An act to reorganize the local government of the city of New York," will sustain provisions creating city offices, defining their functions and compensation, imposing restrictions upon the holders of such offices, and providing that certain duties might be required of them without further compensation than their annual salary. Billings v. New York, 68 N. Y. 415.

The title, "An act amendatory to an act entitled 'An act creating a board of police commissioners, and authorizing the appointment of a police force for the city of St. Louis,'" is sufficient to sustain a section providing for the appointment and regulation of private detectives. State v. Bennett, 102 Mo. 356.

The title, "An act in relation to the fees and compensation of certain officers in the city and county of New York" includes a provision that fees of certain officers of the city should be paid into the treasury and the officer receive a salary instead. Conner v. New York, 5 N. Y. 285.

The title, "An act to make uniform the selection and duties of directors of the boards of chosen freeholders of the state," is sufficient to sustain provisions regulating the selection and duties of such a director in a particular county, so as to conform the law relating to such county to a general law on that subject. Govern v. State, 48 N. J. L. 612.

The title "An act to provide for a state board of equalization," sufficiently indicates provisions relating to the duties of the board of supervisors, as a county board of equalization. Boyce v. Sebring, 66 Mich. 210.

The title of an act to "vacate" certain offices, will support a provision "abolishing" such offices. State v. Hermann, 11 Mo. App. 43.

The title, "An act to amend an act creating the office of public weigher, and regulating the appointment and defining the duties and liabilities thereof," is sufficient to sustain a provision declaring it to be unlawful to employ any one except the public weigher to perform his duties, and that any person violating such provision should be liable to damages at the suit of such weigher. Johnson v. Martin, 75 Tex. 33.

The title, "Concerning townships and township officers," is consistent with provisions limiting the powers of townships and township officers. State v. East Orange Tp., 49 N. J. L. 401.

The title, "An act to determine the mode of filling vacancies in all offices for which no provision is made in the constitution," is sufficient to support a provision that such vacancies in the state, parish, or municipality, shall be filled by the governor. State v. Leovy, 12 La. Ann. 538.

The title, "An act providing for the election and qualification of justices of the peace, defining their jurisdiction, powers and duties," does not indicate a provision that no constable shall purchase a judgment on the docket of any justice in the township of the constable. Spaugh v. Huffer, 14 Ind. 305.

The title, "An act reducing and regulating the salaries and compensation of certain state officers, justices of the supreme court, and attachés of the state government" has been held not to indicate a provision reducing the salaries of members of the legislature. State v. Hallock, 19 Nev. 384.

The title, "An act in relation to the fees of the sheriff of the city and county of New York, and to fees of referees in sales in partition cases," does not embrace provisions requiring a judicial sale to be made by the sheriff. Gaskin v. Anderson, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; Gaskin v. Meek, 8 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 312.

The title, "An act to provide for the appointment of deputy coroners in the several counties of this commonwealth," is insufficient to cover a provision for the compensation of such deputies by fees instead of salaries, in counties of over 150,000 inhabitants each. Com. v. Grier, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 444.

The title, "An act defining the duties few decisions upon statutes relating to the public lands, both state and federal, are collected in the note.¹

As a general rule the title of an act incorporating a private body need not indicate the objects the corporate body is designed to accomplish, nor the powers with which it is to be invested, nor the agencies to be employed or mode to be pursued in exercising its powers; all of these matters being necessary incidents to corporate existence.² But matters not incidental to the of state comptroller," is insufficient to sustain a provision imposing a penalty upon other officers for failing to make settlements with the comptroller. State v. Hoadley, 20 Nev. 317.

1. Public Lands.—A title referring to state lands in a particular county will not sustain a provision in the act relating to state lands in another county. Wilcox v. Paddock, 65 Mich. 23.

The title, "An act in relation to a portion of the submerged lands and Lake Park of the grounds lying on and adjacent to the shore of Lake Michigan on the eastern frontage of the city of Chicago," is sufficient to sustain provisions granting certain of those lands to a city, and certain other of the lands to a railroad company with the right to maintain docks and wharves. Illinois v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 730.

The title, "An act to regulate the sale of swamp lands donated by the United States to the State of Indiana" embraces a provision requiring patents for such lands to be recorded. Nitche v. Earle, 117 Ind. 270.

2. Private Corporations — Sufficient Titles.—A title relating to the incorporation of a certain gas-light company is sufficient without detailing the powers and privileges granted to the company, including a monopoly of the manufacture and supply of gas. Crescent City Gas Light Co. v. New Orleans Gas Light Co., 27 La. Ann. 138. See also Arnoult v. New Orleans, 11 La. Ann. 54, Bridgeford v. Hall, 18 La. Ann. 218; Inkster v. Carver, 16 Mich. 484.

The title, "An act creating a city sewage utilization company," embraces a provision conferring powers on the company in regard to cleaning of streets. City Sewage Utilization Co. v. Davis, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 625.

The title, "An act to reorganize the medical society of New Jersey," will support provisions repealing the former powers of the company and conferring new powers. Hill v. Morrison, 46 N. J. L. 488.

The title, "An act to authorize the organization of annuity, safe deposit and trust companies," is sufficient to sustain provisions allowing such companies to act as guardians of the estates of insane persons. Minnesota L. & T. Co. v. Beebe, 40 Minn. 7.

The title, "An act in relation to the formation of co-operative associations," comprehends provisions for the formation of corporations for the purpose of trade or of the carrying on of any lawful mechanical, manufacturing, or agricultural business, limiting the amount of capital stock and also the amount which any one member may hold. Finnegan v. Knights of Labor Building Assoc. (Minn. 1893), 53 N.W. Rep. 1150.

The title, "An act to provide for the organization and government of state banks," is sufficient to embrace a section prohibiting their transacting banking business unless incorporated under the provisions of the act. State v. Woodmanse, 1 N. Dakota 246.

The title, "An act for the better protection of stockholders and corporations formed . . . for the purpose of carrying on and conducting the business of mining," sufficiently indicates a provision imposing a penalty on directors of such companies for failure to cause to be made or posted an itemized account or balance sheet of the affairs of the company. Francais v. Somps, 92 Cal. 503.

The title, "An act to amend a charter of the bank of D.," will embrace provisions for the establishment of a branch bank. Robinson v. Bank of Darien, 18 Ga. 89.

The title, "An act to provide for the formation of corporations," will sustain a provision for the payment of a fee to the secretary of state, by a corporation, upon filing a certificate of incorporation. Edwards v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 13 Colo. 59.

The title, "An act to incorporate the M. Waterworks Company" sufficiently indicates a provision requiring that a map of the property to be ac-creation and existence of corporations must be indicated by the title.¹

b. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Under titles relating to, or appearing to provide for, the incorporation of cities or villages, various powers may be conferred and many matters embraced, so long as they are germane to the general subject.² Titles quired by the company shall be filed, and other provisions facilitating the establishment of the company's works. In re Malone Water Works Co., 15 N. Y. Supp. 654.

The title, "An act authorizing and regulating the business of commercial agencies, credit companies, and guarantee associations," sufficiently embraces a provision that any such company shall procure a certificate from the city auditor, and appoint a resident attorney upon whom process might be served; and other provisions respecting the capital, financial statements and taxation of the company. State v. Morgan (S. Dak. 1891), 48 N. W. Rep. 314.

The title, "An act to incorporate the L. Navigation Company," embraces a provision that counties benefited by the company may subscribe to its stock. State v. Wirt County Ct. (W. Va. 1893), 17 S. E. Rep. 379.

The title, "An act to incorporate the bank of F.," is sufficient to support a provision that the bank may join in one action all parties to a note or bill given to be negotiated or actually negotiated in that bank. Davis v. Bank of Fulton, 31 Ga. 69. See also Hill v. Decatur Tp., 22 Ga. 203. For other illustrations, see Montgomery Mut. Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Robinson, 69 Ala. 413; Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Arnold, 46 Wis. 225.

1. Insufficient Titles.—A provision authorizing a loan of public money with which to build an astronomical observatory, has been held not sufficiently indicated by a title reciting as its only object the incorporation of the observatory. People v. Allen, 42 N. Y. 404. In this case it was said that the act of incorporation, when confined to its legitimate action, conferred all the power necessary to enable the corporation to carry out its proper operation, but this has nothing to do with providing the means. The title of an enactment to "incorporate" the trustees of an observatory will no more lead one to suppose that it contained an enactment that the state was to supply the means to build it, by gift or loan, than that it required some individual to do so out of his own private means. The whole object of an act of incorporation is to give the artificial person an existence, and to enable it to control and to protect its rights. An enactment compelling the state to give, or to loan it money, after the incorporation is complete, is no proper or appropriate portion of such act of incorporation.

The title, "An act to regulate and tax certain named foreign corporations," is not sufficient to support provisions relating to other corporations than those named. Oregon, etc., Trust, etc., Co. v. Rathbun, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 32.

The title, "An act to incorporate the board of education of the Kentucky National Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," is insufficient to sustain a provision repealing an act incorporating a female seminary under the control of that denomination. Bryan v. Board of Education (Ky. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 276.

The title, "An act to extend the area of gas lighting in the city of New Orleans, and to reduce the price now paid by consumers," does not sufficiently indicate a provision extending the charter of an existing gas-light company for twenty years. Crescent City Gas Light Co. v. New Orleans Gas Light Co., 27 La. Ann. 138.

The title of an amended act "To authorize the formation of corporations for literary and scientific purposes," will not support an amendment by which the act is made to include missionary and other benevolent purposes. People v. Young Men's, etc., Ben. Soc., 41 Mich. 67.

2. Municipal Corporations — Incorporation Acts.—Lockhart v. Troy, 48 Ala. 579; Harris v. People, 59 N. Y. 599; State v. Union, 33 N. J. L. 354.

The title, "An act to incorporate the city of E.," sufficiently indicates provisions that a fixed portion of the fees for licenses for the sale of liquor shall be paid over to the public school fund. State v. Madson, 43 Minn. 438.

The title, "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages," will sustain provisions relating to cities and towns already incorporated. Guild v. Chicago, 82 Ill. 472.

The title, "An act to incorporate the city of X.," sufficiently sustains a provision authorizing the establishment of water-works for that city. David v. Portland, 14 Oregon 98, comprehends a provision for the establishment of a recorder's court in such city. People v. Gobles, 67 Mich. 475; and is sufficient to support a provision that a certain part of J. shall constitute the city of X., and that the rest shall remain the town of J. People v. Wilber, 15 N. Y. Supp. 435.

A provision relating to the government of a village is sufficiently indicated by the title, "An act to amend the general laws as to the incorporation of villages, as to the village of Mount Vernon, and to enlarge the powers of its officers and to extend and enlarge the powers of the corporation." People v. Duffy, 1 N. Y. Supp. 896. See also In re Dept. of Public Parks, 86 N. Y. 440; In re Knaust, 101 N. Y. 190.

The title, "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and towns, and establish uniform systems of municipal government in the state," will sustain an amendment relating to the assessment and collection of taxes for municipal purposes, and legalizing assessments for such purposes theretofore made. Jacksonville v. Basnett, 20 Fla. 525.

The title, "An act to establish excise departments in cities of this state," is sufficient to sustain a provision delegating to the common council the power to establish such excise, and investing them with certain powers when established. State v. Cherry, 53 N. J. L. 173.

The title, "An act in relation to cities of the second class, providing for the levy, collection, and disbursement of taxes, and water-rents," sufficiently indicates provisions as to the cost of collecting such taxes and water-rents. Bradley v. Pittsburgh, 130 Pa. St. 475.

The title, "An act to create the M. fire and police district in C. county, and to provide for the government thereof," is not inconsistent with a provision authorizing the levy of a tax for the maintenance of such fire district. Ader v. Newport (Ky. 1888), 6 S. W. Rep. 577.

The organization of townships is not inconsistent with the title "An act for the more uniform mode of doing township business." Clinton Tp. v. Draper, 14 Ind. 295.

The title, "An act to authorize the town to raise money to construct a town dock," sufficiently indicates a provision giving the power to charge and collect wharfage. Pelham v. Woolsey, 16 Fed. Rep. 418.

The title, "An act relative to contracts by the mayor, aldermen and commonalty of the city of New York," is sufficient to sustain a provision in the act creating a board of revision, whose duty it was to confirm assessments for local improvements. In re Tappen, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 390.

The title, "An act in relation to local improvements in the town of F.," indicates a provision for the construction of a sewer in such a town. Van Brunt v. Flatbush Tp., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 195.

The title, "An act in relation to the government of the city of B," will sustain provisions relating to the reconstruction of the fire department of that city. People v. Partridge, 13 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 410.

The title, "An act providing for the organization, classification, incorporation and government of municipal corporations," comprehends a provision relating to the enlargement and consolidation of municipal corporations. King County v. Davies, 1 Wash. 290.

The title, "An act authorizing cities and towns to construct internal improvements," is sufficient to sustain a provision authorizing the construction of water-works, sewers and light plants. Yesler v. Seattle, 1 Wash. 308. See also Seymour v. Tacoma (Wash. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 1077.

The title, "An act for the relief of the village of C.," is sufficient though it states neither the mode in which the subject is treated nor the means by which the end is to be reached. Water Works Com'rs v. Dwight, 101 N. Y. 9.

The title, "An act relating to cities and towns," may support provisions relating to the opening, improvement and repair of streets. Potwin v. Johnson, 108 Ill. 77.

An act entitled "An act to incorporate the village of H," in addition to incorporating the village provided for dividing the town and organizing a new town. It was held that so much of it as provided for dividing the town and organizing the new town was in conflict with that section of the constitution which provides that "no law shall embrace more than one subject which providing for amendments are equally comprehensive.¹ Mis-shall be expressed in its title." State v. Kinsella, 14 Minn. 524.

1. Acts Amending Charters.—The title, "An act to amend the charter" of a city, may comprehend provisions altering the boundaries or extending the limits. Prescott v. Chicago, 60 Ill. 121; Hargrave v. Webber, 66 Mich. 59; Attorney Gen'l v. Amos, 60 Mich. 372; Winona v. School Dist. No. 82, 40 Minn. 13; 12 Am. St. Rep. 687; Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa 83; Whiting v. Mt. Pleasant, 11 Iowa 482.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the town of B., and to establish a charter therefor," is sufficient to sustain a provision authorizing the town of B. to issue negotiable bonds for certain specified purposes. Judson v. Bessemer, 87 Ala. 240.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the city of A.," is not inconsistent with a provision requiring a street railway company to pave the street between its tracks and for three feet on either side. Atlanta v. Gate City St. R. Co., 80 Ga. 276.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the city of C.," will sustain a provision for the limitation of suits against the city. Covington v. Voskotter, 80 Ky. 219.

The title, "An act to amend and alter the charter of the city of A.," sufficiently indicates a provision ratifying acts and ordinances already done and passed by the corporation, in regard to the closing or discontinuance of a street. Annapolis v. State, 30 Md. 119. See also Deegan v. Morrow, 31 N. J. L. 136; State v. Union, 33 N. J. L. 350; State v. Newark, 34 N. J. L. 236.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the city of J.," comprehends a provision making the office of city attorney elective instead of appointive. Powell v. Jackson, 51 Mich. 129.

The title, "An act to amend an act to establish the corporation of J., provide for its government, and prescribe its jurisdiction and powers," sufficiently indicates a provision repealing the existing charter of the town. State v. Duval County, 23 Fla. 483.

The title, "An act to reorganize the local government of Jersey City," embraces provisions for the collection and adjustment of taxes. Snipe v. Shriner, 44 N. J. L. 206.

The title, "An act to revise an act to incorporate the city of Bay City, . . . and to add twenty-three new sections thereto," sufficiently indicates a provision for the establishment of a police court with original and exclusive jurisdiction in criminal cases. People v. Pond, 67 Mich. 98.

The title of an amended act, "An act to reincorporate the village of Ridge city," is sufficient to sustain a provision of the amendatory act making the president of the village ex officio a member of the board of supervisors. Holden v. Osceola County, 77 Mich. 202.

The title, "An act to consolidate into one the various acts in relation to the city of H.," comprehends a provision creating the office of recorder, and vesting him with certain powers. Frost v. Wilson, 70 Mo. 664.

Insufficient Titles.—The title, "Cities, town and villages," does not sufficiently indicate a provision empowering cities to establish park districts. State v. Jackson County Ct., 102 Mo. 531.

The title, "An act to amend the city charter," will not sustain provisions ratifying acts of the city council. Williamson v. Keokuk, 44 Iowa 88.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the town of P. in J. county," will not sustain a provision authorizing the issuing of municipal bonds for improvements extending into the county. Parkland v. Gaines, 88 Ky. 562.

The title, "An act to consolidate and amend the several acts incorporating the city of B. and for other purposes therein mentioned," is sufficient to sustain a provision confirming all the ordinances of the mayor and city council of the city of B. theretofore passed. Brieswick v. Brunswick, 51 Ga. 639; 21 Am. Rep. 240.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the city of C.," does not comprehend a provision relating to the registry of deeds by the clerk of the county court. Wulftange v. McCollom, 83 Ky. 361.

The title, "An act to amend the first section of the act to incorporate the town of M. and to provide for the government of the same," does not indicate a provision amending other sections. Wisner v. Monroe, 25 La. Ann. 598.

The title, "An act to amend an act to incorporate cities of the second cellaneous applications of the general principle are set forth in the note.¹

c. COUNTIES AND COUNTY OFFICERS.—As in titles relating to municipal corporations so in titles relating to counties and county officers, general provisions may embrace subsidiary and germane matters; e. g., the title, “An act to increase the boundaries” of a class, and to define their powers, and to equalize certain taxes therein mentioned,” is insufficient to sustain a provision confirming certain expenditures by the city from the funds arising from illegal taxes, and in no wise amending the laws in question. Tecumseh v. Phillips, 5 Neb. 305; White v. Lincoln, 5 Neb. 506.

The title, “An act to create a new charter for the city of C. and to consolidate and declare the rights and powers of said corporation and for other purposes,” is not sufficient to sustain a provision extending the municipal police jurisdiction of the city over territory adjacent thereto. Blair v. State (Ga. 1893), 17 S. E. Rep. 96.

The title, “An act to consolidate, amend and modify the various acts incorporating the city of D., . . . and to define the duties of the mayor and common council and other officers of said city, does not sufficiently indicate a provision,” that the mayor or three members of council, in the absence or disqualification of the mayor, shall be a court for the trial of offenders in the following cases.” Brown v. State, 79 Ga. 324.

An act, the effect of which is to create a road district, is not sustained by the title “An act to amend the charter of the town of P.” Parkland Tp. v. Gaines, 88 Ky. 562.

1. Miscellaneous Acts Relating to Municipal Corporations.—The title, “An act providing that any city having a population of more than 100,000, may frame a charter of its own government and regulate the same,” is sufficient to sustain a provision that the courts shall take judicial notice of the population of all cities in the state. State v. Dolan, 93 Mo. 467.

The title, “An act concerning the construction, care and improvement of the public ways, parks and sewers in certain of the cities of this state,” embraces a provision abolishing offices, boards and commissions connected with those departments. State v. Hoagland, 51 N. J. L. 62.

The title, “An act to establish a board of public works in and for the city of D.,” sufficiently indicates provisions transferring to that board the powers, duties and papers of the old “board of commissioners,” the “board of sewer commissioners” and of the “commissioners of grades and plans.” People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 55; 9 Am. Rep. 105.

The title, “An act to provide for police courts in cities having thirty thousand and under one hundred thousand inhabitants, and to provide for officers thereof,” embraces provisions for the election of a police judge with jurisdiction of petty offenses, violation of ordinances, etc., and providing for fees, seal, appeals, records, etc. People v. Henshaw, 76 Cal. 436.

The title, “An act providing for placing electrical conductors underground in the cities of this state and for commissioners of electrical subways,” is sufficient to sustain the provision that electrical wires in cities of the state having a population exceeding five hundred thousand and less than one million, shall be laid under ground. People v. Squire, 14 Daly (N. Y.) 154, affirmed 107 N. Y. 593; 1 Am. St. Rep. 893.

The title, “An act dividing the cities of this state into three classes, with respect to their population, and designating the mode of ascertaining and changing the classification thereof,” sufficiently embraces a provision for new offices and elections for filling them. Com. v. Wyman, 137 Pa. St. 508.

The title, “An act to define the boundaries of the city of E.,” sufficiently indicates provisions enlarging the city limits. People v. Bradley, 36 Mich. 447.

The title, “An act in relation to the erection of public buildings for the use of the city of R.,” sufficiently indicates provisions for the purchase of sites for such buildings. People v. Rochester, 50 N. Y. 525.

The inadvertent use of the word “village” in the title, instead of the word “town,” will not invalidate provisions as to the “town” in the body of the act. State v. Lake City, 25 Minn. 404.

certain county, may embrace provisions for extending the borders of the county, locating the seat of justice, and accepting donations for the public buildings.¹ The title, "An act to authorize the formation of new counties," comprehends provisions relating

The title, "An act to set off in the township of B., in the county of E., a new township to be called the township of M.," is sufficient to sustain provisions conferring upon the new municipality all the powers of a township. Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U.S. 147.

The title, "An act to provide for the organization, government, and powers of cities of the second class," does not comprehend a provision giving police judges concurrent jurisdiction with the county courts in civil actions. Holmberg v. Hauck, 16 Neb. 337. Nor a provision exempting a city from liability for injuries resulting from the negligence of street railway companies in failing to keep in order streets which they occupy. Weigel v. Hastings, 29 Neb. 379.

An act providing for the relief of certain towns is void as to a town not mentioned in the title, but valid as to the others. Harris v. Niagara County, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 279.

The title, "An act to enable the board of supervisors of the county of New York to raise money by taxes, . . . and in relation to the expenditure thereof," does not sustain a provision that the municipality shall not be liable upon any contract, made by any department, beyond the amount appropriated, and that no judgment shall be entered against the corporation unless it appear that the amount thereof remains unexpended from the appropriation. Smith v. New York, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 508.

The title of a local act, "An act to authorize the city of M. to change the grade of its streets," does not sufficiently indicate a provision authorizing the change of grade of certain streets in certain wards. Anderton v. Milwaukee, 82 Wis. 279.

The title, "An act to alter the commissioner's map of the city of Brooklyn," does not indicate provisions authorizing the closing of one street and opening of another in a different mode than that prescribed by the charter. People v. Brooklyn, 13 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 121.

The title, "An act for the collection of damages sustained by reason of defective public highways, streets, bridges, crosswalks and culverts," is insufficient to sustain an amendment extending the provisions of the act to sidewalks. Church v. Detroit, 64 Mich. 571; Losch v. St. Charles, 65 Mich. 555.

The title, "An act to amend § 78 of chapter C, of the General Laws of the State of Colorado, entitled towns and cities," is insufficient to sustain provisions changing the tenure of certain municipal offices and making certain officers elective instead of appointive. People v. Fleming, 7 Colo. 230.

The title, "An act to reorganize the local government of a designated city," will not support a provision validating claims for work done for the city in an unlawful mode. Jersey City v. Elmhendorf, 47 N. J. L. 283.

The title, "An act to legalize the acts and proceedings of the town board of auditors for the town of A., in relation to the erection of a certain iron bridge in said town," is insufficient to sustain a provision that the town shall not be required to pay the contract price of said bridge nor the amount audited by the said town board therefor, and authorizing the contractor to sue the town for "a reasonable compensation" for the bridge. Wrought Iron Bridge Co. v. Attica, 119 N. Y. 204.

The provision of the Laws of N. Y., 1863, p. 409, declaring that the head of the law department of the city of New York shall have the right to appear for the mayor, etc., was unconstitutional and void, because it was a subject entirely distinct from the subject of the act, and was not expressed in the title, which related only to appropriations to defray the expenses of the city government. Baldwin v. New York, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 549.

The title, "An act to revise the law in relation to township organizations," will not sustain a provision extending the limits of towns of a certain class. Dolese v. Pierce, 124 Ill. 140.

A title of an act relating to "city" taxation only, will not support provisions relating to "municipal" taxation. Bugher v. Prescott, 23 Fed. Rep. 20.

1. County Boundaries, etc.—Blood v. Mercelliott, 53 Pa. St. 391. See also Ledger v. Rice, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 167.

The attaching of certain townships to the boundaries of old counties from which the new are to be formed,¹ also provisions for the organization and sitting of courts in the new counties.² Miscellaneous cases relating to county matters are set forth in the note below.³

to W. county, has been held a necessary means to the attainment of the object expressed in the title, "An act to extend the boundaries of K. county." Duncombe v. Prindle, 12 Iowa 1.

The title, "An act to annex the city of Carrollton (in the parish of Jefferson) to the city of New Orleans, providing for the transfer of certain transcripts, . . . and repealing the act incorporating the city of Carrollton," sufficiently embraces a provision changing the limits of the parish, and removing the parish seat of the parish of Jefferson. State v. Daniel, 28 La. Ann. 38.

The title, "An act to extend the limits of the parish of Orleans," is sufficient to indicate provisions extending the limits of the city of New Orleans so as to embrace therein the entire area of the parish of Orleans. New Orleans v. Cazelar, 27 La. Ann. 156.

The title, "An act to change the bounds of the parish of St. B.," sufficiently indicates provisions as to the means by which the change is to be made. Hammond v. Lesseps, 31 La. Ann. 337. See also Jefferson, etc., R. Co. v. New Orleans, 31 La. Ann. 478.

The title, "An act to define the county line of E. county," comprehends a provision abandoning the existing line and taking a large territory from E. county and transferring it to an adjoining county. Walters v. Richardson (Ky. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 279.

The title, "An act to create counties and to establish the boundaries thereof," sufficiently indicates a provision that one county shall annually pay a certain sum of money to the other. Humboldt County v. Churchill County, 6 Nev. 30.

1. Jasper County v. Spitler, 13 Ind. 235; Haggard v. Hawkins, 14 Ind. 299.

2. Brandon v. State, 16 Ind. 197.

3. Miscellaneous County Matters.—The title, "An act authorizing certain counties to fund their outstanding indebtedness," will sustain provisions validating bonds previously issued for the purpose of funding such indebtedness. Worthen v. Badgett, 32 Ark. 496.

The title, "An act authorizing the board of county commissioners of O.

county, and other counties therein named, to provide a fund and appropriate the same for the purpose of building county buildings in said counties," is sufficient to sustain a provision relating to the creation and use of a fund for the erection of county buildings in the counties of O., W. and R. Weyand v. Stover, 35 Kan. 545.

The title, "An act concerning counties, county officers, and county government," sufficiently indicates a provision that county officers shall keep their offices at the county seat open during business hours, and that all books and papers required to be in their offices shall be open to examination, and that any person making abstracts shall have the right to examine such books and papers and make memoranda of their contents. Stockman v. Brooks, 17 Colo. 248.

The title, "An act authorizing the county commissioners of W. county to appropriate money for the repair of bridges," will not support a section containing the language, "it is hereby made their duty" to appropriate such money, the language in question being broader than the title. State v. Wabaunsee County, 45 Kan. 731.

The title, "An act to legalize and make valid certain county bonds and to provide for payment of the same," does not indicate a provision requiring counties to pay a bounty to soldiers. Madison County v. Baker, 80 Ind. 374.

The title, "An act to provide for township organization," will not sustain provisions for "county" organization. State v. Lancaster County, 6 Neb. 474.

An act "providing for the removal of a parish seat," may contain a provision that the consent of the majority of the taxpayers to the increase of taxes beyond the legal limit shall be first obtained. Edwards v. Police Jury, 39 La. Ann. 855.

An act destroying the existence of a particular county, and dividing its territory between two named counties, but which fails to name the destroyed county in its title, is not for that reason invalid. State v. Hordey, 41 Kan. 630.

The title, "An act to add an addi-

d. RAILROAD COMPANIES.—The title of a railroad incorporation act need not particularize the powers, rights, and privileges conferred by the act.¹ It has been held that a title reciting intional article to the code of public laws, entitled 'Garrett county,' will sustain a provision prohibiting the cutting down of trees in such county. State v. Fox, 51 Md. 412.

County Officers — Titles Sufficient.—People v. Brinkerhoff, 68 N. Y. 259. Other examples of the sufficiency of titles of laws relating to county officers, will be seen below.

The title, "An act relating to counties and county officers," will support an amendment relating to the duties of county surveyors and the determination of boundaries by them and an appeal from their decision. John v. Reaser, 31 Kan. 406.

The title, "An act to establish criminal courts for A, B, C, and D counties," sufficiently indicates a provision for the appointment and selection of a clerk by the judge, and how and by whom the grand jury should be chosen. Com. v. Green, 58 Pa. St. 226.

The title, "An act fixing the salaries of the various county officers in the several counties of this state and other matters relating thereto," comprehends a provision that the surplus in the salary fund shall be transferred to the general fund, and that a deficiency in the salary fund shall be supplied by a transfer to such fund to be made by the board of county commissioners. Esser v. Spaulding, 17 Nev. 289.

The title, "An act to perfect the records of deeds, mortgages and other instruments in certain cases," is sufficient to embrace a provision that counties shall pay recorders of deeds certain fees for certifying on the deeds that they have been recorded in their offices. Pierie v. Philadelphia, 27 W. N. C. (Pa.) 285.

The title, "An act to reorganize a board of chosen freeholders and counties of the first class in this state," sufficiently embraces a provision for certain changes in the number, mode of election and organization of the boards of such freeholders in certain counties. Mortland v. State, 52 N. J. Eq. 521.

The title, "An act to regulate the fees of county judges, county clerks, sheriffs and county treasurers," embraces a provision that such officers shall report the fees received and pay the excess from a sum named into the county treasury. State v. Rean, 16 Neb. 681; Com. v. Bailey, 81 Ky. 397.

The title, "An act to establish a uniform system of county and township government," embraces provisions for the compensation of officers according to the classification of counties by population. Longan v. Solano County, 65 Cal. 122.

The title, "An act to extend the powers of the board of supervisors," sufficiently indicates provisions empowering such board to borrow money on the credit of the town for the improvement of roads. People v. Brinkerhoff, 68 N. Y. 259.

Titles Insufficient.—The title, "An act to change the time of electing certain officers in the county therein named," does not indicate a provision that the board of supervisors should be chosen from and by districts, instead of towns, and changing the number of the board. Leach v. People, 122 Ill. 420.

The title, "An act to provide additional compensation to the auditor and assessor of R. county for clerk hire, . . . in transcribing books, . . . and for other purposes," will not sustain provisions for a change in time for the elections of a city attorney, and provisions for the salaries of city jailer and market master. State v. Murray, 41 Minn. 123.

The title, "An act to make further division of a county in New York," does not indicate provisions relating to the appointment and dismissal of attendants upon the courts of the city of New York. Murray v. New York, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 164.

The title, "An act regulating the fees and salaries of a county clerk and treasurer of D. county," and to repeal an act under which the fees and salaries of the same officer in N. county had been fixed, will not sustain a provision fixing the salaries of such officers in N. county. Norton County v. Snow, 45 Kan. 332.

1. Railroad Incorporation Acts.—Goldsmith v. Rome R. Co., 62 Ga. 473; Carothers v. Philadelphia Co., 118 Pa. St. 468; Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Wooten, 36 La. Ann. 441; Stockland v. Central R. Co. (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 964; Paterson R. Co. v. Grundy (N. J. 1893), 26 Atl. Rep. 788.

corporation is broad enough to embrace provisions authorizing municipal subscriptions in aid of the road.¹

A provision that a railroad company shall be liable for all damages which its employes shall sustain in consequence of the neglect of their fellow-servants, has been held to be sufficiently indicated by the title "An act in relation to the duties of railroad companies."² Miscellaneous cases relating to torts of railroad companies are given in the note,³ followed by a large num-

The title, "A supplement to the charter of the E. & A. R. Company," sufficiently indicates a provision limiting the time within which suits must be brought against the company. Vail v. Easton, etc., R. Co., 44 N. J. L. 237.

The title, "An act to incorporate the L. & E. Passenger Railway Company," embraces a provision authorizing the company to build a railroad extending beyond the limits of a city, and the right to use steam as a motive power, and to carry freight as well as passengers. Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co., 131 Pa. St. 1.

1. San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312. This case involved the application of the provision of the Texas constitution of 1845, viz., "Every law enacted by the legislature shall contain but one object and that shall be expressed in the title." The court followed San Antonio v. Lane, 32 Tex. 405, rather than San Antonio v. Gould, 34 Tex. 49, and Giddings v. San Antonio, 47 Tex. 548, in which two latter cases the Texas court, consisting of judges other than those who sat in the first case, came to a different conclusion, so that the Supreme Court of the United States deemed the question unsettled in the jurisprudence of Texas, and felt at liberty to follow the guidance of its own judgment, deeming that the ruling in the first Texas case had the greater weight of reason and authority. In Peck v. San Antonio, 51 Tex. 491, the court followed the two later Texas cases rather than the earlier Texas case, notwithstanding the opinion of the United States Supreme Court. In line with San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312, are Jonesboro v. Cairo, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 192, and Mahomet v. Quackenbush, 117 U. S. 508. These cases were Illinois cases. In harmony therewith is Abington v. Cabeen, 106 Ill. 200. But in People v. Hamill (Ill. 1888), 17 N. E. Rep. 799, decided in 1888, the same provision of the Illinois constitution of 1848 was before the court, and it was decided that an act entitled merely, "An act to incorporate" a certain railroad company, and which provided in its body, not only for the incorporation but also for the subscription to the capital stock by certain counties, provided for too much; and that the bonds issued were void. In harmony with the United States Supreme Court decisions are Conner v. Green Pond, etc., R. Co., 23 S. Car. 427; Floyd v. Perrin, 30 S. Car. 1; Whitesides v. Neely, 30 S. Car. 31; Hope v. Gainesville, 72 Ga. 246; Shipley v. Terre Haute, 74 Ind. 297; Marion County v. Harvey County, 26 Kan. 181.

2. McAunich v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 20 Iowa 341.

3. Torts by Railroad Companies.—The title, "An act requiring railroad corporations, and other persons operating and controlling railroads, to fence their right of way and railroad track," is consistent with a provision that the owners of farm-crossings shall construct, maintain and keep closed gates at such crossings. Hunt v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 112 Ind. 69.

But in Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Long, 27 Kan. 684, the title, "An act to require railroad companies to make cattle guards and to pay damages that individuals may sustain," has been held not to indicate a provision that a railroad company crossing public highways shall construct crossings. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Long, 27 Kan. 684.

The title, "An act to secure to the owners of livestock payment of the full value of all animals killed or maimed by railroad trains," is sufficient to sustain a provision exonerating the railroad company from liability in case it maintains a proper fence. Dacres v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 1 Wash. 525.

The title, "An act to compel railroad companies to fence their road," sufficiently indicates a provision for the recovery of an attorney's fee in an action against the company founded on the ber of other miscellaneous cases in regard to the titles of acts relating to railways.¹

c. STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.—A title providing for surveying, laying out, and monumenting certain parts of a city has been held broad enough to embrace provisions in the act for opening a act. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Harrelson, 44 Kan. 253.

The title, "An act to amend the charter of the L. R. Co.," embraces a provision by which actions for injuries to stock and other property, by such company, or its agents, shall be brought within six months after such injury. O'Bannon v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 8 Bush (Ky.) 350.

The title, "An act relating to the liability of railroads for damages by fire," sufficiently sustains provisions that the fire and damages caused by the road shall be prima facie evidence of negligence, but that the contributory negligence of the plaintiff shall be considered in determining his right to recover. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Merrill, 40 Kan. 407.

The title, "An act to revise the law providing for the incorporation of railroad companies," is sufficient to indicate provisions retaining the substantial provisions of a former law rendering railroad companies liable for injuries resulting from a failure to fence their track. Continental Imp. Co. v. Phelps, 47 Mich. 299.

1. Miscellaneous Railroad Cases.—The title, "An act fixing the manner of voting in B. county on questions of taxes for subscription to railroad companies," sufficiently indicates a provision that no such tax shall be imposed upon those residing outside of a certain city in that county, unless a majority of persons shall vote in favor of the tax. Kentucky Union R. Co. v. Bourbon County, 85 Ky. 98.

The title, "An act relating to a railroad, to run into and through the town of T.," comprehends a provision that under certain conditions the railroad shall run within one mile of the courthouse in T. Macon B. R. Co. v. Stamps, 85 Ga. 1.

The title, "An act for the relief of the creditors of the L. R. Co." sufficiently indicates a provision for the sale of the real and personal property of the company and its franchises, to provide means for paying its debts. Mosier v. Hilton, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 657.

The title, "An act for the sale of the Pacific Railroad Company, and to foreclose the state's lien thereon," sufficiently indicates a provision that upon payment of a certain sum of money the state shall execute a release of its lien. Woodson v. Murdock, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 351.

Titles Insufficient.—The title, "An act amendatory of an act providing 'for the construction of the W. B. & C. Railway,'" as amended by another act, will not embrace a provision in the amendatory act granting certain tide land to a certain town; such grant not having been referred to in either of the former acts. Case v. Loftus, 43 Fed. Rep. 839.

The title, "An act to facilitate the carriage and transfer of passengers and property by railroad companies," is not sufficient to embrace a provision that no right shall exist under the act to condemn any real estate for river landings for the use of the railroad company, and that the act which authorized such companies to own watercraft necessary for the transportation of passengers across rivers, should apply only to such companies as owned the landing for the watercraft. Thomas v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 126.

The title, "An act for the relief of the H. & T. C. R. Co.," is not inconsistent with a provision authorizing the extension of such road to a designated point. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343.

The title, "An act to provide for the relief of the city of R. and the New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., in said city," sufficiently indicates a provision relating to the elevation of the company's tracks, and changing the grade of the streets for that purpose, and to the payment of costs and expenses thence arising. Wilson v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 2 N. Y. Supp. 65.

The title, "An act to amend the law in relation to the consolidation of railways," sufficiently embraces a provision that no company should have power to execute a mortgage, or other lien which should have preference over judgments for timbers furnished and work and labor done, or for dam-street ;¹ but a title expressing for its object the regulating of a road has been held not to embrace provisions considerably reducing its width.² The numerous cases relating to the titles of acts concerning streets and highways deal with titles and acts so miscellaneous in their provisions as to make classification difficult.³

ages done, to persons and property, in the operation of its railroad. Frazier v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 88 Tenn. 138.

1. Streets and Highways.—In re One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 290; In re Dept. of Public Parks, 86 N. Y. 437. See also In re Upson, 89 N. Y. 67.

2. People v. Com'rs of Highways, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 70.

3. Sufficient Titles.—The title, "An act relative to the powers and duties of commissioners of Central Park," sufficiently indicates provisions relating to laying out, grading, sewerage, paving and improving, under the direction of said commissioners, certain streets adjacent to such park. In re Knaust, 101 N. Y. 188.

It seems that a title expressing the object of the act to be the condemnation of property for public uses and benefits and for opening highways, streets and alleys by municipalities, embraces provisions relating to the opening of highways. Schehr v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 626.

The title, "An act amending the charter of a certain turnpike company," is not inconsistent with provisions repealing a prior act so far as they applied to such company. Cassell v. Lexington, etc., Turnpike Road Co. (Ky. 1888), 9 S. W. Rep. 502.

The title, "An act to provide for laying out . . . any street . . . within municipalities, and to condemn and acquire any and all land and property necessary and convenient for that purpose," sufficiently covers provisions in the act for the condemnation of land and for assessments upon other lands to pay therefor. Davies v. Los Angeles, 86 Cal. 37.

The title, "An act providing the mode of declaring charters of turnpike roads forfeited in certain cases," includes a section authorizing the forfeiture of a charter as to a part of a road therein embraced. Central Plank Road Co. v. Hannaman, 22 Ind. 485.

The title, "An act authorizing the construction of plank roads," sustains a provision for penalties for nonpayment of toll and actions for collection thereof. Hunter v. Burnsville Turnpike Co., 56 Ind. 217.

The title, "An act for the benefit of L. turnpike company," sufficiently indicates a provision authorizing the company to borrow money on mortgage and to sell the road. Louisville, etc., Turnpike R. Co. v. Ballard, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 165.

The title, "An act authorizing supervisors of roads to remove fences standing near public highways on streams and watercourses, and to turn public roads and highways on watercourses to the rear of buildings, where such buildings stand too near the stream to give room for said roads or highways," will sustain provisions for changing the location of roads bounded by such fences and buildings. Hines v. Aydelotte, 29 Ind. 518. See also Madison, etc., R. Co. v. Whitneck, 8 Ind. 217; State v. Bowers, 14 Ind. 195; Wheeler v. Calvert, 25 Ind. 365; State v. Montgomery County, 26 Ind. 522; Bright v. McCullough, 27 Ind. 223.

The title, "An act in relation to a portion of the G. Turnpike Road Company," sufficiently indicates provisions authorizing a conveyance by the turnpike company and an acceptance of the same by grantees of a portion of the road, empowering the latter to improve the same as an approach to a park, and containing other provisions for the improvement and ornamentation of that part of the road conveyed. People v. Banks, 67 N. Y. 571.

The title, "An act to authorize the B. Street Railway Company to extend their railroad tracks to certain streets and avenues," sufficiently indicates numerous provisions and requirements affecting the use, operation and disposition of the road. Central Crosstown R. Co. v. Twenty-third Street R. Co., 54 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 168.

The title, "An act to authorize the city of M. to re-assess and collect certain taxes and assessments," sufficiently indicates a provision authorizing the city after such re-assessment of taxes to order the streets of the city to be paved with the Nicholson, or any other

f. SCHOOLS.—The regulation of public instruction by the state includes the power to raise money by taxation for the support of schools; therefore the title, "An act to regulate public instruction" may embrace provisions authorizing a tax for school purposes.¹ But the title, "To raise funds for the common-school system" does not indicate provisions authorizing lotteries for that purpose.² Other miscellaneous cases relating to school acts are stated in the notes.³

kind of pavement. Mills v. Charleston, 29 Wis. 400; 9 Am. Rep. 575; Evans v. Sharp, 29 Wis. 564.

Insufficient Titles.—The title, "An act authorizing the acquisition of turnpikes, roads, or highways, heretofore or hereafter constructed near or through any borough or township in this commonwealth," is insufficient to embrace provisions relating to turnpikes in cities, and the rights of counties through which the turnpikes pass. In re Carbondale, etc., Plank Road (Pa. 1888), 13 Atl. Rep. 913.

The title, "An act to construct a plank road from Oswego to the Indiana line by way of Joliet," will not sustain a provision for the organization of a company to construct a plank road from Chicago to the northern line of Cook County. Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill. 413.

The title, "An act to incorporate the Northwestern Plank Road Company," is insufficient to embrace provisions validating acts in pursuance of void legislation in regard to such road. Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill. 413.

The title, "A supplement . . . authorizing the laying of an additional . . . track," will not support a provision authorizing an extension of a street railway track into streets not designated in the act incorporating the street railway company. Union Pass. R. Co.'s Appeal, 81½ Pa. St. 91.

The title, "An act relative to R. Street Railway Company," does not sufficiently indicate a repeal of a provision of the charter of such company, requiring it to keep the streets which it traverses in repair. Ridge Ave. Pass. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 125 Pa. St. 219.

The title, "An act in relation to streets in Union township in Union county," does not sufficiently indicate provisions for a park. Rader v. Union Tp., 39 N. J. L. 509.

1. Smith v. Bohler, 72 Ga. 546.

2. Boyd v. State, 53 Ala. 601.

3. Schools — Titles sufficient. — The general title, "Cities and towns," in the compilation of laws is sufficient to sustain an amendment enabling certain cities and towns to acquire the right to levy and collect a special tax for school purposes. Austin v. Austin Gas Light, etc., Co., 69 Tex. 180.

The title, "An act to amend ch. 5 and 11 of title 17 of Rev. Sts. relating to the charters of cities and towns, so as to authorize the levy of a tax for the support of a public free school," is sufficient to sustain a provision authorizing the imposition of such a tax in a city containing more than ten thousand inhabitants. Werner v. Galveston (Tex. 1888), 7 S. W. Rep. 726.

The title, "An act regulating the collection of taxes in boroughs and townships," sufficiently indicates provisions for the collection of school and county taxes. Com. v. Frutchev, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 112.

The title, "An act to authorize the county commissioners of S. county to transfer certain sums," sufficiently indicates a provision that certain surplus moneys be transferred from the railroad interest and sinking fund to the school fund of a county. State v. Storey County, 17 Nev. 96.

The title, "An act to legalize the organization of the independent school district of E.," sufficiently indicates a provision legalizing the acts of de facto officers of the district. State v. Squires, 26 Iowa 345.

The title, "An act constituting each city, of the third class, a single school district, providing for the election of school controllers," is sufficient to embrace a provision consolidating school districts composed of parts of a city and township. Com. v. Reynolds, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 568.

The title, "An act fixing the number of school directors in public school boards in certain cities," is sufficient to sustain a section describing the qualifications of such directors. State v. Macklin, 41 Mo. App. 335.

g. TAXATION.—Titles relating generally to the levy, assessment, and collection of taxes have been held sufficient to support provisions relating to the subjects of taxation.¹ Such general titles have been held to embrace provisions abolishing taxes on municipal corporations,² and provisions limiting the time within which an action may be brought for recovery of land held under a tax title.³ The title, "An act concerning taxes" has received an equally liberal construction.⁴

In the appended note are various cases wherein the sufficiency of the titles of acts relating to taxation and cognate matters has been asserted, in view of the subject-matter.⁵

On the other hand, it has been held that provisions authorizing

The title, "An act to establish and maintain a uniform course of textbooks to be used in all the public schools in this state," sufficiently indicates a provision excluding from the operation of the act cities and districts having more than one hundred thousand inhabitants. State v. Bronson (Mo. 1893), 21 S. W. Rep. 1125.

The title, "An act to establish the M. Charitable Association for the benefit of the common-school fund, without distinction of color," does not sufficiently indicate provisions conferring upon a firm the power to receive subscriptions, and to sell and distribute certificates of subscription entitling the holder to prizes to be awarded by lot, the whole object of such provision being the establishment of a lottery for the benefit of the firm in question, under the pretense of promoting the interests of the school fund, to which was to be paid a portion of the receipts from the lottery. Moses v. Mobile, 52 Ala. 198.

The title, "An act allowing school directors to borrow money and issue bonds for the building and furnishing of a schoolhouse, to permit funding of school-district bonds heretofore, or hereafter to be issued, legalizing the same, and declaring an emergency," is insufficient to sustain a provision extending the issuing of bonds by certain school districts to five per cent. of their taxable property. Van Houten v. Routhe, 1 Wash. 306.

The title, "An act to constitute the town of B. and vicinity in B. county a separate school district," will not sustain a provision that intoxicating liquors shall not be sold in such district. Montgomery v. State, 88 Ala. 141.

1. Gibson County v. Pullman Southern Car Co., 42 Fed. Rep. 572.

2. Hawes Mfg. Co.'s Appeal (Pa. 1889), 17 Atl. Rep. 219.

3. Bowman v. Cockrill, 6 Kan. 311.

4. Warren v. Britton, 84 Ind. 14; Kirkpatrick v. New Brunswick, 40 N. J. Eq. 46.

5. Sufficient Titles Relating to Taxation.—The words, "to levy an assessment," in the title of an act, will support a provision for levying a "tax" in the body of the act. Washburn v. Shawnee County, 37 Kan. 217.

The title, "An act . . . relating to notice of redemption from tax sales," will support an amendment providing that the extension of the time to redeem shall apply also to cases in which the property was purchased by the state. State v. Bigelow (Minn. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 95.

The title of an act "relating to the taxation of money lent on land" will support a provision that mortgages covering lands in more than one county shall be void. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 407.

The title, "An act to authorize and empower the board to make an appropriation of state swamp lands to aid in the construction of a railroad," will sustain a provision authorizing the board to exempt from taxation for a limited time all swamp-land property so appropriated. Chippewa County v. Auditor Gen'l, 65 Mich. 408.

The title, "An act . . . defining certain duties and liabilities of officers and persons therein named," is sufficient to cover a provision for the publication of delinquent tax lists and fixing the compensation to be paid to the publisher. Bitters v. Fulton County, 81 Ind. 126.

The title, "An act relative to the finances of the state," sufficiently indicates a provision under which property may be seized and held for the payment of taxes. City Nat. Bank v. Mahan, 21 La. Ann. 752.

The title, "An act relating to the assessment and revision of taxes," is sufficient to sustain a provision relating to the mode of appointing members of boards of assessment and revision. State v. Hammer, 42 N. J. L. 435.

An act, the title of which recites that it is a law for regulating the mode of assessing and collecting taxes throughout the state, is not invalid as to a particular city, in that it fails to mention that city in the title. Stewart's Succession, 41 La. Ann. 128.

The title, "An act in relation to assessments in townships," sufficiently indicates provisions relating to a stay of collection of money paid on void assessments and to the mode of levying assessments in townships. State v. North Plainfield, 43 N. J. L. 349.

The title, "An act to levy and collect a tax for the support of the state government . . . to prescribe what persons, profession and property are liable to taxation, prescribe the method of receiving and collecting said taxes and to provide penalties and forfeitures for non-payment of taxes," is sufficient to embrace the imposition of a tax on "futures" and a provision that such tax shall be paid in full at the time of commencing the business of operating in "futures" and requiring registration with the ordinary at the time of payment of the tax and making the failure to pay the tax, or to register, an offense. McGhee v. State (Ga. 1893), 17 S. E. Rep. 276.

The title, "An act to enforce the collection of taxes levied in the county of L.," is sufficient to sustain a provision making it unlawful for the owners of land in that county, on which taxes were unpaid, to peel bark or cut timber on such land. Prentice v. Weston, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 121.

The title, "An act for the more rigid collection of the revenue," will sustain a provision relating to assessment and to the collection of three separate and distinct revenues and increasing the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in respect to the collection of taxes. State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 594.

The title, "An act in reference to the collection of taxes" in a certain county, comprehends a provision that tax deeds shall be conclusive evidence of title. Ensign v. Barse, 107 N. Y. 329.

In Com. v. Martin, 107 Pa. St. 189, the title, "An act to provide revenue by taxation of corporations, associations and limited partnerships," was held to refer to taxation without restriction to corporate associations and limited partnerships, and it was held that a tax on loans held by individuals was within the title.

The title, "The payment of a county's bonded indebtedness," embraces provisions authorizing the appointment of commissioners of a sinking fund, the levy of taxes, and the collection of and penalties for failing to pay the same. Owenboro, etc., R. Co. v. Logan County (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 76.

The title, "An act to establish taxing districts, and to provide the means for local government for the same," is sufficient to sustain provisions giving municipal franchises to communities within such district, together with the necessary legislative, judicial and police powers, and providing for offenses against such municipalities by officers and others. Luehrman v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 2 Lea (Tenn.) 425.

The title, "An act to authorize the construction and maintenance of a courthouse in C. county," is sufficient to support provisions relating to the levying and collection of taxes for that purpose, and conferring the power to appoint commissioners to receive such tax and apply it to the purposes of the act. McArthur v. Nelson, 81 Ky. 67.

The title, "An act to provide for 'a board of equalization,'" sufficiently indicates provisions for such a board in every county of the state. Stewart v. Collier (Ga. 1893), 17 S. E. Rep. 278.

The title, "An act, a supplement to an act, entitled 'an act to provide revenue by taxation,'" sustains a provision that the exemption of certain banks from taxation should be confined to "so much of the capital and profits of such bank as shall not be invested in real estate." National Bank v. Chester County, 14 Fed. Rep. 239.

The title, "An act to provide for the closing of the entrance of the tunnel of the L. R. Co. . . . in A. street," sufficiently indicates a provision for an assessment to raise a fund with which to compensate the railroad company for its losses and expenses in that behalf. People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; People v. Lawrence, 41 N. Y. 137.

The title, "An act attaching certain territory to the county of W. to enable said town to take stock in a railroad," local taxation to pay part of the expense of building a bridge were not indicated by the title, "An act making appropriations for the expenses of government;"¹ and that the title, "An act to provide more just and equitable laws for the assessment and collection of revenue for state and county purposes," was not sufficient to sustain provisions relating to the collection of municipal taxes.² For other miscellaneous cases of insufficient titles, see appended note.³

h. INTOXICATING LIQUORS.—Provisions prohibiting or regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors are frequently inserted in the comprehends provisions erecting the annexed territory into a taxing district. Henderson v. Jackson County, 2 McCrary (U.S.) 619.

The title, "An act to enable the supervisors . . . to raise money by tax," sufficiently indicates provisions for raising a fund with which to pay existing or future judgments, and directions for ascertaining that such judgments were really due. Sharp v. New York, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 574.

The title, "An act to make provision for the government of the county of New York," embraces a provision that the real estate of a certain hospital, except such buildings actually used for hospital purposes, shall be liable to taxation. People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 47 N. Y. 502.

License Cases.—The title, "A further supplement to an act regulating boroughs and authorizing the corporate authorities to levy and collect a license tax on hacks," is sufficient to sustain provisions authorizing the enactment of ordinances fixing reasonable rates of license taxes on all hacks and other vehicles used in carrying persons or property for pay, and limiting the compensation within a borough. Washington v. McGeorge (Pa. 1892). 23 Atl. Rep. 222.

A provision requiring vendors of larger beer, manufactured by themselves, to take out licenses, is embraced by the title "An act to raise additional revenue to pay the debts of the state by increasing the rates of licenses of ordinary keepers and traders." Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525; 69 Am. Dec. 226.

The object of a provision that peddlers of drugs and nostrums shall obtain a license, under penalty of a fine to be recovered by action of debt in the name of the people, is sufficiently indicated by the title, "An act to regulate the sale of medicine in the state of Illinois." People v. Blue Mountain Joe, 129 Ill. 370.

A title expressing the subject-matter of an ordinance to be the licensing of vehicles, and the fixing of rates for the same, is not inconsistent with provisions for the imposition of the license, or regulation of vehicles driven in the night, and for fixing rates of charges for use of vehicles, and the licensing of drivers. St. Louis v. Green, 7 Mo. App. 472.

The title, "An act to define the duties, powers, qualifications and liabilities of assessors," comprehends a provision referring disputes as to values to the board of equalization for decision. International, etc., R. Co. v. Smith County, 54 Tex. 10.

The title, "An act to ratify and confirm certain proceedings of the board of trustees of the village of A.," sufficiently indicates a provision ratifying an invalid assessment. People v. Wilson, 3 N. Y. Supp. 326.

The title, "An act providing for the improvement of the F. road at the cost of the property benefited thereby," sufficiently indicates a provision for assessment of the adjoining property within eight hundred feet of either side of the road. Graham v. Conger, 85 Ky. 582.

See generally State v. Lasater, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 584; Com. v. Dickinson, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 585; Slymer v. State, 62 Md. 237; In re Broom's Estate (Pa. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 630; State v. Wright (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 129; Allen v. Pioneer Press Co., 40 Minn. 117; 12 Am. St. Rep. 707.

1. Insufficient Titles Relative to Taxation.—People v. Chautauqua County, 43 N. Y. 10.

2. Knoxville v. Lewis, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 180.

3. The title, "An act to exempt from taxation public property used for public purposes and places of religious worship," does not embrace the proviso that "all property, real or personal, other than that which is in actual use legislative charters of municipal, eleemosynary, and private corporations, and have been held to be sufficiently indicated by titles expressing no other purpose than that of incorporation.¹ Under a title expressing the purpose of the act to be to regulate the sale of liquor, provisions prohibiting the sale and imposing penalties may be embraced;² or provisions declaring the holder of a liquor license and his bondsmen liable for damages sustained from a sale;³ or a provision imposing a license tax;⁴ or a provision declaring disorderly houses where liquor is sold to be nuisances.⁵ See note for miscellaneous instances of sufficient titles.⁶ On and occupation for the purposes aforesaid, and from which any income or revenue is derived, shall be subject to taxation." Sewickley v. Sholes, 118 Pa. St. 165.

The title, "An act to allow further time for the treasurer of H. county to make returns of delinquent taxes," is inconsistent with a provision allowing a former treasurer additional time in which to make supplementary returns of delinquent taxes. Henrico County v. Magruder, 84 Va. 828.

The title, "An act making appropriations for the expenses of state offices and state governments for the years 1885-6, and to provide a tax for paying the same," is not sufficient to embrace a section authorizing a tax to raise money with which to pay interest to counties on proceeds of sales of swamp lands theretofore accruing. Sanilac County v. Aplin, 68 Mich. 659.

The title, "An act to amend an act providing for the registration of precinct bonds," will not support a provision for levying taxes to pay such bonds. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Saunders County, 9 Neb. 507.

The title, "An act to fix the license tax of stevedores," is not consistent with a provision for the examination of persons as to their qualification for performing the duties of stevedore. State v. Palmes, 23 Fla. 620.

The title, "An act to provide for assessment of unclaimed military lots and tracts of land in A. and G. counties, and for the collection of state and county taxes thereon, by selling the delinquent lands and turning the net proceeds into the treasury," does not embrace a provision that fees charged those counties for previous searches in land offices shall be remitted, or that their agent shall have free access to the records. Scharf v. Tasker, 73 Md. 378.

The title, "An act to require assessors . . . to assess all seated lands in the county in which the mansion house is situated where the county lines divide a tract of land," does not indicate a provision relating merely to assessment of lands divided by township and borough lines. La Plume v. Gardner (Pa. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 899.

See generally Com. v. Bender, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 620; State v. McCann, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 1.

1. Ex parte Moore, 62 Ala. 471; Gloversville v. Howell, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 345; Neifing v. Pontiac Tp., 56 Ill. 172; O'Leary v. Cook County, 28 Ill. 534.

2. Williams v. State, 48 Ind. 306. See also State v. Adamson, 14 Ind. 296; Thomasson v. State, 15 Ind. 449.

3. Poffenbarger v. Smith, 27 Neb. 788; Durein v. Pontious, 34 Kan. 353.

The title "An act to regulate and license the sale of . . . liquors," comprehends a provision that the applicant shall give bond to pay all fines and costs imposed for violation of the act as a condition precedent to the issuing of the license. Kane v. State, 78 Ind. 103.

4. State v. Dogherty (Idaho 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 855.

5. O'Kane v. State, 60 Ind. 183; State v. Campbell (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 35.

6. Sufficient Titles of Liquor Acts.—The title, "To provide for the collection of special taxes on dealers in spirituous or malt and intoxicating bitters, and for other purposes," sufficiently indicates a provision that a failure to pay such taxes shall be a misdemeanor. Brown v. State, 73 Ga. 38.

An act, entitled "An act to regulate, restrain, license or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors," sufficiently indicates a provision that ten per cent. of the license fees shall be paid into the state treasury. State v. Spokane Falls, 2 Wash. 40.

The title, "An act to amend ch. 92 Gen. Sts., entitled 'revenue and taxes,'" the other hand, a title "to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors, and provide against evils resulting therefrom" has been held not to include provisions prohibiting and punishing intoxication;¹ and a title referring to a prohibition against the sale of spirituous liquors has been held not to support a provision prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, the two words not being, in the opinion of the court, synonymous.² Miscellaneous instances of titles not broad enough to support provisions of statutes are set forth in the note.³

i. CRIMES AND CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.—Illustrations of what may be embraced under a general and comprehensive title are afforded by those decisions which hold that the title, "An act relative to crimes and offenses," is sufficient without specifying the particu-embraces a provision to impose a fine on persons for selling liquor without license. Rosenham v. Com. (Ky. 1886), 2 S. W. Rep. 230.

The title of an original act, "Liquors," is sufficient to sustain provisions of an amendatory act regulating the sale. In re White, 33 Neb. 812.

The title, "An act to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors within certain limits," will sustain a provision prohibiting the sale of "Plantation Bitters" or other intoxicating bitters under the name of patent medicine. Howell v. State, 70 Ga. 224; 51 Am. Rep. 259.

The title, "An act to provide a local option law for the incorporated cities, towns and villages of this state," sufficiently indicates a proviso that the act shall not apply to a city, town or village in which the sale of ardent spirits shall thereafter be prohibited by legislative enactment. State v. Chester, 18 S. Car. 464.

The title, "An act to amend acts . . . relating to the practice of pharmacy," may contain provisions amending the laws authorizing the sale of liquors for different purposes. State v. Aulman, 76 Iowa 624.

1. State v. Young, 47 Ind. 150.

2. McDuffie v. State, 87 Ga. 687.

3. Insufficient Titles of Liquor Acts.—

A provision prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within a specified limit, is not included within the title, "An act to regulate the sale of spirituous liquors." People v. Gadway, 61 Mich. 285; 1 Am. St. Rep. 578.

The title, "An act to authorize police juries to make such regulations as they may deem proper to prohibit or regulate the sale, barter or exchange of intoxicating liquors or merchandise on Sunday," does not indicate a provision that violations of such ordinances shall be considered misdemeanors, and that the penalties therein prescribed shall be enforced by indictment or information. State v. Baum, 33 La. Ann. 981; overruling State v. Bott, 31 La. Ann. 663; 33 Am. St. Rep. 224.

The title, "An act to regulate the sale of spirituous, malt, and vinous liquors," is insufficient to support an amendment increasing the license tax for the sale of such liquors, the effect of such amendment being to alter the charters of all the cities of the state. State v. Wright, 14 Oregon 365.

The title, "An act to establish a separate school district, . . . and for the appointment of a board of trustees for such school district, with certain powers and privileges," is not sufficient to embrace a provision that no license for the sale of spirituous liquors in the district shall be granted to any person without the recommendation of the board of trustees as to his moral fitness. Glenn v. Lynn, 89 Ala. 608.

The title, "An act to amend an act incorporating a town," which latter act merely authorizes the collection of a tax for selling liquors, is not sufficient to sustain a provision in the amendatory act prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors. Ex parte Cowert, 92 Ala. 94.

The title, "An act to prohibit the issuing of licenses in certain boroughs," does not sufficiently indicate provisions imposing a penalty for selling liquor in said boroughs. Com. v. Frantz, 135 Pa. St. 389.

The title, "To provide for licensing boats, hacks, and other vehicles by incorporated camp-meeting associations and seaside resorts and for the better government of the same," will not sus-lar crimes and offenses provided for in the act;¹ and that the titles, "Crimes and Criminal Procedure,"² and "An act to establish a code of criminal procedure,"³ may comprehend all matters relating to the definition and punishment of crimes and to criminal prosecutions. Miscellaneous instances where statutes have been sustained are given in the note.⁴

tain provisions regulating the manufacture and sale of liquor at such resorts. Grover v. Ocean Grove Camp-meeting Assoc., 45 N. J. L. 399.

It was held in Lauer v. State, 22 Ind. 461, that the title, "An act to regulate and license the sale of intoxicating liquors, and providing penalties for the violation thereof," could not embrace a section relating to the jurisdiction of courts, and to the practice in prosecutions for offenses against the statute. Overruled, however, in Hingle v. State, 24 Ind. 28, and Reams v. State, 23 Ind. 111.

1. Crimes and Criminal Procedure—Titles Sufficient.—State v. Dubois, 39 La. Ann. 676; State v. Taylor, 34 La. Ann. 978.

2. State v. Brassfield, 81 Mo. 151; 51 Am. Rep. 234.

3. Woodruff v. Baldwin, 23 Kan. 491, in which case the title was held sufficient to embrace provisions relating to the care and custody of estates of convicts. It was contended here that the expression "criminal procedure" was broad enough to include not merely every proceeding in the prosecution of crime, but any proceeding connected with or directly caused by the crime, and aiming at the adjustment of rights disarranged by it, and that the expression was broader than the phrase "proceedings in criminal cases." This contention was sustained by the court.

Under the title, "An act to amend the code," provisions may be embraced extending the definition of the crime of embezzlement so as to embrace persons and transactions not mentioned therein. Heller v. People (Colo. 1892), 31 Pac. Rep. 773.

The title, "An act to amend chapter 24 . . . entitled 'criminal code,'" is sufficient, though the title of the act intended to be amended be "an act concerning criminal jurisprudence." Heller v. People (Colo. 1892), 31 Pac. Rep. 773.

The title, "An act to add a new section to art. 7 of the Code of Gen. Public Laws, entitled 'crimes and punishment,' sub-title 'Rivers,'" sufficiently embraces a provision prohibiting the deportation of sand from the bed of a certain river, and prescribing a punishment therefor. State v. Norris, 70 Md. 91.

4. Miscellaneous Instances of Valid Criminal Statutes.—The object of a statute providing punishment for offenses committed by slaves has been held sufficiently indicated by the title "An act relative to slaves." State v. Henry, 15 La. Ann. 297.

The title, "to provide for the detection and conviction of all forgers of land titles," will support provisions prescribing the offense, its punishment, and the procedure. Johnson v. State, 9 Tex. App. 249, citing English v. State, 7 Tex. App. 171; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 216; 34 Am. Rep. 737.

A provision, that "Whoever shall willfully violate a contract upon the faith of which money or goods have been advanced" shall be punished, etc., is not indicated by the title, "To enforce labor contracts, and to provide a penalty for the willful violation thereof." State v. Pierson (La. 1892), 10 So. Rep. 400.

The title, "An act to protect females of immature age and judgment from licentiousness," sufficiently indicates a provision making carnal intercourse with a female under the age of seventeen years a felony. Holton v. State, 28 Fla. 308.

A statute "To regulate the sale or disposal of opium" and to prohibit the keeping of places of resort for smoking or otherwise using that drug," is not unconstitutional as embracing more than one subject. State v. Ah Sam, 15 Nev. 27; 37 Am. Rep. 454.

The title, "An act to prohibit the fraudulent transfer of property and to declare the same a crime and to prescribe the punishment thereof," comprehends a provision making the sale and transfer, secretion, incumbrance, or disposal of property with intent to defraud creditors, an offense. Herold v. State, 21 Neb. 50.

The title, "Dram shop—Gambling devices in. An act to prevent any dram-shop keeper from keeping or permitting to be kept in or about his dram shop certain musical instruments, any billiard, pool or other gaming table, bowling or ten-pin alley, cards, dice, or other device for gaming or amusement," comprehends a provision forbidding sparring, boxing, wrestling, and cock fighting in dram shops. State v. Blackstone (Mo. 1893), 22 S. W. Rep. 370.

The title, "An act to regulate public warehouses, and the warehousing and inspection of grain, and to give effect to article 13 of the constitution of this state," which article required that the legislature should pass laws to prevent the sale of fraudulent warehouse receipts, sufficiently indicated provisions prescribing a penalty for issuing false receipts, and for not canceling receipts under certain circumstances. Sykes v. People, 127 Ill. 117.

The title, "An act to protect innkeepers," sufficiently indicates a provision for the punishment of parties who avoid paying board by means of a trick. State v. Kingsley, 108 Mo. 135.

The title, "An act to prohibit the sale and manufacture of unhealthy or adulterated dairy products," sufficiently embraces a provision that no person shall manufacture out of any oleaginous substance or compound of the same or any compound other than that produced from unadulterated milk or cream or any article designed to take the place of butter or cheese made from pure unadulterated milk or cream. Butler v. Chambers, 36 Minn. 69; 1 Am. St. Rep. 638.

The title, "An act providing for metropolitan police in all cities of 29,000 or more inhabitants," is sufficient to sustain a provision for the punishment of persons interfering with the police in the discharge of their duties. Indianapolis v. Huegele, 115 Ind. 581.

The title, "An act to regulate the sale of opium and to suppress opium dens," is sufficient to support a provision forbidding the sale or giving of opium to any one but a druggist or practicing physician, except on the prescription of a practicing physician. Ex parte Yung Jon, 28 Fed. Rep. 308.

The title, "An act to prevent fraud in the sale of lard, and to provide punishment for the violation thereof," is sufficient to embrace a provision that no person shall sell any substitute for lard under the words "refined," "pure,"

"family," unless each package is marked "compound lard." State v. Snow, 81 Iowa 642.

The title, "An act to prevent the sale of cotton between sunset and sunrise," is sufficient to sustain provisions making it unlawful to buy and sell, barter or exchange," or "receive on deposit," any cotton within that time. Truss v. State, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 311.

The title, "An act designating the name by which the house of refuge for correction and reformation of juvenile offenders shall hereafter be known, . . . and regulating the committing thereto," sufficiently indicates a provision for the commitment of boys to the "Indiana Reform School for Boys." Jarrard v. State, 116 Ind. 98.

The title, "An act to secure more competent and well qualified juries in the several counties of this state," comprehends provisions reducing the number of peremptory challenges in criminal cases. Tatum v. State, 82 Ala. 5.

Though the title of an act relates only to proceedings by information, it will support a provision dispensing with grand juries in such case, unless ordered by the judge. In re Rafferty, 1 Wash. 382.

The title, "An act relative to the payment of expenses incident to the prosecution of criminals," sufficiently indicates a section providing that the fines and forfeitures collected for the violation of criminal laws shall be paid into the treasury of the state. Bossier v. Steele, 13 La. Ann. 433.

The title, "Cheats, frauds, bogus checks, etc.," is sufficient to support a provision as to what shall be a sufficient charge in an indictment founded on the act. State v. Morgan (Mo. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 456.

The title, "An act concerning proceedings in criminal cases," is sufficient to sustain a provision forbidding municipalities from punishing by ordinance a statutory offense. Jett v. Richmond, 78 Ind. 316.

The title, "An act to provide for the trial of offenses where the penalty is not necessarily imprisonment at hard labor or death," is sufficient to support provisions that the accused may waive trial by jury. State v. White, 33 La. Ann. 1221; State v. Carter, 33 La. Ann. 1214.

The title, "An act to provide for the more efficient government and maintenance of the house of correction and reformatory at G.," embraces a provision that the jury shall say in their verdict

On the other hand, in a case where a statute imposed a penalty upon county treasurers for lending out the public funds for private uses, the title was, "An act to provide for the assessment and collection of the revenue," and the statute was held unconstitutional, it being declared that the matter of the act must be "clearly" and not "dubiously" indicated by the title, and that the relation of the title to the subject must not rest upon a merely possible or doubtful reference.¹ For other instances of statutes held bad, see note.²

j. CIVIL PROCEDURE AND COURTS.—The titles and statutes relating to matters of civil procedure are various and difficult of whether the convict shall be sent to the reformatory or the penitentiary. Washington v. State, 28 Tex. App. 411.

1. In re Breene, 14 Colo. 401. See also Brooks v. People, 14 Colo. 413.

2. Insufficient Titles—Criminal Statutes.—The title, "An act for the suppression of lottery gifts by storekeepers and others to secure patronage," is not sufficient to sustain provisions prohibiting tradesmen from giving tickets to purchasers, entitling them to money or articles of value. Com. v. Moorhead, 7 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 513.

The title, "An act to amend § 1 of Act No. 43 of the Laws of 1873 . . . and to repeal § 2 of said act" is insufficient to support a provision for the punishment of persons embezzling mortgaged goods and chattels, there being in the title of the act amended no reference to chattel mortgages. Ellis v. Hutchinson, 70 Mich. 154.

The title, "An act to change the penalty for disturbance of the peace," will not support a provision making it an offense to disturb any person." State v. Persinger, 76 Mo. 346.

The title, "An act to provide for the maintenance, government, and police of the penitentiary; also the mode of appointing officers," is insufficient to sustain a provision that persons convicted of offenses punishable by imprisonment for a period of time exceeding six months shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary. Brooks v. People, 14 Colo. 413.

The title, "An act to prevent deception in the sale of dairy products, and to preserve the public health," will not sustain a provision making the manufacture of imitations of butter an offense. Northwestern Mfg. Co. v. Chambers, 58 Mich. 381; 55 Am. Rep. 693.

The title, "To prevent the adulteration and to regulate the sale of milk," is insufficient to sustain the prohibition of production of impure milk by other means than adulteration without regard to the existence of an intent to sell the same. State v. Newton, 45 N. J. L. 469.

The title, "An act to prevent the fraudulent transfer of personal property," does not sufficiently indicate a provision making it an offense to remove mortgaged property out of the county. Ex parte Thomason, 16 Neb. 238.

The title, "An act making it a misdemeanor to carry on barbering on Sunday," will not sustain a provision prohibiting a barber from keeping open a bath room on Sunday. Ragio v. State, 86 Tenn. 272.

The title, "An act . . . prohibiting the manufacture of cigars and preparation of tobacco in any form in the tenement houses of said city," does not indicate a provision prohibiting such labor in any rooms or apartments in such city used as dwellings for the purpose of living, sleeping, or doing any household work therein. Ex parte Paul, 94 N. Y. 497.

A provision that a defendant indicted for assault and battery with intent to commit felony, may be convicted of a lesser offense, is not indicated by the title, "An act to limit the number of grand jurors, and to point out the mode of their selection." Foley v. State, 9 Ind. 365; Gillespie v. State, 9 Ind. 380.

The title, "An act to amend and reenact § 997 in regard to challenges of jurors in trials of criminal cases" (such section having reference to regular jury terms), will not support a provision increasing the number of peremptory challenges to which the state is entitled and disclaiming any application to the trial of cases at other terms than regular jury terms, but nevertheless containing a provision on the subject classification, but it is believed that a full collection of the cases will be found in the appended note.¹

Provisions in titles relating to courts, though general in their terms, are deemed sufficient usually to embrace various matters of detail relating to the general subject.²

of peremptory challenges in that very class of cases. State v. Everage, 33 La. Ann. 123.

1. Civil Procedure.—The title, "An act providing the place of bringing suit in certain cases," may support a provision designating those upon whom service may be made. Farmer's Ins. Co. v. Highsmith, 44 Iowa 330.

The title, "The Code of Civil Practice," sufficiently indicates provisions relating to the issuing of executions, their levy, stay, sales thereunder and the appraisal of property taken by virtue thereof. Porter v. Thomson, 22 Iowa 391.

The title, "An act to regulate the foreclosure of real estate," is sufficient to indicate a provision that a mortgagor's right of redemption may be waived. Atkinson v. Duffy, 16 Minn. 45.

The title, "An act concerning the unlawful detention of land and the recovery thereof," is sufficiently comprehensive to embrace proceedings against tenants unlawfully holding over, and proceedings in forcible entry and detainer. Sturgeon v. Hitchens, 22 Ind. 109.

The title, "An act to provide interpleas in certain cases," sufficiently indicates a provision that any person claiming attached property may interplead in a case. Bennett v. Wolverton, 24 Kan. 284.

The title, "An act in relation to the removal of causes to the supreme court," is sufficient to indicate a provision for giving notice of appeal in open court or at chambers. Baker v. Prewett, 3 Wash. Ter. 474.

A title relating to the transfer of causes is consistent with provisions for the mode of trying such causes after removal. State v. Judges, 32 La. Ann. 778.

The object of an act allowing judgment to be rendered on a mortgage note, waiving appraisement laws in accordance with the note, is sufficiently expressed by the title, "An act to revise, simplify and abridge rules, practice, pleadings, etc., of the courts." Reilly v. Ellsworth, 11 Ind. 222.

A provision that an act creating privileges in favor of non-resident plaintiffs, in suits against lunatics and infants, shall not extend beyond those enjoyed by resident plaintiffs, is sufficiently indicated by the title, "An act amendatory and explanatory of the Statute of Limitations in this state, so far as regards idiots, lunatics and infants." Denham v. Holeman, 26 Ga. 193; 71 Am. Dec. 198.

But a title, "An act to provide for appeals from interlocutory orders granting injunctions or appointing receivers," has been held not to sustain a provision for an appeal from an order refusing to dissolve an injunction or an order enlarging the scope of the injunction. Taylor v. Kirby, 31 Ill. App. 658.

The title of an act professing to amend a prior act in relation to the publication of summons, by adding certain words in relation to the powers of the court in vacation, will not sustain a provision adding those words, and other words also, materially changing the length of time for which the publication was required. Johnson v. Jones, 87 Ga. 85.

2. Courts.—The title, "An act constituting district courts in certain cities," comprehends provisions taking away part of the jurisdiction of certain other courts. Payne v. Mahan, 44 N. J. L. 213.

The title, "An act to amend § 23 of an act to establish a criminal court for the county of P. with criminal jurisdiction in misdemeanor cases," is sufficient to support a provision conferring on such court the power to grant writs of mandamus. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Pike County (Ala. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 732.

The title, "An act to create a criminal court," will sustain a provision conferring equitable jurisdiction on such court. Howland Coal, etc., Works v. Brown, 13 Bush (Ky.) 681. See also Chiles v. Drake, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 146; 74 Am. Dec. 406.

The title, "An act to enlarge the jurisdiction of the courts of general and special sessions of the peace, in and for the city and county of New York," sufficiently indicates provisions relating to the courts of oyer and terminer of the state at large. People v. McCann, 16 N. Y. 58; 69 Am. Dec. 642.

The title, "An act to enlarge the jurisdiction of the husting court," sufficiently indicates a provision that in certain cases the judge of that court may act as a judge of the chancery court. Morris v. Virginia Ins. Co., 85 Va. 588.

The title, "An act to regulate proceedings in county courts pertaining to the estates of deceased persons," sufficiently indicates a provision for the revision of the accounts of executors and administrators in the district court. Murphey v. Menard, 11 Tex. 673.

The title, "An act to enlarge the jurisdiction of the probate courts," is sufficient to sustain provisions prescribing the manner in which their exercise of that jurisdiction shall be reviewed by the circuit courts. Perkins v. DuVal, 31 Ark. 238.

The title of an act creating a new judicial district need not indicate the fact that one of the counties composing the district was taken from an adjoining district. Brown v. State (Tex. 1893), 22 S. W. Rep. 596.

The title, "An act to regulate proceedings in contestation between persons claiming judicial office," indicates that its provisions were intended to apply to the office of justice of the peace. McGregor v. Allen, 33 La. Ann. 870.

The title, "Of Justices of the Peace and their courts," comprehends a provision in an amendatory act for the election of justices of the peace and fixing their tenure of office. State v. Ranson, 73 Mo. 78.

The title, "An act regulating the jurisdiction and procedure before justices of the peace in certain cases," is sufficient to sustain provisions making a justice of the peace and his bondsmen liable for the misfeasances of a special constable appointed by the justice. Martin v. Borgman, 21 Kan. 672.

The title, "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act constituting courts for the trial of simple cases,'" may contain provisions regulating the fees of justices of the peace, and constables, in criminal cases. Lane v. State, 49 N. J. L. 673.

The title, "An act to increase the jurisdiction of justices of the peace," sufficiently indicates a provision giving courts for the trial of small causes, jurisdiction to the amount of $200. Colwell v. Chamberlin, 43 N. J. L. 387.

The title, "An act to define the judicial districts of the state and prescribing the time for holding the terms of the district courts in the several counties of each judicial district," sufficiently indicates provisions so dividing the state as to make an additional district and providing for the appointment of a judge thereof until the next election, and for the determination of matters pending in the organized counties of the new district by the district courts of such counties. In re Johnson County (Wyoming 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 850.

The title, "An act concerning justices of the peace, their general jurisdiction and mode of proceeding before them," is sufficient to sustain provisions regulating the practice on appeals from decisions of a justice's court. Robinson v. Skipworth, 23 Ind. 316; overruling Kuhns v. Krammis, 20 Ind. 490, and followed in Hingle v. State, 24 Ind. 35; Grubbs v. State, 24 Ind. 295; Crist v. Glidewell, 24 Ind. 396; Murray v. Kelly, 27 Ind. 42; Bergman v. Ashdill, 48 Ind. 489.

Insufficient Titles in Acts Relating to Courts.—But a title general in its terms relating to courts has been held insufficient to sustain provisions giving exclusive jurisdiction of certain matters. Payne v. Mahon, 41 N. J. L. 292.

The title, "An act to provide a revenue, to levy and collect taxes, to grant and collect licenses, to provide for the creation, appointment and removal of revenue officers, and to define their duties," does not sufficiently indicate a provision extending the jurisdiction of a district court to offenses relating to the revenue. State v. Wardens of St. Louis Cathedral, 23 La. Ann. 720.

The title, "A supplement to an act regulating writs of error," will not include provisions for removal of "decisions" by motion for a new trial. Folkner v. Dorland (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 403.

The title, "An act to give jurisdiction to district courts . . . over causes . . . respecting landlord and tenant," will not sustain provisions regulating the procedure in such causes. Duverge v. Salter, 5 La. Ann. 94.

The title, "An act to regulate the terms of court in the sixteenth circuit district," will not sustain a provision attaching an unorganized county for certain judicial purposes. Ex parte Wood, 34 Kan. 645. See State v. Porter (Minn. 1893), 55 N. W. Rep. 134 for a

6. Amendatory and Repealing Acts.—The general rule is that the title of an amendatory act, reciting the title of the amended act, will be sufficient if the new matter contained in the amendatory act is fairly indicated by the title of the original act.¹ If the title of the original act is sufficient, it is unnecessary to inquire whether the title of the amendatory act would of itself be sufficient.² Trivial errors in describing the title of the original act, which cannot mislead, will not invalidate the amendatory act.³ It is not necessary that the title of the amendatory act should specify the particular sections of the act amended.⁴

The title of the amendatory act need not necessarily refer in terms to the fact of repeal.⁵ An act which in its title is called a repealing act may not in its body embrace new enactments outside the scope of those repealed.⁶

7. One or More Subjects.—The requirement that no statute shall embrace more than one subject, though so interwoven with the case involving the sufficiency of the title of an act relating to terms of office of judges of the municipal court.

1. Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Arnold, 46 Wis. 225; Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co., 48 Minn. 140; Montclair Tp. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. Eq. 436, where the supplementary act was held to contain matter not indicated by the title of the original act. Wardle v. Cummings, 86 Mich. 395. In People v. Young Men's, etc., Ben. Soc., 41 Mich. 67, and Eaton v. Walker, 76 Mich. 579, the amendment introduced purposes not coming within the title of the original act. Norman v. Curry, 27 Ark. 440; People v. Parvin, 74 Cal. 549; Saunders v. Pensacola, 24 Fla. 226; Jones v. Columbus, 25 Ga. 610; Alberston v. Hamilton, 82 Ga. 30; Reed v. State, 12 Ind. 641; Brandon v. State, 16 Ind. 197; Morford v. Unger, 8 Iowa 82; Lafon v. Dufrocq, 9 La. Ann. 350; Second German, etc., Bldg. Assoc. v. Newman, 50 Md. 62; Holden v. Osceola County, 77 Mich. 202; People v. Gadoway, 61 Mich. 285; 1 Am. St. Rep. 578; Hoffman v. Parsons, 27 Minn. 236; State v. Smith, 35 Minn. 257; St. Louis v. Tiefert, 42 Mo. 578; People v. Willsea, 60 N. Y. 507; People v. Whitlock, 92 N. Y. 191; David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Oregon 98; State Line, etc., R. Co.'s. Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 429; Craig v. First Presbyterian Church, 88 Pa. St. 42; 32 Am. Rep. 417; In re East Grant Street, 121 Pa. St. 596; Gibson v. State, 16 Fla. 291; Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co., 131 Pa. St. 1; Mills v. Charleton, 29 Wis. 400; 9 Am. Rep. 575; National Bank v. Chester County, 14 Fed. Rep. 239.

A title of an amendatory act which expresses its object by mere reference to the act intended to be amended substantially complies with the provision that the object of every act must be expressed in its title. Arnoult v. New Orleans, 11 La. Ann. 56; State v. Garrett, 29 La. Ann. 637; State v. Brown, 41 La. Ann. 771.

The amendment of a statute is a "subject" within the constitutional requirement that the subject of a statute shall be embraced in its title. People v. Parvin (Cal. 1887), 14 Pac. Rep. 783.

The title, "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to establish the municipality of J.,'" is sufficient to sustain a provision purporting to amend not the entire act, but only a particular section thereof. State v. Duval County, 23 Fla. 483.

A supplement to an act repealing a clause in the supplemented act requiring the assent of voters to the issuing of certain municipal improvement bonds, sufficiently expressed its object in the title "a supplement to" the act repealed. Rahway Sav. Inst. v. Rahway, 53 N. J. L. 48.

2. Brandon v. State, 16 Ind. 197.

3. People v. Howard, 73 Mich. 10.

4. State v. Duval County, 23 Fla. 483.

5. Gabbert v. Jeffersonville R. Co., 11 Ind. 365; 71 Am. Dec. 358; New Orleans v. Dunbar, 28 La. Ann. 722; Washington County v. Franklin R. Co., 34 Md. 159; Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610; Yellow River Imp. Co. v. Arnold, 46 Wis. 214.

6. People v. Mellen, 32 Ill. 181; Ex parte Upshaw, 45 Ala. 234.

requirement that the subject shall be expressed in the title as frequently to raise a single question, when the validity of a particular statute is under consideration, is, notwithstanding, a separate question. The cases cited above on the question of the sufficiency of the title to indicate the subject-matter throw much light upon the collateral question whether such a plurality of subjects is dealt with in a single statute as to make it obnoxious to the constitutional provision. In addition to those cases are many which deal more especially with the question here under discussion, and which, therefore, may be classified here. One subject only, within the meaning of this constitutional requirement, has been held to be embraced in an act separating the offices of receiver and commissioner, providing for their appointment, and defining their duties;¹ in an act relating to lands and levees;² an act relating to the compensation of executors, administrators, guardians, and county commissioners;³ an act defining the duties and fixing the compensation of a state officer and providing for vacancies;⁴ and an act to revise the general statutes.⁵ Provisions relating to the mode of accomplishing the object of an act constitute a part of the subject-matter and not a separate subject.⁶ So various pertinent details come within the general subject.⁷ The requirement should not be so construed as to restrict legislation to an extent that will render different

1. Smith v. Com., 8 Bush (Ky.) 108.

2. Police Jury v. Colomb, 20 La. Ann. 196.

3. Key v. Jones, 52 Ala. 238.

4. Walker v. Dunham, 17 Ind. 483.

5. Oshe v. State, 37 Ohio St. 494.

6. People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; State v. Miller, 100 Mo. 439; Bergman v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 88 Mo. 678; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 588; Ewing v. Hoblitzell, 85 Mo. 64; Hope v. Gainesville, 72 Ga. 246; Brown v. State, 73 Ga. 38; Crawfordville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Fletcher, 104 Ind. 97; Golden Canal Co. v. Bright, 8 Colo. 144; People v. Goddard, 8 Colo. 432; Willis v. Standard Oil Co. (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 652.

An act having for its object the preservation of the public health, may include provisions for the payment and control of policemen and police commissioners. State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 102.

An act for the appointment of two coal and coke boat gaugers, to fix their compensation and to define their duties, embraces but one subject. State v. Pittsburg, etc., Coal Co., 41 La. Ann. 465. So also an act creating a commission of arbitration and award, and defining the powers and duties thereof, and making appropriations to pay the salaries of judges thereof. Stone v. Brown, 54 Tex. 330.

The same statute may regulate the sale, alienation, removal, etc., of animals. State v. Deitz, 30 Tex. 511.

7. Hare v. Kennerly, 83 Ala. 608; Block v. State, 66 Ala. 493; Tatum v. State, 82 Ala. 5; Gunter v. Dale County, 44 Ala. 639; Ex parte Upshaw, 45 Ala. 234; Martin v. Hewitt, 44 Ala. 433. See also Tuttle v. Strout, 7 Minn. 465; 82 Am. Dec. 108; Clay v. Central R. & B. Co., 84 Ga. 345; Hoboken v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 124 U. S. 656.

An act providing for the organization and government of a state hospital embraces but one subject. Overseers of Poor v. Clearfield County (Va. 1890), 19 Atl. Rep. 952; as does an act regulating the use of water for irrigation and providing for settling priorities of water rights, Golden Canal Co. v. Bright, 8 Colo. 144; and an act providing for the sale of public lands for specified purposes, and the investment of the proceeds, Looney v. Bagly (Tex. 1887), 7 S. W. Rep. 360; and an act requiring that all mortgages filed with the registrar of deeds for record shall be by him reported to the tax assessor of the county, and that no mortgage acts necessary, when the whole subject-matter is connected and may be properly embraced in the same act.¹ It has been said that the question must be determined by the act itself and not by its title.² An amendment in two particulars may be good.³ If the two subjects are separable, that which is indicated by the title may stand;⁴ but if the title indicates both subjects, the act must fail.⁵

Municipal incorporation acts may embrace many matters without violating the constitutional provision.⁶

Provisions authorizing the removal of a county seat and com-shall be recorded which does not give the name and residence of the mortgagee. People v. Board of Supervisors (Mich. 1888), 38 N. W. Rep. 639.

An act to establish evidence of title to real property, and to restore the record of the same, and to provide for the recording of deeds, embraces more than one subject. In re Goode, 3 Mo. App. 226. See also State v. Shadle, 41 Tex. 404; Smails v. White, 4 Neb. 353; Davies v. Saginaw County, 89 Mich. 295; Webb v. New York, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 10; Klein v. State Treasurer, 42 La. Ann. 174; State v. Harrison, 11 La. Ann. 722; Maranthe v. Hunter, 11 La. Ann. 734; State v. Adeline, 11 La. Ann. 736; State v. Kolsem, 130 Ind. 434.

A local act entitled, "An act to provide for transmission of letters, packages, and merchandise in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, and across the North and East rivers, by means of pneumatic tubes to be constructed beneath the surface of the streets and public places in said cities and under the waters of said rivers," embraces but one subject. Astor v. Arcade R. Co., 113 N. Y. 93; 1 N. Y. Supp. 174; Bailey v. New York A. R. Co., 1 N. Y. Supp. 304.

1. Phillips v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 219; Hoke v. Com., 79 Ky. 573.

2. Greaton v. Griffin, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 313; People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 176.

3. State v. Brown, 41 La. Ann. 771.

4. People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 566; People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624; Webb v. New York, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 12.

5. Skinner v. Wilhelm, 63 Mich. 568.

6. Municipal Incorporation Acts. — Harris v. People, 59 N. Y. 601, the court saying, among other things: "The whole thing, the creation of the municipality, is the subject of the act; and the parts of it are not separate subjects, but separate parts of one general subject."

An act incorporating a city may provide for establishment of a court therein. Davis v. Woolnough, 9 Iowa 104; or may provide for future annexation to another city, embraces but one subject. State v. LaVague, 47 Minn. 106.

A local act incorporating a town situated in two counties does not embrace more than one subject in providing that notices, required to be published in either county, shall be published in a newspaper in the town. More v. Deyoe, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 208.

An act consolidating various acts in relation to the charter of a city embraces but one subject. Hannibal v. Marion County, 69 Mo. 571. So, also, an act repealing the charter of certain municipal corporations, and providing that their property shall be transferred to the custody and control of the state, to remain public property for the uses to which it had been formerly applied. Luehrman v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., 2 Lea (Tenn.) 425.

But an act which, professing to amend a particular section of a city charter, amends such section and expressly repeals other sections, and adds numerous powers necessary to municipal government, embraces more than one subject and is void. Ex parte Reynolds, 87 Ala. 138; as is an act consolidating several acts incorporating a city and confirming certain ordinances of such city theretofore passed. Brieswick v. Brunswick, 51 Ga. 639; 21 Am. Rep. 240; and an act prescribing a mode by which municipal corporations may surrender or abolish their charters, and also how they may amend their charters. Murphy v. State, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 373; and an act incorporating two towns in different parts of the state. King v. Banks, 61 Ga. 20.

An act enabling municipalities to compensating the owners of real estate taken as a site for county buildings, have been held to be in furtherance of a single object; ¹ also provisions authorizing the removal of a county seat and an issue of bonds to raise funds with which to build a courthouse at the new county seat.² But acts prescribing the manner of chang-borrow money on their bonds, or to issue bonds in aid of works of internal improvements, and to validate bonds already issued for such purposes, embraces but one subject. Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1; Dawson County v. McNamar, 10 Neb. 276; as does an act authorizing a city to extend its indebtedness and validating indebtedness already contracted. Baker v. Seattle, 2 Wash. 576; and an act to enable two towns to issue bonds for a park, People v. Brislin, 80 Ill. 423; and an act consolidating a city and providing for the payment of its debts and for other municipal matters, Louisiana v. Pilsbury, 105 U. S. 278; State v. Pilsbury, 31 La. Ann. 1; and an act in relation to lighting cities and towns, furnishing light, providing for the right of way and assessment of damages, and declaring an emergency. Rushville Gas Co. v. Rushville, 121 Ind. 213; an act granting submerged lands to a city, requiring it to build docks and wharves, authorizing charges by the city for dockage and wharfage, establishing a tide-water basin, providing that the balance of the tract be dedicated to public use, and authorizing abutting owners to erect walls, etc., contains but one subject. Easton, etc., R. Co. v. Central R. Co., 52 N. J. L. 267; as does an act providing for a water supply for a city by a certain water company, and for the municipal taxation of the company, Conery v. New Orleans Water Works Co., 41 La. Ann. 910; an act providing for the election of police commissioners in a city, and the establishment of a police force therein. People v. Whitlock, 92 N. Y. 196; and an act amending a consolidation act, People v. Coleman, 4 N. Y. Supp. 417. See also In re McAdam, 7 N. Y. Supp. 454. An act limiting the time of making claims and bringing suits against municipal corporations, including cities organized under special charters, embraces but one subject. Morgan v. Des Moines, 54 Fed. Rep. 456; as does an act fixing the number of directors in certain cities, and providing for their election and for districting the cities therefor, State v. Miller, 100 Mo. 439;

State v. Macklin (Mo. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 680.

1. County Matters.—Allen v. Tison, 50 Ga. 374.

2. Allen v. Tison, 50 Ga. 374.

An act forming a new county out of old counties is not objectionable because it changes the boundaries of the old counties. Haggard v. Hawkins, 14 Ind. 299.

An act changing the boundary lines between the counties of D, W, and J, and authorizing the removal of the county seat of B county, embraces but one subject. Walker v. Griffith, 60 Ala. 361. So also an act defining the boundaries of counties and providing for the preservation of the peace in such counties. Philpin v. McCarty, 24 Kan. 393. An act "relating to counties and county officers," State v. Page, 12 Neb. 386; relating to township organization of several towns, Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330; authorizing the rebuilding of county bridges and empowering commissioners to borrow money for that purpose, Myers v. Com., 110 Pa. St. 217; authorizing the erection of a courthouse and bridge, Cherokee County v. State, 36 Kan. 337; changing the line between counties and providing for citizenship and apportionment of taxes, Ex parte Upshaw, 45 Ala. 234. See also Tallassee Mfg. Co. v. Glenn, 50 Ala. 489; fixing the salaries and compensation of the officers of a certain county, consolidating certain offices in the county, fixing the salary of the sheriff and other officers, and providing that the district attorney shall act as supervisor of schools, State v. Humboldt County (Nev. 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 974; to legalize the proceedings of a board of supervisors locating and constructing a levee, and to provide for an assessment for benefits, Richman v. Muscatine County, 77 Iowa 513; 14 Am. St. Rep. 308; ratifying an election to certain offices of a city and of two counties, and providing for vacancies in such offices, State v. Price, 50 Ala. 568; treating of both sheriff and commissioners, they having certain duties in common, Com. v. Drewry, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 1; ratifying and

ing parish lines, and removing a parish seat ;¹ locating a county seat, and authorizing supervisors to sell county property ;² providing for transferring the charge of jails from sheriffs to county boards, and for the employment of prisoners, and to regulate their terms of service, have been held to embrace more than one subject.³

It is not always easy to determine whether particular provisions of a statute are incidental and subordinate to the principal subject, or whether they constitute independent subjects. Thus, an act regulating the civil jurisdiction of justices of the peace, police justices, and quarterly courts, and the appellate jurisdiction of circuit courts, and authorizing the quarterly courts to appoint clerks, has been held to embrace but one subject,⁴ while the contrary has been affirmed of an act establishing an inferior court of criminal jurisdiction in a county, and defining the jurisdiction of such court, and the criminal jurisdiction of justices of the peace in the county.⁵

A statute prescribing the punishment for several different crimes embraces but one object, namely, the prevention of the crimes mentioned.⁶

confirming certain orders of a county judge, appointing commissioners to issue bonds and legalizing all proceedings under such orders, Rogers v. Stevens, 86 N. Y. 623; an act legalizing and validating certain irregular proceedings of the town authorities in relation to the building of a bridge does not, in making the value rather than the contract price the measure of compensation and liability for the work, embrace more than one subject. Wrought Iron Bridge Co. v. Attica, 2 N. Y. Supp. 359.

An act to enable the county commissioners of W. county to settle and prevent controversies arising out of the organization thereof, by retaining a town designated by the governor as the temporary seat of said county for five years, and by paying certain claims which accrued before its organization embraces but one subject. State v. Sanders, 42 Kan. 228.

1. Moore v. Police Jury, 32 La. Ann. 1013.

2. Cutlip v. Cahoon County, 3 W. Va. 88.

3. State v. Smith, 47 N. J. L. 200.

4. Courts and Juries.—Allen v. Hall, 14 Bush (Ky.) 85.

• An act redistricting a state, prescribing the number and salaries of district judges, and fixing the place of holding courts, embraces but one subject. State v. Atherton, 19 Nev. 332.

So also an act relating to proceedings by the surrogate court in the city of New York, and to the powers and jurisdiction of the surrogate. In re Bernstein, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 20.

An act carrying into effect "article 116," and providing the qualifications for the selection of competent and intelligent jurors throughout the state, embraces but one subject. State v. Henderson, 32 La. Ann. 779.

5. Ballentine v. Wickersham. An act regulating appeals from justices' and police courts, and officers of the quarterly court, embraces more than one subject. Hind v. Rice, 10 Bush (Ky.) 528. So also an act declaring certain judgments void, granting new trials, and assuming to repeal independent enactments. Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 224.

6. Crimes and Offenses.—Miles v. State, 40 Ala. 39. An act regulating the manufacture, transportation, use and sale of explosives, and providing the punishment for the improper use of the same, embraces but one subject, Hronek v. People, 134 Ill. 139; 23 Am. St. Rep. 652. So also an act fixing the time for the opening and closing of saloons and gaming-houses, Ex parte Livingstone, 20 Nev. 282; an act providing that "any person who shall be drunk in any highway, or in any public place or in his own house, or in any private building, disturbing his family or others,

An act providing for the registration of voters in certain cities, governing elections in such cities, and creating the office of recorder of voters, has been held to embrace but one subject.¹ On the other hand, an act providing for the incorporation of merchants' mutual insurance companies, and regulation of the business of insurance by merchants' and manufacturers' insurance companies, has been held bad.² An act prescribing penalties for the unlawful manufacture, sale, and keeping for sale, of intoxicating liquors, and regulating the sale, barter, and giving away of such liquors for medicinal, scientific, and mechanical purposes, embraces but one subject.³

In statutes for the relief of laborers, employés, and mechanics, these rules have been applied.⁴

The requirement that the act shall contain but one "object" does not intend that an act contemplating the accomplishment of shall be guilty of a misdemeanor;" State v. Brown, 38 Kan. 390; an act for the protection of public health, and regulating the practice of medicine, Harding v. People, 10 Colo. 387; an act regulating the sale or disposal of opium and prohibiting the keeping of places of resort for smoking or otherwise using opium, State v. Ah Sam, 15 Nev. 27; 37 Am. Rep. 454; an act to regulate conditional sales of personal property, providing for filing, and making a violation of the act a misdemeanor. Weil v. State, 46 Ohio St. 450.

1. Elections.—Ewing v. Hoblitzelle, 85 Mo. 64, citing Sedgw. Stat. and Const. L. 521, n.

An act providing for the registration of voters, and prescribing the use to be made of the registration list, embraces but one subject. Eureka v. Davis, 21 Kan. 578.

2. Insurance.—Skinner v. Wilhelm, 63 Mich. 568. An act providing for the incorporation of mutual fire insurance companies, defining their powers and duties, and repealing prior acts upon the same subject, contains but one subject. Tolford v. Church, 66 Mich. 431.

3. Intoxicating Liquors.—State v. Haas (N. Dak. 1891), 50 N. W. Rep. 254, citing Hronek v. People, 134 Ill. 139; 23 Am. St. Rep. 652; Evansville v. Bayard, 39 Ind. 450; Ramagnano v. Crook, 85 Ala. 226; Fahey v. State, 27 Tex. App. 146; 11 Am. St. Rep. 182; Hart v. Judge, 50 N. J. L. 585; Easton, etc., R. Co. v. Central R. Co., 52 N. J. L. 267; State v. Madson, 43 Minn. 438; People v. Haug (Mich. 1888), 37 N. W. Rep. 21.

An act prohibiting the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors and providing for the punishment of an intoxicated person, embraces but one subject. State v. Barrett, 27 Kan. 213. So also an act prohibiting all sophistication and adulteration of wines and intoxicating liquors, and to prevent fraud in the manufacture and sale thereof. Ex parte Kohler, 74 Cal. 38.

In Fahey v. State, 27 Tex. App. 158; 11 Am. St. Rep. 182, it was held that an act levying an occupation tax, and providing for issuance of a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors, did not contain more than one subject, and was therefore valid; and the court observed, that if there were but one subject in the act, the fact that the act had more than one object would not render it obnoxious to the constitution.

An act prohibiting the sale of liquors within a specified distance from two churches, situated in different counties, embraces but one subject. Block v. State, 66 Ala. 493.

4. Employes; Laborers; Mechanic's Liens.—An act for the relief of laborers and employés containing a clause exempting wages from garnishee process, embraces but one subject. Farley v. Dowe, 5 Ala. 326. So also an act giving laborers and material-men a lien upon a railway for materials furnished and labor performed on such railway. Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Frey, 30 Neb. 790.

Creating a mechanic's lien, and providing that a person furnishing materials for a building on the land of a married woman, who has not signed a building contract, may remove the materials furnished if she refuses to recogmore than one ultimate end shall be invalid.¹ But an act incorporating three distinct corporations is bad.²

According to the weight of authority one act may incorporate a railroad company and authorize municipal aid in its behalf.³ The same statute may authorize the construction of a railroad, the purchase of land, and the leasing of a ferry franchise;⁴ but an act empowering a railroad company to construct a road and lease it, and at the same time authorizing another road to take the nize the lien, and providing that the proper owner may demand indemnity bonds. Cole Mfg. Co. v. Fall, 90 Tenn. 466.

1. Provisions consolidating a monument committee and a military institute with a female college, the whole to stand as a monument for a particular purpose, embrace but one subject. Tadlock v. Eccles, 20 Tex. 782; 73 Am. Dec. 213.

An act changing the name of a trust company and amending and defining its powers embraces but one subject. Gans v. Carter (Md. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 663; so also an act to authorize a water company to increase its capital stock, and to contract with the city for a supply of water. Utica Waterworks v. Utica, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 426; and revising the laws providing for the incorporation of manufacturing companies (except for the manufacture of salt) and of mercantile companies. Jenking v. Osmun, 79 Mich. 305.

2. Ex parte Connor, 51 Ga. 571. In this case the act provided for the establishment of three separate military organizations. After referring to the "single-subject" clause of the constitution, the court, by McCay, J., said: "This act has for its avowed purpose the creation of separate corporate bodies, and, as we think, comes exactly within the intent and scope of this prohibition. The evident intent was to prevent what is commonly known as 'log rolling,' passing through a measure not on its own merits, by combining it with other measures, each of which has a certain strength, and thus pulling them through by virtue of their combined strength."

3. Railroad Companies.—Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Jefferson County, 29 Fed. Rep. 306. In that case Jackson, J., delivering the opinion of the court, after affirming the validity of the statute, said: "The decisions of the highest tribunals in the states of Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin, are to the same effect upon a similar provision in their respective constitutions. In some other states—California and possibly Missouri—the courts hold differently; but not only is the weight of authority in the highest tribunals in the states against them, but the law is, we think, well settled otherwise." An act authorizing several towns to issue bonds in aid of a railroad company embraces but one subject. Binz v. Weber, 81 Ill. 291. See also San Antonio v. Mehaffy, 96 U. S. 312; Unity v. Burrage, 103 U. S. 458; Belleville, etc., R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20; 58 Am. Dec. 589; Ross v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 127; Mahomet v. Quackenbush, 117 U. S. 508; Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147; Jonesboro v. Cairo, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 192; Otoe County v. Baldwin, 111 U. S. 1; Ackley School Dist. v. Hall, 113 U. S. 135. See also Hardenbergh v. Van Keuren, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 43; Powell v. Brunswick County, 88 Va. 707.

4. Belleville, etc., R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20; 58 Am. Dec. 589; an act revising the law providing for the incorporation of railroad companies, regulating their management, and fixing their duties and liabilities, embraces but one subject. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456; so also an act requiring section-masters of a railroad to give notice of injuries to livestock, providing for the appointment of appraisers and the collection of appraisements, and making railroads liable for all injuries to stock upon or near their unfenced track, Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Crider (Tenn. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 618; so also an act requiring section-masters of railroads to give notice of injuries to livestock; to provide for appraisements and collections, and to make railroads liable for such injuries, Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Crider (Tenn. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 618; and an act relating to mortgages against preferred stock in, and the delivery of goods by, railroad companies, Attorney Gen'l lease, embraces more than one subject, and is void so far as it authorizes the acceptance of the lease.¹

An act authorizing school districts to borrow money and issue bonds, legalizing bonds already issued, and providing that school orders shall carry interest, in certain cases, embraces but one subject.² So an act setting aside lands for educational purposes and payment of the public debt, embraces but one subject;³ as does an act providing for the reorganization of a normal school, authorizing a sale of its lands, and providing that no further appropriation shall be made.⁴

Cases relating to street and highway acts are set forth in the note.⁵

v. Joy, 55 Mich. 94; and an act authorizing a street railway company to extend its railroad track to certain streets, and providing that such company might take a lease of all, or any portion, of a certain other street railroad and extension. Central Crosstown R. Co. v. Twenty-third Street R. Co., 54 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 168.

1. Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530.

An act authorizing a railroad to declare a dividend, and to lay an additional track, embraces more than one subject. Philadelphia Pass. R. Co. v. Union Pass. R. Co., 9 Phila. (Pa.) 495; so also an act to facilitate the construction of a railroad, providing for its consolidation with another road, taxation of its property, and bridging the Mississippi river. Winona, etc., R. Co. v. Waldron, 11 Minn. 515; 88 Am. Dec. 100.

2. Schools.—Ackley School Dist. v. Hall, 113 U. S. 135.

3. Day Land, etc., Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526.

4. State v. Cross, 38 Kan. 696.

5. Streets and Highways—Single Subjects.—It has been held proper to include all or any number of roads in a township in a scheme of improvement, and unite them in one act. State v. Union Tp., 44 N. J. L. 599; In re Sackett, etc., Streets, 74 N. Y. 95.

An act providing for the taking of private property for public use, and for opening, extending, widening and straightening streets and alleys in a certain city, embraces but one subject. Detroit v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 63 Mich. 712; so also an act regulating roads and highways and containing a provision for bridges, Fletcher v. Oliver, 25 Ark. 289.

Where the subject of an act is vacation of streets and alleys, the fact that the streets and alleys to be vacated are not contiguous, nor all in the same town or city, will not make the subject of the act dual, nor render it void. Wichita v. Burleigh, 36 Kan. 34.

The New York Laws of 1884, 1885, and 1886 relating to underground construction of electric wires and conductors, in cities exceeding 500,000 inhabitants, and the manner in which the provisions of the several acts in relation to location and removal of wires and conductors shall be applied and enforced, embrace but one subject. People v. Squire, 107 N. Y. 593; 1 Am. St. Rep. 893. See also Paterson R. Co. v. Grundy (N. J. 1893), 26 Atl. Rep. 788.

An act prohibiting the collection of tolls on turnpike roads and declaring the charters of such roads forfeited in such cases, embraces but one subject. Crawfordsville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Fletcher, 104 Ind. 97. So also an act authorizing a city to open streets through a cemetery, repealing prior prohibitory acts, authorizing the removal of bodies interred therein; and providing for the disposition of the land after removal of the bodies. Catholic Cathedral Church v. Manning, 72 Md. 116; and an act authorizing the construction of tram-railways for the carriage of freight, and an amendment thereof authorizing the construction of such a road for the carriage of passengers. Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 646.

It has been held the improvement of separate highways should be provided for by separate acts. People v. Denahy, 20 Mich. 349.

An act to authorize the opening and paving of Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Norris streets embraces more than one subject. Com. v. Dickinson, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 561; so also an act authorizing the grading of an avenue and changing

So in the notes will be found collected the cases upon acts relating to taxation.¹

VII. AMENDMENT—1. General Rules.—The legislature has general power to amend statutes,² but an amendatory act, to be valid the grade of intersecting streets so as to conform to that of the avenue. In re Blodgett, 89 N. Y. 392; reversing 27 Hun (N. Y.) 12; and an act authorizing cities and towns to acquire by purchase or condemnation the rights of turnpike companies in their streets, and also authorizes the sale of any portion of the turnpike or its franchises to any city, township, person, or corporation. Grand Rapids v. Burlingame (Mich. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 620.

The New York act of 1868 authorized the transmission of letter packages and merchandise between New York and Brooklyn, by pneumatic tubes. An amendatory act authorized the enlargement of the tubes so as to admit of the transportation of passengers. It was held that the amendatory act embraced more than one subject, and that its object was not sufficiently expressed by a mere reference in the title to the act amended. Astor v. Arcade R. Co., 113 N. Y. 93.

1. Taxation.—Provisions for the assessment of property and the levying of taxes thereon, and for the collection of taxes theretofore or thereafter levied, constitute but one general subject. Auditor Gen'l v. Stiles, 83 Mich. 462; Distinguishing People v. Denahy, 20 Mich. 349; Auditor Gen'l v. Monroe County, 36 Mich. 70, 76; Nester v. Busch, 64 Mich. 657; Thomas v. Collins, 58 Mich. 64. See also Columbus S. R. Co. v. Wright, 89 Ga. 574; Georgia Midland, etc., R. Co. v. State, 89 Ga. 597; Cannon v. Mathes, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 504; In re Com'rs, 49 N. J. L. 488; Miller v. Hurford, 13 Neb. 19.

An act creating a board of commissioners of roads and revenues in the counties of F. B. D. S. & G. embraces but one subject. Speir v. Groover, 80 Ga. 581. So also an act providing for the construction of an insane asylum, and that money used for that purpose shall be taken from the school fund and interest-bearing state bonds deposited in its place, and for a tax to pay such bonds. Klein v. Kinkead, 16 Nev. 194; and an act providing for fees for the collection of taxes, and a payment of a part of the fees into the county treasury, Ream v. Siskiyou County, 36 Cal. 620; and an act providing for the construction and protection of drains and for the organization of drainage districts, Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 504; and an act levying a tax on dogs, providing for the assessment and collection thereof, and making the failure to pay the same a misdemeanor, Ex parte Mabry, 5 Tex. App. 93; and an act providing for the establishment of a levee district, and means for such establishment, Excelsior Planting Co. v. Greene, 39 La. Ann. 455; and an act confirming, reducing, and levying certain assessments in a city applicable to several streets, In re Van Antwerp, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 423; and an act legalizing assessments of taxes in a certain city and county and ratifying and confirming a resolution of the board of supervisors in respect to such taxes. San Francisco v. Spring Valley Water Works, 54 Cal. 574.

2. An amendment remodeling a whole act, substituting new sections in part and adding others, is permissible if the new matter is not foreign to the title of the amended act. Underwood v. McDuffee, 15 Mich. 361; 93 Am. Dec. 194; Gibson v. State, 16 Fla. 291.

Where an act was passed laying out a boulevard and providing that no railway should be constructed thereon by any person or corporation unless authorized by a special act of the legislature and thereafter by a change in the constitution, it was provided that powers of that class should not be granted by special act, it was held that the legislature had power to amend the original act, so as to permit a corporation organized under the general corporation law of the state, to build a railroad on the said boulevard. Spofford v. Southern Boulevard R. Co., 4 N. Y. Supp. 388.

A private person acquires no vested right in a penalty under a penal statute by merely suing for it and the legislature may amend or repeal a law imposing the penalty as well after as before suit brought to recover it. Mix v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 116 Ill. 502.

The right to amend existing special charters of municipal corporations, even though local legislation, is reserved by as such, must relate to an existing statute, and not to one which is non-existent,¹ or has been repealed,² or declared unconstitutional.³

A statute, if complete and original in itself, may stand as an independent enactment, although it purports to be an amendatory act and is insufficient as such.⁴ Even though part of an amendatory act may be void for uncertainty, the rest may stand, unless the two parts are inseparable and mutually dependent on one another.⁵

2. Form—a. IN GENERAL.—An amendatory act refers usually to the title, chapter, and time of passage of the act to be amended, the constitution of Colorado. People v. Londoner, 13 Colo. 303.

In Harland v. Territory, 3 Wash. Ter. 131, an act entitled, "An act to amend section 3050 of chapter 238 of the Code of Washington Territory," was held to be void on the ground that the code referred to in the title was a private and unauthentic compilation of the laws of Washington, and because there was no such section known to the laws of the territory as the one sought to be amended.

The "Compiled Statutes" of the state of Nebraska, being printed under authority of law and supposed to contain a correct compilation of the laws in force in the state when the book was published, are a standard book, and the legislature in amending a statute may refer to a particular part of a statute set forth in this work. All that is required in such case is a reasonable degree of certainty as to the statute to be amended. In re White, 33 Neb. 812.

But in Fenton v. Yule, 27 Neb. 758, the court said: "The act to be amended after all is the act enrolled by the secretary of state and on file in his office; and all references to compilations or biennial publications as session laws are matters merely of convenience and it often happens that that which is used for convenience fails of its purpose in a greater or lesser degree." See also State v. Partridge, 28 Neb. 748.

In these two cases it was held that though the section of the law to be amended was printed in a foot-note to the compiled laws of the state with a query as to its being in force, a law amending it was valid on the ground that the law to be amended was the enrolled act on file in the office of the secretary of state.

1. Draper v. Falley, 33 Ind. 465.

2. State v. Benton, 33 Neb. 823; State

v. Benton, 33 Neb. 834; Wall v. Garrison, 11 Colo. 515; Blakemore v. Dolan, 50 Ind. 194; Marion County v. Smith, 52 Ind. 420; Brokaw v. Gibson County, 73 Ind. 543; McIntyre v. Marine, 93 Ind. 193; Feibleman v. State, 98 Ind. 516; Hall v. Craig, 125 Ind. 529.

So where a later act attempted to amend an earlier one, previously repealed by implication, the copying of parts of the earlier act into the amendment was held not to re-enact it. Stingle v. Nevel, 9 Oregon 62; Maxwell v. State, 89 Ala. 150. Compare Pond v. Maddox, 38 Cal. 574.

But where the constitution provided that a statute amended by a subsequent one should be thereby repealed, it was held that a later amendment to the original act after it had been once amended was valid and the first amendatory act thereby repealed. State v. Warford, 84 Ala. 15; Wilkinson v. Ketler, 59 Ala. 306; see Blake v. Brackett, 47 Me. 28.

In Massachusetts, where a section of a statute was superseded and impliedly repealed by a subsequent enactment covering the whole field of the original section and a statute was passed amending the original section so repealed "to read as follows," again enacting a provision covering the whole ground covered by the original section, it was held that the last statute was valid, though it purported to amend a repealed statute, the decision being based on the ground that the legislature evidently intended to amend the amendatory act rather than the original one. Com. v. Kenneson, 143 Mass. 418.

3. Grubbs v. State, 24 Ind. 299; Igoe v. State, 14 Ind. 239.

4. Gandy v. State, 86 Ala. 20; State v. Bennett (Mo. 1888), 11 S.W. Rep. 264.

5. Campau v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 275.

in the absence of a particular constitutional requirement as to form.¹ An error in the reference is immaterial where the intent is apparent;² but if the error is so glaring that the act to be amended cannot be ascertained definitely, the amendatory act is void for uncertainty.³ Usually, however, there is a constitutional provision which governs the form of amendatory enactments.⁴

b. BY REFERENCE TO TITLE.—Many state constitutions provide that no act shall be amended by reference to its title only; but that the section altered or amended shall be enacted or published at length.⁵ Usually these provisions are deemed man-

1. See Garland v. Hickey, 75 Wis. 178; Land, etc., Co. v. Brown, 73 Wis. 294; People v. Hatter, 22 N. Y. Supp. 688.

2. School Directors v. School Directors, 73 Ill. 249; Madison, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Reynolds, 3 Wis. 287; People v. King, 28 Cal. 265; Lane v. Missoula County, 6 Mont. 473; Carruthers v. Madison County, 6 Mont. 482.

It was held in Saunders v. Pensacola, 24 Fla. 226, that an error in the amendatory act in stating the date of the approval of the former statute did not render void the amendatory act.

Where a law possessing all the requisites of a valid statute is passed, containing clear requirements capable of being carried into effect in connection with an existing general law on the same subject, a mistaken reference to a previous statute will not render the law void. School Directors v. School Directors, 73 Ill. 249.

So where the section referred to did not express the legislative intent but another section was found which did express that intent, the reference was treated as having been made to the latter section. People v. King, 28 Cal. 266.

Under the constitution of Missouri the prefatory part of an act of the legislature is not an essential part of the act, and such prefatory part of an amendatory act, which states how the original statute is to be amended, is not required by the constitution, and is not an essential part of such act, and it is plain that the dates in the non-essential part must yield to those in the essential part, where the act, as amended, is set out in full. Scott v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 38 Mo. App. 523.

3. Murphey v. Ehey (Md. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 993. In this case it was attempted to amend some section of a previous act by changing it so as to read as set out in the amendatory act, but it not appearing from anything in the latter act for what provision the proposed reading was to be substituted, the latter act was held void for uncertainty.

4. See various state constitutions.

Recital of Title of Act Amended.—In Tennessee the constitution requires that an amendatory act shall, in its caption or otherwise, recite the title of the law amended, and statutes not meeting this requirement are void. State v. Gaines, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 734; Ransome v. State (Tenn. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 310; Burnett v. Turner, 87 Tenn. 124; State v. Runnells (Tenn. 1893), 21 S. W. Rep. 665.

A provision in an act amendatory of an act relating to horse races, that the amendment "shall apply to trotting and pacing as well as running races," is sufficient as a recital of the title or substance of the amended act. Ransome v. State (Tenn. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 310.

The provision in the text does not apply to statutes which are amendatory by implication only. Poe v. State, 85 Tenn. 495.

5. See various state constitutions. The purpose of these provisions is given by Cooley, J., in People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 497: "The mischief designed to be remedied was the enactment of amendatory statutes in terms so blind that legislators themselves were sometimes deceived in regard to their effects, and the public, from the difficulty in making the necessary examination and comparison, failed to become apprised of the changes made in the laws. An amendatory act which purported only to insert certain words, or to substitute one phrase for another in an act or section which was only referred to, but not published, was well calculated to mislead the careless as to its effect, and was, perhaps, sometimes datory, so that a disregard of them renders the amendatory act void.¹ It has been held sometimes that the amendatory act may stand if the legislative intention is clear, although the reference drawn in that form for the express purpose. Endless confusion was thus introduced into the law, and the constitution wisely prohibited such legislation."

"The evil aimed at by such clause was not the difficulty of ascertaining the legislative will, when amendatory legislation affected its purpose by mere reference, but, as has been frequently pointed out in this court, the opportunity of imposition and fraud on legislators and the public afforded by such modes of legislation. To prevent this a limitation was imposed, not on the power of the legislature, but upon the means by which it might exercise its power." Magie, J., in State v. Trenton, 53 N. J. L. 570.

It was contended that under the section of the constitution of Texas declaring that "no law shall be revived or amended by reference to its title: but in such case the act revived or the section or sections amended shall be re-enacted and published at length," the legislature had no power to alter or in any way change the provisions of the previous law except by amendment enacted in accordance with the section of the constitution. The court said: "It would, perhaps, have been the better way to have enacted said section as an amendment to the code; but we are not aware of any constitutional requirement to that effect or of any constitutional limitation upon the power of the legislature that would render the section in question invalid." Washington v. State, 28 Tex. App. 411.

In Georgia, the constitutional provision is "no law or section of the code shall be amended or revived by mere reference to its title or to the number of the section of the code, but the amending or repealing act shall distinctly describe the law to be amended or repealed as well as the alteration to be made." An amending act was passed describing the section to be amended and the alteration to be made as follows: "Be it enacted by the general assembly that from and after the passage of this act, section 3623 of Code of 1873, which provides for appeals in forma pauperis be amended by adding after the words 'in any suit at law' in the second line thereof, the words 'or proceeding in the court of ordinary.'" This description was held sufficient, but the court expressed a grave doubt as to its expediency. Fite v. Black, 85 Ga. 413.

1. Todd v. State, 85 Ala. 339; Rogers v. Torbut, 58 Ala. 523; Bolling v. Le Grand, 87 Ala. 482; Stewart v. Hale County, 82 Ala. 209; Tuskaloosa Bridge Co. v. Olmstead, 41 Ala. 9; Judson v. Bessemer, 87 Ala. 240; Watkins v. Eureka Springs, 49 Ark. 131; Smith v. State, 29 Fla. 408; Walker v. Caldwell, 4 La. Ann. 297; Duverge v. Salter, 5 La. Ann. 94; State v. Hackett, 5 La. Ann. 91; Kohn v. Carrollton Tp., 10 La. Ann. 719; Arnoult v. New Orleans, 11 La. Ann. 56; Halher v. Caldwell, 4 La. Ann. 297; State v. Miller, 100 Mo. 439; Smith v. State, 34 Neb. 689; State v. Corner, 22 Neb. 265; 3 Am. St. Rep. 267; Portland v. Stock, 2 Oregon 70; Com. v. Mercer, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 461; McKeever v. Victor Oil Co., 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 284. See also Johnson v. Martin, 75 Tex. 33; Evansville v. State, 118 Ind. 426.

Where an act is expressly amendatory and is declared to be an intended amendment to previous legislation, it must conform to the provision of the constitution which provides that "no law shall be amended by reference to its title only, but the section or sections amended shall be inserted at length or it will be void." State v. Trenton, 53 N. J. L. 566; citing Campbell v. Board of Pharmacy, 45 N. J. L. 241; 47 N. J. L. 347.

The said clause of the constitution is both prohibitory and mandatory. It forbids amendment by mere reference to title and enjoins the insertion of the section or sections amended at length. Evernham v. Hulit, 45 N. J. L. 53.

In Haring v. State, 51 N. J. L. 386, the court, by Van Syckel, J., observed, in respect to an amendatory act under consideration: "It attempts to amend the first section of the act of 1880, and to restrict its application, by reference to its title without setting out at length the section as amended. The act itself does not show what the law is to be. That can be ascertained only by reference to the prior law. . . . It is not an amendment by implication but a direct alteration of the previously is merely to sections of the act which it is designed to amend;¹ but this has been questioned even when permitted.²

Even where the stricter rule is followed, if certain sections only of a statute are to be amended, the whole of the statute, including unamended as well as amended sections, need not be set out,³ but only the latter.⁴ It is a sufficient compliance with the re-existing law by reference to its title in order to conceal the change it was intended to effect. The object of the constitution amended was to show the law-maker the true meaning of a proposed enactment without the necessity of resorting to the old law." Citing State v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 123; Colwell v. Chamberlin, 43 N. J. L. 388; Evernham v. Hulit, 45 N. J. L. 53; Campbell v. Board of Pharmacy, 45 N. J. L. 241; State v. McNeal, 48 N. J. L. 407.

Reference to dates, titles, and subjects of amended acts is insufficient. Pittsburgh's Petition, 138 Pa. St. 401.

A provision in a law clearly amendatory in character that a certain act mentioned by title, "be amended by adding thereto as follows," is invalid as an amendment by reference to title only. Barrett's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 486.

The constitutional requirement is said to have for its object "the prevention of obscurity, confusion and uncertainty in the laws," and to "deal with such amendments of existing legislation as change the application, force, or effect of an act or a portion thereof." It was held therefore that an act "amending the Revised Statutes and the General Laws of Idaho of the 15th session," by changing the word "territory" to "state," and "comptroller" to "auditor," did not change the application, force, or effect of the sections amended, and was not unconstitutional. Gilbert v. Moody (Idaho 1891), 25 Pac. Rep. 1092.

1. People v. Judge, 39 Mich. 195; Callaghan v. Chipman, 59 Mich. 616; People v. Detroit, 38 Mich. 636; People v. Pritchard, 21 Mich. 236; Fenton v. Yule, 27 Neb. 758; State v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 128.

So an act to amend sections of a previous act which are designated will be sustained; and if it was sought to amend sections not in the act to be amended the latter sections will be rejected as surplusage. Miller v. Hurford, 13 Neb. 17; State v. Laughlin (Mo. 1882), 14 Cent. L. J. 454; Kansas v. Payne, 71 Mo. 159; State v. Ranson, 73 Mo. 78.

In Nebraska it is said that all the law requires is that the amendatory statute shall be definite and certain as to the statute amended and germane to the title of the original act, and this we think may be accomplished as well by designating the chapter in a compiled statute as by referring to the act by its title. The legislature alone decides upon the title of an act or an amendment thereto, and it will not be declared unconstitutional unless it is clearly so. Dogge v. State, 17 Neb. 143; State v. Babcock, 23 Neb. 128.

2. Callaghan v. Chipman, 59 Mich. 616; People v. Judge, 39 Mich. 195.

"The practice of amending by reference to sections instead of by reference to subjects or to the entire statute, is one which creates a great deal of mischief and in no way carries out the real design of the constitution and is of no practical service in most cases in indicating what changes are to be made or what precise point is in view. It is liable to lead to dangerous ambiguities." Campbell, C. J., in People v. Judge, 39 Mich. 195.

3. Wilkinson v. Ketler, 59 Ala. 309; Arnoult v. New Orleans, 11 La. Ann. 56; Callahan v. Jennings, 16 Colo. 471; Edwards v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 13 Colo. 559.

An act amending an original act concerning the limits and boundaries of a certain city by re-enacting so much of the original act as governed the said limits and boundaries, was valid though the whole of the original act was not re-enacted. Boonville v. Trigg, 46 Mo. 288.

4. Martinsville v. Frieze, 33 Ind. 509. "But can a section of a statute be amended without setting forth the whole section as amended? The constitutional provision furnishes a conclusive answer to this question. That requires the 'section' (where it is a section only that is amended) to be set forth as amended. The term 'section' means nothing less than the whole section, however long it may be, or into however many clauses it may be divided. It has been the custom, in modern times, in England, and the United States, and probably all other counquirement to set out the law as amended, without reciting the old law as it stood before the amendment,¹ or specifying the changes made.²

The requirement does not apply to supplemental acts not in tries where the science of legislation has made any considerable progress, to divide legislative enactments into sections; and this was undoubtedly had in view when the constitution was adopted. The framers of that instrument intended that upon the amendment of a statute, nothing less than the whole section as amended should be set forth, having in view the custom of thus dividing statutes into sections. Were it to be held that because a section happened to be divided into different clauses, the requirements of the constitution might be dispensed with, and a clause substituted for a section in setting forth the amendment, the door would be opened to other evasions of the constitutional requirement." By Worden, J., in Martinsville v. Frieze, 33 Ind. 509.

"It was intended that each amendment and each revisal should speak for itself; should stand independent and apart from the act revised or the section amended. It was therefore provided that in such cases if the object was to revise an act, it should be re-enacted throughout; and if the object was to amend an act, then the section amended should be re-enacted and published." Arnoult v. New Orleans, 11 La. Ann. 56.

1. People v. McCallum, 1 Neb. 182; Martinsville v. Frieze, 33 Ind. 507; Bush v. Indianapolis, 120 Ind. 476; Feibleman v. State, 98 Ind. 516; Greencastle, etc., Turnpike Co. v. State, 28 Ind. 382; People v. Pritchard, 21 Mich. 236; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Mok v. Detroit Bldg., etc., Assoc., 30 Mich. 511; State v. Duval County, 23 Fla. 506; State v. Draper, 47 Mo. 29; Boonville v. Trigg, 46 Mo. 288; State v. Chambers, 70 Mo. 625; Montclair v. New York, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. Eq. 436; State v. American Forcite Powder Mfg. Co., 50 N. J. L. 75; State v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 123; Colwell v. Chamberlain, 43 N. J. L. 387, distinguishing Evernham v. Hulit, 45 N. J. L. 53; The Borrowdale, 39 Fed. Rep. 376; overruling Langdon v. Applegate, 5 Ind. 327; Littler v. Smiley, 9 Ind. 118; Portland v. Stock, 2 Oregon 69; Rogers v. State, 6 Ind. 31; Kennon

v. Shull, 9 Ind. 154; Armstrong v. Berreman, 13 Ind. 426; Wilkins v. Miller, 9 Ind. 102.

"In view of our former decisions, on which the legislative department has repeatedly acted, we adhere to the ruling that where the amended law is germane to the original one, and complete in itself, so as to show at a glance the full scope and terms of the amendment, the fact that the old sections are not republished or recited in the new law does not make it unconstitutional." Barclay, J., in State v. Bennett, 102 Mo. 364.

"As we understand this clause of the constitution, it requires, in the case of an amendment of a section or sections of a prior statute, that the new act shall contain not the section or sections which it proposes to amend, but the section or sections in full as it purports to amend them. That is, it requires not a recital of the old section, but a full statement in terms of the new one. Such has been the almost uniform legislative construction given to this clause; and a different judicial construction would invalidate nine-tenths of the amendatory acts of state legislation passed since 1850." Scott, J., in Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 602. In this case it was held that an act "to enable qualified voters of this state in the military service of this state or of the United States to exercise the right of suffrage," was not amendatory of previously existing election laws and therefore it did not operate to repeal them. Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 602.

If, however, the former provision, which is amended, is recited in the new enactment, it will be regarded as surplusage; and a mistake made in such recital does not render the new act void as in contravention of the clause of the constitution. Draper v. Falley, 33 Ind. 465.

2. Morrison v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 96 Mo. 602; State v. Chambers, 70 Mo. 626; State v. Miller, 100 Mo. 439.

Where the title of an act shows that it is amendatory of a prior act, the fact that the words "amend" or "amendment," are not embraced in the body of any way altering or modifying the original act,¹ to those merely adding new sections to an existing statute without modifying it,² nor to acts, complete and perfect in themselves, not purporting to be amendatory, which by implication amend other legislation on the same subject.³ But where the act is not complete in itself, but in its effect is simply and clearly amendatory of a former statute, it falls directly within the constitutional inhibition and is void. Nor does it matter whether the new statute by its title or in the body of the act is assumed to be amendatory or not; it is enough if it clearly has that effect.⁴

the act will not affect the validity of its provisions. Ballou v. Black, 17 Neb. 389.

The constitutional provision does not require that when a section is amended the act amending it shall recite or show on its face that it does so or that it shall in any manner indicate that such section previously existed. Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 74.

But in Georgia it is prescribed by the constitution that the alteration to be made shall also be described. Georgia Code, § 5076.

1. State v. Hancock, 54 N. J. L. 393; Bradley, etc., Co. v. Loving, 54 N. J. L. 227; Lockhart v. Troy, 48 Ala. 579.

2. Edwards v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 13 Colo. 559; Boonville v. Trigg, 46 Mo. 288; The Borrowdale, 39 Fed. Rep. 376; State v. Thruston, 92 Mo. 325; 1 Am. St. Rep. 720; State v. Chambers, 70 Mo. 625; Morrison v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 96 Mo. 602; State v. Hendrix, 98 Mo. 374; In re White, 33 Neb. 812.

Under the constitution of Texas, providing that no law shall be amended by reference to its title but that any section amended shall be published at length, an act of the legislature authorizing municipal corporations to take control of their public schools, is not unconstitutional. So held on the ground that the act did not amend the city charter but only added to it. Werner v. Galveston (Tex. 1888), 7 S. W. Rep. 726.

3. State v. Trenton, 53 N. J. L. 571; Evernham v. Hulit, 45 N. J. L. 53; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 496; Underwood v. McDuffee, 15 Mich. 361; 95 Am. Dec. 194; People v. Wands, 23 Mich. 385; Swartout v. Michigan Air Line R. Co., 24 Mich. 399; Mok v. Detroit Bldg., etc., Assoc., 30 Mich. 511; Davis v. State, 7 Md. 152; 61 Am. Dec. 331; Stricklett v. State, 31 Neb. 677; Smith v. State, 34 Neb. 689; School Directors v. School Directors, 135 Ill. 464; People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 396;

Timm v. Harrison, 109 Ill. 593; Ex parte Pollard, 40 Ala. 100; Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 41; Branham v. Lange, 16 Ind. 497; State v. Crost, 38 Kan. 696; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573; Baum v. Raphael, 57 Cal. 361; Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 74; Scales v. State, 47 Ark. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 768; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403; Home Ins. Co. v. Taxing Dist., 4 Lea (Tenn.) 644; Ballentine v. Pulas-ki, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 633; State v. Geiger, 65 Mo. 306; Poe v. State, 85 Tenn. 495; Lake v. State, 18 Fla. 501; Anderson v. Com., 18 Gratt. (Va.) 295; Ware v. St. Louis Bagging, etc., Co., 47 Ala. 667; Fleischner v. Chadwick, 5 Oregon 152; State v. Cain, 8 W. Va. 720; Falconer v. Robinson, 46 Ala. 340.

In People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 496, it was said: "If, whenever a new statute is passed, it is necessary that all prior statutes, modified by it by implication should be re-enacted and published at length as modified, then a large portion of the whole code of laws of the state would require to be republished at every session, and parts of it several times over, until, from mere immensity of material, it would be impossible to tell what the law was. If, because an act establishing a police government modifies the powers and duties of sheriffs, constables, water and sewer commissioners, marshals, mayors and justices, and imposes new duties upon the executive and the citizen, it has thereby become necessary to re-enact and republish the various laws relating to them all as now modified, we shall find, before the act is completed, that it not only embraces a large portion of the general laws of the state, but also that it has become obnoxious to the other provisions referred to because embracing a large number of objects, only one of which can be covered by its title."

4. Smails v. White, 4 Neb. 353; Sov-

An act which attempts to extend the application of a pre-existing law by reference to its title only is invalid under some constitutions.¹ But an act complete in itself may provide for ancillary proceedings to accomplish the purposes expressed in the act or adopt a rule of construction, by a reference to general laws on the subject, without violating this constitutional provision.² The ereign v. State, 7 Neb. 409; Stricklett v. State, 31 Neb. 674; In re House Roll 284, 31 Neb. 505.

1. Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co., 122 Pa. St. 627; Beard v. Wilson, 52 Ark. 290; Watkins v. Eureka Springs, 49 Ark. 131; Bay Shell-road Co. v. O'Donnell, 87 Ala. 376; Barnhill v. Teague (Ala. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 444.

An act which amends the prohibitory part of a license law so as to include alcohol within its prohibition, and then declares that the act shall have operation in every part of the state, irrespective of other prohibitory acts, is not an extension of the provisions of the license law by reference merely. Baird v. State, 52 Ark. 329.

But the repeal of the exception in a statute, although it practically extended the operation of its provisions to the class previously excepted, does not render it necessary to re-enact the general provisions, nor to continue them in force. Scales v. State, 47 Ark. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 768.

An act permitting the impounding of straying animals provided that in such case "the person taking up the same shall proceed as though such animal was astray and in accordance with the laws provided in the case of estrays." This was held to be a violation of the constitutional provision. Barnhill v. Teague (Ala. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 444; Bay Shell-Road Co. v. O'Donnell, 87 Ala. 376.

Acts of Pennsylvania, 1887, extending and conferring the benefit of the acts of 1836 and 1845, in relation to mechanics' liens, to a large class of claimants without the re-enactment of a single one of the provisions of the acts so extended, and by a reference to their titles only, is invalid, the court saying: "It would be difficult to imagine a plainer violation of the constitutional provision that 'no law shall be revived, amended, extended or conferred by reference to its title only.'" Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co., 122 Pa. St. 627.

A provision that certain sections of a volume of compiled laws shall apply to sales of real estate under decrees in chancery in like manner as to sales of real estate under execution, is void under the constitutional provisions that no act shall be extended by reference to title only. Beard v. Wilson, 52 Ark. 298.

In New York and New Jersey the provision is "that no act shall be passed which shall provide that any existing law or any part thereof shall be made or deemed a part of the act, or which shall enact that any existing law or any part thereof shall be applicable except by inserting it in such act," and the cases in these states cited in this title were decided under this provision. The constitutional prohibition is mandatory even when the act compared with other legislation plainly discloses the legislative intent, for legislation cannot be effected by means and in modes prohibited by the fundamental law. State v. Trenton, 53 N. J. L. 570; People v. Banks, 67 N. Y. 568.

2. State v. Hancock, 54 N. J. L. 393; State v. Hibernia Underground R. Co., 47 N. J. L. 49; Campbell v. Board of Pharmacy, 45 N. J. L. 244; affirmed 47 N. J. L. 347; People v. Banks, 67 N. Y. 568; People v. Hayt, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 39; In re Application of Union Ferry Co., 98 N. Y. 139; People v. Whipple, No. 2, 47 Cal. 592; Watkins v. Eureka Springs, 49 Ark. 131; State v. Geiger, 65 Mo. 306.

In Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403, the provision in question was that the superior courts within the cities and towns for which they were created, should have concurrent jurisdiction with the district court, and that the proceedings, practice, and pleading therein should be the same as in the latter court. The constitutional inhibition was that no law should be extended, or conferred, by reference to its title only, but so much thereof as was extended or conferred, should be re-enacted and published at length. In construing this provision the court, by Beck, C. J., said: "It was not intended to apply to all legislative enactments, including those wherein a reference to the general laws becomes necessary rule has been extended to include references to local as well as general laws,¹ and has been held not to apply to an act purporting to amend existing laws.²

3. Effect.—An amendatory act takes effect from the time of its passage and has no retroactive effect, in the absence of an expressed intent to the contrary.³ The original statute governs rights which have accrued before its amendment,⁴ but as to future acts the law as amended governs.⁵

for the means of enforcing and carrying their provisions into effect. Such an unrestricted interpretation is not admissible because it would be an unreasonable construction, and one that would impose upon the people more serious evils than those sought to be cured or avoided by the several sections and clauses of the constitution referred to."

1. In re Lorillard (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 83; Weinckie v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 689. In the former case the court said: "It is true that the similar reference contained in the act then before the court (People v. Banks, 67 N. Y. 568) was to a general law of the state, while here it is to a local act. But that difference will justify no distinction in the application of the principle. Sustaining this reference to a general law will equally require it to be maintained when the reference is made to a local law. No reasonable distinction can be made between the cases and that was virtually assumed in the decision of the case last mentioned, for it was there said that "there is no evil of this or any nature to be apprehended by the mere reference to other acts and statutes for the forms of process and procedure for giving effect to a statute otherwise perfect and complete."

2. People v. Squire, 107 N. Y. 593; 1 Am. St. Rep. 893.

The section of the constitution "does not require that an act amending a prior one shall contain the whole of such prior act; such section should only be applied when in a subsequent statute a former act is referred to, not for the purpose of amending it, but to give effect to the provisions of the new act; that is, the new act must by its express terms provide that an existing law shall be made or deemed a part of it." Wells v. Buffalo, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 438.

3. In re Miller, 110 N. Y. 216; Reid v. Albany County, 128 N. Y. 364; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595; Moore v.

Mausert, 49 N. Y. 332; Gibbs v. Queen Ins. Co., 63 N. Y. 114; 20 Am. Rep. 513; People v. Montgomery County, 67 N. Y. 110; Goillotel v. Holton, 87 N. Y. 445; Central Pac. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261; McGeehan v. Burke, 37 La. Ann. 156; State v. Hill, 32 Minn. 275. See Burwell v. Tullis, 12 Minn. 572.

An amendment limiting the time within which actions for personal injury may be brought to one year, does not apply to causes of action which accrued before the amendment. Goillotel v. New York, 87 N. Y. 441; Carpenter v. Shimer, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 464.

An estate was left by a testator to an adopted child, and a collateral inheritance tax allowed by statute was assessed thereon. It was held that a law passed after the death of the testatrix exempting from the payment of the collateral inheritance tax estates left to "adopted children," did not apply, all the proceedings to collect the tax having taken place prior to the passage of the amendment. In re Miller, 110 N. Y. 216.

4. People v. Montgomery County, 67 N. Y. 109; Moore v. Mausert, 49 N. Y. 332; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595; Reid v. Albany County, 128 N. Y. 373.

Where a section of a statute is amended by making it read in a particular way, the portions of the section which are repealed are to be considered as having been the law from the time when they were first enacted to the time of their repeal. Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 596.

Where an attempted amendatory act fails of its purpose, the act intended to be amended remains unaffected. Judson v. Bessemer, 87 Ala. 240.

5. Holbrook v. Nichol, 36 Ill. 161; Turney v. Wilton, 36 Ill. 385; Richmond County v. People, 3 Ill. App. 216; People v. Sweetser, 1 Dakota Ter. 308; McEwen v. Bulkley, 24 How. (U. S.) 242.

A statute amending a former act operates as to matters thereafter occur-

4. Construction.¹—In construing an amended statute the general intent of the legislature is the object aimed at.² In attaining this end, the original statute and the amendment are to be viewed as one act, and no portion of either is to be declared inoperative if they can be made to stand together without wresting words from their appropriate meaning.³ The old law must be considered; the mischiefs, inconveniences, or hardships produced by it; and then the remedy proposed by the amendatory law.⁴ Where a law is amended and re-enacted those parts of the law simply repeated are not repealed and re-enacted, but are considered to have continued in force from the beginning,⁵ and rights which have accrued under the original statute remain unaffected.⁶

Though it is a general rule that an amended statute is to be understood, as far as future acts are concerned, in the same sense as if it had read from the beginning as it reads as amended,⁷ still ring precisely as if the amendatory section had been added to the prior act at the time of the latter's adoption, and the two acts must be considered together and as one statute. Holbrook v. Nichol, 36 Ill. 161.

1. For the treatment of the rules applied in the construction of statutes generally, see infra, this title, Interpretation and Construction.

2. Parsons v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 37 Mich. 289.

The re-enactment or modification of provisions in a city charter cannot be presumed to affect special legislation outside of the charter unless such intent is clear. Taggart v. Detroit, 71 Mich. 92.

3. Harrell v. Harrell, 8 Fla. 46; Conrad v. Nall, 24 Mich. 275.

In the construction of an amended act, the whole act as amended must be construed together and reference in the amended part of the act to provisions "herein" applied to the unamended part as well. McKibben v. Lester, 9 Ohio St. 627.

4. People v. Greer, 43 Ill. 213; Maus v. Logansport, etc., R. Co., 27 Ill. 77.

5. Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595; Bay v. Gage, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 447; Kelsey v. Kendall, 48 Vt. 24; Kamerick v. Castleman, 21 Mo. App. 587; Burwell v. Tullis, 12 Minn. 572; Haritwen v. Olsen, 52 Fed. Rep. 652; Central Pac. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261. See, infra, this title, Repeal.

6. Junction City v. Webb, 44 Kan. 71. In this case a suit pending under the old statute at the time of the amendment was held not to be affected by the amendment.

7. Kamerick v. Castleman, 21 Mo. App. 587; Goldman v. Kennedy, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 157; Farrell v. State, 54 N. J. L. 421; Parsons v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 37 Mich. 287; Conrad v. Nall, 24 Mich. 275.

So much so is this the rule that if by an act subsequent to the amendatory act the original statute be repealed, the amendment incorporated therein is also thereby repealed. Kamerick v. Castleman, 21 Mo. App. 587; State v. Ranson, 73 Mo. 88; Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588; McKibben v. Lester, 9 Ohio St. 627; Holbrook v. Nichol, 36 Ill. 162.

The rule in the text is followed although the amendment declares that the "section is amended so as to read as follows." Moore v. Mausert, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 173; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595.

Where a new proviso was substituted for an old one of like purport, it was held that the new proviso and the original statute should be read as one act—as if the new proviso appeared in the original act. Reg. v. Overseers of St. Giles in the Fields, 3 El. & El. 224; 107 E. C. L. 224.

Where by a reference to a general act its provisions are made applicable to a subsequent one, the legal effect of such reference is the same as though the act referred to had been inserted in the subsequent one. People v. Whipple No. 2, 47 Cal. 592.

Where the original act is limited to a particular locality, one amending it is so limited unless an intent to the contrary is expressed. U. S. v. Crawford, 6 Mackey (D. C.) 319.

this rule cannot be applied when the effect would be to defeat the manifest intent of the legislature in adopting the amendment.¹

Where the language in an act has received a judicial construction and is adopted into an amendatory act, the construction placed upon it is also adopted;² and a word used in the re-enacted part of the statute and repeated in the amendatory part, is to be similarly construed in the absence of contrary intent.³ Of two constructions equally warranted by the language of an amendment, that is to be preferred which best harmonizes with the general tenor and spirit of the act amended.⁴

Where by a clause of reference the provisions of an existing statute are adopted into a subsequent one, only the general powers and provisions of the statute referred to, and not its special and particular ones, are embraced;⁵ and if a statute has been enacted with special reference to a particular subject, and by a subsequent enactment its provisions are directed in general terms to be applied to another subject of an essentially different nature, it must be presumed that only such provisions of the original statute as are applicable and appropriate to the new subject are adopted.⁶

VIII. PLEADING—1. Public Statutes.—As courts take judicial notice of the public statutes of the state wherein the courts sit,

1. Parsons v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 37 Mich. 287.

So where an amendment adopted twenty-two years after the original statute was passed provided that actions on judgments "heretofore rendered" should be barred in ten years after entry thereof, the amendment was held not to be applicable to judgments rendered before the original act was passed. Parsons v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 37 Mich. 287.

The word "hereafter" in an amended statute must be construed distributively. As to cases within the statute as originally enacted, it means subsequent to the passage of the original act; as to cases brought within the statute by the amendment, it means subsequent to the time of the amendment. In re Peugnet, 67 N. Y. 441; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 596; Moore v. Mausert, 49 N. Y. 332.

In construing a provision of the New York Code Civil Procedure, regarding the limitation of actions, it was held that in the provision that rules prescribed should "not extend to actions already commenced, or to cases where the right of action has already accrued; but the statutes now in force shall be applicable to such cases according to the subject of the action and without regard to form," the words "now" and "already" were to be taken distributively and applied not merely to the date of the original enactment, but to any subsequent amendment. Goillotel v. New York, 87 N. Y. 444; Carpenter v. Shimer, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 464.

2. Gonder v. Estabrook, 33 Pa. St. 374; Burwell v. Tullis, 12 Minn. 572. See Robbins v. Omnibus R. Co., 32 Cal. 472.

3. Pitte v. Shipley, 46 Cal. 154. See State v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 100.

4. Griffin's Case, Chase's Dec. 364. The same rules apply to acts and their supplements. Van Riper v. Essex Public Road Co., 38 N. J. L. 23.

5. Ex parte Greene, 29 Ala. 52, where by statute it was provided that the judge of a certain court should have the same powers and perform the same duties in a certain county as the judges of the circuit courts of the state had or might thereafter be invested with, it was held that he had the power to grant an injunction, which power was given to the other judges of the state by a specific clause in the constitution, on the ground that the said power was general and not particular. Ex parte Greene, 29 Ala. 52.

6. See to this effect the case of Jones v. Dexter, 8 Fla. 276.

neither the contents nor the substance of such a statute need be set forth or recited in a pleading.¹ At common law the existence of a public statute cannot be denied or put in issue by plea of nul tiel record.² It is only necessary to state the facts which will appear to the court to be affected by the statute.³ If, however, an offense be created by a statute, and a penalty inflicted, the mere statement of the facts constituting the offense will be insufficient, for there must be an express reference to the statute, as by the words "contrary to the form of the statute," or similar words, in order that it may appear that the plaintiff grounds his case upon and intends to bring it within the statute.⁴ If part of a statute be public, and the residue private, it is not necessary that the part which is public should be recited in pleading.⁵

1. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.; Stephen on Pl. 347; 1 Bl. Com. 85; Chitty Pl. 215; Gould Pl., ch. 111, § 16; Dive v. Manningham, Plowd. 65; Partridge v. Strange, Plowd. 84; Boyce v. Whitaker, Dougl. 97; Tappan v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 4 West. L. Mo. 67; Smith v. Tallapoosa Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 574; Hatch v. Hansom, 46 Mo. App. 323; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. De Graff (Colo. 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 664; Clark v. North Muskegon, 88 Mich. 308; Hays v. West Bay City, 91 Mich. 418.

It is a general rule that in an action founded on a public statute, it is not necessary that the statute should be set out or referred to in the complaint or declaration. It is sufficient if the cause of action be stated within the statute. 1 Saund. Pl. & Ev. 34; 135, n. 3; 5 East 244; Clark v. North Muskegon, 88 Mich. 308; Hayes v. West Bay City, 91 Mich. 418; McHarg v. Eastman, 7 Robt. (N.Y.) 137; Bayard v. Smith, 17 Wend. (N.Y.) 88; Yertore v. Wiswall, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 8.

It is not only unnecessary to recite a public statute, but it is never advisable to do so, as a misrecital may sometimes be fatal. Bayard v. Smith, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 88; Bacon's Abr. Statute Law.

Where certain circumstances are made necessary by statute to the validity of an act, which is valid at common law without such circumstances, e. g., by the Statute of Frauds, the statute need not be referred to in a pleading founded upon such act. Bacon's Abr. Statute Law; Stephen's Pl. (Tyler's ed.) 330; Birch v. Bellamy, 12 Mod. 540; 1 Saund. 276, n. 2; 211, n. 2; Anonymous, 2 Salk. 519. Thus an assignment of a lease by a tenant need not be alleged to have been in writing, though invalid by 29 Car. 2, ch. 3, unless in writing. Birch v. Bellamy, 12 Mod. 540.

2. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.

3. 1 Chitty's Pl. 237; Spiers v. Parker, 1 T. R. 14; Bently v. Leigh, Lane 71; Stephen's Pl. (5th ed.) 384. The pleadings must bring the case within the statute. Denton v. Moore, 2 Overt. (Tenn.) 168.

In Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 178, it was said: "In setting up a defense under a public statute it is not necessary, either in this court or in a court of law, that the pleader should set forth the statute in his plea, or that he should allege the existence of a statute of which the court is bound to take notice judicially. It is sufficient for him to state the facts which are necessary to bring the case within the operation of the statute, and to insist that upon those facts the plaintiff's right or remedy is at an end, or never existed. The court will then judicially notice the existence of the statute, and declare its legal effects upon the case as made by the pleadings. Although it is usual to set forth the statute in the plea, yet Lord Redesdale, as well as Mr. Beames, have considered it unnecessary. And they both state that the substance of the plea consists in the averment of matters which are necessary to bring the case within the particular statute. Mitf. Pl. 258; Beames' Pl. in Eq. 164. Indeed, it seems more appropriate, in this court, to plead the facts merely which bring the case within the operation of the principle of the statute, than to plead the statute, in terms, as a bar."

4. 1 Chitty's Pl. 237; Wells v. Iggulden, 3 B. & C. 186; 10 E. C. L. 48; INDICTMENT, vol. 10, pp. 515, 572.

5. Bacon's Abr. Stat. L.

2. Private Statutes.—Courts do not take judicial notice of the existence and contents of private statutes.¹ Consequently such parts of them as may be material to the action or defense must be stated in pleading,² and may be replied to by plea of nul tiel record.³ But courts will take judicial notice of a statute of a private nature if it contains a clause declaring it to be a public act;⁴ also, of a private act expressly amended and recognized by a public act;⁵ and of provisions of a public or general character in a private or local statute.⁶ In England,⁷ and in many of the states of the Union the common-law rule requiring private acts to be recited in the pleadings has been changed, and a provision very generally exists that it shall be sufficient to plead a private statute by a mere reference to its title and the date of its passage.⁸ But a pleading in which a private statute is pleaded by title and date must set forth facts sufficient to bring it within the statute.⁹

1. JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 167.

2. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.; Stephen's Pl. 347; 1 Bl. Com. 85 Chitty's Pl. 216; Cochran v. Couper, 1 Harr. (Del.) 200; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Blackshire, 10 Kan. 477; Hailes v. State, 9 Tex. App. 170; Boyce v. Whitaker, Dougl. 97; Goshen, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Sears, 7 Conn. 92; Broad Street Hotel Co. v. Weaver, 57 Ala. 26.

In Greswolde v. Kemp, Car. & M. 635; 41 E. C. L. 345, it was held that where copies of a private act, printed by the government printer, were made evidence, counsel could not make an objection founded on that act the ground of an application for non-suit, unless the act had been given in evidence on the part of the plaintiff, because not being an act to be judicially noticed, it was only before the court when given in evidence.

3. Bac. Abr. Stat. L. But if an exemplification of a private statute under the great seal be pleaded, nul tiel record cannot be replied. Bac. Abr. Stat. L. The Prince's Case, H. H. C. L. 16; 8 Rep. 28.

4. 1 Greenl. Ev., § 481; Beaumont v. Mountain, 10 Bing. 404; 25 E. C. L. 183; Woodward v. Cotton, 1 C. M. & R. 44, overruling Brett v. Beales, 1 M. & M. 421; Brookville Ins. Co. v. Records, 15 Blackf. (Ind.) 170; JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 158.

5. Lavalle v. People, 6 Ill. App. 197; Rogers' Case, 2 Me. 301; Bac. Abr. Stat. L.; Smith Com., § 810.

6. Bretz v. New York, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 258; 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 130.

7. 13 and 14 Vict. ch. 21, § 7.

8. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 33 Ohio St. 384; 31 Am. Rep. 543; Halbert v. Skyles, 1 A. K. Marsh (Ky.) 368; Hewitt v. Grand Chute, 7 Wis. 282. JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, pp. 158, 168.

A provision that in pleading a private statute it shall be sufficient to refer to it by stating its title and the day on which it became a law must be complied with; consequently a plea that defendant is a charitable organization organized under a special act is insufficient. Zabel v. Louisville Bap. Orphans' Home (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 212. See also, Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 33 Ohio St. 384; 31 Am. Rep. 543.

A plea of a private statute by reference to its title and date of approval, and by alleging so much of the substance as may be pertinent to the cause of action, or defense, places before the court the entire act so far as it relates to the authority claimed, and the court may examine the act to see whether its provisions are properly stated. The object of the statute allowing this mode of pleading a private act is to relieve the pleader of the necessity of setting forth the act, or its provisions, in full, and to give him, his adversary and the court the same benefit of these provisions as if they formed a part of his pleading; hence upon a demurrer to the answer the court may look at the act and see if the substance of the provision relied on is properly alleged. East Line, etc., R. Co. v. Ruching, 69 Tex. 306.

9. Hewitt v. Grand Chute, 7 Wis. 282.

At common law where a statute is pleaded, neither the title¹ nor the preamble² need be recited, since they are not part of the statute.

3. Foreign Laws.—Courts do not take judicial notice of foreign laws; such laws are facts to be proved;³ and the states of the Union are foreign to one another in the sense that the law of another state is a foreign law.⁴ In pleading a foreign statute, it

1. Bacon's Abr. Statute Law; Chance v. Adams, Ld. Raym. 77; Eckert v. Head, 1 Mo. 593.

2. Bacon's Abr. Statute Law; 6 Mod. 62; Mills v. Wilkins, 8 Mod. 144.

3. See FOREIGN LAWS, vol. 8, p. 435; JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 154; Gunn v. Howell, 27 Ala. 663; 62 Am. Dec. 785; Shed v. Augustine, 14 Kan. 282; Davis v. Rogers, 14 Ind. 424; Hemp-hill v. Bank of Ala., 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 44; Uhler v. Semple, 20 N. J. Eq. 288; Leatherwood v. Sullivan, 81 Ala. 458; Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480; Bank of Commerce v. Fuqua, 11 Mont. 285; Herring v. Selding, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 12; Adams v. Gay, 19 Vt. 358; McDaniel v. Pressler, 3 Wash. 636; Rothschild v. Rio Grande West R. Co. 59 Hun (N. Y.) 454; Holmes v. Broughton, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 75; 25 Am. Dec. 536; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 129 U. S. 397; Liverpool, etc., Steam Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A., 129 U. S. 464; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 119 U. S. 615; Continental Nat. Bank v. McGeoch, 73 Wis. 332; Bryant v. Kel-ton, 1 Tex. 434; Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203; Tyler v. Trabue, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 306; Smith v. Bartram, 11 Ohio St. 690; Hite v. Lenhart, 7 Mo. 22; Leak v. Elliott, 4 Mo. 446; Babcock v. Babcock, 46 Mo. 243; Beach v. Workman, 20 N. H. 379; Pickard v. Bailey, 26 N. H. 152; Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 174.

Where Action Is Not Founded on the Statute.—It has been said that a foreign statute may be offered in evidence without having been pleaded when the action is not founded on the statute. Hatch v. Hanson, 46 Mo. App. 323.

Foreign statutes must be set out; a reference to their titles and dates for a statement of their general provisions will be insufficient. Carey v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 5 Iowa 357; Bean v. Briggs, 4 Iowa 464; Becht v. Harris, 4 Minn. 504; Hoyt v. McNeil, 13 Minn. 390; Monroe v. Douglass, 5 N. Y. 447.

In a suit to foreclose a mortgage executed in another state, averments that the note and mortgage are in accordance with the laws of that state are insufficient; the laws in question should be set out. Lomb v. Pioneer Sav., etc., Co. (Ala. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 154.

The law of another state must be pleaded with such distinctness that the court may apply it to the facts appearing in the case. Roots v. Merri-weather, 8 Bush (Ky.) 397.

It is not sufficient to allege that by the law of the place of contract the plaintiff alone can sue; it will be presumed that a foreign statute is referred to which should have been set out. Wilson v. Clark, 11 Ind. 385.

In an action founded on a foreign statute it is not sufficient for the complaint to allege that the provisions of the foreign statute are the same as those of the domestic statute; the provisions of the foreign statute should be alleged. Fagan v. Strong (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 919.

A defendant seeking to avail himself of the laws of another state must show by his pleading what those laws are and in what respect they differ from those of his own state; in default of such averments he cannot show at the trial what those laws are. National German-American Bank v. Lang, 2 N. Dak. 66.

In Indiana, a copy of the foreign statute must be filed or the statute fully set out in the pleadings. Swank v. Hufnagle, 111 Ind. 453; Wilson v. Clark, 11 Ind. 385; Mendenhall v. Gately, 18 Ind. 149; Tyler v. Kent, 52 Ind. 583; Milligan v. State, 86 Ind. 553.

The usury laws of another state must be pleaded. Millard v. Truax, 73 Mich. 381; Insurance Co. of N. A. v. Forcheimer, 86 Ala. 541; Bagwell v. McTighe, 85 Tenn. 616; Templeton v. Brown, 86 Tenn. 50; National German-American Bank v. Lang, 2 N. Dak. 66.

4. Sedgwick Stat. and Const. Law 363; Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480; Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517. See article, JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 154, and notes, supra, this subdivision.

is not necessary that it be set forth in hæc verba; it is sufficient if the substance be averred;¹ but averments which state merely the effect of foreign laws are insufficient.²

In the absence of anything to the contrary, it will be presumed by the courts of one state that the laws of another state, whose system of jurisprudence is derived from the same source as its own, are in substance the same as the domestic laws.³

Though a statute provides that a foreign law may be pleaded by reference to its title and date of its passage, it is not error to plead the substance of the statute instead.⁴

It has been said that where one state recognizes acts done in pursuance of the laws of another state, the courts will take judicial notice of those laws, so far as it may be necessary to determine the validity of the acts alleged to be in conformity with them.⁵

The state courts take judicial notice of federal public laws, including those which relate exclusively to the District of Colum-

A different rule prevails in some of the states. See FOREIGN LAWS, vol. 8, p. 435; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Church, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 293.

In Dodge v. Coffin, 15 Kan. 277, it was held, Brewer, J., delivering the opinion, that the Supreme Court of Kansas would take judicial notice of the constitution of another state, in so far as it showed the jurisdiction of the courts of that state. A vigorous dissenting opinion was delivered by Valentine, J.

1. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Shires, 108 Ill. 617; Stacy v. Baker, 2 Ill. 418; Hyman v. Payne, 83 Ill. 258; Schluter v. Bowery Sav. Bank, 117 N. Y. 125; 15 Am. St. Rep. 494. Compare Walker v. Maxwell, 1 Mass. 113; Throop v. Hatch, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 23; Holmes v. Broughton, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 75; 25 Am. Dec. 536; Wilson v. Clark, 11 Ind. 387; Tyler v. Kent, 52 Ind. 584; Roots v. Merriweather, 8 Bush (Ky.) 397. See also Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517; Dyer v. Smith, 12 Conn. 384; Kilgore v. Bulkley, 14 Conn. 362; Hale v. New Jersey Steam Nav. Co., 15 Conn. 539; 39 Am. Dec. 308; Lockwood v. Crawford, 18 Conn. 361.

A foreign statute must be set out with certainty to a common intent. Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. 480.

2. Temple v. Brittan (Ky. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 306.

Averments in a bill to foreclose a mortgage that the note and mortgage are "in accordance with" the laws of another state, "with respect to which the same were made," and that the forfeiture was made "in accordance with" the regulations and by-laws of the corporation making the loan, and an averment stating the effect of such laws, are insufficient pleadings of a foreign statute. Lomb v. Pioneer Sav., etc., Co. (Ala. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 154.

3. See PRESUMPTIONS, vol. 19, p. 46, and the number of cases there cited; see also Sharp v. Sharp, 35 Ala. 574; Cox v. Morrow, 14 Ark. 603; Furrow v. Chapin, 13 Kan. 107; Dodge v. Coffin, 15 Kan. 277; Hickman v. Alpaugh, 21 Cal. 225; Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55; Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 329; 76 Am. Dec. 269; Walsh v. Dart, 12 Wis. 635; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 15 La. Ann. 491; Crane v. Hardy, 1 Mich. 96; Cooper v. Reaney, 4 Minn. 528; Brimhall v. Van Campen, 8 Minn. 13; 82 Am. Dec. 118; Green v. Rugely, 23 Tex. 539; State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.), 346; 38 Am. Dec. 699.

4. Central Trust Co. v. Burton, 74 Wis. 329.

5. Field, J., in Carpenter v. Dexter, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 513, citing Vance v. Schuyler, 1 Gilm. (Ill.) 160; Secrist v. Green, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 749.

This was said in reference to an objection taken in an Illinois court to a New York deed, the objection being that the certificate of acknowledgment by the New York judge was not accompanied by any certificate of his official character, and that it did not appear that the certificate was in conformity with New York law. Field, J., said further: "Unless the statute requires evidence of official character bia.¹ The federal courts judicially² notice the public laws of the state in which the court is held.³

The laws in force in territory ceded by other governments to the United States are judicially noticed by the federal courts and by the courts of the state formed from such territory.⁴

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the exercise of its general appellate jurisdiction over a lower court of the United States, will take judicial notice of the laws of every state of the Union.⁵ But upon error to a decision of the highest court of a state, the Supreme Court of the United States will take judicial notice of the laws of that state only; the laws of other states being only known to the court below as facts to be proved as such.⁶

4. Misrecitals.—The matter, year, day, and place of a statute, if recited, must be recited truly.⁷ A misrecital of a material part to accompany the official act which it authorizes, none is necessary."

1. See JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 154.

2. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 63.

3. See JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 154; Elwood v. Flannigan, 104 U. S. 562; Breed v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 642; Knower v. Haines, 31 Fed. Rep. 513; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747; Smith v. Tallapoosa County, 2 Woods (U. S.) 574; Newberry v. Robinson, 36 Fed. Rep. 841.

In Breed v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 642, it was held that the district court of the United States must take judicial notice of the laws of every state, and this, though an action was brought in one state and afterwards removed to the district court, and the statute of another state was relied on, which by the laws of the state in which the case originated it would have been necessary to plead, no demurrer having been filed.

4. Bouldin v. Phelps, 30 Fed. Rep. 547; U. S. v. Turner, 11 How. (U. S.) 668; Fremont v. U. S., 17 How. (U. S.) 557; U. S. v. Perot, 98 U. S. 430; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 231; see also JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 163.

5. Course v. Stead, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 27; Hinde v. Vattier, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 398; Owings v. Hull, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 625; U. S. v. Turner, 11 How. (U. S.) 668; Pennington v. Gibson, 16 How. (U. S.) 65; Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. (U. S.) 230; Cheever v. Wilson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 108; Junction R. Co. v. Bank of Ashland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 230; Lamar v. Micou, 114 U. S. 218; Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1.

6. Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1; citing Scott v. Coleman, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 349; 15 Am. Dec. 71; Thomas v. Robinson, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 267; Shelden v. Hopkins, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 435; Van Buskirk v. Mulock, 18 N. J. L. 184; Elliott v. Ray, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 31; Cone v. Cotton, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 82; Snyder v. Snyder, 25 Ind. 399; Pelton v. Platner, 13 Ohio 209; 42 Am. Dec. 197; Horton v. Critchfield, 18 Ill. 133; 65 Am. Dec. 701; Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 328; 76 Am. Dec. 269; Crafts v. Clark, 31 Iowa 77; Taylor v. Barron, 30 N. H. 78; 35 N. H. 484; 64 Am. Dec. 281; Knapp v. Abell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 485; Mowry v. Chase, 100 Mass. 79; Wright v. Andrews, 130 Mass. 149; Bank of U. S. v. Merchants' Bank, 7 Gill (Md.) 431; Coates v. Mackey, 56 Md. 419; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co., 119 U. S. 615. Compare State v. Hinchman, 27 Pa. St. 479; Paine v. Schenectady Ins. Co., 11 R. I. 411.

7. Bac. Abr. Stat. L. 5; Bro. Parl., pl. 87; Cro. Ja. 211; 2 Hawk., ch. 25, § 104; Partridge v. Staunge, Plow. 79.

A statute passed at a session of parliament which commenced in one reign but was continued into another, should be referred to as a statute passed at a parliament held in both years and not as a statute passed in both years. Gibbs v. Pike, 8 M. & W. 223.

It should not be recited as passed in both years, even though recited in a later statute as having been so passed. Rex v. Biers, 1 Ad. & El. 327; 28 E. C. L. 98.

of a statute is fatal;¹ but it is otherwise if the part misrecited is immaterial.² The misrecital of a public statute is not cured by a verdict,³ unless the misrecital be of a part of the statute which does not go to the ground of the action.⁴ The misrecital of a

The misrecital of the title of a statute is immaterial if it be so stated that the judges are enabled to know that there is but one act referred to and to identify the act. Reg. v. Westley, Bell C. C. 193.

The description of an act as having been passed in the twenty-fifth year of a reign, when in fact the parliament in which the act was passed was continued by prorogation from the twenty-fourth to the twenty-fifth year of the reign, is immaterial and does not constitute a misdescription. Rex v. Windsor, 2 Chit. 513; Nixon v. Nanney, 1 Q. B. 747; 41 E. C. L. 758.

A recital of 7 Geo. IV, ch. 46, as "An act of parliament made and passed in the seventh year of the reign of George IV, for (among other things) the better regulating copartnership of bankers in England," is sufficient. Esdale v. Maclean, 15 M. & W. 277.

But in Beck v. Beverly, 11 M. & W. 845, it was held that in reciting a statute in pleading, the whole of the title should be stated, though it comprise several subject-matters other than those to which the pleading related.

There being no parliament roll for the twenty-ninth year of Elizabeth, statutes passed in that year relate to the first day of the session which commenced in the twenty-eighth year of her reign. Rumsey v. Tufnell, 2 Bing. 257; Savage v. Smith, Black R. 1101.

But the recital of a statute as 29 Eliz. under a videlicet instead of 28 Eliz., was held immaterial. Holmes v. Sparks, 12 C. B. 242.

In pleading a private statute, the misrecital of the day of the commencement of the parliament in which it was made has been held fatal. Bishop of Norwich's Case, Mo. 551; Ld. Raym. 210, 343.

The description of a private statute in a declaration as having been made in the fourth year of a reign instead of the fourth and fifth years of a reign, has been held fatal. Rann v. Green, Cowp. 746.

A description of a statute as having been made on a particular day, will be fatal if it appear that parliament was adjourned on that day; the adjournment being only a continuance of the session. Anonymous, 12 Mod. 602; 2 Mod. 242; Ld. Raym. 343; Bac. Abr. Stat. L.

It has been held that the misrecital of the day of the passage of an act by parliament, though fatal in a declaration, is not so in the plea in bar. Woolsey v. Shepard, 1 Brownl. 196.

An averment that a statute was made on a certain day between the first and second years of the reign of a certain king, is fatal for repugnancy; it being impossible that a statute should be passed on the same day in two different years. Langly v. Haines, Mo. 302; 2 Hawk, ch. 25, § 104.

If the declaration conclude "against the form of the statute," the misrecital will not be fatal. Platt v. Hale, Ld. Raym. 382; Plowd. 79, 84; Cro. Car. 233; Freem. 311. The reason given is that the judges will take notice of the true contents of a public statute which is misrecited, but if the declaration conclude "against the form of the aforesaid statute," or "by force of the aforesaid statute," the misrecital is fatal; the pleader, by his conclusion, being tied to the misrecital of the statute. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.

1. Cro. Car. 136, 622; Ld. Raym. 382; 2 Mod. 98; Bac. Abr. Stat. L.

The omission of the words "or in any other manner," in undertaking to recite a provision of 8 Hen. VI, ch. 9, that "it will be found by a verdict or in any other manner by due form of law as a party, etc.," has been held fatal. Farr v. East, Cro. Eliz. 186; Ld. Raym. 382.

For other instances of fatal omission, see Vanderplanhen v. Griffith, Cro. Eliz. 263; Cro. Car. 136.

2. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.; Cro. Car. 136, 522; Ld. Raym. 382; 2 Mod. 98; Ship Nancy v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 38. See also Boyce v. Whitaker, Dougl. 97; Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod. 62. For other illustrations of this rule, see Crosse v. Stanhope, Godb. 246; 2 Bulst. 47; 2 Mod. 99.

3. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.; Love v. Wotton, Cro. Eliz. 245.

4. Bac. Abr. Stat. L.; Boomer v. Cleve, Styles. See also Ship Nancy v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 38.

private statute is cured by a verdict.¹ A recital of words not contained in the statute has been held to be surplusage and immaterial.² The misrecital of the title of a statute is immaterial.³

IX. PROOF — 1. Public — a. DOMESTIC. — Courts take judicial notice of public statutes enacted by the legislature of the state wherein the court is held.⁴ The burden of disproving the validity of a statute is on the party assailing it.⁵ A statute may not be declared void upon the allegations or admissions of a party as to the mode of enactment; the facts must be shown by the legislative journals or by other competent evidence.⁶ The validity of a statute is a question for the court and not for the jury.⁷

b. FOREIGN. — Generally speaking, authenticated copies of written laws or other public instruments of a foreign government are expected to be produced.⁸

The usual method of authenticating a foreign statute is by an exemplification of a copy under the great seal of a state; or by copy proved to be a true copy by a witness who has examined and compared it with the original; or by the certificate of an officer properly authorized by law to give the copy, which certificate must itself also be duly authenticated.⁹

1. Bac. Abr. Stat. L. The reason given is that advantage should have been taken of the misrecital by plea of nul tiel record, or by showing the statute to be otherwise. Platt v. Hill, Ld. Raym. 382; 2 Mod. 241.

2. Bac. Abr. L.; Bro. Nug. & Surpl., pl. a.

3. Chance v. Adams, Ld. Raym. 77; Pasch. 8 W. 3; Hargr. 324; Attorney General v. Hutchinson, Pasch. 15 Ch.

2. See also Ship Nancy v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 38. Contra, Holt, C. J., in Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod. 62.

4. See JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 154.

5. People v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 191; State v. Kieseewetter, 45 Ohio St. 254.

6. Happel v. Brethauer, 70 Ill. 166; 22 Am. Rep. 70; Attorney-General v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385; Ryan v. Lynch, 68 Ill. 160; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203; People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 279; 13 Am. Rep. 581; Graves v. Alsap, 1 Arizona 274.

Inaccuracies in a code of public laws may be corrected by comparison with the original in the office of the secretary of state. Hunt v. Wright (Miss. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 608.

See supra, this title, Enactment.

7. South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 260; Amoskeag Bank v. Ottawa, 105 U. S. 667; Blessing v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641; Moody v. State, 48 Ala. 115; 17 Am. Rep. 28; Evans v. Browne, 30

Ind. 514; 95 Am. Dec. 710; Post v. Kendall County, 105 U. S. 668; Walnut v. Wade, 103 U. S. 683; Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 224; Ramsey County v. Heenan, 2 Minn. 330; Weeks v. Smith, 81 Me. 546; Williams v. Taylor, 83 Tex. 667; People v. Com'rs of Highways, 54 N. Y. 278; 13 Am. Rep. 581; People v. Chenango, 8 N. Y. 317, held that objections to the validity of a law are not available unless raised by the pleading or on the return.

An answer averring that a statute on which the plaintiff's right is grounded was illegally passed is equivalent to a demurrer, and the issue thereon should be tried by the court and not by the jury. Scott v. Clark County, 34 Ark. 283.

8. See generally FOREIGN LAWS, vol. 8, p. 437; 1 Greenl. Ev., § 487; Story's Conflict of Laws, § 640; Bailey v. McDowell, 2 Harr. (Del.) 34; Stanford v. Pruet, 27 Ga. 243; State v. Twitty, 2 Hawks (N. Car.) 441; Adams v. Gay, 19 Vt. 358; 1 Greenl. Ev., §§ 501, 508. Citations to the English statutes and authorities are not sufficient to show an English statute; its existence and contents must be proved as any other fact. Dickerson v. Matheson, 50 Fed. Rep. 73.

9. 1 Greenl. Ev., § 487; Story's Conflict of Laws, § 640; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 237; Packard v. Hill, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 411; Lincoln v.

Foreign laws may also be proved by a printed volume thereof which a witness having means of information can swear was recognized as authentic and received by the courts in the country in which such laws were alleged to exist.¹

The rule requiring foreign statutes to be proved by duly authenticated copies has been relaxed, and parol testimony has been received to show the statute law of a foreign country.² Any person having probable means of information as to the law is competent to prove it, though not himself a lawyer.³

Pattelle, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 475. In Bowles v. Eddy, 33 Ark. 645, it was held that statutes of another state could not be proved by certified abstracts therefrom made by a notary public of that state. See also EXEMPLIFICATION, vol. 7, p. 479.

1. Owen v. Boyle, 15 Me. 147; 32 Am. Dec. 143; Jones v. Maffet, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 523; O'Keefe v. U. S., 5 Ct. of Cl. 674; Spaulding v. Vincent, 24 Vt. 501. In this case there is a dictum to the effect that a foreign statute cannot be proved by parol testimony.

The testimony of any credible witness, whether lawyer or layman, having reasonable means of information, is competent to show that a certain volume contains the statute law of a foreign country and is accepted as such by the courts and the public at large in that country. Dundee Mortgage, etc., Co. v. Cooper, 26 Fed. Rep. 665.

In People v. McQuade, 85 Mich. 123, the testimony of a minister of another state performing a marriage ceremony there, that a book containing the statute of that state was the only compilation of its laws; that he had seen it used in the courts of that state as a compilation of its laws for twenty years was admitted under provision of the Michigan laws, that the statute law of another state might be proved among other ways by printed copies thereof if commonly admitted in the courts of that state as prima facie evidence of its laws.

In Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178, a printed copy of the French Code produced by the French Consul, resident in London, who obtained it at a bookseller's shop in Paris, was admitted as evidence of the law of France upon which the court would act.

District Court in Admiralty.—The law of any foreign country may be proved in the United States district court in admiralty by printed statute books, reports, text writers, and expert testimony. The Pawaschick, 2 Low. (U. S.) 142; Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 1; Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 187; Stein v. Bowman, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 209; Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 274; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. (U. S.) 400; Wilcocks v. Phillips, 1 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 47; Robinson v. Clifford, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 1; U. S. v. Ortega, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 531; Spaulding v. Vincent, 24 Vt. 501; Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203.

2. See FOREIGN LAWS, vol. 8, p. 437, and authorities there cited; Barrows v. Downs, 9 R. I. 446; 11 Am. Rep. 283; American Ins., etc., Co. v. Rosenagle, 77 Pa. St. 507.

Foreign laws must be proved like any other results of knowledge and experience in matters of which no knowledge is imputed to a judge, as facts are proved, by witnesses who can state from their own knowledge and experience, gained by study and practice, not only what is the written law but also what is the proper construction and effect of that law as applicable to the case in hand. Nelson v. Bridport, 8 Beav. 527.

A witness testifying as to a foreign law may resort to a foreign law book to refresh his memory or to correct and confirm his opinion, but the law itself must be determined upon his testimony. Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F. 85.

The testimony of a person skilled in the foreign law will be admitted to prove that law. Baron De Bode's Case, 8 Q. B. 208; 55 E. C. L. 208.

But he should state the law on his knowledge and not read fragments of a code as the law. Cocks v. Purday, 2 C. & K. 269; 61 E. C. L. 268.

3. Vander Donckt v. Thellusson, 8 C. B. 812; 65 E. C. L. 811; Chattanooga, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 86 Ga. 676; 13 S. E. Rep. 109.

A witness whose knowledge of a

It is provided by an act of Congress passed pursuant to the constitution of the United States, that the statutes of a sister state shall be received in the courts of the other states of the Union when authenticated under the great seal of the state.¹ This method, though the safest, is not exclusive, and by statute in most of the states the statute laws of a sister state may be proved by the production of a printed statute book of such state purporting on its face to have been published by authority.² Where a code or statute of another state has been published by author-foreign law is derived solely from his studies of that law at a university in such foreign country, is incompetent to prove what the law of that country is. Bristow v. Sequecille, 5 Exch. 275; or its operation and effect, In re Bonelli, L. R., 1 P. Div. 69.

The certificate of an ambassador under his official seal is admissible evidence of the law of his country as to the validity of a testamentary paper. In re Klingeman, 3 S. & T. 18.

An English Roman Catholic bishop is competent, as a person skilled in the matrimonial law of Rome, to prove that law as a witness. Sussex Peerage Case, 11 C. & F. 85.

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 905.

Copies of state laws authenticated by the seal of the state are conclusive evidence of their verity in all courts in the United States without any other formality. In absence of all proof to the contrary, the presumption is that the seal was affixed by the proper officer. U. S. v. Amedy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 392; U. S. v. Johns, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 412; State v. Carr, 5 N. H. 367.

The exemplification may be of such part of a statute as bears on the point of dispute, and need not be the whole statute. Grant v. Henry Clay Coal Co., 80 Pa. St. 208.

A copy of an act of the legislature made and certified as true by the clerk of the federal court, with the certificate of the governor as to the official capacity of the clerk, and sealed with the great seal of state, is a sufficient authentication of the act under the act of Congress to entitle it to be read as evidence in the court of another state. Rice's Succession, 21 La. Ann. 614.

Statutes authenticated as directed by acts of Congress are admissible in evidence though not authenticated according to the law of the state in which they were offered in evidence. Ansley v. Meikle, 81 Ind. 260.

The act must be authenticated by the great seal of the state. The seal of the secretary of state cannot be regarded as the seal of the state. Sisk v. Woodruff, 5 Ill. 15.

2. Comparet v. Jernegan, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 375; Commercial, etc., Bank v. Patterson, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 346; Rockville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Andrews, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 451; Vaughn v. Griffith, 16 Ind. 353 ("by authority" and by the "state printer" sufficient; see Crake v. Crake, 18 Ind. 156); Mullen v. Morris, 2 Pa. St. 85; Stewart v. Swanzy, 23 Miss. 502; Emery v. Berry, 28 N. H. 473; 61 Am. Dec. 622. (In Goodwin v. Appleton, 22 Me. 453, a printed volume of statutes, in which a former statute was referred to and repealed, was competent evidence of that former law). Thomas v. Davis, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 227. (Kentucky by statute provided that properly certified printed laws of other states should be proof of those laws; see Biesenthal v. Williams, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 329; 85 Am. Dec. 629); Cox v. Robinson, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 91; Hawrich v. Andrews, 9 Port. (Ala.) 9; Clanton v. Barnes, 50 Ala. 260; Hawes v. State, 88 Ala. 71; Clarke v. Bank of Mississippi, 10 Ark. 516; 3 Am. Dec. 248; Barkman v. Hopkins, 11 Ark. 157; Dixon v. Thatcher, 14 Ark. 141; Yarbrough v. Arnold, 20 Ark. 592; Charlesworth v. Williams, 16 Ill. 338; Eagen v. Connelly, 107 Ill. 458; Cochran v. Ward (Ind. 1892), 29 N. E. Rep. 795; Magee v. Sanderson, 10 Ind. 261; Line v. Mack, 14 Ind. 330; Lattourett v. Cook, 1 Iowa 1; 43 Am. Dec. 428; Zimmerman v. Helser, 32 Md. 274; Herryman v. Roberts, 52 Md. 64; Raynham v. Canton, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 293; Ashley v. Root, 4 Allen (Mass.) 504; Merrifield v. Robbins, 8 Gray (Mass.) 150; Baughan v. Graham, 1 How. (Miss.) 220; Bright v. White, 8 Mo. 421; Lord v. Staples, 23 N. H. 448; Toulandon v. Lachenmeyer, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 215; Biddis v. James, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 321; 6 Am. Dec. 456; Gray v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 2

ity, a reprint of such book is admissible in evidence without other evidence of its sanction by the government of such state.¹

There is a conflict of authority as to whether the existence and contents of a foreign law is a question for the court or for the jury; this conflict has been set out elsewhere.²

2. Private.—The general rule of the common law is that a printed statute book is not evidence of a private act;³ but that the act must be proved by exemplified copy or other common-law method of proof.⁴ But by statute in England,⁵ and generally in the states of the Union, copies of private acts purporting to have been printed by authority are admissible in evidence in the courts of the state in which the act was passed.⁶ If a private act contain a clause providing that it shall be judicially noticed, the production of an examined copy,⁷ or copy printed by public authority, cannot be required.⁸

X. INTERPRETATION AND CONSTRUCTION—1. Meaning of the Terms.—Interpretation differs from construction in that the former is the art of finding out the true sense of any form of words; that is, the sense which their author intended to convey; and of enabling others to derive from them the same idea which the author intended to convey. Construction, on the other hand, is the drawing of conclusions respecting subjects that lie beyond the direct expressions of the text, from elements known from and given in the text—conclusions which are in the spirit, though not within the letter of the text. Interpretation only takes place if the text conveys some meaning or other. But construction is resorted to when, in comparing two different writings of the same

W. & S. (Pa.) 156; 37 Am. Dec. 500; Kean v. Rice, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 203, citing the case of Young v. The Bank of Alexandria, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 388; Tenant v. Tenant, 110 Pa. St. 478; Martin v. Payne, 11 Tex. 292; Cowell v. State, 16 Tex. App. 57; State v. Stade, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 303; State v. Abbey, 29 Vt. 60; 67 Am. Dec. 754; U. S. v. Noelke, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 554; Wright v. U. S., 15 Ct. of Cl. 80.

A volume of state laws purporting on the title page to have been "printed by order of the governor" sufficiently shows publication by authority. Wilt v. Cutler, 38 Mich. 189. See also Pacific Pneumatic Gas Co. v. Wheelock, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 566.

In an action on a judgment of another state and the statute of that state, a plea of nul tiel record admits the statute and dispenses with proof thereof. Jackson v. Baxter, 1 Ind. 42.

1. Fernandez v. State, 25 Tex. App. 538; Ellis v. Wiley, 17 Tex. 134.

2. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT,

vol. 19, p. 635; FOREIGN LAWS, vol. 8, p. 438.

3. Duncan v. Dubois, 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 125. In this case, however, the court said there had been instances in which the printed statute book had been admitted as evidence of a private act. Gilb. 13; 12 Vin. 81, pl. 2; it was intimated that perhaps a private act might be given in evidence against the party for whose benefit the act was passed, since he was presumed to be conusant of it and could not be surprised by the evidence.

4. 1 Greenl. Ev., §§ 501, 508.

5. 13 & 14 Vict. ch. 21, § 7; Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178.

6. See JUDICIAL NOTICE, vol. 12, p. 167, and the compilations of general public laws of the several states.

7. Beaumont v. Mountain, 10 Bing. 404; 25 E. C. L. 183; Woodward v. Cotton, 6 C. & P. 491; 25 E. C. L. 505.

8. Forman v. Dawes, C. & M. 127; 41 E. C. L. 75; Woodward v. Cotton, 6 C. & P. 491.

individual, or two different enactments by the same legislative body, there is found contradiction where there was evidently no intention of such contradiction one of another; or where it happens that part of a writing or declaration contradicts the rest. When this is the case, and the nature of the document or declaration, or whatever else it may be, is such as not to allow us to consider the whole as being invalidated by a partial or other contradiction, then resort must be had to construction; so, too, if required to act in cases which have not been foreseen by the framers of those rules, by which we are nevertheless obliged, for some binding reason, faithfully to regulate as well as we can our action respecting the unforeseen case.¹ In common use, however, the words are used interchangeably as embracing all that is properly covered by both when each is used in a sense strictly and technically correct, and so they are employed throughout this article.

2. Object.—Statute law is the will of the legislature, and the object of all judicial interpretation of statutes is to determine what intention is conveyed, whether expressly or by implication, by the language used.²

1. The foregoing definition is taken from Cooley's Const. Lim. (6th ed.), p. 51. See also INTERPRETATION, vol. 11, p. 507.

Construction of Particular Words and Phrases Used in Statutes.—For the construction of particular words and phrases as used in various statutes, as well as in wills, contracts, or other instruments, reference should be made to the specific titles throughout the Encyclopædia.

2. 1 Kent's Com. 468; Lieber Leg. Herm. 87; Leases' Case, 5 Rep. 6; Pray v. Edie, 1 T. R. 313; U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 399; Cleveland v. Norton, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 380; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 366; 35 Am. Dec. 326; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601; People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 78; Burch v. Newbury, 10 N. Y. 391; People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 95 N. Y. 554; Purdy v. People, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 397; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 330; Waller v. Harris, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 561; 32 Am. Rep. 590; Noble v. State, 1 Greene (Iowa) 325; Scaggs v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. 10 Md. 268; Hess v. Poultney, 10 Md. 256; Ex parte Trapnall, 6 Ark. 9; Keener v. State, 18 Ga. 194; 63 Am. Dec. 269; Fitzpatrick v. Gebhart, 7 Kan. 35; Bonds v. Greer, 56 Miss. 716; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 17; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon County, 6 Nev. 68;

Denton v. Reading, 22 La. Ann. 607; State v. Forkner, 70 Ind. 241; Robinson v. Schenck, 102 Ind. 307; Middleton v. Greeson, 106 Ind. 18; Miller v. State, 106 Ind. 415; Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 56; Clare v. State, 68 Ind. 17; Taylor v. Washington County, 67 Ind. 383; Storms v. Stevens, 104 Ind. 46; Anderson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 117 Ill. 26; State v. McMahon, 53 Conn. 407; 55 Am. Rep. 140; Ex parte Marmaduke, 91 Mo. 228; 60 Am. Rep. 250; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

In People v. Greene County, 13 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 424, Westbrook, J., said: "Any attempted construction of the act which departs from its language, and purporting to be based on the intention of the legislature, in the absence of any key to the meaning of the words afforded by other parts of the act, is mere speculation, and must necessarily vary with the convictions of the reasoner as to what the law should have been."

Mr. Justice Story said: "What the legislative intent was can be derived only from the words they used, and we cannot speculate beyond the reasonable import of these words; the spirit of the act must be gathered from the words of the act and not from conjectures aliunde." Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 93; Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 178.

3. Literal Construction.—The first and most elementary rule of construction is that it is to be assumed that words and phrases are used in their popular and common acceptation, unless the subject-matter indicates that they are used in a technical sense; as when used in reference to a particular trade, business, or transaction; and from this presumption it is not allowable to depart unless adequate grounds appear for concluding that such interpretation does not give the real intention of the legislature.¹

If the language is clear and admits of but one meaning, there is no room for construction. It is not allowable to interpret that which has no need of interpretation.² In such a case any departure

"The primary and fundamental question in the construction of statutory provisions is this, What did the legislature intend in the enactment of the statute?" Miller v. State, 106 Ind. 415.

"The chief thing to be explored is the intention." State v. Forkner, 70 Ind. 241.

"In the construction of statutes the prime object is to ascertain and carry out the purpose of the legislature in their enactment. To do this, the words used in the instrument should be first considered in their literal and ordinary signification; but it is often necessary to inquire beyond such meaning of words." Evansville v. Summers, 108 Ind. 192.

In People v. Com'rs, etc., 95 N. Y. 554, Earl J., said: "It is the object of all interpretation and construction of statutes to ascertain the intention of the law-makers, and this is generally accomplished by a literal reading of the words used. . . . Lieber, in his Legal and Political Hermeneutics, page 11, very aptly defines interpretation as the art of finding out the true sense of any form of words—that is, the sense which their author intended to convey—and of enabling others to derive from them the same idea which the author intended to convey."

1. 9 Bacon's Abr., tit. Statutes 1; Rex v. Pease, 4 B. & Ad. 31; 24 E. C. L. 17; Rex v. Turvey, 2 B. & Ad. 522; Becke v. Smith, 2 M. & W. 195; Everett v. Wells, 2 M. & G. 269; 40 E. C. L. 366; Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. N. S. 409; 93 E. C. L. 407; Macdougall v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 755; 73 E. C. L. 755; Malan v. May, 13 M. & W. 511; Mattison v. Hart, 14 C. B. 385; 78 E. C. L. 383; Grey v. Pearson, 6 H. L. Cas. 106; Abbott v. Middleton, 7 H. L. 68; Attorney Gen'l v. Westminster Chambers Assoc., 1 Exch. Div. 476; Austin

v. Cull, L. R., 7 C. P. 234; Reg. v. Castro, L. R., 9 Q. B. 360; Bailey v. Com., 11 Bush (Ky.) 688; Slate v. Clarksville, etc., Turnpike Co., 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 88; Levy v. McCartee, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 102; Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 620; 57 Am. Rep. 623; Maillard v. Lawrence, 16 How. (U. S.) 251; State v. Payne County (Oregon 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 787; Quigley v. Gorham, 5 Cal. 418; 63 Am. Dec. 139; Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; Steere v. Brownell, 124 Ill. 27; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 326; State v. Engle, 21 N. J. L. 354; Clark v. Baltimore, 29 Md. 283; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Jackson v. Lewis, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 475; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 49 N. Y. 455; People v. Tighe, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 26; Clark v. Utica, 18 Barb (N. Y.) 451; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; Fisher v. Counard, 100 Pa. St. 63; Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 215; Cummings v. Coleman, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 509; 62 Am. Dec. 402.

Technical Words.—In Unwin v. Hanson (1891), 2 Q. B. 115, Esher, M. R., said: "If an act deals with matters affecting everybody generally, the words used have the meaning attached to them in the common or ordinary use of language. If an act is passed with reference to a particular trade, business, or transaction, then the words used have the meaning that every one conversant with that trade, business, or transaction would assign to them, though that meaning may differ from the common or ordinary meaning." See also infra, this title, Technical Words.

2. U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 386; Clay v. Erhardt, 48 Fed. Rep. 293; U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 395; U. S. v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 95; Frye v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Ill. 399; Martin v. Swift, 120 from the language used would be an unjustifiable assumption of legislative power.¹ And where the language is susceptible of but one meaning, it must receive that meaning, although such construction leads to results which are absurd or mischievous. Courts are not to tamper with the clear and unequivocal meaning of words used, although the consequences may not be such as were contemplated by the legislature. There can be no departure from the plain meaning of a statute on grounds of its unwisdom or of public policy.²

Ill. 489; Deere v. Chapman, 25 Ill. 610; 79 Am. Dec. 350; Beardstown v. Virginia, 76 Ill. 34; Stuart v. Hamilton, 66 Ill. 253; Pearce v. Atwood, 13 Mass. 324; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601; Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 49 N. Y. 455; People v. Schoonmaker, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 49; Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 97; Furey v. Gravesend Tp., 104 N. Y. 405; Benton v. Wickwire, 54 N. Y. 226; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Com'rs of Appeal, 18 N. J. L. 71; Dodge v. Love, 49 N. J. L. 235; Townsend v. Brown, 24 N. J. L. 80; Douglass v. Essex County, 38 N. J. L. 214; Allen v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 2 Md. 111; Maxwell v. State, 40 Md. 293; Smith v. State, 66 Md. 215; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403; Bradbury v. Wagenhorst, 54 Pa. St. 182; Rich v. Keyser, 54 Pa. St. 86; Selden v. Hall, 21 Mo. App. 452; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 53 Mo. 214; Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 450; Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285; Pitt v. Acosta, 18 Fla. 270; Case v. Wildridge, 4 Ind. 51; Kilpatrick v. Byrne, 25 Miss. 571; Koch v. Bridges, 45 Miss. 247; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 652; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon County, 6 Nev. 68; Encking v. Simmons, 28 Wis. 272; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152; York, etc., R. Co. v. Queen, 1 El. & Bl. 864; 72 E. C. L. 864; Gains v. Gains, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 190; 12 Am. Dec. 375; Rex v. Hodnett, 1 T. R. 96; Rex v. Banbury, 1 Ad. & El. 112; 28 E. C. L. 57; Woodbury v. Perry, 18 Ohio St. 456; Ayers v. Trego County, 37 Kan. 240; In re Hinkle, 31 Kan. 712; Rudderow v. State, 31 N. J. L. 512.

"The first and cardinal rule in the interpretation of a statute is to look to the statute itself, the meaning, the scope, and the object of the statute; and if upon the face of it you can gather plainly what the intention of the legislature was, those incidental rules which are mere aids to be invoked where the meaning is clouded are not to be regarded." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Hewett (D. C. 1886), 2 Cent. Rep. 694.

"Even when a court is convinced that the legislature really meant and intended something not expressed by the phraseology of the act, it will not deem itself authorized to depart from the plain meaning of the language which is free from ambiguity." Smith v. State, 66 Md. 215.

"If the words embody a definite meaning, which involves no absurdity, and no contradiction between different parts of the same writing, then that meaning apparent upon the face of the instrument is the one which alone we are at liberty to say was intended to be conveyed. In such a case there is no room for construction. That which the words declare is the meaning of the instrument, and neither courts nor legislatures have the right to add to nor take away from that meaning." Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 97.

1. Newell Universal Mill Co. v. Muxlow, 115 N. Y. 170; Frye v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Ill. 399; Foley v. People, 1 Ill. 32.

2. Sedg. on St. and Const. Law 231; Cooley Const. Lim. 197 (5th ed.); Nixon v. Phillips, 21 L. J. Ex. 90; 7 Exch. 192; Midland R. Co. v. Pye, 10 C. B. N. S. 179; Abel v. Lee, L. R., 6 C. P. 371; Ornamental Woodwork Co. v. Brown, 2 H. & C. 63; Biffin v. Yorke, 5 M. & G. 437; Richards v. McBride, 8 Q. B. Div. 119; Pray v. Eddy, 1 T. R. 313; Crawford v. Spooner, 6 Moore P. C. 9; Municipal Bldg. Soc. v. Kent, 9 App. Cas. 273; Philpott v. St. George's Hospital, 6 H. L. Cas. 338; Abley v. Dale, 11 C. B. 391; 73 E. C. L. 390; In re British Farmers, etc., Co., 48 L. J. Ch. 56; Reg. v. Skeen, 28 L. J. M. C. 94; Reg. v. Tonbridge, 13 Q. B. Div. 342; Notley v. Buck, 8 B. & C. 164; 15 E. C. L. 178; Gwynne v. Burnell, 6 Bing. N. Cas.

453; 37 E. C. L. 451; In re Goodhue, 19 Grant. Ch. (Ont.) 384; Toronto v. Crookshank, 4 Q. B. (Ont.) 309, 318; U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 399; St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528; Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 10 Ct. of Cl. 548; Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 202; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 359; U. S. v. Warner, 4 McLean (U. S.) 463; Bennett v. Worthington, 24 Ark. 494; Horton v. Mobile School Com'rs, 43 Ala. 598; Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266; Reynolds v. Holland, 35 Ark. 56; Farrel Foundry v. Dart, 26 Conn. 376; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298; Fitzpatrick v. Gebhart, 7 Kan. 35; Dudley v. Reynolds, 1 Kan. 285; Sneed v. Com., 6 Dana (Ky.) 339; Bosley v. Mattingly, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 73; Clark v. Maine Shore R. Co., 81 Me. 477; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; 71 Am. Dec. 559; Collins v. Carman, 5 Md. 530; Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194; 48 Am. Dec. 248; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; 54 Am. Dec. 379; Flint, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Woodhull, 25 Mich. 99; 12 Am. Rep. 233; Leoni v. Taylor, 20 Mich. 148; Pitman v. Flint, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 504; Adams v. Howe, 14 Mass. 341; 7 Am. Dec. 216; Com. v. Hitchings, 5 Gray (Mass.) 486; State v. Washoe County, 6 Nev. 104; Jersey City, etc., R. Co. v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 61; Jersey City Gas-Light Co. v. Consumers' Gas Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 427; Douglass v. Essex County, 38 N. J. L. 216; Neundorff v. Duryea, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 267; People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 259; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 553; Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262; People v. Huntington, 4 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 187; Macomber v. New York, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 35; Cruger v. Cruger, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 225; Com. v. Shopp, 2 Woodw. (Pa.) 123; Bradbury v. Wagenhorst, 54 Pa. St. 182; Howard Association's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 344; Weister v. Hade, 52 Pa. St. 474; Baxter v. Tripp, 12 R. I. 310; In re Griffin, 25 Tex. Supp. 633; Miller v. Childress, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 320; Frye v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Ill. 399; In re Powers, 25 Vt. 265; Bull v. Read, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 78; Gore v. Brazier, 3 Mass. 539; 3 Am. Dec. 182; Ayers v. Knox, 7 Mass. 306; Langdon v. Potter, 3 Mass. 221; Doane v. Phillips, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 223; Putnam v. Langley, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 487.

Lord Blackburn said: "No court is entitled to depart from the intention of the legislature as appearing from the words of the act, because it is thought unreasonable." Countess of Rothes v. Kirkcaldy, 7 App. Cas. 702.

In Doe v. Considine, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 458, the court insisted upon a literal construction of the statute where there was no ambiguity in the terms, although the result was to give an intestate's estate away from his next of kin.

In Koch v. Bridges, 45 Miss. 259, Peyton, C. J., said: "The courts have no other duty to perform than to execute the legislative will, without any regard to their own views as to the wisdom or justice of the particular enactment."

An act which imposed a penalty on any person who piloted a ship in the Thames, before he was examined and admitted as a Trinity House pilot, was held not to reach one who had been expelled from the society after his examination and admission. Pierce v. Hopper, 1 Stra. 249.

Even where a literal construction works an injustice and enables one to take advantage of his own wrong, it must be shown that the language of the legislature admits of no other construction. Rex v. Bucks, 3 East 343; Rex v. Staffordshire, 7 East 549; Reg. v. Sussex, 4 B. & S. 966; 116 E. C. L. 964.

A statute which empowered a court to summon any person, residing in a town or navigating from its port, by leaving the summons at his abode, and to proceed ex parte if he did not appear, was held to justify ex parte proceedings against a seafaring man who had, for months before the summons and during the whole proceeding, been absent beyond the seas. Culverson v. Melton, 12 Ad. & El. 753; 40 E. C. L. 184.

A Sunday statute provided that the act should come into operation on the day "next appointed" for the annual licensing meeting. By a literal construction the operation of the act was postponed for a year later than was in all probability intended, the court refusing to avert this result by any departure from the primary meaning of the words. Richards v. McBride, 51 L. J. M. C. 15.

An act which enacted that a pilot was to deliver up his license to the pilotage authorities "whenever required to do so," should be interpreted literally, however arbitrarily the power which it conferred might be misused, and although the withdrawal of the license would effect or amount to a dismissal of the party from his employment. Henry v. Trinity House, 8 El. & Bl. 723; 92 E. C. L. 721.

Where an act authorized justices to hear a bastardy cause upon proof that summons was left at "the last place of abode" of defendant, it was held that they might proceed, though defendant was abroad and had no cognizance of the summons. Cockburn, C. J., said: "I think we are bound by the words of the statute. . . . The defendant's counsel asked us to put a qualification upon them, but we cannot do so contrary to the express words of the statute. It is very true that when the defendant is in a foreign country it is more or less inconsistent with justice that an order should be made upon him which he has no opportunity to appeal against." Reg. v. Damarel, L. R., 3 Q. B. 50. See also Rex v. Davis, 1 Hale C. C. 91; Reg. v. Higham, 7 El. & Bl. 557; 90 E. C. L. 556. Compare Reg. v. Smith, L. R., 10 Q. B. 604.

In Attorney Gen'l v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 395, Lord Abinger said: "The act has practically had a very pernicious effect not at all contemplated, but we cannot construe it according to that result."

Literal Construction May Defeat the Object of the Act.—In Rex v. Barham, 8 B. & C. 99; 15 E. C. L. 157, Lord Tenterden says: "Our decision may in this particular case operate to defeat the object of the act, but it is better to abide by this consequence than to put upon it a construction not warranted by the words of the act in order to give effect to what we may suppose to have been the intention of the legislature." To the same effect, see Frye v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 73 Ill. 399; Smith v. State, 66 Md. 215; Hines v. Wilmington R. Co., 95 N. Car. 434; State v. Scarborough, 110 N. Car. 232; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, 104 Pa. St. 543; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 438; Woodbury v. Berry, 18 Ohio St. 456; Hicks v. Jamison, 10 Mo. App. 35; Rex v. Stoke Damerel, 7 B. & C. 563; 14 E. C. L. 99; Midland R. Co. v. Pye, 10 C. B. N. S. 179; 100 E. C. L. 178; Attorney Gen'l v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 395; Rex v. Mabe, 3 Ad. & El. 531; 30 E. C. L. 145; Woodward v. Watts, 2 El. & Bl. 452; 75 E. C. L. 452; Rex v. Poor Law Com'r, 6 Ad. & El. 1; 33 E. C. L. 11.

"I cannot doubt what the intention of the legislature was, but the intention has not been carried into effect by the language used. . . . It is far better that we should abide by the words of the statute than to seek to reform it according to the supposed intention." Per Lord Campbell, in Coe v. Lawrence, 1 El. & Bl. 516; 72 E. C. L. 516.

In Woodbury v. Berry, 18 Ohio St. 462, it was said: "But notwithstanding all this, ita lex scripta est. The language as it stands is clear, explicit, and unequivocal. It leaves no room for interpretation, for nothing in the language employed is doubtful. We are satisfied, by considerations outside of the language, that the legislature intended to enact something very different from what it did enact, but it did not carry out its intention, and we cannot take the will for the deed. It is our legitimate function to interpret legislation but not to supply its omissions."

Statute of Limitations.—A most familiar instance of this rule occurs in the construction of the Statute of Limitations. It was repeatedly decided at law that the Statute of Limitations, which enacts that actions shall not be brought after the lapse of certain periods from the time when the cause of action accrued, barred actions brought after the time so limited; though the cause of action was not discovered or practically discoverable by the injured party when it accrued, or was even fraudulently concealed from him by the wrongdoer until after the time limited by the act had expired. The hardship of such decisions is obvious, but the language admitted of no other construction. Stout v. McCarthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626; 53 E. C. L. 403; Brown v. Howard, 2 B. & B. 73; Colvin v. Buckle, 8 M. & W. 680; Imperial Gaslight, etc., Co. v. London Gaslight Co., 10 Exch. 39; Bonorui v. Backhouse, 3 El. & Bl. & El. 622; Smith v. Fox, 6 Hare 386; Violett v. Simpson, 27 L. J. Q. B. 136; Hunter v. Gibbons, 1 H. & N. 459; Lamb v. Walker, 3 Q. B. Div. 389; Ecclesiastical Com'rs v. N. E. R. Co., 4 Ch. Div. 845. See also Kirk v. Todd, 21 Ch. Div. 484; Gibbs v. Guild, 9 Q. B. Div. 59; M'Iver v. Ragan, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 25; Robertson v. Alford, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 509; and see LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 727.

It was held in Paul v. Wyburn, 2 Salk. 420, that though the courts were shut so that no suit could be brought, yet the statute would bar the action,

When once the intention is plain, it is not the province of the courts to scan the wisdom or policy of statutes.¹ The duty of courts is not to make the law reasonable, but to expound it as it stands according to the real sense of the words used.² The question is, not what the legislature meant, but what it said.³ Nor will the motive of the legislature be allowed to overcome the clear meaning of the statute.⁴

If, where the meaning is clear, courts must follow the statute literally, though leading to an absurdity or to mischief, a fortiori, there can be no departure from the terms of the statute where no absurdity or inconvenience will follow from a literal interpretation.⁵

because the statute was general and must affect all cases which are not specially exempted.

In Sacia v. De Graff, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 356, Savage, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It is not for the courts to extend the law in all cases coming within the reason of it so long as they are not within the letter." See also Hudson v. Carey, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 10.

In State Bank v. Morris, 13 Ark. 291, the court said: "The statute which creates the limitation must also create the exception." And see Pryor v. Ryburn, 16 Ark. 671.

1. Abley v. Dale, 11 C. B. 378; 73 E. C. L. 378; Rex v. Watson, 7 East 214; Rex v. Staffordshire, 12 East 572; Rex v. Hodnett, 1 T. R. 100; Archer v. James, 2 B. & S. 87; 110 E. C. L. 85; Miller v. Salomon, 7 Exch. 475; Ex parte Attwater, 5 Ch. Div. 30; Municipal Bldg. Soc. v. Kent, 9 App. Cas. 273; State v. Siedtke, 9 Neb. 468; Dame's App., 62 Pa. St. 417; Reithmiller v. People, 44 Mich. 280; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 191; 54 Am. Dec. 379.

In Priestman v. U. S., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 28, Chase, J., said: "I shall always deem it a duty to conform to the expressions of the legislature to the letter of the statute when free from ambiguity and doubt, without indulging a speculation, either upon the impolicy or the hardship of the law."

In Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 107, Field, J., said: "What is termed the policy of the government with reference to any particular legislation, is generally a very uncertain thing upon which all sorts of opinions, each variant from the other, may be formed by different persons. It is a ground much too unstable upon which to rest the judgment of a court in the interpretation of statutes."

In Dame's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 417,

Sharswood, C. J., said: "The moment we depart from the plain words of the statute, according to their ordinary and grammatical meaning, in the hunt for some intention founded on the general policy of the law, we find ourselves involved in a 'sea of trouble.' Difficulties and contradictions meet us at every turn."

2. Biffin v. Yorke, 6 Scott, N. S. 234; 5 M. & G. 428; 44 E. C. L. 228; Barstow v. Smith, Walker (Mich.) 394.

In Everett v. Wells, 2 Scott, N. R. 531, Tindal, C. J., says: "It is the duty of all courts to confine themselves to the words of the legislature, nothing adding thereto, nothing diminishing. The office of interpretation is to bring sense out of the words used, not to bring a sense into them." McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601.

3. Maxwell v. State, 89 Ala. 150; Palmer v. Thatcher, 3 Q. B. Div. 353; Coxhead v. Mullis, 3 C. P. Div. 439; Green v. Wood, 7 Q. B. 185; 53 E. C. L. 183; Sedg. on Const. of Statutory and Constitutional Law, p. 205; Potter's Dwarris on Statutes, p. 146; Niagara County v. People, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 513.

4. Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703; Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189; 2 Am. Rep. 432; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 143; Green v. Cheek, 5 Ind. 107; Coe v. Lawrence, 1 El. & Bl. 516; Rex v. Borham, 8 B. & C. 99; 15 E. C. L. 157; also Sunbury, etc., R. Co. v. Cooper, 33 Pa. St. 287.

5. Ayers v. Trego County, 37 Kan. 240; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. People, 123 Ill. 467; Martin v. Swift, 120 Ill. 488; Hicks v. Jamison, 10 Mo. App. 35; Douglass v. Essex County, 38 N. J. L. 214; State v. Brewster, 42 N. J. L. 125; Ezekiel v. Dixon, 3 Ga. 146; Woodward v. Watts, 2 El. & Bl. 452; 75 E. C. L. 452; Hinton v. Dibben, 2 Q. B. 646; 42 E. C. L. 847.

From the rule that where but one meaning can attach to the terms of a statute, there is no room for construction, it follows that nothing can be added to, or taken from, a statute, unless to construe its words according to their obvious meaning would give rise to manifest inconsistency, incongruity, or ambiguity.¹ Thus, a court may not insert limitations, nor except special cases which fall within the scope of the general terms used in the statute.² And words may not be imported into a statute, in order that it may include a case which has been omitted, merely because there

1. Everett v. Wells, 2 M. & G. 277; 40 E. C. L. 366; Ex parte St. Sepulchre, 33 L. J. Ch. 378; In re Cherry's Estate, 31 L. J. Ch. 351; Ezekiel v. Dixon, 3 Ga. 146; Hamilton v. St. Louis Co. Ct., 15 Mo. 3; Lane v. Schomp, 20 N. J. Eq. 82; Lacy v. Moore, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 348. See also Laird v. Buggs, 19 Ch. Div. 33; Hull v. Hull, 2 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 174.

It is a universal principle of construction that courts must find the intent of the legislature in the statute itself. Unless some ground can be found in a statute for restraining or enlarging the meaning of its general words, they must receive a general construction, and the courts cannot arbitrarily subtract from or add thereto. Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152.

2. Stowell v. Zouch, Plowd. 353; Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. Jr. 93; U. S. v. Coombs, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 72; Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine (U. S.) 584; M'Iver v. Ragan, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 25; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; 95 Am. Dec. 152; Box v. Stanford, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 93; 51 Am. Dec. 142; Kilpatrick v. Byrne, 25 Miss. 571; Robertson v. Alford, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 512; Thornton v. Crisp, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 54; Oliver's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 299; In re Bloomfield First Presbyterian Church, 107 Pa. St. 543; Erie County v. Erie Water Com'rs, 113 Pa. St. 368; Pittsburgh v. Kalchthaler, 114 Pa. St. 47; Bradley v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 34 N. Y. 427; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 259; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dumser, 109 Ill. 402; Enckling v. Simmons, 28 Wis. 272; Troup v. Smith, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 33; Demorest v. Wynkoop, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 135; 8 Am. Dec. 467; Pike v. Hoare, 2 Eden 184; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 366; 35 Am. Dec. 326; Hamilton v. Shepperd, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 115; Cocke v. M'Ginnis, Mart. & Y.

(Tenn.) 361; 42 Am. Dec. 809; Callis v. Waddy, 2 Munf. (Va.) 511.

A statute gave a reward to "whosoever shall pursue and apprehend any person who shall have stolen any mare or horse," etc. It was held that the statute made no distinction between the owner of the horse stolen and any other person who should pursue and capture the thief. Butler County v. Leibold, 107 Pa. St. 407.

A statute provided "that whenever any person shall die leaving a widow and children or a widow and child, it shall and may be lawful for the executor or administrator thereof to allow, out of the effects of such deceased person, a reasonable support and maintenance for the space of twelve months," etc. It was held that this entitled the widow and children of the decedent to support, whether his estate was solvent or insolvent. Hopkins v. Long, 9 Ga. 261.

In Harrington v. Smith, 28 Wis. 60, it was said: "And here another rule of interpretation becomes directly applicable, which is, that general words in a statute must receive a general construction, unless there be something in it to restrain, or, as it is otherwise frequently expressed, if there be no express exception."

In Collins v. Carman, 5 Md. 505, the question was upon the right of a widow to renounce the provision made for her in the will of her late husband. She was insane at its date, and so continued. By the statute of the state it was necessary that she should dissent from the provision made in the will, which, being insane, she was incapable of doing. The language of the statute was comprehensive enough to include every widow, whether sane or insane, and the statute made no exception in favor of the latter. It was decided that none could be made by the courts whether of law or equity.

It was said by Lumpkin, J., in Tor- seems to be no good reason why it should have been omitted, and the omission consequently appears to have been unintentional.¹

Where the language is precise and unambiguous, but at the same time incapable of reasonable meaning, and the act is consequently inoperative, a court is not at liberty to give the words on rance v. McDougald, 12 Ga. 530, that this rule was considered so inflexible that the Statute of Wills, 32 Hen. VIII, having authorized all and every person or persons to devise their land, it was feared that it might enable infants and insane persons to do it, and the statute of 34 Hen. VIII was consequently passed to introduce these exceptions. See also Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 93.

Where a statute in general terms enabled any wife without any exception as to age to file her libel for divorce, it was held that a wife, although under the age of twenty-one, might, in her own name, without acting by guardian or next friend, file her libel and obtain relief. Jones v. Jones, 18 Me. 308; 36 Am. Dec. 723.

Statute of Limitations.—The exceptions allowed to the operation of the Statute of Limitations would seem to qualify this rule; for example, the suspension of its operation during the time of war. Hanger v. Abbott, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 532; Braun v. Sauerwein, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 222; Caperton v. Bowyer, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 235; Washington University v. Finch, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 110; Ross v. Jones, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 586; Harrison v. Myer, 92 U. S. 115. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 763.

1. Dwarris on Statutes (2d ed.) 579; Rex v. Burrell, 12 Ad. & El. 460; 40 E. C. L. 96; Lamond v. Eiffe, 3 Q. B. 910; 43 E. C. L. 1032; Rex v. Vandeleer, 1 Stra. 69; Rex v. Davie, 6 Ad. & El. 375; 33 E. C. L. 90; Bloxam v. Elsee, 6 B. & C. 169; 13 E. C. L. 133; Nettleson v. Burrill, 8 Scott N. R. 738; Wanklyn v. Woollett, 4 C. B. 86; 56 E. C. L. 85; Reg. v. Ashburton, 8 Q. B. 871; 55 E. C. L. 871; Higgs v. Schrader, 3 C. P. Div. 252; Newton v. Boodle, 3 C. B. 795; 54 E. C. L. 794; Hind v. Arthur, 7 D. & L. 252; Denn v. Reid, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 524; Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 354; Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285; Woodbury v. Berry, 18 Ohio St. 462; Southwestern R. Co. v. Cohen, 49 Ga. 626; U. S. v. Breed, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 160; Steere v. Brownell, 124 Ill. 27.

In Denn v. Reid, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 524, McClean, J., said: "Where the language of the act is not clear, and is of doubtful construction, a court may well look at every part of the statute, at its title, and the mischief intended to be remedied in carrying it into effect. But it is not for the court to say, where the language of the statute is clear, that it shall be so construed as to embrace cases, because no good reason can be assigned why they were excluded from its provisions."

"We are not at liberty," says the court, in Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 485, "to imagine an intent and bind the letter of the act to that intent; much less can we indulge in the license of striking out or inserting and remodeling, with the view of making the letter express an intent which the statute in its native form does not evidence."

A statute provided, that at any time that a vacancy may occur in the office of attorney general the governor shall appoint a person to hold the office "until the next general election when his successor shall be elected." It was contended by counsel that the statute should be interpreted as though it read "who shall hold the office until the next general election for officers of a like class, or state officers, when his successor shall be elected," etc. This construction was refused by the court, which said: "But it is importing words into the statute not found there to sustain the construction contended for, and to give the statute and the section a particular meaning which they would not bear without them, as Patterson, J., said: 'I see the necessity of not importing into the statute words which are not found there. Such a mode of interpretation only gives occasion to endless difficulty.' Rex v. Burrell, 12 Ad. & El. 468; 40 E. C. L. 96."

Thus, the English Divorce Act, which provided that any order made for the protection of the earnings of a deserted married woman might be discharged by the magistrate who made it, was held not to empower his successor to discharge it though the mag-mere conjectural grounds a meaning which does not belong to them.¹ It is, therefore, only in cases where the words of the statute are capable of two meanings, or where by giving them their literal interpretation the statute will be inconsistent or ambiguous, that courts resort to the secondary rules of construction to aid in determining the real intention of the legislature.²

4. Where Meaning Is Ambiguous.—The rule of literal construction, treated of in the preceding section, does not go very far, for it is confined to cases where the language is susceptible of but one construction, or to cases where the context or the consequence to which a literal interpretation would lead necessarily show that such interpretation would not express the real intention. Language is rarely so free from ambiguity as to be incapable of being used in more than one sense, and to adhere rigidly to its literal and primary meaning in all cases would be to miss its real meaning in many. If a literal meaning had been given to the laws which forbade a layman to lay hands on a priest, and punished all who drew blood in the street, the layman who wounded the priest with a weapon would not have fallen within the prohibition, and the surgeon who bled a person in the street to save his life would have been liable to punishment.³

Another elementary rule is that a thing which is within the letter of a law is not within the law unless it is also within the meaning of the law; and the words, if sufficiently flexible, must be construed in the sense which, if less correct grammatically, is more in harmony with that meaning.⁴

istrate who had made it was dead. Ex parte Sharp, 5 B. & S. 322.

So also was it held that 26 & 27 Vict., ch. 29, which enacts that answers made to an election commission shall not be admitted in evidence in any proceeding, except in cases of "indictment" for perjury, left them excluded in "informations" for perjury filed by the attorney general. Reg. v. Slater, 8 Q. B. Div. 267.

1. Green v. Wood, 7 Q. B. 178; 53 E. C. L. 178; Doe v. Carew, 2 Q. B. 317; 42 E. C. L. 692; Mundy v. Rutland, Q. B., Nov. 29, 1882; Ward v. Ward, 37 Tex. 389; Hughe's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 46; State v. Boon, 1 Tayl. (N. Car.) 103. See also Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 49 N. Y. 455; People v. Schoonmaker, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 49; Pittsburgh v. Kalchthaler, 114 Pa. St. 547; Com. v. Bank of Pa., 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 173.

An act provided that "the sale of spirituous liquors shall be prohibited within three miles of . . . Mount Zion Church, Gaston county." It appeared on trial that there were two churches bearing that name in Gaston county. It was held that the statute was inoperative. State v. Partlow, 91 N. Car. 550; 49 Am. Rep. 652. See also supra, this title, Validity and Effect. Drake v. Drake, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 110.

2. George v. Board of Education, 33 Ga. 344; Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 97; McClusky v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 593; Barstow v. Smith, Walk. (Mich.) 394; Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 469; Denn v. Reid, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 524; Farrel Foundry v. Dart, 26 Conn. 382; Colehan v. Cooke, Willes 397; Priestman v. U. S., 4 Dall. (U. S.) 30, n.

3. 1 Bl. Com. 60; 1 Kent's Com. 462. See U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 400; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 370; 35 Am. Dec. 326; State v. Clark, 29 N. J. L. 96; Henry v. Lilson, 17 Vt. 479; People v. Admire, 39 Ill. 251; Murray v. Hobson, 10 Colo. 66; Potter v. Douglass County, 87 Mo. 239.

4. Hollingsworth v. Palmer, 4 Exch. 281; Waugh v. Middleton, 8 Exch. 352; Caledonian R. Co. v. North British R. Co., 6 App. Cas. 122; Edinburgh

5. General Means of Learning Intent by Reference to—a. CONTEXT.
—All parts of the same statute must be taken together. If one part standing by itself is obscure, it may be aided by another.¹

St. Tramways Co. v. Torbain, 3 App. Cas. 58; River Wear Com'rs v. Adamson, 2 App. Cas. 743; Direct U. S. Cable Co. v. Anglo-American Tel. Co., 2 App. Cas. 412; Ex parte Walton, 17 Ch. Div. 746.

A thing which is within the intention of the makers of a statute is as much within the statute as if it were within the letter; and a thing which is within the letter of the statute is not within the statute unless it be within the intention of the makers. Riggs v. Palmer, 26 N. Y. St. Rep. 198. See also Bacon's Abr., tit. Statute (I) 5; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; Greensburg v. Laird, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 608; Delafield v. Brady, 108 N. Y. 524; Jackson v. Collins, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 89; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Roach, 80 N. Y. 339. This is true sometimes even in a criminal statute. U. S. v. Morrissey, 32 Fed. Rep. 147; Lawrence v. Conner, 12 Ky. L. Rep. 86.

In the construction of statutes the rules of grammar are less important than the intention of the legislature, and the sense and spirit of the statute prevail over the strict grammatical construction of its words. Singer Mfg. Co. v. McCollock, 24 Fed. Rep. 667. See also George v. Board of Education, 33 Ga. 344; Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 620; 57 Am. Rep. 623.

If the terms of a statute are ambiguous, it becomes the duty of the court to give such construction to it as may fairly be said to be in accordance with the intention of the legislature. It is only in cases of ambiguity, however, that the court exercises this power of controlling the language of a statute. Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 259; Leavitt v. Blatchford, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 469; Barstow v. Smith, Walk. (Mich.) 394; Bradbury v. Wagenhorst, 54 Pa. St. 180, and cases cited supra; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa 312; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

1. Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 92; Rex v. Palmer, 1 Leach 352; Co. Litt. 381a; Lincoln's College Case, 3 Rep. 59b; Lord Auckland v. Westminster Board of Works, L. R., 7 Ch. 597; Fitzpatrick v. Kelly, L. R., 8 Q. B. 337; Core v. James, L. R., 7 Q. B. 13; Nuth v. Tamplin, 8 Q. B. Div. 253; Holbrook

v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 248; Com. v. Robertson, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 438; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 53; Opinion of Justices, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 571; Com. v. Cambridge, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 267; Mendon v. Worcester County, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 235; Ayers v. Knox, 7 Mass. 306; Green v. Com., 12 Allen (Mass.) 155; Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610; Williams v. People, 17 Ill. App. 274; Thompson v. Bulson, 78 Ill. 277; Mason v. Finch, 3 Ill. 223; Belleville, etc., R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20; 58 Am. Dec. 589; Williams v. People, 17 Ill. App. 274; Crone v. State, 49 Ind. 538; Storms v. Stevens, 104 Ind. 46; Green v. Cheek, 5 Ind. 105; State v. Williams, 8 Ind. 191; May v. Hoover, 112 Ind. 458; Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; Lutz v. Crawfordsville, 109 Ind. 466; Maple Lake v. Wright County, 12 Minn. 403; St. Peter's Church v. Scott County, 12 Minn. 395; U. S. v. Landram, 118 U. S. 81; Pennington v. Coxe, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 33; U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 358; The Elizabeth, 1 Paine (U. S.) 11; Strode v. Stafford, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 162; Adams v. Woods, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 336; Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine (U. S.) 584; Rice v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 358; Atkins v. Fiber Disintegrating Co., 18 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Georgia v. Atkins, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 22; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 326; Blanchard v. Sprague, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 279; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 4; Magruder v. Carroll, 4 Md. 335; Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 471; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Ruggles v. Washington County, 3 Mo. 496; State v. Weigel, 48 Mo. 29; Ex parte Marmaduke, 91 Mo. 228; 60 Am. Rep. 250; In re Murphy, 23 N. J. L. 180; Van Riper v. Essex Public Road, 38 N. J. L. 23; State v. Patterson, 35 N. J. L. 197; Davey v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 31 Iowa 553; Leet v. Jno. Dare Silver Min. Co., 6 Nev. 218; Torrance v. McDougald, 12 Ga. 526; State v. Atkins, 35 Ga. 319; Albrecht v. State, 8 Tex. App. 313; 34 Am. Rep. 737; Brooks v. Mobile School Com'rs, 31 Ala. 227; Wheat v. Smith, 50 Ark. 266; Com. v. Duane, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 610; 2 Am. Dec. 497; Holl v.

Deshler, 71 Pa. St. 299; Com. v. Conyngham, 66 Pa. St. 99; Small v. Small, 129 Pa. St. 366; Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139; San Francisco v. Hazen, 5 Cal. 169; Nicolson Pavement Co. v. Painter, 35 Cal. 708; Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 240; Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475; Berry v. Clary, 77 Me. 482; Attorney Gen'l v. Bank of Michigan, Harr. (Mich.) 315; Attorney Gen'l v. Detroit Plank Road Co., 2 Mich. 138; Reynolds v. Baldwin, 1 La. Ann. 162; Hebert's Succession, 5 La. Ann. 121; State v. Judge, 12 La. Ann. 777; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152; Simonds v. Powers, 28 Vt. 354; Nichols v. Wells, Sneed (Ky.) 255; Wenger v. Taylor, 39 Kan. 754; Wheeling Gas. Co. v. Wheeling, 8 W. Va. 320; Wilson v. Biscoe, 11 Ark. 44; Scott v. State, 22 Ark. 369; Ellison v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 36 Miss. 572; McIntyre v. Ingraham, 35 Miss. 25.

In Attorney Gen'l v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 515, Pollock, C. B., said: "To discover the true construction of any particular clause of a statute the first thing to be attended to no doubt is the actual language of the clause itself as introduced by the preamble. Second, the words or expressions which obviously by design are omitted. Third, the connection of the clause with other clauses in the same statute, and the conclusions which, on comparison with other clauses, may reasonably and obviously be drawn. . . . If the comparison of one clause with the rest of the statute makes a certain proposition clear and undoubted, the act must be construed accordingly, and ought to be so construed as to make it a consistent whole. If, after all, it turns out that that cannot be done, the construction that produces the greatest harmony and the least inconsistency is that which ought to prevail."

"The true rule for the construction of statutes is to look to the whole and every part of the statute and to the apparent intention derived from the whole, to the subject-matter, to the effects and consequences, and to the reason and spirit of the law, and thus to ascertain the true meaning of the legislature, though the meaning so ascertained conflicts with the legal sense of the words." Aldis, J., in Ryegate v. Wardsboro, 30 Vt. 745.

If any part of a statute be obscure, it is proper to consider the other parts, for the words and meaning of one part of a statute frequently lead to the sense of another. Bacon's Abr., tit. Statutes (I) 2; citing Plowd. 365; Stowel v. Zouch, 11 Mod. 161.

If one section of an act, for instance, requires that "notice" should be "given," a verbal notice would probably be sufficient; but if a subsequent section provided that it should be "served" on a person, or "left" with him in a particular manner, it would obviously show that a written notice was intended. Moyle v. Jenkins, 51 L. J. Q. B. 112; Wilson v. Nightingale, 8 Q. B. 1034; 55 E. C. L. 1034.

"But where words are so general that they must receive some limitation in construction, and cannot be construed literally, what is the restriction that ought to be imposed upon them?" This is to be learned from the context and from the general purview of the act. The object of all rules of construction being to ascertain the meaning of the language used, and, it being unreasonable to impute to the legislature inconsistent intents on the same general subject-matter, what it has clearly said in one part must be the best evidence of what it has intended to say in another. The court must apply, in such a case, the same rules which it would use in construing the limitation of a deed; it must look to the whole context, and endeavor to give effect to the provisions, enlarging or restricting, if need be, for that purpose, the literal interpretation of any particular part. Potter's Dwar., p. 197; citing Coleridge, J., Reg. v. Poor Law Com'rs, 6 A. & E. 7; 33 E. C. L. 12.

"One of the safest guides to the construction of sweeping general words, which it is difficult to apply in their full literal sense, is to examine other words of like import in the same instrument, and to see what limitations must be imposed on them. If it is found that a number of such expressions have to be subjected to limitations or qualifications, and that such limitations or qualifications are of the same nature, that forms a strong argument for subjecting the expression in dispute to a like limitation or qualification." Blackwood v. Reg., 8 App. Cas. 94.

Section to be First Consulted.—In Spencer v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 22 Ch. Div. 162, it was said by Jessel, M. R., that the meaning of a word should be first determined, if possible, from the section in which it was used. If that can be done, no recourse is necessary to the other sections of the act.

Thus, a consideration of the whole act may expand or restrict the terms of a particular clause.¹ In this connection a body of Revised laws or a code is not to be construed as prior and subsequent acts, but as forming one general system of statute law.²

An act embodying several distinct acts is to be treated, for the purposes of interpretation, like separate enactments.³

An Act and Its Amendment.—An act and its supplement must be construed as one law, so that the terms of the act may in their connection with the supplement have a broader meaning than the original possessed. Van Riper v. Essex Public Road Board, 38 N. J. L. 23.

It is a rule, in construing statutes, that the original act and the amendment are to be viewed as one act, and that no portion of either is to be declared inoperative, if they can be made to stand together without wresting the words from their appropriate meaning. Harrell v. Harrell, 8 Fla. 46; U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235.

Correcting Mistakes—Supplying Omissions.—In Blanchard v. Sprague, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 282, Story, J., said: "I agree that in construing an act of Congress if there be a plain mistake apparent upon the face of the act which may be corrected by other language in the act itself, the mistake is not fatal."

In Brinsfield v. Carter, 2 Ga. 143, it was held that the omission of the word "grant" in one section of a statute might be explained by other parts of the same statute so as to supply the omitted word and give the act its intended effect.

1. Simonds v. Powers, 28 Vt. 354; Covington v. McNickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 262; Stockett v. Bird, 18 Md. 484; Electro-Magnetic, etc., Co. v. Van Auken, 9 Colo. 204; Wheeling Gas Co. v. Wheeling, 8 W. Va. 320; Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610; Mason v. Finch, 3 Ill. 223; Maple Lake v. Wright County, 12 Minn. 403; Cape v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; Reynolds v. Baldwin, 1 La. Ann. 162; Colquhoun v. Brooks, 14 App. Cas. 493; Williams v. McDoual, 4 Chand. (Wis.) 65.

In Covington v. McNickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 286, Duval, J., said: "A well-known rule for the construction of statutes which, though ancient, is always adhered to, is that general words in one clause of a statute may be restrained by the particular words in a subsequent clause of the same statute."

2. Ashley v. Harrington, 1 D. Chip. (Vt.) 348; Buckstaff v. Hanville, 14 Wis. 77; State v. Messmore, 14 Wis. 115; Smith v. Smith, 19 Wis. 522; Ex parte Ray, 45 Ala. 15; O'Neal v. Robinson, 45 Ala. 526; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Comans, 45 Ala. 437; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Malone, 46 Ala. 391; Bryant v. Livermore, 20 Minn. 313; Gallegos v. Pino, 1 N. Mex. 410. See also Bank of Louisiana v. Farrar, 1 La. Ann. 54.

In Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 249, Chalmers, J., said: "Differences of time are to be disregarded in construing a code, if by disregarding them and by looking at the work as a whole harmony can thereby be produced; but if this proves impossible, if after exhausting every scheme of reconciliation there still remains a palpable and irrepressible conflict, we are compelled, in the absence of anything in itself indicative of the legislative will, to determine it by adopting its latest declaration."

3. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 622, where it was said per Turner, L. J., that the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854, which was divided into several parts, each of which related to a distinct and independent branch of merchantshipping law, was to be considered as embodying several distinct acts in one act, and that one part thereof threw no more light on other parts than would be cast on them by the existence of other separate enactments to the same effect.

The constitutions of most of the states prescribe that a statute shall not relate to more than one subject, and that this shall be expressed in the title. See supra, this title, Titles and Subjects Under Constitutions.

Where sections of statutes on the same subject, enacted originally at different times, are re-enacted by a revisory act, they are to be construed together, if possible, as continuous sections of the same act; and this principle should be applied in construing the

That construction is favored which gives effect to every clause and every part of the statute, thus producing a consistent and harmonious whole. A construction which would leave without effect any part of the language used should be rejected if an interpretation can be found which will give it effect.¹

sections of the statute relating to service of process, where the sheriff is a party. Gallegos v. Pino, 1 N. Mex. 410.

1. Sedgwick's Stat. Law 199; Powler's Case, 11 Coke 29a, 32a; Brooks v. Mobile School Com'rs, 31 Ala. 227; Wheat v. Smith, 50 Ark. 266; Wilson v. Biscoe, 11 Ark. 44; Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. Howell, 31 Ark. 119; Hagenbuck v. Reed, 3 Neb. 24; State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 602; McCann v. McLennan, 2 Neb. 286; People v. Burns, 5 Mich. 114; Attorney Gen'l v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 2 Mich. 138; Swartwout v. Michigan, etc., R. Co., 24 Mich. 388; Montesquieu v. Heil, 4 La. 51; 23 Am. Dec. 471; Montclair v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147; Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine (U. S.) 584; U. S. v. Warner, 4 McLean (U. S.) 463; James v. Dubois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Judd v. Driver, 1 Kan. 455; Wenger v. Taylor, 39 Kan. 754; San Diego v. Granniss, 77 Cal. 511; Rawson v. State, 19 Conn. 292; Sams v. King, 18 Fla. 557; Reg. v. West Riding, 1 Q. B. 329; Gaudet v. Brown, L. R., 5 P. C. 134; The Alina, 5 P. D. 138; Clementson v. Mason, L. R., 10 C. P. 209; Hawkins v. Filkins, 24 Ark. 321; In re New York, etc., Bridge, 72 N. Y. 530; Martin v. O'Brien, 34 Miss. 21; Root v. Sinnock, 24 Ill. App. 537; affirmed 120 Ill. 350; 60 Am. Rep. 558; Williams v. People, 17 Ill. App. 274; San Francisco v. Hazen, 5 Cal. 169; Gates v. Salmon, 35 Cal. 576; 95 Am. Dec. 139; People v. King, 28 Cal. 265; Hutchen v. Niblo, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 148; Hawthorn v. Randolph County (Ind. App. 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 17; Stayton v. Hulings, 7 Ind. 145; Humphries v. Davies, 100 Ind. 274; 50 Am. Rep. 788; Green v. Cheek, 5 Ind. 105; State v. Casteel, 110 Ind. 174; Patterson v. Spearman, 37 Iowa 42; Leversee v. Reynolds, 13 Iowa 310; Knowles v. Picket, 46 Iowa 503; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa 312; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 89; Com. v. Jordan, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 228; Opinion of Justices, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 571; Coffin v. Hussey, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 289; Dearborn v. Brookline, 97 Mass. 466; Com. v. Bar- ber, 143 Mass. 560; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Gee v. Thompson, 11 La. Ann. 657; Torreyson v. Board of Examiners, 7 Nev. 19; State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 599; Lacy v. Moore, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 348.

An Iowa statute provided that "Actions of replevin and suits commenced by attachment may be commenced in any county and township wherein any portion of the property is found, and justices shall have jurisdiction therein within the county." The court refused to hold that the jurisdiction of a justice was limited to the township in which the defendant resides, or in which the property sought to be attached may be found, saying: "To hold that the jurisdiction is limited to the township of defendant's residence, or where the property may be found, would involve the necessity of rejecting, as unmeaning and surplusage, a portion of the language of the statute. For certainly, as thus construed, the words, 'and justices shall have jurisdiction therein (that is, in such cases), within the county,' would be entirely without meaning. This is never allowed, if a construction can be legitimately found, which will give force to and preserve all the words of the statute."

"To adopt either of these definitions, would render the use of the word 'assessments' tautological, as the word following it, or as to the remainder of the section. But the rule in construing the statute requires that effect is to be given to every part, and we are not to suppose words have been used which are intended to import nothing." Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 333.

The words and meaning of one part of a statute may sometimes lead to and furnish an explanation of the sense of another; and it is a rule in the exposition of statutes, that one part should be taken with another, and the whole considered together, and so construed that no clause, sentence or word shall, if it can be avoided, be superfluous or insignificant. Baltimore v. Howard, 6 Har. & J. (Md.) 383.

All parts of a statute are to be considered together, keeping in view the

There is a prima facie presumption that the meaning of a word repeatedly used in a statute is identical in all places, unless there is something to show that there is another meaning intended.¹ This presumption, however, is never deemed conclusive, and indeed is generally considered of little weight.²

If, in any particular clause of an act, expressions or words are found not so extensive in their import as those used in other parts, and if, upon a view of the whole act, the real intention of the legislature can be gathered from the larger and more extensive expressions, courts will give effect to the larger expressions, and the particular words ordinarily used in a less extensive meaning must be extended to effectuate the real purpose.³ Where there is an subject-matter of legislation, in order to ascertain the legislative intent. Effect should be given to each clause when it can be done; but one clause may be enlarged or limited by other provisions upon the same subject. No construction of words is admissible which gives to them an absurd signification, if any other reasonable construction is possible. San Diego v. Granniss, 77 Cal. 511.

Private Acts and Special Clauses.—In construing an act of a private or local character, special clauses frequently embodied in it are to be treated as isolated and foreign to the rest of the act, and, contrary to the general rule, cannot be regarded as throwing any light on the construction of such act. East London R. Co. v. Whitechurch, L. R., 7 H. L. 89.

1. Pitte v. Shipley, 46 Cal. 161; Courtauld v. Legh, L. R., 4 Exch. 126; Reg. v. Poor Law Com'rs, 6 Ad. & El. 68; 33 E. C. L. 12; In re Kirkstall Brewery Co., 5 Ch. Div. 535. Compare Bones v. Booth, 2 W. Bl. 1226; U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235; Den v. Schenck, 8 N. J. L. 34; James v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 293; Raymond v. Cleveland, 42 Ohio St. 529. See infra, this title, Presumptions, Use of Same Language.

In Rhodes v. Weldy, 46 Ohio St. 242, it was said: "Where the same word or phrase is used more than once in the same act, especially in the same section and in the same sentence, in relation to the same subject-matter and looking to the same general purpose, it is a fundamental rule of statutory construction that if in one connection the meaning is clear and in the other it is otherwise doubtful or obscure, it is in the latter case to be construed the same as in the former."

2. Texas v. White, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 700; U. S. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 631; Feagin v. Comptroller, 42 Ala. 610; Reg. v. Kent, 2 Q. B. 692; 42 E. C. L. 866; Rex v. Lewis, Dears. & B. 182; Angell v. Angell, 9 Q. B. 353; 58 E. C. L. 355; Reg. v. Allen, L. R., 1 C. C. 367; Henry v. Cemetery Trustees, 48 Ohio St. 671.

This is well illustrated by a passage from Vattel, which, though applied by that author to treaties, is said by Bishop (Bishop's Stat. Cr., § 95a) to have equal force in statutory construction. "If," he says, "any one of those expressions which are susceptible of different significations occurs more than once in the same piece, we cannot make it a rule to take it everywhere in the same signification. For we must take such expression, in each article, according as the subject requires, pro substrata materia, as the masters of the art say. The word day, for instance, has two significations. If, therefore, it be said in a convention that there shall be a truce of fifty days, on condition that commissioners from both parties shall, during eight successive days, jointly endeavor to adjust the dispute, the fifty days of the truce are civil days of twenty-four hours; but it would be absurd to understand them in the same sense in the second article, and to pretend that the commissioners should labor eight days and nights without intermission." Vattel Law of Nations, b. 2, ch. 17, § 281.

A fortiori, if the same word is used in different connections and in different statutes, there is no rule of construction requiring the same meaning to be attached to it. Rupp v. Swineford, 40 Wis. 28.

3. Reynolds v. Baldwin, 1 La. Ann. 162; State v. Wilson, 3 Ill. 225; Mason irreconcilable conflict between different parts of the same act, the last in order of position must control.¹

b. STATUTES IN PARI MATERIA.—Statutes which are not inconsistent with one another and which relate to the same subject-matter, are in pari materia, and should be construed together and effect be given to them all, although they contain no reference to one another and were passed at different times.² Especially should effect be given, if possible, to statutes in pari materia enacted at

v. Finch, 3 Ill. 223; Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610; Torrance v. McDougald, 12 Ga. 526; State v. Jennings, 27 Ark. 419; Haghn v. Rogers, 37 Ark. 495.

In Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610, the language used in the first part of an act was "all incorporated towns and cities," while in another part the act used only the word "city," and the court held that even though the word "city" was not sufficiently comprehensive to embrace "incorporated towns," yet under this principle it could not be doubted that the larger and more extensive signification was intended.

1. People v. Dobbins, 73 Cal. 259; Branagan v. Dulaney, 8 Colo. 408; Sams v. King, 18 Fla. 557; Quick v. White Water Tp., 7 Ind. 570; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Wyandotte County, 16 Kan. 594; Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 232; Ryan v. State, 5 Neb. 282; Alberston v. State, 9 Neb. 429; Harrington v. Rochester, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 553; State v. Shelby County, 36 Ohio St. 326; Packer v. Sunbury, etc., R. Co., 19 Pa. St. 211; Brown v. Philadelphia County, 21 Pa. St. 42.

But "where the last clause of one section of the statute is plainly inconsistent with the first portion of the same section, and of another preceding section of the statute, and this section and part of section conform to the obvious policy and intent of the legislature, the last clause, if operative at all, must be so construed as to give it an effect consistent with the other section and part of section, and with the policy they indicate." Sams v. King, 18 Fla. 557.

In construing certain sections of the railroad tax law of Kansas, the court, in Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Wyandotte County, 16 Kan. 594, by Brewer, J., said: "If there be no way of reconciling the conflicting clauses, force ought to be given to those which would place this law in harmony with the general tax law and secure the rights of both the state and railroads rather than to those which would make this incongruous and out of harmony with other legislation, and would expose the railroads to arbitrary and excessive assessments without adequate means of investigation and redress."

2. In Pari Materia.—Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 44; Anonymous, Lofft 398; Ailesbury v. Pattison, 1 Dougl. 30; Rex v. Palmer, 1 Leach C. C. 352; Doe v. Yarborough, 7 Moore 258; 1 Bing. 24; 8 E. C. L. 384; Murray v. Thorniley, 2 C. B. 225; 52 E. C. L. 224; Heelis v. Blain, 18 C. B. N. S. 106; 114 E. C. L. 105; Orme's Case, L. R., 8 C. P. 281; Hadfield's Case, L. R., 8 C. P. 306; Smith v. Brown, L. R., 6 Q. B. 731; Attorney Gen'l v. Brown, 3 Exch. Div. 276; Reg. v. Tonbridge, 13 Q. B. Div. 342; Pennington v. Cox, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 33; Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 7; Doe v. Winn, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 386; Pollard v. Kibbe, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 366; U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 564; Converse v. U. S., 21 How. (U. S.) 463; U. S. v. Walker, 22 How. (U. S.) 299; U. S. v. Babbitt, 1 Black (U. S.) 55; "The Distilled Spirits," 11 Wall. (U. S.) 356; Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 162; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78; Cooper Mfg. Co. v. Ferguson, 113 U. S. 727; U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., 127 U. S. 406; Vane v. Newcombe, 132 U. S. 235; Butler v. Russel, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 255; The Elizabeth, 1 Paine (U. S.) 11; U. S. v. Collier, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 333; Black v. Scott, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 329; Dubois v. McLean, 4 McLean (U. S.) 489; Gordon v. South Fork Canal Co., 1 McAll. (U. S.) 517; Le Roy v. Chabolla, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 448; U. S. v. Benson, 31 Fed. Rep. 896; Philbrook v. U. S., 8 Ct. of Cl. 523; Act for Relief, etc., 2 Op. Atty. Gen'l 46; Ex parte Ray, 45 Ala. 15; Crawford v. Tyson, 46 Ala. 299; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Malone, 46 Ala. 391; State v. Sloss, 83 Ala. 93; McFarland v. State Bank, 4 Ark. 410;

37 Am. Dec. 761; State v. Watts, 23 Ark. 308; Duncan v. Owens, 47 Ark. 388; Harley v. Heyl, 2 Cal. 481; Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41; People v. Phoenix, 6 Cal. 93; Wilson v. Broder, 10 Cal. 488; People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 329; Lick v. Madden, 25 Cal. 207; People v. Jackson, 30 Cal. 427; People v. Broadway Wharf Co., 31 Cal. 34; McMinn v. Bliss, 31 Cal. 122; McQuade v. Whaley, 31 Cal. 526; Robbins v. Omnibus R. Co., 32 Cal. 472; Grant v. Cooke, 7 D. C. 165; U. S. v. Marble, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 12; Bryan v. Dennis, 4 Fla. 445; Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13; Spencer v. McBride, 14 Fla. 403; Doggett v. Walter, 15 Fla. 367; Ex parte O'Donovan, 24 Fla. 281; Ferrari v. Board of Health, 24 Fla. 390; Harrison v. Walker, 1 Ga. 32; McDougald v. Dougherty, 14 Ga. 674; Roff v. Johnson, 40 Ga. 555; Chandler v. Lee, 1 Idaho 349; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Ottawa v. La Salle County, 12 Ill. 341; Turney v. Wilton, 36 Ill. 393; Fowler v. Pirkins, 77 Ill. 274; Young v. Stearns, 91 Ill. 221; Holton v. Daly, 106 Ill. 139; People v. Hazelwood, 116 Ill. 323; Hunt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 644; Dunaway v. Goodall, 3 Ill. App. 201; State v. Rackley, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 249; Williams v. New Albany, etc., R. Co., 5 Ind. 111; McMahon v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 5 Ind. 413; State v. Springfield Tp., 6 Ind. 83; La Grange County v. Cutler, 6 Ind. 354; Indiana Cent. Canal Co. v. State, 53 Ind. 583; Hutts v. Hutts, 62 Ind. 246; Taylor v. Washington County, 67 Ind. 384; Wright v. Tipton County, 82 Ind. 335; Carver v. Smith, 90 Ind. 227; 46 Am. Rep. 210; Crawfordsville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Fletcher, 104 Ind. 97; Stout v. Grant County, 107 Ind. 343; State v. Harrison, 116 Ind. 300; Lorimier v. Lewis, 1 Morris (Iowa) 253; 39 Am. Dec. 461; State v. Shaw, 28 Iowa 67; Davey v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 31 Iowa 553; State v. Sherman, 46 Iowa 415; Rhode v. Bank, 52 Iowa 375; Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64 Iowa 700; Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67 Iowa 199; County Seat of Linn Co., 15 Kan. 500; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Wyandotte County, 16 Kan. 594; In re Hall, 38 Kan. 670; Louisville v. Com., 9 Dana (Ky.) 70; Wallace v. Young, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 157; Scarborough v. Watkins, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 550; 50 Am. Dec. 528; Nazareth Literary, etc., Inst. v. Com., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 214; Nunes v. Wellisch, 12 Bush (Ky.) 363;

De Armas' Case, 10 Martin (La.) 172; Montesquieu v. Heil, 4 La. 56; 23 Am. Dec. 471; Gayle v. Williams, 7 La. 162; Rouanet v. Hunt, 17 La. 407; Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Nuttall, 19 La. 451; Phelps v. Rightor, 9 Rob. (La.) 531; Desban v. Pickett, 16 La. Ann. 350; Richardson v. Richardson, 38 La. Ann. 641; Merrill v. Crossman, 68 Me. 412; Baltimore v. Howard, 6 Har. & J. (Md.) 383; Baltzell v. Foss, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 504; Kiersted v. State, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 231; Hays v. Richardson, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 366; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 152; State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 399; 38 Am. Dec. 319; Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill (Md.) 138; 43 Am. Dec. 306; Ranoul v. Griffie, 3 Md. 54; State v. Mister, 5 Md. 11; Billingslea v. Baldwin, 23 Md. 85; Terry v. Foster, 1 Mass. 150; 2 Am. Dec. 6; Church v. Crocker, 3 Mass. 21; Holland v. Makepeace, 8 Mass. 423; Somerset v. Dighton, 12 Mass. 385; Com. v. Martin, 17 Mass. 362; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 254; Haynes v. Jenks, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 176; Mendon v. Worcester County, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 244; Com. v. Cambridge, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 271; Goddard v. Boston, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 409; Com. v. Sylvester, 13 Allen (Mass.) 248; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 492; Whipple v. Circuit Judge, 26 Mich. 342; Simpkins v. Ward, 45 Mich. 559; Bryant v. Livermore, 20 Minn. 313; Scott v. Searles, 1 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 590; Gilliam v. Moor, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 137; State v. Dickinson, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 583; White v. Johnson, 23 Miss. 68; House v. State, 41 Miss. 737; Eskridge v. McGruder, 45 Miss. 294; Clements v. Anderson, 46 Miss. 581; Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 251; Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Shacklett, 30 Mo. 557; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 24; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 54 Mo. 216; In re Bomino's Estate, 83 Mo. 441; Peters v. Vawter, 10 Mont. 210; People v. Weston, 3 Neb. 324; White v. Blum, 4 Neb. 561; Hendrix v. Rieinan, 6 Neb. 516; State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 509; State v. Donnelly, 20 Nev. 216; Hayes v. Hanson, 12 N. H. 284; Robinson v. Tuttle, 37 N. H. 248; Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295; State Bank v. Receivers' Bank, 3 N. J. Eq. 270; Wallace v. Wallace, 3 N. J. Eq. 619; People's Bank v. Paterson Sav. Bank, 10 N. J. Eq. 17; Clement v. Kaighn, 15 N. J. Eq. 56; Jersey v.

Demarest, 27 N. J. Eq. 301; Barraccliff v. Griscom, 1 N. J. L. 224; Austin v. Nelson, 6 N. J. L. 383; White v. Hunt, 6 N. J. L. 417; Brown v. Wright, 13 N. J. L. 242; The Ordinary v. Smith, 14 N. J. L. 482; Perth Amboy v. Piscataway, 19 N. J. L. 180; Den v. Wade, 20 N. J. L. 293; Rudderow v. State, 31 N. J. L. 515; New Jersey Ins. Co. v. Meeker, 37 N. J. L. 304; Koch v. Vanderhoof, 49 N. J. L. 621; Gartner v. Cohen, 51 N. J. L. 125; Rogers v. Bradshaw, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 744; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 225; McCartee v. New York City Orphan Asylum, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 507; 18 Am. Dec. 516; People v. French, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 347; Kilbourne v. Sullivan County, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 217; Fort v. Burch, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 69; Waterford, etc., Turnpike v. People, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 161; Rexford v. Knight, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 627; Perkins v. Perkins, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 531; Powers v. Shepard, 48 N. Y. 540; Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 18; People v. New York Cath. Protector, 106 N. Y. 614; In re Livingston, 121 N. Y. 104; Bowles v. Cochran, 93 N. Car. 398; Wortham v. Basket, 99 N. Car. 70; Dodge v. Gridley, 10 Ohio 173; Manuel v. Manuel, 13 Ohio St. 464; Jones v. Carr, 16 Ohio St. 428; Seeley v. Thomas, 31 Ohio St. 304; Malone v. Toledo, 34 Ohio St. 548; State v. Cincinnati R. Co., 37 Ohio St. 170; Lowden v. Cincinnati, 2 Disney (Ohio) 207; McLaughlin v. Hoover, 1 Oregon 31; Winter v. Norton, 1 Oregon 42; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co's Appeal, 1 Penny. (Pa.) 449; Union Canal Co. v. O'Brien, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 358; Neeld's Road, 1 Pa. St. 355; Davis' Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 256; Black v. Tricker, 59 Pa. St. 13; Keeling's Road, 59 Pa. St. 358; The Howard Association's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 344; Com. v. Potts, 79 Pa. St. 164; Bourguignon Bldg. Assoc. v. Com., 98 Pa. St. 64; Koontz v. Howsare, 100 Pa. St. 508; Chilcoat's Appeal, 101 Pa. St. 26; Linton's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 239; Boyle v. Horner, 104 Pa. St. 379; Jacoby v. Shafer, 105 Pa. St. 614; Booz's Appeal, 109 Pa. St. 592; Keystone Bridge Co's. Appeal (Pa. 1887), 7 Atl. Rep. 580; Coleman v. Davidson Academy, Cooke (Tenn.) 261; Smith v. Hickman, Cooke (Tenn.) 338; Hart v. Reynolds, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 208; Graham v. Gunn, 87 Tenn. 458; Fowler v. Poor, Dall. (Tex.) 401; Neil v. Keese, 5 Tex. 23; 51 Am. Dec. 746; Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418; Cannon v. Vaughan, 12 Tex. 402; Scoby

v. Sweatt, 28 Tex. 727; Napier v. Hodges, 31 Tex. 295; Austin v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 45 Tex. 234; Berry v. State, 10 Tex. App. 315; Henry v. Tilson, 17 Vt. 479; Isham v. Bennington Iron Co., 19 Vt. 230; Whitcomb v. Rood, 20 Vt. 49; Highgate v. State, 59 Vt. 46; Warder v. Arell, 2 Wash. (Va.) 282; 1 Am. Dec. 488; Davidson v. Carson, 1 Wash. Ter. 307; Forqueran v. Donnally, 7 W. Va. 114; Storm v. Cotzhausen, 38 Wis. 139.

It is the universal rule in the construction of statutes, and a settled maxim of the common law, that all acts passed on the same subject in pari materia must be construed together and made to stand if capable of being reconciled. There is no exception to the universality of this rule. McFarland v. State Bank, 4 Ark. 410; 37 Am. Dec. 761.

Several statutes relating to the same subject will be so interpreted, if possible, as to secure harmony in their application and perpetuate the general purpose of the legislation. Wortham v. Basket, 99 N. Car. 70.

In construing a statute regard must be had to other current legislation in pari materia, "and the whole should, if possible, be made to harmonize; and if the sense be doubtful, such construction should, if possible, be given as will not conflict with the general principles of law, which it may be presumed the legislature would not intend to disregard or change." Manuel v. Manuel, 13 Ohio St. 464.

However broad some of the expressions of a statute may be, yet if, on examination, it clearly appears that they are and were intended to be limited by other provisions of the same or other acts on the same subject, it cannot be improper to restrain them accordingly. The Elizabeth, 1 Paine (U. S.) 11.

Illustrations.—The revenue laws of the United States, though made up of independent enactments, are to be regarded as one system. Pennington v. Cox, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 33; U. S. v. Collier, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 333.

The various acts of congress on the subject of soldiers' bounty are in pari materia. Philbrook v. U. S., 8 Ct. of Cl. 523.

Laws upon the subject of the public lands are in pari materia, and are to be construed together. An authority to an individual to make an entry of any of those lands is not to be considered an isolated act, to be strictly the same legislative session.¹ So contemporaneous legislation, expounded upon its own letter, but as having relation to the general system, and to be expounded according to the meaning of congress, which is to be collected from the language of the particular law as compared with the whole system, and from the reason and nature of the case. Act for Relief, etc., 2 Op. Atty. Gen'l 46.

The sections of the revised code of Alabama relating to railroads are to be construed as one law. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Malone, 46 Ala. 391.

Acts providing for the sale of infants' estates by the courts, an act extending the power of the courts to decree such sales, and an act prescribing the mode of proceeding on petition of guardians and next friends for the sale of infants' real estate, are in pari materia. Bol-giano v. Cook, 19 Md. 392; Billingslea v. Baldwin, 23 Md. 106.

A statute in relation to attachments against steamboats and other water craft is in pari materia with the general attachment law. Wallace v. Seales, 36 Miss. 53.

The sections of a code referring to the same subject-matter are to be construed as a single statute. Mitchell v. Long, 74 Ga. 96; Stidhan v. Sims, 74 Ga. 187; State v. Boswell, 104 Ind. 547; Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64 Iowa 700; Burger v. Frakes, 67 Iowa 467; Hunt v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 67 Iowa 742; Depas v. Riez, 2 La. Ann. 30; Childers v. Johnson, 6 La. Ann. 638; St. Joseph v. Porter, 29 Mo. App. 605; Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 251; Hunt v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 67 Iowa 742; Roberts v. Briscoe, 44 Ohio St. 600.

An act to provide for the completion of the fence around the capitol grounds and to appropriate money therefor, and which also enacts that all the work that can be done by convict labor on said fence shall be so done, is in pari materia with an act passed at the same session of the legislature providing for the lease of the state penitentiary and for the number of convicts the lessees are to furnish. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 54 Mo. 216.

An act and its supplement are to be construed as one law. Van Riper v. Essex Public Road, 38 N. J. L. 23.

The several statutes relating to the jurisdiction and practice of district courts, though varying in their titles, are in pari materia. Gartner v. Cohen, 51 N. J. L. 125.

In many instances a remedy provided by one statute will be extended to cases arising on the same subject-matter under a subsequent statute. Rogers v. Bradshaw, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 744.

An act passed in 1817 for the construction of the Erie Canal vested the fee of the lands taken for the purpose in the state. In 1819 another act was passed by which also lands were taken for the construction of the canal, but no provision as to title was made. It was held that the people took the same interest under the act of 1819 as they did under that of 1817. Rexford v. Knight, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 627.

All recent New York statutes for the protection of married women in their estates are to be construed as one in their letter, spirit, and intent, precisely as if they were contained in one act. Perkins v. Perkins, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 531.

An act of 1811 incorporating a canal company did not authorize the company to erect a dam across the whole channel of the Schuylkill river. A supplementary act of 1826 did authorize the erection of such a dam. It was held that these acts were in pari materia and that the remedy provided by the act of 1811 for injuries to property therein mentioned could be applied to obtain redress for such injuries as the erection of the dam might have produced directly and immediately to property, or as might have been, in all cases of the like kind, the inevitable consequences of its erection under the authority contained in the act of 1826. Union Canal Co. v. O'Brien, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 358.

A statute relating to garnishment in aid of an execution and that relating to garnishment in attachment suits are in pari materia. Storm v. Cotzhausen, 38 Wis. 139.

1. Where two statutes of the same day relate to the same thing, and one is more comprehensive than the other, effort will be made to give to one some operation not embraced in the other, so that each may, if possible, have some effect, that the legislation may not appear to have been vain and useless. Nazareth Literary Inst. v. Com., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 214.

not precisely in pari materia with the statute to be construed, may be referred to on the question of intent.¹

Not only may contemporaneous and prior statutes be considered in construing a given act, but a subsequent statute may often aid in the interpretation of a prior one.² Private acts conferring special privileges and the general acts on the same subject are also to be construed together and effect is to be given to both, if possible.³

Expired and repealed acts in pari materia with the statute to be construed may also be considered in the interpretation thereof.⁴

Acts passed at the same session of the legislature are to be taken in pari materia and receive a construction which will give effect to each, if possible; but as each cannot have the same effect entirely when taken in connection with the other as it would have if taken singly, they must be so construed as to carry into effect what appears to have been the main intention of the legislature. State v. Rackley, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 250; Florida, etc., R. Co. v. Pensacola, etc., R. Co., 10 Fla. 160.

Two statutes passed upon the same subject by the same legislature at the same session should be construed together and both allowed to stand, if possible. But where they are in irreconcilable conflict with each other, then the latter supersedes the former, notwithstanding that both were intended to take effect and go into operation at the same time. The latter must be regarded as the last expressed will of the legislature. Wright v. Tipton County, 82 Ind. 337.

1. Prather v. Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co., 52 Ind. 16; Middleton v. Greenson, 106 Ind. 22; Stout v. Grant County, 107 Ind. 344; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 333; In re Rochester Water Com'rs, 66 N. Y. 422; Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 18. See also Vane v. Newcombe, 132 U. S. 235.

2. Clarke v. Powell, 4 B. & Ad. 846; 24 E. C. L. 174; Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. N. S. 404; 93 E. C. L. 404; Grill v. General Iron Screw Collier Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 611; Rolle v. Whyte, L. R., 3 Q. B. 298; Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 7; U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 564; Cape Girardeau County Ct. v. Hill, 118 U. S. 72; Georgia Penitentiary Co. v. Nelms, 65 Ga. 67; 38 Am. Dec. 793; Com. v. Sylvester, 13 Allen (Mass.) 247; In re Livingston, 121 N. Y. 104; Moyer v. Gross, 2 Pen. & W. (Pa.)

172; Baer v. Baer, 33 Pa. St. 530; Hart v. Reynolds, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 208.

If a thing contained in a subsequent statute be within the reason of a former statute, it shall be taken to be within the meaning of that statute (Lord Raym. 1028); and if it can be gathered from a subsequent statute in pari materia what meaning the legislature attached to the words of a former statute, they will amount to a legislative declaration of its meaning and will govern the construction of the first statute. U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 564. See also Cannon v. Vaughan, 12 Tex. 402.

In interpreting a given statute, if a subsequent act on the same subject affords complete demonstration of the legislative sense of its own language, the subsequent act should be incorporated into the act to be construed. Alexander v. Alexandria, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 7.

3. McFarland v. State Bank, 4 Ark. 410; 37 Am. Dec. 761; People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 333; Maysville Turnpike Road Co. v. How, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 342; Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 460; Auburn Com'rs of Excise v. Burtis, 103 N. Y. 136; Mt. Holly Co's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 513; New Brighton, etc., R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 105 Pa. St. 13.

4. Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 44; Goldsmid v. Hampton, 5 C. B. N. S. 94; 94 E. C. L. 93; Ex parte Copeland, 2 De G. M. & G. 914; U. S. v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508; Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707; Ferrari v. Board of Health, 24 Fla. 410; Harrison v. Walker, 1 Ga. 32; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 230; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Prather v. Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co., 52 Ind. 16; Middleton v. Greenson, 106 Ind. 22; Stout v. Grant County, 107 Ind. 348; State v. Harrison, 116 Ind. 300;

So repealed clauses of a statute may be considered in construing the provisions that remain.¹ And only when a later act is clearly repugnant to a former one will the former one be deemed repealed by implication. Seeming repugnance is not sufficient, but the two acts will be construed as in pari materia, and effect be given to both, if possible.²

In construing a given act the meaning of words or terms as used therein may be gathered from the consideration of other acts in pari materia in which such words or terms were also used.³

Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 513; 71 Am. Dec. 550; Baltimore v. Howard, 6 Har. & J. (Md.) 383; State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 399; 38 Am. Dec. 319; Church v. Crocker, 3 Mass. 21; Eaton v. Green, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 532; Medbury v. Watson, 6 Met. (Mass.) 246; 39 Am. Dec. 726; Holbrook v. Bliss, 9 Allen (Mass.) 75; Com. v. Bailey, 13 Allen (Mass.) 545; Hamilton v. Boston, 14 Allen (Mass.) 478; Ham v. Boston Police Board, 142 Mass. 94; Grand Gulf Bank v. Archer, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 151; Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 304; Daniels v. Com., 7 Pa. St. 373; Coleman v. Davidson Academy, Cooke (Tenn.) 261; Steadman v. Merchants', etc., Bank, 69 Tex. 53; Forqueran v. Donnally, 7 W. Va. 114; Kollock v. Madison (Wis. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 725; Flandels v. Merrimack, 48 Wis. 567.

1. Attorney Gen'l v. Lamplough, 3 Exch. Div. 227; Banks for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556. Analogous to this rule is the principle of Com. v. Potts, 79 Pa. St. 164, in which it was held that where a section of a statute contains an unconstitutional provision, such provision cannot be stricken out in construing the section.

2. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., 127 U. S. 406; U. S. v. One Hundred Barrels of Spirits, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 505; Wyman v. Campbell, 6 Port. (Ala.) 219; 31 Am. Dec. 677; Riggs v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 285; Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 43; Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 18; Ottawa v. La Salle Co., 12 Ill. 341; Hunt v. Chicago, etc., Ry., 121 Ill. 638; La Grange County v. Cutler, 6 Ind. 354; Rhode v. Bank, 52 Iowa 376; De Armas' Case, 10 Martin (La.) 172; Gayle v. Williams, 7 La. 166; Hebert's Succession, 5 La. Ann. 122; Desban v. Pickett, 16 La. Ann. 351; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 152; Dugan v.

Gittings, 3 Gill (Md.) 154; 43 Am. Dec. 306; Goddard v. Boston, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 410; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 377; 35 Am. Dec. 326; White v. Johnson, 23 Miss. 74; M'Cartee v. New York City Orphan Asylum, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 437; 18 Am. Dec. 516; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 225; Smith v. Hickman, Cooke (Tenn.) 338; Napier v. Hodges, 31 Tex. 295; Lewis v. Aylott, 45 Tex. 199; Laughter v. Seela, 50 Tex. 177; Forqueran v. Donnally, 7 W. Va. 114.

Where two laws only so far disagree or differ as that by any other construction they may both stand together, the rule that leges posteriores, priores contrarias abrogant does not apply, and the latter is no repeal of the former. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 152.

A later statute on a given subject not repealing an earlier one in terms is not to be taken as a repeal by implication, unless it is plainly repugnant to the former, or unless it fully embraces the whole subject-matter. Goddard v. Boston, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 410; Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill (Md.) 154; 43 Am. Dec. 306; Gayle v. Williams, 7 La. 166.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., 127 U. S. 406, the court, by Field J., said, that where there are two acts or provisions of law relating to the same subject, effect is to be given to both if that be practicable; if the two are repugnant, the latter will operate as a repeal of the former to the extent of the repugnancy. But the second act will not operate as such repeal merely because it may repeat some of the provisions of the first one or omit others or add new provisions. In such cases the latter act will operate as a repeal only where it plainly appears that it is intended as a substitute for the first act.

3. Where two acts of congress are in pari materia, it will be presumed, in the absence of anything to show a

The foregoing rules of construction are applicable also to penal statutes.¹ So in construing codifications, revisions, or re-enactments in which the language is doubtful or ambiguous, former statutes therein embodied are to be considered.²

Where a statute is in pari materia with a prior one which has already received an equitable construction, that construction is extended to the later one.³

The rule of construction that statutes in pari materia are to contrary intent, that if the same word be used in both and a special meaning be given to it in the first act, it was intended that it should receive the same interpretation in the later act. Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 162.

Where two acts are in pari materia a word used in a certain sense in the first act will be presumed to have been used in the same sense in the subsequent one, unless there be something in the context or the nature of things to indicate that a different meaning was intended. County Seat of Linn County, 15 Kan. 500. See also Robbins v. Omnibus R. Co., 32 Cal. 472; Mickle v. Matlack, 17 N. J. L. 93; State v. Garthwaite, 23 N. J. L. 143.

A subsequent statute containing a reference to a former one may be looked to in order to ascertain the meaning of terms used in the former one, even in their application to acts done between the dates of the statutes. Hart v. Reynolds, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 208.

When terms or modes of expression are employed in a new statute which had acquired a definite meaning and application in a previous statute on the same subject, or one analogous to it, they are generally supposed to be used in the same sense, and in settling the construction of such new statute regard should be had to the known and established interpretation of the old. Whitcomb v. Rood, 20 Vt. 49.

1. The Harriet, 1 Story (U. S.) 251; Morrison v. State, 40 Ark. 448; State v. Sewall, 45 Ark. 391; Kollenberger v. People, 9 Colo. 233; State v. Boswell, 14 Ind. 547; State v. Wells, 112 Ind. 277; Harriman v. State, 2 Greene (Iowa) 274; State v. Smith, 7 Iowa 244; Com. v. English, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 81; Green v. Com., 12 Allen (Mass.) 166; Com. v. Bailey, 13 Allen (Mass.) 545; Com. v. Griffin, 105 Mass. 187; House v. State, 41 Miss. 746; State v. Garthwaite, 23 N. J. L. 143; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 330; State v. Bell, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 508; Daniels v. Com., 7 Pa. St. 373; State v. Wilbor, 1 R. I. 204; 36 Am. Dec. 245; State v. Baldwin, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 541; State v. Fields, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 554; State v. Mooty, 3 Hill (S. Car.) 499; State v. Williams, 13 S. Car. 558; Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 362; Taylor v. State, 3 Tex. App. 169.

2. In the interpretation of a code the former statutes embodied in such code may be resorted to. Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678; Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707; Nicholson v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 49 Ala. 205; Gunter v. State, 83 Ala. 96; Desban v. Pickett, 16 La. Ann. 351.

When it becomes necessary to construe language so used in the Revised Statutes of the United States as to leave a substantial doubt as to its meaning, the original enactment may be resorted to for the purpose of ascertaining that meaning. U. S. v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508; Meyer v. Western Car Co., 102 U. S. 1; Victor v. Arthur, 104 U. S. 498; U. S. v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624; State v. Brewster, 44 Ohio St. 252; Heck v. State, 44 Ohio St. 537. See also U. S. v. Butterworth, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 229; In re Spencer, McA. & M. (D. C.) 433.

Sections of a statute re enacted in the Revised Statutes of the United States are to be given the same meaning which they had in the original, unless the contrary intention is clearly manifested. U. S. v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278.

Where the law as expressed in a section of the public statutes of Massachusetts is ambiguous or doubtful, it is then most proper to examine the statutes of which it is a revision. Pratt v. Boston Street Com'rs, 139 Mass. 563.

3. Vernon's Case, 4 Rep. 4; Sturgis v. Darrell, 4 H. & N. 622; Hersha v. Brenneman, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 2; Eshleman's Appeal, 74 Pa. St. 42. But see Adam v. Bristol, 2 Ad. & El. 389; 29 E. C. L. 125.

be treated as one law is not absolute, and is not to be resorted to where the obvious intent of the legislature would thereby be defeated, either by a strained reconciliation of such statutes or by regarding statutes as in pari materia which are not really so.¹

1. In United Society v. Eagle Bank, 7 Conn. 469, it was said: "Statutes are in pari materia which relate to the same person or thing or to the same class of persons or things. The word par must not be confounded with the term similis. It is used in opposition to it, as in the expression, Magis pares sunt quam similis, intimating, not likeness merely, but identity. It is a phrase applicable to the public statutes or general laws made at different times and in reference to the same subject." See also O'Neal v. Robertson, 45 Ala. 535; Waterford, etc., Turnpike v. People, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 169; Highgate v. State, 59 Vt. 46.

In Ex parte Blaiberg, 23 Ch. Div. 258, Jessel, M. R., said that if an act can clearly have one meaning, effect ought to be given to it accordingly; since the consideration of other acts and decisions thereon may often lead to a conclusion directly contrary to the act to be construed.

The doctrine that statutes in pari materia are to be taken together and construed as one act is resorted to in cases of doubt and is never applicable where a statute is plain and unambiguous. State v. Cram, 16 Wis. 347. See, however, McFarland v. State Bank, 4 Ark. 416; 37 Am. Dec. 761; and Robinson v. Tuttle, 37 N. H. 248, where it was held that in order to ascertain the meaning of any particular section, even when the words were unambiguous, it was proper to consider other laws relating to the same subject-matter.

"It is true that statutes relating to the same subject are to be construed together, but this rule does not go to the extent of controlling the language of subsequent statutes by any supposed policy of previous ones." Goodrich v. Russell, 42 N. Y. 184.

Where the words of the statute to be construed differ from the words of a former act on the same subject, it is an intimation that they are to have a different and not the same construction. Rich v. Keyser, 54 Pa. St. 89; Lehman v. Robinson, 59 Ala. 235.

"While it is true that a construction which repeals former statutes by implication is not to be favored, and it is also true that statutes in pari materia and relating to the same subject, are to be taken and considered together, still when the new statute in itself comprehends the whole subject and creates a new, entire, and independent system respecting the subject-matter, it is universally held to repeal and supersede all previous systems of laws respecting the same subject-matter." Harold v. State, 16 Tex. App. 157. See also Stirman v. State, 21 Tex. 734.

The case most hostile to the construction of one statute by a resort to others in pari materia is U. S. v. The Penelope, 2 Pet. Adm. 448, in which it was held to be dangerous and unnecessary for courts to decide on a number of acts said to be in pari materia when a question arises only on a construction of one.

Illustrations.—The Statute of Frauds is not in pari materia with the bankrupt acts, and shares in a joint-stock banking company are not "goods" within § 17 of the Statute of Frauds. Humble v. Mitchell, 11 Ad. & El. 205; 39 E. C. L. 46.

A bicycle, though a carriage within the enactment against furious driving, is not a carriage within a local turnpike act imposing tolls. Williams v. Ellis, 5 Q. B. Div. 175.

Legislation in relation to the confinement of stock so as to prevent its running on the premises of others is not in pari materia with the sections of the Alabama Code that lay down the rule of diligence to be observed by railroads in the running of their trains, and that define their liabilities in cases where stock is killed. Central R. Co. v. Hamilton, 71 Ga. 465.

A statute expressed as amending a former statute so as "to read as follows," and containing a clause repealing all laws and parts of laws in conflict therewith, is not to be construed as in pari materia with the displaced legislation, but independently. Cortesy v. Territory (N. Mex. 1892), 32 Pac. Rep. 504.

So "private acts of the legislature conferring distinct rights on different individuals, which never can be considered as one statute or the parts of a general system, are not to be interpreted by mutual reference to each

As a general rule private acts cannot be considered as in pari materia. Nor may an act wherein the legislature seeks to construe a former statute be considered in pari materia therewith, as the opinion of a legislature as to the meaning of a prior statute is entitled to little weight.¹

c. PURPOSE AND OBJECT.—It is a canon of interpretation that the legislative purpose and the object aimed at are to be borne in mind, and that language susceptible of more than one construction is to receive that which will bring it into harmony with such object and purpose rather than that which will tend to defeat it.²

other." United Society v. Eagle Bank, 7 Conn. 469, and in this case it was held that the charters of various banks were not in pari materia.

In the exposition of a private statute conferring special privileges or imposing particular obligations, it is not proper to resort to the language of any other private act not relating to the same parties and the same subject-matter; such private statute standing upon the same basis with contracts by deed, which are not to be affected by evidence aliunde. Thomas v. Mahan, 4 Me. 513.

When the legislature has granted special privileges at different sessions to two independent corporations, the court will not so construe any general expressions of the last grant as to effect a destruction of the first. New Haven v. New Haven Water Co., 44 Conn. 105.

Where two statutes are passed, each authorizing the erection of a boom, they must be interpreted separately, though both booms become the property of one company; and an act consolidating the two boom companies, will not change the liability of either under its act of incorporation to deliver logs at its own boom—the boom in which they were caught. Gould v. Langdon, 43 Pa. St. 365. But see Levering v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 459, where, in the construction of a certain provision in a railroad charter, the charters of other railroad companies were considered. See also Covington v. McNickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 286.

1. Bingham v. Winona County, 8 Minn. 441. In Dash v. Van Vleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 508; 5 Am. Dec. 291, the court, by Kent. C. J., said that it was beyond the power of the legislature to take cognizance of judicial questions by enacting statutes wherein a construction of former acts is attempted.

Statutes are to be construed according to their plain import without regard to mere inferences which may be drawn from the language of an act passed by a subsequent legislature. Ingalls v. Cole, 47 Me. 530.

The intention of one legislature in the use and application of a term in an act passed by it, is not conclusive as to the intention of another and different legislative body in the use of the term in the passage of another and different act. True, it is proper to look at such a circumstance in arriving at a correct interpretation of the subsequent law, still that interpretation must be such as is demanded by the terms of the act itself, if they are clear and unambiguous. Feagin v. Comptroller, 42 Ala. 522. See also supra, this title, Legislative Construction.

2. Purpose and Object.—Sedgw. on St., p. 359; Wiltshire v. Willett, 11 C. B. N. S. 240; Reg. v. Edmundson, 2 El. & El. 77; 105 E. C. L. 75; 103 E. C. L. 239; Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De G. M. & G. 1; Blakeney v. Blakeney, 6 Port. (Ala.) 109; 30 Am. Dec. 574; Horton v. Mobile School Com'rs, 43 Ala. 604; People v. Dana, 22 Cal. 11; Sherman v. Buick, 32 Cal. 241; 91 Am. Dec. 577; Helm v. Chapman, 66 Cal. 291; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Talbot, 113 Ind. 373; 3 Am. St. Rep. 655; Lake v. Caddo Parish, 37 La. Ann. 788; Barnard v. Gall, 43 La. Ann. 959; State v. Judge, 12 La. Ann. 777; Commercial Bank v. Foster, 5 La. Ann. 516; Crawfordsville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Fletcher, 104 Ind. 97; Taylor v. Washington County, 67 Ind. 383; Krug v. Davis, 87 Ind. 590; Hawthorn v. Randolph County (Ind. App. 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 16; Humph-

ries v. Davis, 100 Ind. 274; 50 Am. Rep. 788; Green v. State, 59 Md. 130; 43 Am. Rep. 542; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Winslow v. Kimball, 25 Me. 495; Opinion of Justices, 7 Mass. 523; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 370; 35 Am. Dec. 326; McIntyre v. Ingraham, 35 Miss. 25; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 19; Ingraham v. Speed, 30 Miss. 413; Power v. Choteau County, 7 Mont. 82; Ruggles v. Washington County, 3 Mo. 496; St. Louis v. Lane, 110 Mo. 254; Jones v. Water Com'rs, 34 Mich. 273; Whipple v. Circuit Judge, 26 Mich. 341; Anderson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 117 Ill. 26; Harrison v. Com., 83 Ky. 162; State v. Patterson, 35 N. J. L. 196; People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 95 N. Y. 558; People v. Weston, 3 Neb. 312; Keith v. Quinney, 1 Oregon 364; Erwin v. Moore, 15 Ga. 361; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 119; Simonds v. Powers, 28 Vt. 354; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46; Binney v. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 201; The Emily, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 381; Lau Ow Bew v. U. S., 144 U. S. 59; Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 198; Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365; U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 563; Leppitt v. Huston, 8 R. I. 415; 94 Am. Dec. 115; Reniger v. Foygasser, Plowd. 18; Rex v. Younger, 5 T. R. 449; Margate Pier Co. v. Hannam, 3 B. & Ald. 266; 5 E. C. L. 278; Edwards v. Dick, 4 B. & Ald. 210; 6 E. C. L. 455; Commercial Bank v. Foster, 5 La Ann. 517; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 17; Ryegate v. Wardsboro, 30 Vt. 746; Riddick v. Governor, 1 Mo. 147; Whitney v. Whitney, 14 Mass. 92; Reynolds v. Holland, 35 Ark. 56; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 2 Ala. 573; Thompson v. State, 20 Ala. 54; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475; Ex parte Ellis, 11 Cal. 222; People v. Dana, 22 Cal. 11; George v. Board of Education, 33 Ga. 344; People v. Blackwelder, 21 Ill. App. 254; State v. Poydras, 9 La. Ann. 165; New England Car Spring Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 11 Md. 90; 69 Am. Dec. 181; Frazier v. Warfield, 13 Md. 279; Johnson v. Heald, 33 Md. 372; Gray v. Cumberland County, 83 Me. 429; 1 Kent's Com. 462; Bac. Ab. 1, 5; Caledonian R. Co. v. North British R. Co., 6 App. Cas. 122; Freme

v. Clement, 44 L. T., N. S. 399; Ex parte Walton, 17 Ch. Div. 746; Hotham v. Sutton, 15 Ves. 320; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 5 Madd. 72; Dwarris on Statutes 690; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 662; Denn v. Reed, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 524; U. S. v. Bassett, 2 Story (U. S.) 399; Milburn v. State, 1 Md. 17; Clare v. State, 68 Ind. 25; State v. Tucker, 46 Ind. 355; Evansville v. Summers, 108 Ind. 189; Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. St. 293; Eshleman's Appeal, 74 Pa. St. 46; Hayden v. Foster, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 496; Pearce v. Atwood, 13 Mass. 343; State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48; Burch v. Newbury, 10 N. Y. 389; People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 98; Oswego Starch Factory v. Dolloway, 21 N. Y. 461; Donaldson v. Wood, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 397; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228; Watervliet Turnpike Co. v. M'Kean, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 619; Bell v. New York, 105 N. Y. 139; Eyston v. Studd. Plowd. 459, 465; Somerset v. Dighton, 12 Mass. 383; State v. King, 44 Mo. 283; Allen v. Parish, 3 Ohio 198; Simonds v. Powers, 28 Vt. 354; Whitney v. Whitney, 14 Mass. 88; Learned v. Corley, 43 Miss. 696; St. Louis v. Lane, 110 Mo. 254; Laurence v. Conner (Ky. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 77; Columbus Southern R. Co. v. Wright, 89 Ga. 574; Simonds v. Powers, 28 Vt. 354; Carolina Sav. Bank v. Evans, 28 S. Car. 521; Vermont L. & T. Co. v. Whithed, 2 N. Dak. 82; Wassel v. Tunnah, 25 Ark. 102; Berry v. Clary, 77 Me. 484; Com. v. Montrose, 52 Pa. St. 391; Jackson v. Collins, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 89; Beall v. Harwood, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 167; 3 Am. Dec. 532; Riggs v. Palmer, 26 N. Y. St. Rep. 198; Greensburg v. Laird, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 608.

In Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 41, Stuart, J., said: "In statutory exposition, the reason, the spirit of the law, is above the mere cavil about words."

In People v. Lacombe, 99 N. Y. 43, it was said: "A strict and literal interpretation is not always to be adhered to, and where the case is brought within the intention of the makers of the statute it is within the statute, although by a technical construction it is not within its letter. It is the spirit and purpose of a statute which are to be regarded in its interpretation; and if these find fair expression in the statute, it should be so construed as to carry out the legislative intent, even al-

But, to justify a departure from the literal meaning of words, the intention must appear with reasonable certainty;¹ for, where the words plainly express the intent, the construction must be in accordance therewith.²

Language, though apparently general, may be limited in its operation and effect where it may be gathered from the object and purpose of the statute that the language was designed to apply only to certain persons or things, or was to operate only under certain conditions;³ and the intention thus to limit the effect of though such construction is contrary to the literal meaning of some provisions of the statute." And in Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 370; 35 Am. Dec. 326, Shaw, C. J., said: "It is unquestionably a well settled rule of construction, applicable as well to penal statutes as to others, that when the words are not precise and clear, such construction will be adopted as shall appear most reasonable and best suited to accomplish the objects of the statute."

In Taylor v. Goodwin, 4 Q. B. Div. 228, it was held that "furiously driving any sort of carriage" applied to a bicycle; for it was the object of the act to prevent injury from the furious driving of any kind of vehicle.

The charter of a cemetery provided its property should be exempt from taxes so long as it should be used for the purpose of the corporation. This was held not to apply to a tax levied for paving a street in front of the property, the purpose of the statute being merely to exempt it from taxes imposed for revenue. Baltimore v. Greenmount Cemetery, 7 Md. 517.

1. Hawbecker v. Hawbecker, 43 Md. 516; Jackson v. Collins, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 89; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 248; Napier v. Foster, 80 Ala. 379; State v. Boyd, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 366; Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 469; Barstow v. Smith, Walk. (Mich.) 394; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 17; Bradbury v. Wagenhorst, 54 Pa. St. 180; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 130; Rich v. Keyser, 54 Pa. St. 86. See supra, this title, Literal Construction.

2. Rex v. Ramsgate, 6 B. & C. 712; 13 E. C. L. 302; Rex v. Turvey, 2 B. & Ad. 522; Notley v. Buck, 8 B. & C. 164; 15 E. C. L. 178; Hawbecker v. Hawbecker, 43 Md. 516; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 17.

In Rex v. Borhom, 8 B. & C. 104, Lord Tenterden said: "Our decision may perhaps operate to defeat the object of the statute, but it is better to abide by this construction than to put upon it a construction not warranted by the words of the act, in order to give effect to what we suppose to be the intention of the legislature."

Where the object of the legislature is plain and unequivocal, courts ought to adopt such constructions as will best effectuate the intention of the law-giver. But they must not, in order to give effect to what they may suppose to be the intention of the legislature, put upon a provision of a statute a construction not supported by the words, though the consequence would be to defeat the object of the act. Rex v. York Damerel, 7 B. & C. 569; 14 E. C. L. 99.

3. Jones v. Jones, 18 Me. 308; 36 Am. Dec. 723; Torrance v. McDougal, 12 Ga. 526; Stradling v. Morgan, Plowd. 204; Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; Minet v. Leman, 20 Beav. 278; Waugh v. Middleton, 8 Exch. 357; Hills v. Shepherd, 1 F. & F. 191; Robinson v. Collingwood, 34 L. J. C. P. 18; Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. 815; Hill v. East & West India Dock Co., 22 Ch. Div. 14; 9 App. Cas. 453; Railton v. Wood, 15 App. Cas. 366; Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 198; Covington v. McNickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 286; Stockett v. Bird, 18 Md. 484.

If the purpose of the act plainly be to affect only a particular class of persons, the generality of the language will not have the effect of including a single individual not belonging to that class. U. S. v. Saunders, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 492.

The act known as The Friendly Societies Act, provided that "every matter in dispute" between a society and any of its members should be referred to arbitration. The law was held to be confined in its operation to disputes with members as such; and a breach of covenant by a member to repay a the language used may be gathered from particular expressions in other parts of the statute and from a general view of the scope of the statute.¹ But, if the object and purpose of the statute as well as the language used indicate that the language should receive its natural and more extended meaning, this it should receive.²

d. SUBJECT-MATTER—(1) In General.—The words of a statute are to be construed with reference to the subject-matter of the enactment and to the object sought to be attained. Their meaning is to be found not so much in the strict etymological propriety of language, nor even in its popular use, as in the subject or occasion on which they are used.³ In conformity with the rule that the meaning of words is to be adapted to the particular subject-matter in reference to which they are used, general sum borrowed from the society, was held not to fall within the arbitration clause, as the dispute was with a member as debtor, not as member. Morrison v. Grover, 4 Exch. 430; Prentice v. London, L. R., 10 C. P. 679.

1. Fredrichs v. Howie, 1 H. & C. 381; Reg. v. Midland R. Co., 10 Q. B. 389; Foster v. Blount, 18 Ala. 687; Stockett v. Bird, 18 Md. 484; Covington v. McNickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 262; Woodworth v. State, 26 Ohio St. 196. See also Long v. Culp, 14 Kan. 412; Electro-Magnetic, etc., Co. v. Van Auker, 9 Colo. 204.

2. Whitney v. Whitney, 14 Mass. 92; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 380; Scott v. Legg, 2 Ex. Div. 42; Rex v. Hodnett, 1 T. R. 96; Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 614; Milburn v. State, 1 Md. 17; Maxwell v. Collins, 8 Ind. 39; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 152; Shumate v. Williams, 34 Ga. 251; Henderson v. Alexander, 2 Ga. 88; Booth v. Williams, 2 Ga. 255; Ragland v. Justices, 10 Ga. 71; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674.

Acts which gave a "single woman" who had a bastard child the right to sue the putative father for its maintenance, have been held to include in that expression not only a widow but a married woman living apart from her husband. Antony v. Cardenham, 2 Bott. 194; Reg. v. Wymcondham, 2 Q. B. 541; 42 E. C. L. 798; Reg. v. Collingwood, 13 Q. B. 681; 64 E. C. L. 680.

An act which required a railway company to make, for the accommodation of the owners and occupiers of the adjacent lands, sufficient fences for protecting the lands from trespass and the cattle of owners and occupiers from straying, was held to include in the term "occupier" a person who had merely put his cattle on land with the license of the occupier. Reg. v. Warwick, 8 Q. B. 926; 55 E. C. L. 926.

A statute provided a punishment for any person, who, in the night, should willfully disturb any "neighborhood or family." It was held that under this statute an indictment could lie for disturbing a woman occupying a dwelling house alone. Noe v. People, 39 Ill. 96.

An act which prohibited the carrying of concealed weapons, provided that "carrying concealed weapons shall be lawful when the person has reasonable ground to believe his person or the person of some of his family, or his property, is in immediate danger from violence or crime." In Bailey v. Com., 11 Bush (Ky.) 688, the court held that the carrying was authorized whenever and wherever a person had reasonable grounds to believe that he would encounter the person from whom he apprehended that he would receive injury, and that the word "immediate" was not intended to be confined to its limited construction.

3. Per Abbott, C. J., in Rex v. Hall, 1 B. & C. 136; 8 E. C. L. 59; Reg. v. Collingwood, 12 Q. B. 686; 64 E. C. L. 680; Miller v. Salomons, 7 Exch. 475; House of Lords, 3 Bing. 193; 11 E. C. L. 93; River Wear Com'rs v. Adamson, 2 App. Cas. 743; Jolliffe v. Rice, 6 C. B. 1; 60 E. C. L. 1; Opinion of Justices, 7 Mass. 523; Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 198; Com. v. Bryan, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 80; Small v. Small, 129 Pa. St. 366; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152; Woodruff v. State, 3 Ark. 285; Wassell v. Tunnah, 25 Ark. 101; Ruggles v. Washington County, 3 Mo. 504; State v. Paterson, 35 N. J. L.

words are to be restricted or expanded to suit the subject-matter to which they are applied.¹ Thus, the term "persons," as used in a statute, is construed as including or not including corporations, according to the subject-matter of the statute and the occasion upon which the term is used.² So the general terms "inhabitant," "resident," "owner," "occupier," etc., are frequently restricted or expanded in their meaning by the subject-matter.³ But no greater restriction should be put upon the generality of the 196; Green v. State, 59 Md. 123; 43 Am. Rep. 542; Broome v. New York, etc., Telephone Co., 49 N. J. L. 624; Cincinnati Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Avondale, 43 Ohio St. 257; Tracy v. Card, 2 Ohio St. 441; State v. Hueston, 44 Ohio St. 6; Jones v. Dexter, 8 Fla. 276; Olive v. Walton, 33 Miss. 114; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650. See also U. S. v. Caldwell, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 264; 1 Bl. Com. 60.

In Lion Assurance Assoc. v. Tucker, 12 Q. B. Div. 186. Brett, M. R., says: "Whenever you have to construe a statute or document, you do not construe it according to the mere ordinary general meaning of the words, but according to the ordinary meaning of the words as applied to the subject-matter with regard to which they are used, unless there is something which obliges you to read them in a sense which is not their ordinary sense in the English language as so applied. This, I take it, is the cardinal rule."

"The same words mean a very different thing when put in to impose a tax from what they would mean when exempting from a tax." Blackburn, J., in Rein v. Lane, L. R., 2 Q. B. 151.

Thus by referring to the subject-matter and object of the act, which were the exemption of the home from sale and execution, it was held that the words, "one town or city lot" were not confined to one lot according to the survey or plat of the city, but one lot or piece of ground upon which the head of the family had a house. Wassell v. Tunnah, 25 Ark. 101.

Thus in the English Succession Duty Act, which provides that the installments of duty payable by a successor shall cease at his death except when he is "competent to dispose by will of a continuing interest in the property," the "competency" intended is obviously not mental sanity or freedom from personal incapacity, but the possession of an estate of inheritance which the successor is capable of disposing of by will. Attorney Gen'l v. Hallett, 2 H. & N. 368.

So an act prohibiting parish officers from being concerned in contracts for supplying goods, materials or provisions "for the use of the workhouse" means for the use of persons in the workhouse, and does not apply to a contract for the supply of materials for the repair of the building. Barber v. Waite, 1 Ad. & El. 514; 28 E. C. L. 138.

The object of the California Act of 1851, commonly called the "Water Lot Act," was to provide for the disposition of the water-lot property, and not to interfere with the location of streets; and the designation therein of one of the boundaries of that property as the "eastern line of East street to its point of intersection with the northern line of Jackson street" was not intended, nor did it operate to extend East street northward to Jackson. People v. Dana, 22 Cal. 11.

1. Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 162; U. S. v. Saunders, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 492; Moore v. American Transp. Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 1; Brewer v. Blougher, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 178; Minis v. U. S., 15 Pet. (U. S.) 445; Whitney v. Whitney, 14 Mass. 92; Somerset v. Dighton, 12 Mass. 382; Murphy v. Barlow, 5 Ind. 230; Maxwell v. Collins, 8 Ind. 40; Stradling v. Morgan, Plowd. 204; Jackson v. Collins, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 85; Monegon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613; Cruger v. Cruger, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 225; Barnes v. Buck, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 268.

2. Rex v. Gardner, Cowp. 79; Rex v. York, 6 Ad. & El. 419; 33 E. C. L. 98; Rex v. Beverley Gas. Co., 6 Ad. & El. 645; 33 E. C. L. 161; and see for many cases upon this point PERSON, vol. 18, p. 403.

3. See INHABITANT, vol. 10, p. 770; RESIDENT, vol. 21, p. 122; OWNER, vol. 17, p. 299; OCCUPIER, vol. 17, p. 29. As to "laborer," see LABORER, vol. 12, p. 532.

words than the nature of the provision and the subject-matter to which it relates necessarily impose.¹

(2) Technical Words.—As a natural corollary of the rule that words are to be construed by reference to the subject-matter of the enactment, technical words, when used in referring to a technical subject, are to be given the meaning which they have when applied to the particular art or science with reference to which they are used—i. e., their technical meaning.² So an act relating to commerce is interpreted by the vocabulary of merchants.³ And, where the legislature, in legislating upon subjects relating to courts and legal process, use technical terms, they may be presumed to have used them in their technical sense, unless from the statute itself it appears that they have made use of the terms in a more popular sense.⁴

Words in a statute which have acquired a particular legal meaning are, in the absence of other controlling circumstances, when applied to the subject-matter as to which they have acquired such

1. Sullivan v. Mitcalfe, 5 C. P. Div. 460.

2. Lawrence v. Allen, 7 How. (U. S.) 785; U. S. v. Weise, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 72; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 459; Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 137; Lee v. Lincoln, 1 Story (U. S.) 613; U. S. v. Breed, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 159; Arthur v. Morrison, 96 U. S. 108; Unwin v. Hansom (1891), 2 Q. B. 115; Evans v. Stevens, 4 T. R. 462; Morall v. Sutton, 1 Phil. 533; Doe v. Jesson, 2 Bligh 2; Doe v. Harvey, 4 B. & C. 610; 10 E. C. L. 419; Abbott v. Middleton, 7 H. L. 68; Boucicault v. Chatterton, 5 Ch. Div. 275; Stephenson v. Higginson, 3 H. L. Cas. 638; Ex parte Hall, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 261; Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 405; De Veaux v. De Veaux, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 283; State v. Dorsey, 118 Ind. 167; 10 Am. St. Rep. 111; State v. Paterson, 35 N. J. L. 196; State v. Mace, 5 Md. 337; State v. Smith, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 394; Clark v. Utica, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 451; People v. Hulse, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 309; Brocket v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Pa. St. 241.

In Laird v. Briggs, 19 Ch. Div. 34, Jessel, M. R., said: "The whole of a section, and the whole of the act, is of a strictly technical character from beginning to end. So far as I can see, technical words are used in their proper technical sense. The nature of the rights defined, and the nature of the remedies given are all technical, and prima facie, it appears to me, that the rule applies that technical words must have their technical meaning given to them, unless you can find something in the context to overrule them."

3. U. S. v. Sarchet, Gilp. (U. S.) 273; The Danelm. 9 P. Div. 171.

Revenue Laws.—In revenue laws the terms used are given the meaning which they have in trade. Attorney Gen'l v. Bailey, 1 Exch. 281; Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 137. See REVENUE LAWS, vol. 21, p. 302. For example, if Bohea tea is mentioned, it means the article known in trade by that name and not in science. Two Hundred Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 430.

In the case of Two Hundred Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 438, the court decided that, in imposing duties, congress must be understood as describing the article upon which the duty is imposed, according to the commercial understanding of the terms used in the law in our own markets. This doctrine was reaffirmed in the case of U. S. v. 112 Casks of Sugar, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 277; and again in 10 Pet. (U. S.) 137, in the case of Elliott v. Swartwout. Curtis v. Martin, 3 How. (U. S.) 106.

4. Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 411; Gordon v. State, 4 Kan. 489; Snell v. Bridgewater, etc., Mfg. Co., 24 Pick. (Mass.) 299; Campbell v. Thompson, 16 Me. 117.

The term "proceeding," as used in an Alabama code, which declared that "no action or proceeding commenced before the adoption of the code shall be affected by its provisions," is held not to include a judgment which is an entire act, an act which cannot in any meaning, to be taken in their technical sense.¹ But where, from the subject, context, or otherwise, it is plain that the legislature did not intend to use the term in its technical sense, courts will not impute that meaning to it.²

proper sense be said to be commenced before a certain day. Daily v. Burke, 28 Ala. 328.

1. The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440; Rice v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 58; U. S. v. Jones, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 209; U. S. v. Gilmore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 330; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 459; U. S. v. Magill, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 463; U. S. v. Wilson, Baldw. (U. S.) 78; U. S. v. Smith, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 153; U. S. v. Furlong, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 184; Campbell v. Thompson, 16 Me. 117; Apple v. Apple, 1 Head (Tenn.) 348; Williams v. Dickenson, 28 Fla. 99; State v. Mace, 5 Md. 337; Bennac v. People, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 164; Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 405; Macy v. Raymond, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 285; Adams v. Turrentine, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 147; Kitchen v. Tyson, 3 Murph. (N. Car.) 314; State v. Berdetta, 73 Ind. 185; 38 Am. Rep. 117; Bloom v. Franklin L. Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 478; 49 Am. Rep. 469; Halbert v. McCulloch, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 456; 79 Am. Dec. 556. Ex parte Vincent, 26 Ala. 145; 62 Am. Dec. 714; Spencer v. State, 20 Ala. 24; Brocket v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Pa. St. 241; 53 Am. Dec. 534; Allen's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 196; 44 Am. Rep. 101; Reg. v. Ellis, C. & M. 560; 41 E. C. L. 307; Williams v. Lear, L. R., 7 Q. B. 285; Sheppard v. Gosnold, Baugh 159; Ruckmaloye v. Mottichund, 8 Moore P. C. C. 4; Stephenson v. Higginson, 3 H. L. Cas. 638. See also The Kate Heron, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 106.

An act incorporating the Ohio & Pennsylvania Railroad Co. authorized that road to appropriate as much land as should be deemed necessary for its road, etc. It was contended in Brocket v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Pa. St. 241; 53 Am. Dec. 534, that the act did not authorize the removal of a dwelling house; but it was held that the word lands was plainly used in its technical sense—i. e., that it included not only the face of the earth, but everything under it or over it.

In Western Union Tel. Co. v. Scircle, 103 Ind. 229, it is said: "Where the statute employs common-law terms having a known meaning, it is presumed, unless the contrary affirmatively appears, that the terms were used in their common-law meaning."

Thus the word "crimes" has been held according to its legal sense to include indictable misdemeanors. Lehigh County v. Schock, 113 Pa. St. 373; Figg v. Snook, 9 Ind. 202.

In Buckner v. Real Estate Bank, 4 Ark. 441, it was said: "If a statute makes use of a word, the meaning of which is well known and has a definite sense at the common law, the word shall be expounded and restricted to that sense."

In Hillhouse v. Chester, 3 Day (Conn.) 211; 3 Am. Dec. 265, it was said: "It is a sound rule that whenever our legislature use a term without defining it, which is well known in the English law, and there has a definite appropriate meaning affixed to it, they must be supposed to use it in the sense in which it is understood in the English law." See also U. S. v. Smith, 4 Day. (Conn.) 121.

Month.—In Rives v. Guthrie, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 88, it was held that in a statute prescribing the limitation to an action of slander, the word "month" is to be taken as a lunar month. The court said: "We are bound to give to words, when used in a statute, the meaning attached to them at common law. . . . Several English authorities are cited to sustain this position; but it must be borne in mind that they all recognize the common-law rule that a statute month is a lunar month."

But that "month" in a statute is now generally construed to mean a calendar month, see Brown v. Williams, 34 Neb. 376; and MONTH, vol. 15, p. 712.

Heir.—So where a statute uses the word "heir," which has a definite technical meaning at common law, it will be received in that sense, unless it clearly appears that a different sense was intended. State v. Engle, 21 N. J. L. 347.

Infamous Crimes.—The term "infamous crimes," as used in a statute, has been confined to its legal sense. Rex v. Heckman, 1 Moody 34; Com. v. Shaver, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 338.

2. Bishop's Statutory Crimes, § 100; Robinson v. Varnell, 16 Tex. 382; Mc-

(3) Popular Meaning.—It is a general and primary rule of construction, where there is nothing in the statute to indicate that a word is used in a peculiar or technical sense, that it is to be taken in its ordinary and popular meaning.¹

Bride's Appeal, 72 Pa. St. 480; People v. Tighe, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 25; People v. May, 3 Mich. 598; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 215; Cummings v. Coleman, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 509; 62 Am. Dec. 402; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650. See the succeeding section, Ordinary Meaning.

Thus, in Alabama, where outlawry is unknown, it was held that the term "outlaw" in a statute was not to be taken in its common-law significance. But the court, looking at the condition of the state at the time when the act was passed, held that it meant lawless and disorderly persons roaming about in disguise and committing outrages upon citizens. Dale County v. Gunter, 46 Ala. 118.

So in construing a statute exempting a dwelling house from sale and execution, the term "dwelling house" will not receive the technical meaning which it has acquired in the law of burglary, arson, etc. In re Lammer, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 269.

In Morse v. State, 6 Conn. 9, it was held that a person attending recitations and lectures at a college, having been examined and admitted for that purpose, though not matriculated, was "a student" of the college within a statute prohibiting the giving of credit to students of the college under certain penalties.

1. Gross v. Fowler, 21 Cal. 392; People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269; State v. Bernard, 40 La. Ann. 172; Canal Co. v. Schroeder, 7 La. Ann. 615; Medley v. Williams, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 71; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 196; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Allen v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 2 Md. 111; Favers v. Glass, 22 Ala. 621; Wetumpka v. Winter, 29 Ala. 660; Green v. Weller, 32 Miss. 650; Engelking v. VonWamel, 26 Tex. 469; Barker v. State, 12 Tex. 273; Robinson v. Varnell, 16 Tex. 382; Maillard v. Lawrence, 16 How. (U. S.) 251; Georgia v. Atkins, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 22; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 188; Schriefer v. Wood, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 218; U. S. v. Clayton, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 219; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 326; Ready v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. L. 877; Rex v. In- habitants, 2 B. & Ald. 522; Austin v. Cull, L. R., 7 C. P. 234; Philpott v. St. George's Hospital, 6 H. L. Cas. 338; Johnson v. Harris, 15 C. B. 357; 80 E. C. L. 356; Rex v. Wooldridge, 1 Leach (4th ed.) 307; Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co., 13 Q. B. Div. 914; Weister v. Hade, 52 Pa. St. 474; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Catawissa, etc., R. Co., 53 Pa. St. 59; School Directors v. Carlisle Bank, 8 Watts (Pa.) 289; Fox's Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 337; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; Deitz v. Beard, 2 Watts (Pa.) 170; Waller v. Harris, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 555; 32 Am. Rep. 590; Clark v. Utica, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 451; Rupp v. Swineford, 40 Wis. 28; State v. Nann, 21 Wis. 684; State v. Clarksville, etc., Turnpike Co., 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 91; Strong v. Birchard, 5 Conn. 357; Avery v. Pixley, 4 Mass. 460; State v. Gupton, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 273.

In Kentucky, it is provided by statute that "all words and phrases shall be construed and understood according to the common and approved usage of language;" and this was held in Bailey v. Com., 11 Bush (Ky.) 638, to be only declaratory of the common law.

In a statute exempting certain articles from execution, the term "wagon" was held not to include a hackney-coach, upon the principle that the words of a statute are to be interpreted according to their common acceptance. Quigley v. Gorham, 5 Cal. 418; 63 Am. Dec. 139.

Thus, in accordance with the popular signification of the term, the word "child," as used in a statute defining an aggravated assault, was held not to be synonymous with the word "minor." McGregor v. State, 4 Tex. App. 599.

In State v. Clarksville, etc., Turnpike Co., 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 91, it was said: "It is a general rule that the words of a statute, if of common use, are to be taken in their natural and ordinary sense and without any forced or subtle construction to limit or extend their import."

Thus in Ex parte Hillman, 10 Ch. Div. 622, it was held that the word "purchaser" in a bankruptcy act was to be taken in its ordinary commercial

Where to construe the words of a statute technically would render it inoperative, but to construe them according to their popular signification would give it a reasonable operation, the latter construction must prevail.¹ A statute is to be interpreted in accordance with the meaning of its words at the time of its passage.²

Words referring to time are to be construed as spoken at the time when the act took effect, unless other intent appears. Such words are "already,"³ "hereafter,"⁴ "heretofore,"⁵ "existing."⁶

6. Aids to Construction—a. TITLE.—The title has generally been considered as no part of the act.⁷ In England it has been said that in the construction of a statute the title should not be taken into consideration.⁸ But there are English authorities to the sense as the equivalent of "buyer," and not in its technical legal sense.

Action.—Thus the court has refused to give a technical meaning to the term "action." Fenwick v. East London R. Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 544; Walker v. Clements, 15 Q. B. 1046; 69 E. C. L. 1046; Rawley v. Rawley, 1 Q. B. Div. 460.

Children.—Thus, though "children" means technically legitimate children, it has been given its larger and more popular meaning, where the mischief sought to be remedied demanded it, so as to include illegitimate children. Rex v. Hodnett, 1 T. R. 96; Rex v. Cornforth, 2 Stra. 1162. See also Reg. v. St. Giles-in-the-Fields, 11 Q. B. 173; 63 E. C. L. 173; Reg. v. Brighton, 1 B. & S. 447; 101 E. C. L. 446; CHILDREN, vol. 3, p. 230.

1. Robinson v. Varnell, 16 Tex. 382. See also Reg. v. Pembroke, 3 Q. B. 901; 43 E. C. L. 1028; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, 104 Pa. St. 522; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 438.

2. Mobile v. Eslava, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 231; St. Cross v. Howard, 6 T. R. 338; Wandsworth Board of Works v. United Telephone Co., 13 Q. B. Div. 914. And see Aerated Bread Co. v. Gregg, L. R., 8 Q. B. 355, with which compare Reg. v. Wood, L. R., 4 Q. B. 559.

"In matters of description a statute must necessarily refer to things as they exist at the time of its passage." Griswold v. Atlantic Dock Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 228. See also Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 353; 67 Am. Dec. 471; Pontchartrain R. Co. v. Lafayette, etc., R. Co., 10 La. Ann. 741; Morris Canal Co. v. State, 24 N. J. L. 62.

3. Jackman v. Garland, 64 Me. 133.

4. State v. Hicks, 48 Ark. 515. And see Charles v. Lamberson, 1 Iowa 435; 63 Am. Dec. 457, where "heretofore" and "hereafter" were held to refer to the time when the code went into effect and not to the time of its enactment. See also State v. Connell, 43 N. J. L. 106. See supra, this title, Time When Statutes Take Effect.

5. Parsons v. Wayne, 37 Mich. 287.

6. Rogers v. Vass, 6 Iowa 405. But see also Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Blackman, 63 Ill. 117, in which "existing" was applied to objects before as well as after passage of act.

7. State v. Welsh, 3 Hawkes (N. Car.) 404; Cohen v. Barrett, 5 Cal. 195; Garrigus v. Parke County, 39 Ind. 66; Eastman v. McAlpin, 1 Ga. 157; Bradford v. Jones, 1 Md. 351; Com. v. Slifer, 53 Pa. St. 71; State v. Stephenson, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 334; Burgett v. Burgett, 1 Ohio 469; Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 110; Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine (U. S.) 584; Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361; Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod. 62; Atty. Gen'l v. Weymouth, 1 Ambl. 22; Rex v. Williams, 1 W. Bl. 95; Chance v. Adams, 1 Ld. Raym. 77; Earl of Shrewsbury v. Scott, 6 C. B. N. S. 1; 95 E. C. L. 1; Jeffreys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. 982; Morant v. Taylor, 1 Exch. Div. 194.

8. Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 Mac. & G. 640; Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod. 62; Atty. Gen'l v. Weymouth, 1 Ambl. 22; Rex v. Williams, 1 W. Bl. 95.

In Salkeld v. Johnson, 2 Exch. 283, it was said: "The title, though it has occasionally been referred to as aiding in the construction of an act, is certainly no part of the law, and in strictness ought not to be taken into consideration at all." See also Powlter's Case, 11 Coke 33.

contrary.¹ In the United States, where the meaning of an act is doubtful, recourse is frequently had to the title for explanation, and it is regarded as a legitimate aid in determining the intention of the legislature.²

Of course, if there is no ambiguity in the statute itself, there can be no necessity for resort to the title;³ it cannot be used to extend or restrain positive provisions contained in the statute,⁴

1. Rex v. Cartwright, 4 T. R. 490; Rex v. Wright, 1 Ad. & El. 446; 28 E. C. L. 117; Stradling v. Morgan, Plowd. 199; Alexander v. Newman, 2 C. B. 141; 52 E. C. L. 140; Rex v. Gwenop, 3 T. R. 133; Taylor v. Newman, 4 B. & S. 93; 116 E. C. L. 91; Rawley v. Rawley, 1 Q. B. Div. 466; Bentley v. Rotheram Local Board, 4 Ch. Div. 588; Chance v. Adams, 1 Ld. Raym. 77; Rex v. Marks, 3 East 157; Brett v. Brett, Addams Eccl. 211; Shaw v. Rudelin, 9 Ir. Ch. Rep. 214; Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L. Rep. 35; Coomber v. Berks, 9 Q. B. Div. 33.

2. Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550; Meyer v. Western Car Co., 102 U. S. 1; Holy Trinity Church v. U. S., 143 U. S. 457; U. S. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 631; Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 107; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 91 U. S. 72; Platt v. Union Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 48; Rushville v. Rushville Gas Co., 132 Ind. 575; Smith v. State, 28 Ind. 321; Garrigus v. Parke County, 39 Ind. 66; Wilson v. Spaulding, 19 Fed. Rep. 304; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 551; In re Boston Min., etc., Co., 51 Cal. 624; Barnes v. Jones, 51 Cal. 303; Ex parte Kohler, 74 Cal. 38; Cohen v. Barrett, 5 Cal. 195; Eastman v. McAlpin, 1 Ga. 157; State v. Stephenson, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 334; Burgett v. Burgett, 1 Ohio 469; State v. Archer, 73 Md. 44; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Clark v. Baltimore, 29 Md. 285; State v. Fields, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 554; State v. Smith, Cheves (S. Car.) 157; Bradford v. Jones, 1 Md. 351; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Albert, 39 Mo. 181; Hines v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 95 N. Car. 434; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 348; People v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574; Cumines v. Jefferson Co., 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 293; Bell v. New York, 105 N. Y. 139; People v. Molyneux, 40 N. Y. 113; Brick v. Gannar, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 55; People v. Spicer, 99 N. Y. 233; In re Kellum, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 3; Com. v. Slifer, 53 Pa. St. 71; Blakeney

v. Blakeney, 6 Port. (Ala.) 109; 30 Am. Dec. 574; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1; 7 Am. St. Rep. 684; Torreyson v. Board of Examiners, 7 Nev. 19; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. L. 644; Stockton v. Central R. Co. (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 964; Nazro v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 14 Wis. 295.

In U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 386, Marshall, C. J., said: "Where the mind labors to discover the design of the legislature, it seizes everything from which aid can be derived, and in such case the title claims a degree of notice, and will have its due share of consideration;" and again in U. S. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 610: "The title of an act cannot control its words, but may furnish some aid in showing what was in the mind of the legislature."

Although the title is no part of an act, yet where the enacting clause is doubtful or too general, the title may be resorted to for explanation in restraint of its generality. Field v. Gooding, 106 Mass. 310.

3. Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 M. & G. 640; Eastman v. McAlpin, 1 Ga. 157; In re Boston Min., etc., Co., 51 Cal. 624; Com. v. Slifer, 53 Pa. St. 71; U. S. v. McArdle, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 367; State v. Archer, 73 Md. 44; Bell v. New York, 105 N. Y. 139; Hines v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 95 N. Car. 434.

4. Flynn v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 358; State v. Cazeau, 8 La. Ann. 114; In re Boston Min., etc., Co., 51 Cal. 624.

In Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 107, Field, J., says: "The title of an act furnishes little aid in the construction of its provisions. . . . It cannot be used to extend or restrain any positive provision contained in the body of the act. It is only when the meaning is doubtful that resort may be had to the title, and even then it has little weight. It is seldom the subject of special consideration by the legislature."

In Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Albert, 39 Mo. 183, it was said: "The title of the act itself is so very clear nor can it control express words in the statute.¹ If the words of the enacting clause are larger than those of the title, they must prevail.²

Especially may the title of an act be consulted to aid in its interpretation where, as is the case in many states, the constitution provides that the subject of the act shall be expressed in the title.³ And under such constitutional provisions, the title becomes a part of the act and may confine the effect and operation of words in the enacting clause to the objects expressed therein.⁴

b. PREAMBLE.—The preamble, like the title, is no part of the statute, but, as setting out the object and intention of the legislature in passing it, is given more consideration in its construction than is the title.⁵ Therefore, whenever there is ambiguity, or wherever the words of the act have more than one meaning, or there is doubt as to the subject-matter to which they are to be applied, the preamble may be consulted. As said by Lord Coke, it is a good means to find out the meaning of the statute, and is a true key to open the understanding thereof.⁶

and explicit that no doubt can exist as to what was intended. It is not safe to rely alone upon the title of a statute, and it has been declared to be 'not a safe exposition of the law;' but the better rule, we think, is to presume that the true intention and meaning is to be found in the title, unless it is plainly contradictory of the express terms in the body of the act."

1. Stevens v. Lake George, etc., R. Co., 82 Mich. 430; U. S. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 610; U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 386; Hadden v. Barney, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 107; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 90; Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266; Flynn v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 358; State v. Cazeau, 8 La. Ann. 114. See also People v. McCann, 16 N. Y. 58; 69 Am. Dec. 642.

2. U. S. v. Briggs, 9 How. (U. S.) 351; Blue v. McDuffie, Busb. (N. Car.) 131.

3. Meyer v. Western Car Co., 102 U. S. 1; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Riblet, 66 Pa. St. 164; 50 Am. Rep. 360; Halderman's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 251.

In Eby's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 314, Sharswood, J., says: "However it was in England, where the title was held to be no part of the statute, indeed was commonly framed by the clerk of parliament after the bill had passed, without any vote being taken upon it, certainly since the first amendment of the constitution adopted in 1864, art. 11, § 8, it is now necessarily a part of the act, and a very important guide to its right construction." See also Halderman's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 259; and Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Riblet, 66 Pa. St. 164; 5 Am. Rep. 360. Compare In re Boston Min., etc., Co. 51 Cal. 624.

4. Halderman's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 251; Dobbins v. Northampton, 50 N. J. L. 496; Nazro v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 14 Wis. 295; Dodd v. State, 18 Ind. 56; Howland Coal, etc., Works v. Brown, 13 Bush (Ky.) 681. See, generally, supra, this title, Title and Subjects Under Constitutions.

5. Bishop Stat. Cr. § 48; Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod. 62; Bac. Abr. Statutes A; Potter's Dwar. 265; Fellowes v. Clay, 4 Q. B. 313; 45 E. C. L. 338; Morns v. State, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Com. v. Marshall, 69 Pa. St. 328; Erie, etc., R. Co., v. Casey, 26 Pa. St. 288; Edwards v. Pope, 4 Ill. 464; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, 132 U. S. 174.

6. Co. Litt. 79a; Plowd. 379; Potter's Dwar. 265; Bish. Stat. Cr., § 48; Bac. Abr. Statutes I, 2; Halton v. Cove, 1 B. & Ad. 538; 20 E. C. L. 440; Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 793; Atty. Gen'l v. Powis, 1 Kay 186; Crowder v. Stewart, 16 Ch. Div. 370; Nash v. Allen, 4 Q. B. 784; 45 E. C. L. 783; Boulton v. Bull, 2 H. Bl. 500; Sutton's Hospital, 10 Co. 23, 24b; Salters Co. v. Jay, 3 Q. B. 109; 43 E. C. L. 654; Edwards v. Rusholme, L. R., 4 Q. B. 554; Emanuel v. Constable, 3 Russ. 436; Doe v. Roe, 1 Dowl. 247; Carr v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corp., 5 B. & S. 941; 117 E. C. L. 941;

It has been said that the preamble may extend but not restrain the enacting part of a statute;¹ but it would seem difficult to support this doctrine with reason. The function of the preamble is to explain what is ambiguous in the enactment; and there

In re Masters, 33 L. J. Q. B. 146; Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 6 C. B. N. S. 388; 95 E. C. L. 386; Salkeld v. Johnson, 1 Hare 196; Mills v. Wilkins, 6 Mod. 62; Mason v. Armitage, 13 Ves. 36; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, 132 U. S. 174; Beard v. Rowan, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 317; U. S. v. Webster, Dav. (U. S.) 38; Hahn v. Salmon, 20 Fed. Rep. 801; Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266; Fowler v. State, 5 Day (Conn.) 81; Edwards v. Pope, 4 Ill. 465; Nichols v. Wells, Sneed (Ky.) 255; State v. Cazeau, 8 La. Ann. 114; Davidson v. Clayland, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 546; Montesquieu v. Heil, 4 La. Ann. 51; 23 Am. Dec. 471; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Lucas v. McBlair, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Cleaveland v. Norton, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 383; James v. Dubois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Jackson v. Gilchrist, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 89; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; Constantine v. Van Winkle, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 184; Blue v. McDuffie, Busb. (N. Car.) 131; Dedrick v. Wood, 15 Pa. St. 9; Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. St. 287; Com. v. Marshall, 69 Pa. St. 328; York County v. Crafton, 100 Pa. St. 619; Clark v. Bynum, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 298; Tripp v. Goff, 15 R. I. 299; State v. Stevenson, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 334; Nazoo v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 14 Wis. 295; Hart v. Albany, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 571; 24 Am. Dec. 165; Sutherland v. De Leon, 1 Tex. 250; 46 Am. Dec. 100.

In an English statute, which empowered every person who had served in the militia and was married, to set up in trade in a corporate town, as freely as soldiers might under an earlier enactment, and declared that "no such militiaman" should be removable from the town until he became chargeable,—it being open to doubt whether this expression included all married militiamen, or only married militiamen who had set up in trade in towns, the preamble of the earlier act fixed the latter as the true construction, as it stated that the mischief to be remedied was the state of the law which prevented soldiers from setting up in trade in corporate towns. Rex v. Gwenop, 3 T. R. 133.

The English statute which enacted that "any order" of quarter sessions might be removed to the queen's bench for enforcement, was similarly confined to orders in appeal cases, by the preamble, which, in reciting that it was expedient that the law should be made uniform in cases of appeal, showed the limited scope of the act. Reg. v. Bateman, 8 El. & Bl. 584; 92 E. C. L. 584.

An act which made it penal for a publican to allow bad characters to "assemble and meet together" in his house, would not be broken by his permitting such persons to enter for taking refreshments and remaining there as long as was reasonably necessary for that purpose, when the preamble showed that the object in view was the repression of disorderly conduct, not the absolute denial of all hospitality to persons of bad character. Greig v. Bendeno, El. Bl. & El. 133; 96 E. C. L. 132. See Belasco v. Hannant, 3 B. & S. 13; 113 E. C. L. 12.

Lord Blackburn says: "We are to give effect to the preamble to this extent, namely, that it shows us what the legislature are intending; and if the words of enactment have a meaning which does not go beyond that preamble, or which may come up to the preamble, in either case we prefer that meaning to one showing an intention of the legislature which would not answer the purposes of the preamble or which would go beyond them. To that extent is the preamble material." West Ham Assessment Committee v. Iles, 8 App. Cas. 387.

To Fix Subject-matter.—"It is admitted that the preamble of an act may be legitimately used to ascertain and fix the subject-matter to which the enacting part is to be applied, and even in some cases to control and cut down the enacting part. But the former use of it only is required on the present occasion; and no doubt can be entertained as to the propriety of such use." Fellowes v. Clay, 4 Q. B. 339; 45 E. C. L. 338. See also Com. v. Marshall, 69 Pa. St. 328.

1. Rex v. Athos, 8 Mod. 144; Copeman v. Gallant, 1 P. Wms. 320; Walker v. Richardson, 2 M. & W. 889; Heyman seems to be no difference whether the intention of the legislature, as gathered from this explanation, tends to restrict or extend the scope of the statute; in either case it must be regarded. There are numerous cases in which a resort to the preamble as an aid to construction has been followed by a restricted interpretation of the language used in the enactment clause.¹

But where the meaning of the enacting clause is clear and free from ambiguity it cannot be restricted or extended by the preamble. When the words are clear and positive, and there is no doubt as to their meaning or as to the scope of the enactment or the subject-matter to which it applies, recourse to the preamble is unnecessary.²

It is not infrequent for the legislature, in the preamble to a statute, to recite a particular mischief while the legislative provisions extend far beyond the mischief recited. The evil recited is but the motive for legislation—the remedy may both consistently and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil; and if, on review of the whole act, a wider intention than that expressed in

v. Flewker, 13 C. B. N. S. 519; 106 E. C. L. 518; Drummond v. Drummond, L. R., 2 Ch. 44; Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 6 C. B. N. S. 388; 95 E. C. L. 386.

1. Ryall v. Rowles, 1 Atk. 174; 1 Ves. 365; Rex v. Gwenop, 3 T. R. 133; Reg. v. Bateman, 8 El. & Bl. 584; 92 E. C. L. 584; Edwards v. Rusholme, L. R., 4 Q. B. 554; Emanuel v. Constable, 3 Russ. 436; Reg. v. Manchester, 7 El. & Bl. 453; 90 E. C. L. 453; Bryan v. Childs, 5 Exch. 368; Salkeld v. Johnson, 1 Hare 196; Hughes v. Chester, etc., R. Co., 1 Dr. & Sm. 524; Wigan v. Fowler cited, 1 Stark. 459. See also Seidenbender v. Charles, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 166; 8 Am. Dec. 682.

In Halton v. Cabe, 1 B. & A. 538, Lord Tenterden said: "The enacting words of an act of parliament are not always to be limited by the words of the preamble, but must in many instances go beyond it; yet the words in the enacting part must be confined to that which is the plain object and general intention of the legislature in passing the act; and the preamble affords a good clue to discover what that object was."

2. Caledonian R. Co. v. North Brit. R. Co., 6 App. Cas. 114; Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 6 C. B. N. S. 388; 95 E. C. L. 386; Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch. Div. 521; Hughes v. Chester, etc., R. Co., 1 Dr. & Sm. 524; Copeland v. Davies, L. R., 5 H. L. 358; Mann v. Cammel, Lofft 783; Doe v. Brandling, 7 B. & C. 643; 14 E. C. L. 108; Patti- son v. Bankes, Cowp. 543; Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 793; Lees v. Summerhill, 17 Ves. 508; Taylor v. Oldham Corp., 4 Ch. Div. 395; Rex v. Athos, 8 Mod. 136; Mason v. Armistage, 13 Ves. 36; Yazoo, etc., R. Co. v. Thomas, 132 U. S. 174; Bentley v. Rotherham Local Board, 46 L. J., Ch. Div. 284; Tripp v. Goff, 15 R. I. 299; Eastman v. McAlpin, 1 Ga. 157; Kirk v. Dean, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 341; Seidenbender v. Charles, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 151; 8 Am. Dec. 682; Jackson v. Gilchrist, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 89; Kent v. Somervell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 265; Laidler v. Young, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 69; Covington v. McNickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 262; Clark v. Bynum, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 298; State v. Findley, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 107; State v. Butler, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 383; Blue v. McDuffie, Busb. (N. Car.) 131; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 248; Hart v. Albany, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 571.

A preamble cannot introduce doubt or uncertainty into the meaning of a statute, when otherwise it would be clear. James v. Dubois, 16 N. J. L. 285. See also Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Casey, 26 Pa. St. 288.

In Wilson v. Knubley, 7 East 128, Lord Ellenborough said: "I agree that the grievances recited in the preamble of the act would have led one to suppose that the legislature meant to have given a larger remedy than the action of debt, against the devisee of land, to recover damages for a the preamble appears to be the real one, effect is to be given to it, notwithstanding the less extensive import of the preamble.¹ So when the preamble is more extensive than the enacting clause, if the latter is free from ambiguity and doubt, it must prevail, and the statute receive the more limited construction, notwithstanding the wider purport of the preamble.²

c. CHAPTER AND SECTION HEADINGS; MARGINAL NOTES, ETC.—The headings prefixed to sections or sets of sections are sometimes considered in modern statutes as preambles to those breach of covenant by the deviser. But for us to extend the words to the action of covenant would be to legislate, and not to construe, the acts of the legislature."

1. Rex v. Athos, 8 Mod. 144; Fellowes v. Clay, 4 Q. B. 349; 45 E. C. L. 347; Doe v. Brandling, 7 B. & C. 660; 14 E. C. L. 108; Copeland v. Gallant, 1 P. Wms. 320; York v. Middlesborough, 2 Y. & J. 214; Salkeld v. Johnson, 1 Mac. & G. 264; 1 Hare 196; Fellowes v. Clay, 4 Q. B. 313; 45 E. C. L. 338; Mace v. Cammel, Lofft 782; Colehan v. Cooke, Willes 395; Laidler v. Young, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 69; Jackson v. Gilchrist, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 89; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 251.

In Rex v. Marks, 3 East 157, Lawrence, J., said: "It is nothing unusual in acts of parliament for the enacting part to go beyond the preamble; the remedy often extends beyond the particular act of mischief which first suggested the necessity of the law."

In Freeman v. Lambert, 4 M. & S. 238, Mansfield, C. J., said: "I confess I am not for restraining the generality of the enacting clause by the preamble without some reason for it." And Dampier, J., said: "I have always understood it as a standing rule in the construction of acts of parliament, that the enacting clause shall not be restrained by the preamble, if the enacting words are large enough to comprehend the case."

In Hughes v. Done, 1 Q. B. 301; 64 E. C. L. 550, Lord Denman said: "To introduce, in the enacting part, an exception not there to be found, and which, if intended, might have been so easily introduced and expressed, is, we think, to curtail and abridge the meaning of plain words in a manner which no rule of construction warrants."

A statute, after reciting that the king's subjects were charged with conveying "felons and other malefactors and offenders against the law," to jail, punishable by imprisonment there, enacted that "every person" committed to the county jail by a justice "for any offense or misdemeanor," should bear his own charges of conveyance, if he had property, and that if he had not, they should be borne by the parish where he was apprehended, was held not to be confined by the preamble to offenders against the ordinary law, but to apply to deserters from the army. Rex v. Pierce, 3 M. & S. 62.

So, a preamble which recited the mischief of granting colonial offices to persons who remained in England and discharged the duties of their offices by deputy, was not suffered to exclude judicial offices from the general enacting part, which authorized the governor and council to remove "any" officeholder for misconduct; although the mention of delegation in the preamble showed that the judicial office was not there in contemplation. Willis v. Gipps, 5 Moo. P. C. 379.

2. Wilson v. Knubley, 7 East 128; Farley v. Briant, 3 Ad. & El. 839; 30 E. C. L. 239; Jenkins v. Briant, 6 Sim. 603; Morse v. Tucker, 5 Hare 79.

An act which made it penal to dye seeds so as to give them the appearance of seeds of "another kind," could not be extended to similar manipulations of old or inferior seeds, to make them appear as new of the same species by a recital that the practice of adulterating seeds in fraud of the queen's subjects and the detriment of agriculture required repression. Francis v. Maas, 3 Q. B. Div. 341.

An act which required the trustees of a turnpike trust to apply the money which they received, first, in paying "any interest which might from time to time be owing," next, in keeping the road in repair, and finally, in paying off the principal sums due by the trust, sections,¹ and in some instances have been held to be of more weight in interpretation than the title.² These headings are generally, however, inserted for mere convenience, and although they may help in ascertaining the legislative intent, when this is doubtful, they will not be allowed to control the words and phrases of the statute when the real purpose may be determined from their plain meaning.³ In construing several sections relating to the same subject the safer rule is to read and construe them together without reference to the particular article or heading under which they may be placed.⁴

was held not to authorize the payment of arrears of interest; although this enactment was prefaced by a preamble which recited that arrears of interest as well as principal sums were due by the trust, and could not be paid off unless further powers were granted. Market Harborough v. Kettering Highway Board, L. R., 8 Q. B. 308.

1. Earl of Shrewsbury v. Beazley, 19 C. B. N. S. 651; 115 E. C. L. 651; Latham v. Lafone, L. R., 2 Exch. 115; Hammersmith, etc., R. Co. v. Brand, L. R., 4 H. L. Cas. 171; Lang v. Kerr, 3 App. Cas. 536; Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Marriage, 9 H. L. Cas. 41.

2. Bishop Stat. Crimes, § 62; Barnes v. Jones, 51 Cal. 303; People v. Molyneux, 40 N. Y. 113. In this latter case Hunt, C. J., said that a section heading, "Of the public officers of the state other than militia and town officers," was a part of the enactment and would control its effect and operation, and held that the appointing of militia officers was expressly excepted from the effect of the statute which was in reference to the governor's power of appointment. But Murray, J., in the same case, said that such section heading could not be considered as a part of the enactment, but would operate merely as any other title. See also Rex v. Threlkeld, 4 B. & Ad. 239; 24 E. C. L. 50; Rex v. Newark-Upon-Trent, 3 B. & C. 63; 10 E. C. L. 17.

3. Wilberforce Stat. Law 296; Broadbent v. Imperial Gas Co., 7 De G. M. & G. 448; Union Steamship Co. v. Melbourne Harbor, etc., Com'rs, 9 App. Cas. 365; Hammersmith, etc., R. Co. v. Brand, L. R., 4 H. L. Cas. 217; Battle v. Shivers, 39 Ga. 409.

4. State v. Popp, 45 Md. 432; Thompson v. Bulson, 78 Ill. 277. In this connection it may be added that where one section of a statute treats solely and especially of a matter, that section prevails in reference to that matter over other sections in which only incidental reference is made thereto. Long v. Culp, 14 Kan. 413; Griffith v. Carter, 8 Kan. 565.

A group of sections was prefaced, "With respect to the purchase and taking of lands otherwise than by agreement." It was held that this heading did not limit the effect of a section providing compensation for injury to land, to taking by compulsion, for such was not the purpose of the act. Broadbent v. Imperial Gas Co., 7 De G. M. & G. 447.

So an act in general terms suspending all statutes of limitations was held not to effect a provision prescribing the time when judgments should become dormant, although under the chapter heading, "Statutes of Limitation." Battle v. Shivers, 39 Ga. 405.

Marginal Notes.—These notes are usually nothing more than mere abstracts of the contents of sections, printed with the law as published by the public printer, and adopted to facilitate reference. Formerly they never appeared on the parliament-roll, and consequently, not forming a part of the law, could not be looked to for an exposition of its meaning. And although now they sometimes appear in the roll, as they are not considered in enacting the law, they cannot be relied on in ascertaining its meaning. Claydon v. Green, L. R., 3 C. P. 511; Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch. Div. 513; Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 7 Cl. & F. 929. In Venour v. Sellou, 2 Ch. Div. 525, Jessel, M. R., said: "This view is borne out by the marginal note; and I may mention that the marginal notes of acts of parliament now appear on the parliament roll and consequently form part of the act; and in fact are so clearly so that I have known them to be subject to motion and amendment." But in Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch. Div. 513, he said, referring to Venour v. Sel-

d. PUNCTUATION.—Punctuation in a statute forms no part of the law, but is the work of the draughtsman, engrosser, or public printer.¹ It is, therefore, of little importance in the construction; and although, in doubtful cases, it may throw some light,² yet it cannot have a controlling effect.³ It may be and frequently is lou, 2 Ch. Div. 525: "The dictum in that case is not strictly correct. I have since ascertained that the practice is so uncertain that it cannot be laid down that they are always on the roll." And Baggallay, J., in Atty Gen'l v. Great Eastern R. Co., 11 Ch. Div. 461, said: "I never knew an amendment set down or discussed upon the marginal note to a clause. The house of commons never has anything to do with the amendment of a marginal note. I never knew a marginal note considered by the house of commons."

But what is in form a marginal note may be part of a statute. In Rex v. Milverton, 5 Ad. & El. 841; 31 E. C. L. 454, it was held that a marginal note which, instead of being a mere abstract of a section, gave express direction to the form of an order which it accompanied, and was in the margin of the legislative roll, was a part of the statute.

Schedule.—A schedule, whether adopted within or appended to a statute, does not control positive words, but may be an aid in explaining what is doubtful. Wilberforce on Statute Law, 306, 308; Rex v. Epsom, 4 El. & Bl. 1003; 82 E. C. L. 1003; Allen v. Flicker, 10 Ad. & El. 640; 37 E. C. L. 204. See also Reg. v. Russell, 13 Q. B. 237; 66 E. C. L. 235.

A form given in a schedule, even when referred to in the body of an act, is to be regarded merely as an example. Hannah v. Whyman, 2 C. M. & R. 239; Rex v. Russell, 13 Q. B. 237.

And although the schedule should be followed implicitly, when to do so would not sacrifice the effect and operation of the act; Hannah v. Whyman, 2 C. M. & R. 239; Davidson v. Gill, 1 East 64; Reg. v. Pinder, 24 L. J. Q. B. 148; Liverpool, etc., Bank v. Turner, 1 J. & H. 159; yet, when its provisions or forms are repugnant to the provisions in the body of the statute, the latter will prevail. Bartlett v. Gibbs, 5 M. & G. 96; 44 E. C. L. 53; Reg. v. Baines, 5 Ad. & El. 227; 40 E. C. L. 48; Allen v. Flicker, 10 Ad. & El. 640; 37 E. C. L. 204; Reg. v. Russell, 13 Q. B. 237; 66

E. C. L. 235; Dean v. Green, L. R., 8 P. D. 79; Clarke v. Grant, L. R., 8 Exch. 252.

1. Doe v. Martin, 4 T. R. 65; Barrow v. Wadkin, 24 Beav. 327; Sedg. Stat. Law 223; Hammock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 105 U. S. 77; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray (Mass.) 385; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; Hamilton v. The R. B. Hamilton, 16 Ohio St. 43; Caston v. Brock, 14 S. Car. 104.

2. Ewing v. Burnet, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 42; Morrill v. State, 38 Wis. 434; 20 Am. Rep. 12; State v. McNally, 34 Me. 210; 56 Am. Dec. 650.

In U. S. v. Three Railroad Cars, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 210, it was said: "The punctuation of a statute as printed affords no very decisive means for determining its construction."

In Caston v. Brock, 14 S. Car. 106, Willard, C. J., said: "Punctuation is the least reliable guide to the sense of a statute, but cannot properly be said to be without any force. In itself it is ordinarily insufficient to fix the sense of a statute where that is disputable."

In Ewing v. Burnet, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 53, Baldwin, J., said: "Punctuation is a most fallible standard by which to interpret a writing; it may be resorted to when all other means fail, but the court will first take the instrument by its four corners in order to ascertain its true meaning if that is apparent on judicially inspecting the whole punctuation and not be suffered to change it."

3. Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St., 311; U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 502; Com. v. Shopp, 2 Woodw. (Pa.) 123; Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 620; 57 Am. Rep. 623; Allen v. Russell, 39 Ohio St. 337; Archer v. Ellison, 28 S. Car. 238; Albright v. Payne, 43 Ohio St. 15; Bradstreet Co. v. Gill, 72 Tex. 115; 13 Am. St. Rep. 768.

In Pancoast v. Ruffin, 1 Ohio 385, the court said: "This construction is founded upon a mere grammatical criticism, which is never received to change or control the intention of the legislature where that intention is otherwise clearly expressed. Something may depend upon the punctuation in the statute book, which may be disregarded altogether,¹ and courts will correct and re-punctuate to give effect to what is plainly the legislative intent.²

c. LEGISLATIVE JOURNALS.—To ascertain the intention of the legislature when the terms of the statute are ambiguous, the courts may refer to the history of the bill while pending, as shown by the journals of either house.³ The journals of the Senate and House of Representatives may be referred to in considering acts of Congress.⁴ So in the construction of constitutional provisions incorrect, and which never ought to vary the true sense."

1. Martin v. Gleason, 139 Mass. 187; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray (Mass.) 382; Randolph v. Bayue, 44 Cal. 366; Hamilton v. The R. B. Hamilton, 16 Ohio St. 433; Shridley v. State, 23 Ohio St. 130; Albright v. Payne, 43 Ohio St. 15.

In Hamilton v. The R. B. Hamilton, 16 Ohio St. 432, it was said: "But for the punctuation as it stands there would be little doubt but that this was the meaning of the legislature. Courts will, however, in the construction of statutes, for the purpose of arriving at the true meaning and intention of the law makers, disregard the punctuation, or re-punctuate, if need be, to render the true meaning of the statute." This language was adopted in Hammock v. Farmer's L. & T. Co., 105 U. S. 77.

2. U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 496; Pancoast v. Ruffin, 1 Ohio 385; Hamilton v. The R. B. Hamilton, 16 Ohio St. 433; Price v. Price, 10 Ohio St. 316; Albright v. Payne, 43 Ohio St. 14; Allen v. Russell, 39 Ohio St. 337; Hammock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 105 U. S. 77.

In U. S. v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, Fuller, C. J., said: "For the purpose of arriving at the true meaning of a statute, courts read with such stops as are manifestly required."

A comma was allowed to be taken from before a word and placed after the same word, to give effect to the true purpose of the statute. Albright v. Payne, 43 Ohio St. 14.

In Re Olmsted, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 320, a statute was construed as if a comma were substituted for a semicolon.

In State v. Payne County (Oregon 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 789, it was said: "As to the contention in reference to the punctuation of the statute, it is enough to say that the rule is that courts will, in the construction of statutes, for the purpose of arriving at the real meaning and intention of the law-maker, disregard the punctuation, or re-punctuate if need be, to render clear the true meaning of the statute."

3. Hebbert v. Purchas, L. R., 3 P. C. 648; Hill v. Mitchell, 5 Ark. 608; Wood Mowing, etc., Co. v. Caldwell, 54 Ind. 276; Edger v. Randolph County, 70 Ind. 331; Division of Howard County, 15 Kan. 194; Warner v. Beers, 23 Wend (N. Y.) 103; Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 472; Blake v. National Banks, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 307. See also Gardiner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 511; Matthews v. Com., 18 Gratt. (Va.) 989.

In Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 481, it was held that the court could look into the history and progress of the bill during its pendency and passage by the general assembly, as shown by the journals of the two houses of that body, to ascertain the intention of the legislature as to the time when the law should take effect. See also Southwalk Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446; Gardner v. Barney, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 499.

A provision that "no lien reserved on personal property sold conditionally and passing into the hands of the conditional purchaser shall be valid against attaching creditors of purchasers without notice," was construed as though there were a comma after "purchasers," such being the punctuation in the original bill, as shown by the journal. McPhail v. Gerry, 55 Vt. 174.

But in State v. Under-Ground Cable Co. (N. J. 1889), 18 Atl. Rep. 581, the journals of the branches of the legislature were not allowed to be considered as evidence to show a different punctuation from that in the engrossed and printed act. In this case, however, the court said that there was no need of interpretation as the law contained nothing doubtful.

4. In Blake v. National Banks, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 307, the manner in which the amendatory words were introduced, as shown by the house journal, the journals of the convention have been referred to.¹ But it must be said of this, as of all other secondary modes of ascertaining the legislative intention, that it is to be resorted to only when the meaning of the language of the act itself is doubtful.²

f. CONTEMPORANEOUS CIRCUMSTANCES AND THE HISTORY OF THE BILL, while pending before the legislature, may be considered in case of doubt.³ The interpreter, in order to understand the subject-matter, scope, and object of the enactment, must ascertain what was the mischief or defect for which the law had not provided; that is, he must call to his aid all those external or historical facts which are necessary for this purpose and which led was referred to in determining the intention of Congress; and in Miles v. Stevens, 3 Pa. St. 21; 45 Am. Dec. 621, the journal of the House of Representatives was referred to to indicate the object had in view by that body in the passage of the particular law.

1. People v. Purdy, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 35; Coutant v. People, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 511; People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 496; State v. Closkey, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 482; Wisconsin Cent. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 37.

2. Southwalk Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446; Bank of Pa. v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 156. See, generally, on the subject of the legislative journals, supra, this title, Legislative Journals.

3. People v. Schoonmaker, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 48; Keith v. Quinney, 1 Oregon 364; District of Columbia v. Washington Market Co., 108 U. S. 243; Fairchild v. Gwynne, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 23; Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica, etc., R. Co., 6 Paige (N. Y.) 561. See also Scott v. Guthrie, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 408; Smith v. Helmer, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 416; Woods v. Mains, 1 Greene (Iowa) 275; Winslow v. Kimball, 25 Me. 493; Stout v. Grant County, 107 Ind. 343; Alexander v. Worthington, 5 Md. 471; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 486; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 91 U. S. 79; State v. Forkner, 70 Ind. 241; Valparaiso v. Gardner, 97 Ind. 1; 49 Am. Rep. 416; Garland v. Montgomery County, 87 Ala. 223; U. S. v. Collier, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325; State v. Nicholls, 30 La. Ann. 980; Martin v. Lake, 37 La. Ann. 763; People v. Essex County, 70 N. Y. 228; Tracy v. Card, 2 Ohio St. 441; Cincinnati Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Avondale, 43 Ohio St. 257; Brown v. Phillips, 71 Wis. 239; Holy Trinity Church v. U. S., 143 U. S. 457; Miller v. Salomons, 7 Exch. 475; Reg. v. Most, 7 Q. B. Div. 251; Reg. v. Col- lingwood, 12 Q. B. 686; 64 E. C. L. 684; 14 Cox C. C. 583; In re Wahll, 42 Fed. Rep. 822; Western R. Co. v. State (Ga. 1891), 14 L. R. A. 438; Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, Moore 462; Atty. Gen'l v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 431; Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. (U. S.) 9; Keyport, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Farmers' Transp. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 13; Delaplane v. Crenshaw, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 457; Hunt v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 112 Ind. 69; Rogers v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 117 Ill. 115; 1 Kent's Com. 46; Dwarris on St. 702; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Talbot, 113 Ind. 373; 3 Am. St. Rep. 655.

An act which authorized the court before which a road indictment was preferred to give costs, was construed as authorizing the judge of nisi prius to do so, partly on the ground of the well-known fact that such indictments were rarely tried by the courts in which they were, in the strict sense of the word, "preferred." Reg. v. Pembroke, 3 Q. B. 901; 43 E. C. L. 1028.

An ordinance of the colony of Hong-Kong, which authorized the extradition of Chinese subjects when charged with "any crime or offense against the law of China," was construed either by reference to the circumstances under which the treaty which the ordinance enforced had been made, or to the geographical relation of Hong-Kong to China, as limited to those crimes which all nations concur in prescribing. Atty. Gen'l v. Knock-A-Sing, L. R., 5 C. P. 179.

Certain provisions of the act of incorporation of the Union Pacific R. Co. were construed with reference to the history of the times, the national necessities to be provided for, and the general purpose of the act. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 91 U. S. 72.

to the enactment.¹ But traditional history, however, as to the purpose of the enactment must be cautiously received.² It is only material to consider the history of a statute where the words admit of two meanings, and the inquiry is to determine which meaning was intended. The external circumstances which may be thus referred to do not justify a departure from every meaning of the language of the act.³ In the interpretation of an ancient statute it is proper to ascertain the facts at the time of passage from annuals and antiquarian research.⁴

g. OPINIONS AND MOTIVES OF LEGISLATORS.—The opinions of individual legislators as to the object and effect of the statute are of little or no weight on questions of construction.⁵ So their

1. Hayden's Case, 3 Rep. 7; Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, Moore 462; Atty. Gen'l v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 539; Holme v. Guy, 5 Ch. Div. 905; Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De G. M. & G. 1; Wearth v. Adamson, 2 App. Cas. 743; Tonnele v. Hall, 4 N. Y. 140; Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 481; Keith v. Quinney, 1 Oregon 364; Big Black Creek Imp. Co. v. Cone, 94 Pa. St. 450; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 408; Browning v. Loraw, 58 Md. 526; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136; Preston v. Browder, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 120; Madison, etc., R. Co. v. Whiteneck, 8 Ind. 240; Green v. Graves, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 354; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 552; Dwarris on St. 44-6.

An act passed by the New York legislature in 1864, which provided for the raising of funds and payments of benefits to volunteers in the military and naval service of the United States, was held not to be retroactive, the intention of the lawmakers being ascertained by reference to the occasion and purpose of its enactment, and public interests to be served. People v. Columbia County, 43 N. Y. 130.

The occasion of the enactment of a law may be looked into in determining its character as retrospective or prospective. People v. Columbia County, 43 N. Y. 130; People v. Essex County, 70 N. Y. 237.

An act entitled "An act to secure to creditors a just division of the estates of debtors, who convey to assignees for the benefit of creditors," required the assignment to be in writing, and acknowledged before the proper officer, in order to be valid and effectual. The court in Fairchild v. Gwynne, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 23, held the requirement of the act to be imperative, in view of the abuses intended to be prevented, and evils to be corrected.

The words, "commence at or near the city of Schenectady, and running thence on the north side of the Mohawk river," etc., was held to authorize the company, in the charter of the Utica & Schenectady Railroad Company, to commence its road at some point on the north side of the river near the city, or at some suitable point on the south side, at or near the city, and thence to cross the river to the north side, a doubt as to the purport of the words "at or near the city" being settled by extrinsic circumstances. Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica, etc., R. Co., 6 Paige (N. Y.) 553.

It was held in Rex v. Mashiter, 6 Ad. & El. 153; 33 E. C. L. 31, that the word inhabitants in a charter has not in itself any definite legal meaning, but must be accepted in each case extrinsically by evidence of the usage, or by reference to the context and objects of the charter.

2. Barker v. Esty, 19 Vt. 131.

3. Reg. v. Pembroke, 3 Q. B. 901; 43 E. C. L. 1028; Reg. v. Bishop of London, 24 Q. B. D. 213; and cases cited in the first two notes under this sub-head.

4. McWilliam v. Adams, 1 Mac H. L. Cas. 120; Montrose Peerage, 1 Mac H. L. Cas. 401; Clyde Nav. Trustees v. Laird, 8 App. Cas. 673; Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. N. S. 395; 93 E. C. L. 395.

5. Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 387; Keyport, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Farmers' Transp. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 13; Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107; Atty. Gen'l v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 521; Dean of York's Case, 1 Q. B. 34; Martin v. Hemming, 10 Ex. 476; Cameron v.

remarks on the passage of a statute are too uncertain to serve as a guide.¹ Nor may the intention of the draughtsman nor the motives of members who voted for the act be taken into consideration in its construction.²

Cameron, 2 M. & K. 289; Hemstead v. Phoenix Gas Light, etc., Co., 3 H. & C. 745; Belleville, etc., R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20; 58 Am. Dec. 589.

In Cumberland County v. Boyd, 113 Pa. St. 57, it was said: "In giving construction to a statute we cannot be controlled by the views expressed by a few members of the legislature who expressed verbal opinions on its passage. Those opinions may or may not have been entertained by the more than a hundred members who gave no such expression. The declarations of some and the assumed acquiescence of others therein, cannot be adopted as a true interpretation of the statute. Keeping in mind the previous law, the supposed evil and the remedy desired, we must consider the language of the statute, and the fair and reasonable import thereof."

In Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 388, Field, C. J., said: "The respondents cite as authority for their position the opinions expressed by certain members of the Senate of the United States, when the act of March 3, 1851, was under discussion before that body. These opinions, say the learned counsel, show 'not only the effect, but the absolute limitation which Congress intended' the patent should possess. We do not think so; on the contrary, they only express the views entertained by individual members of one body of the national legislature. Other senators, who did not participate in the discussion of the subject, may have held different views as to the effect and operation of the patent; a majority of the Senate even may have held different views; and the general opinion of members of the House of Representatives may have differed entirely from that of Senators, both of those who spoke and of those who simply voted on the subject. It is evident that the opinions expressed by individual legislators upon the object and effect of particular provisions of an act under discussion, are entitled to very little weight in the construction of the act. The intention of the legislature must be sought in the language of the act—and the object expressed or apparent on its face—and not by the uncertain light of a legislative discussion."

In Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. (U. S.) 24, Taney, C. J., said: "In expounding this law the judgment of the court cannot in any degree be influenced by the construction placed upon it by individual members of Congress in the debate which took place on its passage; nor by the motives or reasons assigned by them for supporting or opposing amendments that are offered. The law as it passed is the will of the majority of both houses, and the only mode in which that will is spoken is in the act itself, and we must gather their intention from the language there used, comparing it when any ambiguity exists with the laws upon the same subject, and looking, if necessary, to the public history of the times in which it was passed."

1. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 91 U. S. 79; District of Columbia v. Washington Market Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 559; Barnes v. Mobile, 19 Ala. 707; Eastern R. Co. v. Railroad Com'rs, 50 L. J. Q. B. 203; Reg. v. Whittaker, 2 C. & K. 636; 61 E. C. L. 635; Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, 5 Exch. 630; MacGarrahan v. Maxwell, 28 Cal. 95. See also Forrest v. Forrest, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 46.

2. Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703; Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. (U. S.) 1; Richmond v. Henrico County, 83 Va. 212; Keyport, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Farmers' Transp. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 24; Kountze v. Omaha, 5 Dillon (U. S.) 443; People v. Shepard, 36 N. Y. 289; Bishop Stat. Cr., § 76; McMaster v. Lomax, 2 Myl. & K. 32; Cameron v. Cameron, 2 Myl. & K. 289; Belleville, etc., R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20; 58 Am. Dec. 589. "Testimony to explain the motives which operated upon the lawmakers or to point out the objects they had in view is wholly inadmissible." Pagand v. State, 5 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 497.

Reports of Committees.—The reports and proceedings before committees will not be considered by the courts in construing a statute. Bank of Pa. v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 156; 7 Pa. St. 144; Steele v. Midland R. Co., L. R., 1 Ch. 282; Don-egal v. Layard, 8 H. L. Cas. 460; Atty. Gen'l v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 431.

And so of the reports of committees

A fortiori, the opinion of a subsequent legislature upon the meaning of a statute is entitled to no more weight than that of its members in a private capacity.¹ Reference, however, occasionally has been made to what individual members of the legislature understood the enactment to mean, but little weight probably was attached to their opinions, and the rule may be said to be settled as above.²

h. USAGE AND CONTEMPORANEOUS CONSTRUCTION.—Courts, in construing or interpreting a statute, give much weight to the interpretation put upon it at the time of its enactment and since by those whose duty it has been to construe, execute, and apply it;³ and especially is this true, where the statute is an ancient appointed by Parliament. Salkeld v. Johnson, 2 C. B. 749; 52 E. C. L. 748; Farley v. Bonham, 2 J. & H. 177; In re Dean of York, 2 Q. B. 1; 42 E. C. L. 543; Martin v. Hemming, 18 Jur. 1002; Ewart v. Williams, 3 Drew. 21.

In Municipality No. Two v. Morgan, 1 La. Ann. 111, the report of a committee, which was presented and adopted with an ordinance, was regarded as a preamble showing the reasons for the ordinance.

1. Bingham v. Winona County, 8 Minn. 441. See also Dash v. Van Vleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 508; 5 Am. Dec. 291; State v. Armstrong, 4 Minn. 335; Ingalls v. Cole, 47 Me. 540.

2. Hebbert v. Perchas, L. R., 3 C. P. 649; Ridsdale v. Clifton, 2 P. Div. 322; Hedworth v. Jackson, Hard. 318; Mounsey v. Ismay, 34 L. J. Exch. 56; Drummond v. Drummond, L. R., 2 Ch. 45; Hudson v. Tooth, 3 Q. B. Div. 46; Ash v. Abdy, 3 Swanst. 664; Ex parte Farley, 40 Fed. Rep. 66; Moyer v. Gross, 2 Pen. & W. (Pa.) 171.

Thus, Hengham, C. J., said that he knew better than counsel the meaning of the statute of 2 Westminster, as he had drawn it. Year Book, 33 Edw. I, p. 31. And so in Ash v. Abdy, 3 Swanst. 664, Lord Nottingham said that he should know the meaning of the Statute of Frauds, as it was first introduced by him into the House of Lords. And in Rex v. Wallace, 5 T. R. 379, Lord Kenyon supported his construction of the Stat. of 9 Anne, ch. 20, by the argument that so accurate a lawyer as Mr. Justice Powell, who had drawn it, never would have used several words where one sufficed.

Mr. Bishop says: "How far opinions promulgated in connection with the making of a statute are to be regarded in its interpretation, is an inquiry more easily answered on principle than on authority. Practical obscurities arise from the fact, that commonly there are two dissimilar aspects from which such opinions are to be viewed. Courts properly look into legal treatises, whose only weight consists in their citation of authorities and the learning of their authors. In like manner, they sometimes give attention to opinions of learned lawyers in the various other ways expressed. In this aspect, it is evidently proper for them to look, if they choose, into discussions by lawyers in the legislative body, the views of the draughtsman of a bill, of the revisers of statutes, and of the legislature passing an act. As authority, this sort of matter is not admissible. As opinion to persuade, it varies with the particular circumstances." Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 76.

3. Bishop's Stat. Crimes, § 144; Scruggs v. Brackin, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 532; Sedgwick Stat. Laws 251; Fischer v. Max, 49 Mo. 404; 2d Inst. 11; People v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 191; Harrison v. State, 22 Md. 468; 85 Am. Dec. 658; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Catawissa R. Co., 53 Pa. St. 20; Com. v. Parker, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 556; Reg. v. Cutbush, L. R., 2 Q. B. 379; Reg. v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 11 Q. B. 581; 63 E. C. L. 580; Fall v. Hazelrigg, 45 Ind. 576; 15 Am. Rep. 278; Opinion of Justices, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 517; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio 599; 47 Am. Dec. 387; In re Warfield's Will, 22 Cal. 51; 83 Am. Dec. 49.

In Packard v. Richardson, 17 Mass. 143; 9 Am. Dec. 123, Parker, C. J., says: "A contemporaneous construction is generally the best construction of a statute. It gives the sense of the community of the terms made use of by the one, and the construction that of cotemporaries who had special knowledge of the subject.¹

If the statute has been construed by a court of last resort, such construction may be conclusive, on the principle of stare decisis;² or if by a re-enactment or declaratory statute the question of construction has been determined, this may be conclusive.³

But further, the meaning publicly given by contemporary or long professional usage is presumed to be the true one, even where the language has etymologically or popularly a different meaning. Those who lived at or near the time when it was passed would naturally be supposed to be better acquainted than their descendants with the circumstances to which it had relation, as well as with the sense then attached to legislative expressions.⁴

The contemporaneous and long-continued practice of officers required to execute, or take special cognizance of a statute, is strong evidence of its true meaning;⁵ but, though strong, is not legislature. If there is ambiguity in the language, the understanding and application of it when the statute first comes into operation, sanctioned by long acquiescence on the part of the legislature and judicial tribunals, is the strongest evidence that it has been rightly explained in practice."

In Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 418, Chief Justice Marshall said that, "Great weight has always been attached, and very rightly attached, to contemporaneous exposition."

1. Clyde Nav. Trustees v. Laird, 8 App. Cas. 673; Catholic Cathedral v. Manning, 72 Md. 116; In re Breslin, 45 Hun (N. Y.), 210; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio 599; 47 Am. Dec. 387; Morgan v. Crawshay, L. R., 5 H. L. 304; Mansell v. Reg., 8 El. & Bl. 111; 92 E. C. L. 110; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 351; Wanet v. Corbet, 13 Ga. 441; Dean v. Borchsenius, 30 Wis. 236; People v. May, 3 Mich. 598; The Anna, 1 P. Div. 259; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 85; Migneault v. Malo, L. R., 4 P. C. 136; State v. Chase, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 303; Pease v. Peck, 18 How. (U. S.) 595; Ex parte Hardy, 68 Ala. 303; Moog v. Randolph, 77 Ala. 606; Atty. Gen'l v. Preston, 56 Mich. 181; Brown v. State, 5 Colo. 496.

2. See STARE DECISIS, vol. 23, p. 19.

3. Booth v. Ibbotson, 1 Y. & J. 360; Bank of England v. Anderson, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 666; 32 E. C. L. 262; Doe v. Owens, 10 M. & W. 521; Curlewis v. Mornington, 7 El. & Bl. 283; 90 E. C. L. 281.

4. Co. Litt., 8 b.; 2 Inst. 18, 282; Bac.

Abr. Stat. I, 5; 2 Hawk., ch. 9, § 3; Sheppard v. Gosnold, Vaugh. 169; Rex v. Varlo, Cowp. 250; Rex v. Bewdley, 1 P. Wms. 223; Leigh v. Kent, 3 T. R. 364; Blankley v. Winstanley, 3 T. R. 286; Rex v. Scott, 3 T. R. 604; Rex v. Wallis, 5 T. R. 380; Kitchen v. Bartsh, 7 East 53; Stewart v. Lawton, 1 Bing. 377; 8 E. C. L. 554; Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, 15 Q. B. 59; 69 E. C. L. 57; Atty. Gen'l v. Parker, 3 Atk. 576; Atty. Gen'l v. Forster, 10 Ves. 338; Dunbar v. Roxburghe, 3 Cl. & F. 354; Jewison v. Dyson, 9 M. & W. 556; Clift v. Schwabe, 3 C. B. 469; 54 E. C. L. 468; Rex v. Mashiter, 6 Ad. & El. 153; 33 E. C. L. 31; Rex v. Davie, 6 Ad. & El. 374; 33 E. C. L. 90; Newcastle v. Atty. Gen'l, 12 Cl. & F. 419; Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. N. S. 395; 107 E. C. L. 113; Reg. v. Herford, 3 El. & El. 115; Atty. Gen'l v. Jones, 2 H. & C. 347; Marshall v. Bishop of Exeter, 13 C. B. N. S. 820; 106 E. C. L. 819; Montrose Peerage, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 401; L. J. in The Anna, 1 P. Div. 259; Atty. Gen'l v. Bradlaugh, 14 Q. B. Div. 667; Hebbert v. Purchas, L. R., 3 P. C. 650; Sherwin v. Bugbee, 16 Vt. 439; Graham's Appeal, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 136; Atty. Gen'l v. Bank of Cape Fear, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 71.

5. Scanlan v. Childs, 33 Wis. 663; M'Keen v. Delancy, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 22; U. S. v. Gilmore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 330; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Union Ins. Co. v. Hoge, 21 How. (U. S.) 35; Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299; Brown v. U. S., 113 U. S. 568; controlling upon the courts, and cases are not wanting, especially where the practice is not one of long standing, where courts have refused to follow such construction.¹

Burrow-Giles, etc., Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53; U. S. v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52; U. S. v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169; U. S. v. Alabama G. S. R. Co., 142 U. S. 615; Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 299; U. S. v. State Bank, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 29; Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 206; U. S. v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760; The Laura, 114 U. S. 411; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 35; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573; U. S. v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236; Schultze v. U. S., 14 Ct. of Cl. 299; Hahn v. U. S., 14 Ct. of Cl. 305; Swift v. U. S., 14 Ct. of Cl. 208; U. S. v. Lytle, 5 McLean (U. S.) 9; Morrison v. Barksdale, Harp. (S. Car.) 101; Simpson v. Willard, 14 S. Car. 195; Kernion v. Hills, 1 La. Ann. 419; Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Mathews v. Shores, 24 Ill. 27; Kirk v. Dean, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 341; Goddard v. Gloninger, 5 Watts (Pa.) 209; French v. Cowan, 79 Me. 426; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio 607; 47 Am. Dec. 387. See also State v. Severance, 49 Mo. 401. See Franklin County v. Bunting, 111 Ind. 143; Parvin v. Wimb-berg, 130 Ind. 561; 30 Am. St. Rep. 254; In re Warfield's Will, 22 Cal. 71, 83 Am. Dec. 49; Com. v. Posey, 4 Call (Va.) 109; 2 Am. Dec. 360; Duke of Buccleuch v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 5 Exch. Div. 221; Evanturel v. Evanturel, L. R., 2 P. C. 462; People v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 191; People v. Dayton, 55 N. Y. 377; Nelson v. Allen, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 376; Harrison v. Willis, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 40; 19 Am. Rep. 640; Solomon v. Cartersville, 41 Ga. 157; Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 229; Wellborn v. Estes, 70 Ga. 390; U. S. v. The Recorder, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 223; State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill (Md.) 487; Wright v. Forrestal, 65 Wis. 341; State v. Timme, 54 Wis. 340; Dean v. Borchsenius, 30 Wis. 236; Wetmore v. State, 55 Ala. 198; Johnson v. Ballou, 28 Mich. 379; Malonny v. Mahar, 1 Mich. 26; Kelly v. Multnomah County, 18 Oregon 356; Harrison v. Com., 83 Ky. 162; Rogers v. Goodwin, 2 Mass. 475.

1. In re Manhattan Sav. Inst., 82 N. Y. 142; U. S. v. Dickson, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 161; Pierce v. U. S., 1 Ct. of Cl. 270; Albright v. Bedford County, 106 Pa. St. 582; Simpson v. Willard, 14

S. Car. 195. See also Clow v. Harper, 3 Exch. Div. 198; Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 227; Goldsborough v. U. S., Taney's Dec. (U. S.) 80; Employers, etc., Assurance Co. v. Com'r of Insurance, 64 Mich. 614.

In Robertson v. Downing, 127 U. S. 607, it is said: "A regulation of a department of the government is not, of course, to control the construction of an act of Congress when its meaning is plain, but when there has been a long acquiescence in a regulation, and by it rights of parties for many years have been determined and adjusted, it is not to be disregarded without the most cogent and persuasive reasons."

In Merritt v. Cameron, 137 U. S. 551, it was said: "In arriving at this conclusion, we are not unmindful of the fact that defendants in error made their protest in accordance with the regulation of the treasury department in force at that time. A regulation of a department, however, cannot repeal a statute, neither is the construction of a statute by a department charged with its execution to be held conclusive and binding upon the courts of the country, unless such construction has been continuously in force for a long time. The cases cited go to that extent and no further. In regard to the law under consideration, construction of it by the treasury department has not been uniform." And see Van Loon v. Lyons, 61 N. Y. 22, reversing 4 Daly (N. Y.) 149, where the lower court had rested its judgment upon an established usage.

In U. S. v. Graham, 110 U. S. 219, it was said: "Such being the case, it matters not what the practice of the department may have been or how long continued, for it can only be resorted to in aid of interpretation, and it is not allowable to interpret what has no need of interpretation; if there were ambiguity or doubt, then such a practice begun so early and continued so long would be in the highest degree persuasive, if not absolutely controlling in its effect; but with language clear and precise and with its meaning evident, there is no room for construction, and consequently no need for anything to give it aid."

The long-continued construction of a doubtful statute by inferior courts will generally be followed by a higher court;¹ but where the statute is not doubtful, a prior construction by an inferior court will not be regarded;² so if prior constructions are conflicting it cannot be said there is a contemporary exposition, and the court must look to the statute itself.³

This rule of usage followed in the interpretation of a statute has been said to apply only to cases where the language is ambiguous; where it is plain and unambiguous, it is said that a practical construction in conflict with it must be corrected.⁴ But if the legislature by its inaction has long sanctioned a certain construction, language apparently unambiguous may be given by the courts such construction, especially if the usage has been public and authoritative.⁵ The construction of a statute in accordance with established practice will be especially followed by the courts in cases where departure from such construction would result in great mischief, or where property rights would be disturbed.⁶

1. Plummer v. Plummer, 37 Miss. 185; The Anna, 1 P. Div. 253.

2. Bailey v. Rolfe, 16 N. H. 247.

3. Rex v. Leek Wootton, 16 East 122.

4. Bailey v. Rolfe, 16 N. H. 247; Reg. v. Archbishop of Canterbury, 11 Q. B. 581; 63 E. C. L. 580; Dunbar v. Roxburghe, 3 Cl. & F. 354; Rex v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 728; Gwyn v. Hardwicke, 1 H. & N. 53; Pachin v. Duncombe, 1 H. & N. 856; Ham v. Sawyer, 38 Me. 37; In re Manhattan Sav. Inst., 82 N. Y. 142; Merritt v. Cameron, 137 U. S. 551.

5. Reg. v. Scaife, 17 Q. B. 238; 79 E. C. L. 237; Leigh v. Kent, 3 T. R. 362; Dyer v. Best, L. R., 1 Exch. 152; Clays v. Sudgrave, 1 Salk. 33; Smith v. Tilly, 1 Keb. 712; Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 299; M'Keen v. Delancy, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 22; U. S. v. The Recorder, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 223; Harrison v. Com., 83 Ky. 171; State v. Chase, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 303; Graham's Appeal, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 136; McFerron v. Powers, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 105.

In Gorham v. Bishop of Exeter, 15 Q. B. 73; 69 E. C. L. 71, Campbell, C. J., said: "Were the language of the statute, 25 Henry VIII, ch. 19, obscure instead of being clear, we should not be justified in differing from the construction put upon it by contemporaneous and long-continued usage. There would be no safety to property nor liberty if it could be successfully contended that all the lawyers and statesmen have been mistaken for centuries as to the true meaning of an old act of Parliament."

In Stuart v. Laird, 1 Cranch (U. S.)

309, it is said: "To this objection, which is of recent date, it is sufficient to observe, that practice and acquiescence under it for a period of several years, commencing with the organization of the judicial system, affords an irresistible answer, and has indeed fixed the construction. It is a contemporary interpretation of a most forcible nature. This practical exposition is too strong and obstinate to be shaken or controlled. Of course, the question is at rest, and ought not now to be disturbed."

Where a statute organizing a criminal court authorized "two or more" of the judges to try offenses, it was construed as authorizing a single judge to try offenses, such having been the inveterate practice. Leverson v. Reg., L. R., 4 Q. B. 394.

When the question arose whether a person convicted at one time of several offenses could be considered at the time of the adjudication as "in prison undergoing imprisonment," it was decided in the affirmative in consequence of the practice of the judges for many years. Reg. v. Cutbush, L. R., 2 Q. B. 379.

6. M'Keen v. Delancy, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 32; Brown v. State, 5 Colo. 496; In re Warfield's Will, 22 Cal. 51; 83 Am. Dec. 49; Steiner v. Cox, 4 Pa. St. 13; Chesnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio 603; 47 Am. Dec. 387; Troup v. Haight, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 239; People v. Loewenthal, 93 Ill. 192; State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill (Md.) 497; Continental Imp. Co. v. Phelps, 47 Mich. 299.

An ancient statute of the colony of

Where the courts have acted for a long time upon a statute without questioning its constitutionality, a strong presumption arises that it is constitutional.¹ But this presumption is not conclusive, for it may be declared void, notwithstanding the lapse of time.²

The practice must have been general and public; it must have been acted upon in general practice and must not be a mere speculative theory.³

As a universal law cannot have different interpretations in different localities, the construction of a general statute cannot be aided by a local or special usage, even for the locality where such usage prevails.⁴ But words in a statute applicable to a particular place, when doubtful, may be construed by reference to the usage prevailing there.⁵

i. LEGISLATIVE CONSTRUCTION.—It is the duty of the legislature to enact laws, not to expound nor interpret them.⁶ While Massachusetts permitted proprietors of common and undivided lands to dispose of their estates. The practical construction of this statute had been that they had the power to sell any part of them to a stranger. It was held that the court would follow this construction. The court said: "Of these statutes a practical construction early and generally obtained that in the power to dispose of lands was included a power to sell and convey the common lands. Large and valuable estates are held in various parts of the commonwealth, the titles to which depend on this construction. Were the court now to decide that this construction is not to be supported, very great mischief would follow. And although, if it were now res integra, it might be very difficult to maintain such a construction, yet at this day the argumentum ab inconvenienti applies with great weight. We cannot shake a principle which in practice has so long and so extensively prevailed. If the practice originated in error, yet the error is now so common that it must have the force of law. The legal ground on which this provision is now supported is, that long and continued usage furnishes a contemporaneous construction, which must prevail over the mere technical import of the words." Rogers v. Goodwin, 2 Mass. 477.

1. State v. Bosworth, 13 Vt. 401. See also Continental Imp. Co. v. Phelps, 47 Mich. 303.

2. Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376.

3. Isherwood v. Oldknow, 3 M. & S. 396; Water v. Perry, 6 L. & F. 73; In re Ford, 10 Ch. Div. 370; Feather v. Reg., 6 B. & S. 257; 118 E. C. L. 257.

4. Rex v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 728; Bishop's Stat. Crimes, § 101; Rex v. Saltren, Cald. 444; Evans v. Myers, 25 Pa. St. 112.

A fortiori is this the case when a local custom is manifestly at variance with the object of the act, as, for instance, the custom of departing from the statute of weights and measures which the legislature plainly desires to make obligatory on all and everywhere. Noble v. Durell, 3 T. R. 271.

5. Love v. Hinckley, Abb. Adm. 436. See also Delaplane v. Crenshaw, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 457; Frazier v. Warfield, 13 Md. 279.

6. Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 46; Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; 51 Am. Dec. 567; Reiser v. William Tell, etc., Assoc., 39 Pa. St. 146; Sedgw. Stat. 253; Ogden v. Blackledge, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 272; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 498; 5 Am. Dec. 291; Salter v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 338; People v. New York, 16 N. Y. 424; Allen v. Mutual F. Ins. Co., 2 Md. 117; Bingham v. Winona County, 8 Minn. 441; Ingalls v. Cole, 47 Me. 530; O'Conner v. Warner, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 223; Calhoun v. McLendon, 42 Ga. 405; McCulloch v. Stone, 64 Miss. 378.

In Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 498; 5 Am. Dec. 291, Thompson, J., said: "To declare what the law is or has been is a judicial power; to declare what the law shall be is a legislative power. One of the fundamentals of all governments is that the legisla-an expression of the legislative view as to the proper construction of a law is of no judicial force,¹ it is, nevertheless, entitled to some weight in the construction of doubtful language.²

Ordinarily a retrospective operation is not to be given to expository, directory, or declaratory statutes.³

A statute which betrays an erroneous conception as to the proper interpretation of a pre-existing statute does not control the courts in their interpretation of such pre-existing statute.⁴

tive power shall be separate from the judicial."

In O'Conner v. Warner, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 223, Gibson, C. J., said: "A legislative direction to perform a judicial function in a particular way would be a direct violation of the constitution, which assigns to each organ of the government its exclusive function."

1. Planters' Bank v. Black, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 51; Governor v. Porter, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 165; Drain Com'r v. Baxter, 57 Mich. 127; Baltimore Catholic Cathedral v. Manning, 72 Md. 125; Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 25; Jackson v. Washington County (Neb. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 169; Bingham v. Winona County, 8 Minn. 441; State v. Armstrong, 4 Minn. 335; People v. New York, 16 N. Y. 424; O'Conner v. Warner, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 223.

2. Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 145; Pike v. Megoun, 44 Mo. 491; Coutant v. People, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 511; Dunlap v. Crawford, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 435; Henry v. Tilson, 17 Vt. 479; Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 678; Drain Com'r v. Baxter, 57 Mich. 132.

In Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 25, Rogers, J., said: "Explanatory acts must be construed as operating on future cases alone, except where they are designed to explain a doubtful statute, in which case they deserve and will receive the most respectful attention from the judicial branch of the government."

Courts will treat declaratory laws with all the respect that is due to them as an expression of the opinion of the individual members of the legislature as to what the rule of law previously was, but beyond that they can have no binding effect, and if the judge is satisfied that the legislative construction is wrong, he is bound to disregard it. Salter v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 338.

3. Postmaster Gen'l v. Early, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 148; Stockdale v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 323;

Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 678; Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 25; Haley v. Philadelphia, 68 Pa. St. 45; Singer Mfg. Co. v. McCollock, 24 Fed. Rep. 667; Stebbins v. Pueblo County, 4 Fed. Rep. 282; Planters' Bank v. Black, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 50; Dunlap v. Crawford, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 435.

In Dequindre v. Williams, 31 Ind. 450, Frazer, C. J., said: "It is not ordinarily the function of the legislature to interpret statutes, nor is such interpretation binding upon the courts as to past transactions, but as to matters occurring thereafter, such legislation guides all departments of the government. If a legislative construction be even plainly contrary to the terms of the act construed, it must nevertheless be taken as a new enactment changing the old law."

Both in principle and authority it may be taken to be established, that a legislative body may by statute declare the construction of previous statutes so as to bind the courts in reference to all transactions occurring after the passage of the law, and may in many cases thus furnish the rule to govern the courts in transactions which are past, provided no constitutional right of the party concerned is violated. Municipality No. 1 v. Wheeler, 10 La. Ann. 747. See generally, infra, this title, Retrospective Laws.

4. Dore v. Gray, 2 T. R. 358; Ex parte Lloyd, 1 Sim. N. S. 248; Coverdale v. Charlton, 4 Q. B. Div. 116; Rolls v. St. George, 14 Ch. Div. 785; Reg. v. Keyn, 2 Exch. Div. 163; Farmers' Bank v. Hale, 59 N. Y. 53; Salters v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 338; Davis v. Doe, 25 Miss. 445; Byrd v. State, 57 Miss. 243; 34 Am. Rep. 440; Van Norman v. Jackson, 45 Mich. 204.

A part of an act, which showed that the legislature assumed that a certain kind of beer might be lawfully sold without a license, could not be treated as an enactment that such beer might

But a statute may contain an interpretation clause,¹ although ordinarily such interpretation clause will have no bearing upon the interpretation of a subsequent statute.²

Beyond the interpretation clause just referred to, and to be distinguished from it, is the clause frequently found in codes and general revisions of statutes, and designed to affix a meaning to, or to aid in the interpretation of words and phrases used throughout the body of the statutes; as, for example, the provision that the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa, or that the masculine shall include the feminine.³ These definitions are applicable only to the words defined, as such words are used in the statutes, and are not intended to define words as used elsewhere.⁴

be so sold when the law imposed a penalty on every unlicensed person who sold any beer. Read v. Storey, 6 H. & N. 423.

Repeal and Re-enactment.—A recital in a statute that a former statute had been repealed or superseded by another, is not conclusive that such a repeal has been made. U. S. v. Claffin, 97 U. S. 546. And where a later act attempts to amend an earlier one previously repealed by implication, the copying of parts of the earlier act into the amendment has been held not to re-enact it. Byrd v. State, 57 Miss. 243; 34 Am. Rep. 440. See also Trask v. Green, 9 Mich. 366.

Misconception as to Jurisdiction.—A jurisdiction will never be created by the mistaken inference of the legislature that such jurisdiction exists. Luddington v. U. S., 15 Ct. of Cl. 453; Hersom's Case, 39 Me. 476. But see State v. Miller, 23 Wis. 634, where it was said that "though an unfounded assumption by the legislature that a particular jurisdiction existed might not alone be sufficient to create it, yet when the jurisdiction is assumed to exist and explicit provision made as to the method of its exercise, this carries with it, by implication, jurisdiction of the proceedings so regulated."

1. Wilb. on Stat. 296; Farmers' Bank v. Hale, 59 N. Y. 63; Smith v. State, 28 Ind. 325; Herold v. State, 21 Neb. 53; State v. Adams, 51 N. H. 568; Jones v. Surprise, 64 N. H. 243; People v. Soto, 49 Cal. 70; State v. Gilmore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 330; Hill v. Mitchell, 5 Ark. 608; People v. Knight, 13 Mich. 424.

2. Allsop v. Day, 7 H. & N. 463; McGowan v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 197; Drennan v. People, 10 Mich. 173.

But when the legislature puts a construction on an act, a subsequent cognate enactment in the same terms would prima facie be understood in the same sense. See Goldsmid v. Hampton, 5 C. B. N. S. 94; 94 E. C. L. 93; Ward v. Beck, 13 C. B. N. S., 668; 106 E. C. L. 666; William v. Lear, L. R. 7 Q. B. 285. See supra, this title, In Pari Materia.

3. Smith v. Allen, 31 Ark. 268; State v. Main, 31 Conn. 572; Garrigus v. Parke County, 39 Ind. 66; Buhl v. Kenyon, 11 Mich. 249; Brown v. McCormick, 28 Mich. 215; Drennan v. People, 10 Mich. 173; State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195; Westervelt v. People, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 416; Hogan v. State, 36 Wis. 226; Foltz v. Hoge, 54 Cal. 28; People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50. See also Reg. v. Pearce, 5 Q. B. Div. 386; Lindsay v. Cundy, 1 Q. B. Div. 358; Midland R. Co. v. Ambergate R. Co., 10 Hare 359.

4. Alabama Warehouse Co. v. Lewis, 56 Ala. 514; State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195.

So it has been held that the definitions and rules of construction did not affect words as used in indictments. Jones v. Surprise, 64 N. H. 243; State v. Adams, 51 N. H. 568.

In De Pas v. Riez, 2 La. Ann. 30, it was said that definitions incorporated in the code must be construed with reference to its positive enactments in pari materia, and have no meaning beyond them.

In State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 228, Bell, J., said: "A small number of definitions were introduced in the Revised Statutes for the sake of brevity, and to prevent the recurrence of several terms, which, by a forced construction, might be included in a single word; but such definitions can, in the nature

In England, these provisions, whether general or special, are looked upon with disfavor.¹ It is said that they should receive a strict construction,² and are to be resorted to only when the meaning of the words, as they stand, is not plain.³ They are not allowed the effect of substituting one set of words for another, nor of defining the meaning of words under all circumstances, but merely of declaring what things or persons may be comprehended within a particular term, where the circumstances so require.⁴

7. Presumptions—a. AGAINST UNDUE EXERCISE OF POWER—
(1) In General.—There is a general presumption that the legislature does not intend to exceed its jurisdiction.⁵ In the absence of an intention expressed or inferred, the presumption is that the legislature does not design its statute to operate beyond the territorial limits of its jurisdiction.⁶ Even where the legislature in one country may properly bind its citizens in another, express of things, have no effect, except in the construction of the statutes themselves. The meaning of language depends on popular usage, which is not and cannot, unless in a very slight degree, be affected by legislation."

1. Wilberforce Stat. Laws 296-300; Rex v. Cambridgeshire, 7 Ad. & El. 480; 37 E. C. L. 147; Lindsay v. Cundy, 1 Q. B. Div. 358; Dean of Ely v. Bliss, 2 De G. M. & G. 459; Reg. v. Pearce, 5 Q. B. Div. 389; Midland R. Co. v. Ambergate R. Co., 10 Hare 369.

In Dean of Ely v. Bliss, 2 De G. M. & G. 459, the Lord Chancellor said: "It has been very much doubted, and I concur in that doubt, whether these interpretation clauses, which are of modern origin, have not introduced more mischief than they have avoided, for they have attempted to put a general construction on words which do not admit of such construction in the different senses in which they are introduced in the various clauses in an act of Parliament."

In Reg. v. Gloucestershire, 7 Ad. & El. 480; 34 E. C. L. 147, it was said: "We cannot refrain from expressing a serious doubt whether interpretation clauses will not rather embarrass the courts in their decision than afford that assistance which they contemplate; for the principles on which they are themselves to be interpreted may become matter of controversy, and the application of them to particular cases may give rise to endless doubts."

2. Sedgw. Stat. 59; Allsop v. Day, 7 H. & N. 463, per Pollock, C. P.; Meux v. Jacobs, L. R., 7 H. L. 481.

3. Lindsay v. Cundy, 1 Q. B. Div. 358; Reg. v. Pearce, 5 Q. B. Div. 389.

4. Reg. v. Cambridgeshire, 7 Ad. & El. 491; 34 E. C. L. 147; Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113; Reg. v. Kershaw, 6 El. & Bl. 1007; Pound v. Plumstead Board of Works, L. R., 7 Q. B. 183; Davis v. R. Co., 2 L. M. & P. 599; Nutter v. Accrington Local Board, 4 Q. B. Div. 375; Worsley v. R. Co., 16 Q. B. 539; Jones v. Cook, L. R., 6 Q. B. 505; Ex parte Ferguson, L. R., 6 Q. B. 291.

5. CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 508, et seq. And see that article generally upon questions involved in this section.

6. Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 241; U. S. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 629; U. S. v. Howard, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 344; The Zollverein, Swab. 96; Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; Rex v. Sawyer, 2 C. & K. 101; 61 E. C. L. 100; Madrazo v. Willes, 3 B. & Ald. 353; Bulkeley v. Schutz, L. R., 3 P. C. 764; McCarthy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 18 Kan. 46; 26 Am. Rep. 742; Merrill v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 63 N. H. 259; Davis v. New York, etc., R. Co., 143 Mass. 304; 58 Am. Rep. 138; Drain Com'r v. Baxter, 57 Mich. 127; Taylor v. Pennsylvania Co., 78 Ky. 350; 39 Am. Rep. 244; Stanley v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 100 Mo. 435; McCarthy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 18 Kan. 46; 26 Am. Rep. 742; U. S. v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 76.

In Ex parte Blain, 12 Ch. Div. 522, James, L. J., said that English legislation, unless the contrary was expressly enacted, or so plainly implied as to make it the duty of an English court words are required, or distinct implication, to give the statute that effect.¹ Upon the same ground it will be presumed that the leg-to give effect to an English statute, was applicable only to English subjects, or to foreigners who, by coming into the country, have made themselves during that time, subject to English jurisdiction. Brett, L. J., in the same case said: "The governing principle is that all legislation is prima facie territorial."

"As under the unwritten rule, and in the absence of special circumstances, the laws of a state are for the government only of persons and things within it, statutes in mere general terms will be construed as not intended to create offenses or otherwise regulate the conduct of parties beyond its territorial limits." Bishop's Statutory Crimes, § 141.

Under this principle any statute which regulates the formalities and ceremonials of marriage is in general limited in effect to the territorial jurisdiction of the legislature. Scrimshire v. Scrimshire, 2 Hagg. Cons. 371; Story's Conflict of Laws, § 121. See CONFLICT OF LAWS, vol. 3, p. 598.

An English statute which prohibited the sale of liquids otherwise than by imperial measure was held not to affect a contract between British subjects for the sale of palm oil to be measured and delivered on the coast of Africa. Rosseter v. Cahlman, 8 Exch. 361. Marshall, C. J., in Bond v. Jay, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 350, said: "It is so unusual for a legislature to employ itself in framing rules which are to operate only on contracts made without their jurisdiction, between persons residing without their jurisdiction, that courts can never be justified in putting such a construction on their words, if they admit of any other interpretation which is rational and not too much strained."

In Farnum v. Blackstone Canal Co., 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 46, Story, J., said: "It cannot be presumed that a legislature authorizes any act to be done in a foreign territory when that act is beyond the reach of its proper jurisdiction or sovereignty. Every legislature, however broad may be its enactments, is supposed to confine them to cases or persons within the reach of its sovereignty."

In Beach v. Bay State Steamboat Co., 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 433, where it was held that the actions given by the statutes of 1847-49 to the families of persons killed by the wrongful act, neglect, etc., of others, could not be maintained where the injuries were inflicted without the state, Sutherland, J., says: "There is nothing in these acts which shows that they were intended to protect the lives of its citizens while out of the state—nothing to show that they were intended to extend to acts, neglects or defaults committed or suffered in another state. It must be presumed, I think, as the result of the general principle of the territorial limit of political jurisdiction, and of the force of law . . . that these statutes were intended to control the conduct of corporations, their agents, etc., and all other persons while operating or being in this state only."

In Twitchell v. Steamboat Missouri, 12 Mo. 412, it was decided that a statute concerning boats and vessels could not be construed so as to have extra-territorial effect. See also Steamboat Champion v. Jantzen, 16 Ohio 91; Godsill v. The St. Louis, 16 Ohio 178; Noble v. Steamboat St. Anthony, 12 Mo. 262.

1. Bishop's Statutory Crimes, § 141, citing Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. Cas. 815; Clementi v. Walker, 2 B. & C. 861; 9 E. C. L. 258.

Where, however, the implication is plain that the legislature intended to bind its subjects, effect must be given to the intention. Thus, where the whole aim of an English statute was to prevent members of the royal family from marrying without the consent of the reigning sovereign, and which made null and void such marriages, it was held that as this intention would have been easily defeated if a marriage in a foreign country had not fallen within it, the statute imposed an incapacity which attached to the person and followed him all over the world. Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl. & F. 85. And this is true, though the marriage were valid according to the law of the country where it was celebrated. Swift v. Swift, 3 Knapp 257. See also Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. 193.

This wider effect has been given even to a criminal statute where such must have been manifestly its intention. An English statute which made it a felony for "any person" to deal in slaves, or to transfer them, or equip islature does not intend to make a futile attempt to bind future legislatures in excess of its power.¹

Under the same general presumption that the legislature does not intend to exceed its jurisdiction, every statute is to be interpreted, as far as its language admits, as not violating the rules of international law, and as not being inconsistent with the comity of nations. It is only where the intention of the legislature is expressed with irresistible clearness that courts will construe its language in such manner as to lead to an infraction of the general law of nations; and in order to avoid imputing such an intention to the legislature they will adopt any other possible construction.² All general terms must be narrowed in construction to avoid it.³ Statutes in terms binding persons beyond the territorial jurisdiction are, in construction, restricted, where the law of nations limits the right, as extending only to the subjects of the government of which the legislature is a part.⁴

vessels for their transfer, was held to apply to British subjects committing any such offenses on the coast of Africa, a notorious scene of the crimes which it was the object of the statute to suppress. Reg. v. Zulueta, 1 C. & K. 215; 47 E. C. L. 214; Santos v. Illidge, 6 C. B. N. S. 841; 95 E. C. L. 840. See also Reg. v. Mount, L. R., 6 P. C. 283.

1. In Oleson v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 383, where a law provided that certain municipalities should incur no further liability "by virtue of the authority of any other law of this state," it was held that the words "other law of this state" must be understood as referring to other laws existing at the time of the passage of this law, as it was not within the power of our legislature to bind future legislatures.

So in Casey v. Harned, 5 Iowa 1, the word "forever" in a statute which provided that a certain place should be the county seat, "forever" was construed to mean until such seat should be changed by law. See also Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 125; State v. Oskins, 28 Ind. 364; Swift v. Newport, 7 Bush (Ky.) 37; Files v. Fuller, 44 Ark. 273; Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 387; Mongeon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613; Wall v. State, 23 Ind. 150.

2. Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801; 74 E. C. L. 800; Murray v. The Charming Betsey, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 118. See also U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 390; Story on Conflict of L., p. 32.

3. Le Louis, 2 Dods. 229; The Constitution, 4 P. D. 39; The Exchange v. M'Faddon, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 116.

In The Parliament Belge, 5 P. D. 197, from the numerous cases there cited the principle is deduced, that as a consequence of the absolute independence of every sovereign authority, and of the international comity which induces every sovereign state to respect the independence and dignity of every other sovereign state, and in view of its being a part of international law, each and every one declines to extend by means of its courts any of its territorial jurisdiction over the person of any sovereign or ambassador of any other state, or over the property of any ambassador or state destined for a public use, though such sovereign ambassador or state be within its territory and subject to its jurisdiction. See INTERNATIONAL LAW, vol. II, p. 442.

4. Bishop's Statutory Crimes; The Apollon, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 362.

Thus, where an English statute enacted that where any person feloniously injured abroad or at sea, died in England, or receiving the injury in England, died at sea or abroad, the offense should be dealt with in the country where the death or injury occurred, it was held that this did not authorize a trial of a foreigner who inflicted a wound at sea in a foreign ship, of which the sufferer died in England. Rex v. Lewis, Dears & B. 182. And see Rex v. Depardo, 1 Taunt. 26; Rex v. De Mattos, 7 C. & P. 458; Nga Hoong v. Rex, 7 Cox 489; Rex v. Bjornsen, 34 L. J. M. C. 180.

So it has been repeatedly held that an act of Congress which provided that any person committing robbery in

If the language of the statute is unambiguous, and the intention of the legislature is clear, although the act is in conflict with international law, whatever may be the responsibility incurred by the government to foreign powers in executing the statute, there can be no doubt that courts of justice are bound to obey and administer it.¹

(2) In Favor of Constitutionality.—There is a presumption in favor of the constitutionality of a statute which requires, when a statute is susceptible of two constructions, one constitutional and the other not, that the former shall be adopted, even though the latter may be the more natural interpretation of the language used.²

“any vessel on the high seas should be guilty of piracy,” applied only to robbery in American vessels, and not to robbery in foreign vessels, even by an American citizen. U. S. v. Howard, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 340; U. S. v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 610; U. S. v. Klintock, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 144; U. S. v. Kessler, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 15; Reg. v. Keyn, 2 Exch. Div. 172.

Real Property.—As real property is subject exclusively to the laws of the state in which it lies, an act dealing in general terms with the real estate of a bankrupt will be considered as not extending to his lands in another jurisdiction. Selkrig v. Davies, 2 Rose 97-281; 2 Dow. 250; Cockerell v. Dickens, 3 Moo. P. C. 133; Waite v. Bingley, 21 Ch. Div. 674; Drayton's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 172. See also Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. Bl. 672; Phillip v. Hunter, 1 H. Bl. 402; Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182; Freke v. Carbery, 16 Eq. 461.

1. The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 40; The Zollverein, Swab. 96; The Johannes, Swab. 188; Le Louis, 2 Dods. 245; Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl. & F. 85; Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 821; 74 E. C. L. 819.

In Lopez v. Burslem, 4 Moo. P. C. 300, Lord Campbell said: “If a law were made, working oppression and injustice to the subjects of a foreign state, that state might make representations and remonstrances against this law to our government; but while it remains in force, judges have no choice but to give effect to it.”

2. Quartlebaum v. State, 79 Ala. 1; Sadler v. Langham, 34 Ala. 311; Edwards v. Williamson, 70 Ala. 145; South, etc., Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; Zeigler v. South, etc., Ala. R. Co., 58 Ala. 594; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518; People v. Hayne, 83 Cal. 111; 17 Am. St. Rep. 211; Ferguson v. Stamford, 60 Conn. 432;

Hartford Bridge Co. v. Union Ferry Co., 29 Conn. 210; Winter v. Jones, 10 Ga. 190; 54 Am. Dec. 379; Scoville v. Calhoun, 76 Ga. 263; Clayton v. Calhoun, 76 Ga. 270; Boston v. Cummins, 16 Ga. 102; 60 Am. Rep. 717; Cutts v. Hardee, 38 Ga. 350; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 376; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Burdett, 112 Ind. 204; Wilkins v. State, 113 Ind. 514; State v. Insurance Co. of N. A., 115 Ind. 257; Brown v. Buzan, 24 Ind. 197; Santo v. State, 2 Iowa 165; 63 Am. Dec. 487; State v. Davis County, 2 Iowa 280; Duncombe v. Prindle, 12 Iowa 1; Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster County, 21 Iowa 221; Morrison v. Springer, 15 Iowa 348; Beach v. Leahy, 11 Kan. 28; State v. Robinson, 1 Kan. 25; Millay v. White, 86 Ky. 170; Boisdere v. Citizens' Bank, 9 La. 506; 29 Am. Dec. 453; New Orleans v. Salamander Ins. Co., 25 La. Ann. 650; State v. Shakespeare, 41 La. Ann. 156; Custer County v. Yellowstone County, 6 Mont. 39; Deering v. York, etc., R. Co., 31 Me. 172; State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 80 Me. 57; Wright v. Wright, 2 Md. 429; 56 Am. Dec. 723; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376; Temnick v. Owings, 70 Md. 246; Newsom v. Cocke, 44 Miss. 352; 7 Am. Rep. 686; Marshall v. Grimes, 41 Miss. 31; Sykes v. Columbus, 55 Miss. 143; Inkster v. Carver, 16 Mich. 484; Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308; Sears v. Cottrell, 5 Mich. 250; Bailey v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 389; 44 Am. Dec. 593; Wellington Petitioner, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 95; 26 Am. Dec. 631; Wells v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 110 Mo. 286; State v. Simmons Hardware Co., 109 Mo. 118; State v. Pond, 93 Mo. 606; State v. Cape Girardeau, etc., R. Co., 48 Mo. 471; State v. Able, 65 Mo. 362; State v.

Addington, 77 Mo. 110; Atlantic City Water Works Co. v. Consumers' Water Co., 44 N. J. Eq. 427; Colwell v. May's Landing, etc., Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 245; McGwigan v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 95 N. Car. 428; McDougall v. State, 109 N. Y. 73; Kip v. Hirsch, 18 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 174; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 554; People v. West, 106 N. Y. 293; 60 Am. Rep. 452; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; 30 Am. Rep. 323; Clark v. Rochester, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 471; Roosevelt v. Godard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 533; People v. Comstock, 78 N. Y. 356; Ex parte McCollum, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 550; People v. Orange County, 17 N. Y. 241; De Walt v. Bartley, 146 Pa. St. 529; Speer v. School Directors, 50 Pa. St. 150; Craig v. First Presby. Church, 88 Pa. St. 46; 32 Am. Rep. 417; Com. v. Bennett, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 243; Barker v. Torrey, 69 Tex. 7; Rosenberg v. Weekes, 67 Tex. 578; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Gross, 47 Tex. 428; Robinson v. State, 15 Tex. 311; Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 422; 73 Am. Dec. 367; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640; Palms v. Shawano County, 61 Wis. 211; Bigelow v. West Wisconsin R. Co., 27 Wis. 478; Grenada County v. Brown, 112 U. S. 261; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 14; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 394; U. S. v. Central, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 235; U. S. v. Coombs, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 75; Missouri v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 722; Singer Mfg. Co. v. McCollock, 24 Fed. Rep. 667; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; Dow v. Norris, 4 N. H. 17; 17 Am. Dec. 400; Sutherland v. De Leon, 1 Tex. 250; 46 Am. Dec. 100; Maize v. State, 4 Ind. 342; Stocking v. State, 7 Ind. 326.

In Roosevelt v. Godard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 545, it is said: "They are not only presumed to be constitutional, but the authority of the court to declare them void will only be resorted to in a clear case of conflict. (Boston v. Cummins, 6 Ga. 102; 60 Am. Dec. 717; Norwich v. Hampshire County, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 60; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 416). Washington, J., says: 'It is but a decent respect due to the wisdom, integrity, and the patriotism of the legislative body by which any law is passed to presume in favor of its validity, until its violation of the constitution is proved beyond all reasonable doubt.' (Ogden v. Saunders, 12

Wheat. (U. S.) 270). And when the constitutional validity is in controversy and the law itself may be ambiguous in its import, that construction must be given to it which will sustain its validity rather than the one which will render it inoperative and void."

In spite of the general presumption that where a statute is adopted from another state its construction there is likewise adopted, if such construction is inconsistent with the constitution of the state to which it is transplanted it will not be followed. Bowers v. Smith, 111 Mo. 45.

Where a statute provided that certain territory "shall constitute and be known as the county of New," and that "said county of New is hereby attached to and made a part of the county of Shawano for all county and judicial purposes until it shall appear" that the county has a population of one thousand, when it shall be organized, it was held that it did not create a county in presenti, but merely detached territory to become a county in the future, and, therefore, did not violate the constitution by submitting one county to the government of another. Palms v. Shawano County, 61 Wis. 211.

So a prospective construction will be favored where to construe it retroactively would render it unconstitutional. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Van Horn, 57 N. Y. 473; Millay v. White, 86 Ky. 170; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 384. See infra, this title, Retroactive Statutes.

In Colwell v. May's Landing, etc., Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 245, the word "dam" in the charter of a corporation was construed to mean the pond of water itself rather than to mean in its strict sense the structure raised to obstruct the flow of water, since this latter meaning in a provision allowing the company to raise its dam, but providing no compensation for injury to others, would have violated the constitution.

In Grenada County v. Brown, 112 U. S. 261, it was contended that bonds subscribed by the county to a railroad were invalid, on the ground that the act of the legislature authorizing such subscription was not in conformity with the requirements of the constitution; but the court put upon the act such a construction as to make it valid, rather than adopt the construction making the act a nullity.

In Broughton v. Pensacola, 93 U. S.

If doubt exists as to the constitutionality of the statute, the benefit of the doubt is to be given to the law.¹ The doubt upon which the court is to act may arise either from an endeavor to arrive at a true interpretation of the constitution, or from a con-

266. Field, J., said: "The inhibition of the constitution, which preserves against the interference of a state the sacredness of contracts, applies to the liabilities of municipal corporations created by its permission; and, although the repeal or modification of the charter of a corporation of that kind is not within the inhibition, yet it will not be admitted where its legislation is susceptible of another construction, that the state has in this way sanctioned an evasion of, or escape from, liabilities, the creation of which it authorized."

The constitution of Minnesota requires equalization and uniformity in the imposition of taxes upon property upon a cash valuation. In Rice County v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 23 Minn. 208, the court held that in the exposition of tax laws, under the state constitution, such a construction must be adopted as will avoid duplicate taxes, unless a contrary interpretation is compelled by some express provision, or necessary implication of the statute. See also Hennepin County v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 33 Minn. 534; St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Papin, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 29.

In U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235, Woods, J., said that when one construction of a statute would not only render that statute a breach of faith on the part of the United States, but an invasion of the constitution, the court is bound, if possible, so to construe the law as to lay it open to neither of these objections.

Exercise of Doubtful Power.—The construction of a statute which attributes to the legislature the exercise of a doubtful power, will not, in the absence of direct words, be readily adopted. Mardre v. Felton, Phil. (N. Car.) 279.

In Sykes v. Columbus, 55 Miss. 143, it is said: "It ought never to be assumed that the law-making department of the government intended to usurp or assume power prohibited to it. And such construction, if the words will admit of it, ought to be put on its legislation as will make it consistent with the supreme law."

¹ In re Clinton Street, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 599; Com. v. Butler, 99 Pa. St.

535; Adams v. Howe, 14 Mass. 345; 7 Am. Dec. 216; Burnham v. Sumner, 50 Miss. 520; Tate v. Bell, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 206; 26 Am. Dec. 221; State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 80 Me. 57; Missouri v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 722; Allen County v. Silvers, 22 Ind. 491; Robinson v. Schenck, 102 Ind. 307; Stocking v. State, 7 Ind. 326; Wilkins v. State, 113 Ind. 514; Clare v. State, 68 Ind. 17; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Burdett, 112 Ind. 204; State v. Insurance Co. of N. A., 115 Ind. 257; People v. Auditor, 3 Ill. 567; Bunn v. People, 45 Ill. 411; Stewart v. Polk County, 30 Iowa 9; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa 312; Gates v. Brooks, 59 Iowa 510; Dubuque v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 39 Iowa 56; Central Iowa R. Co. v. Wright County, 67 Iowa 199; Crowley v. State, 11 Oregon 512; Boisdere v. Citizens' Bank, 9 La. 506; 29 Am. Dec. 453; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 543; Miller v. Dunn, 72 Cal. 462; 1 Am. St. Rep. 67; Alexander v. People, 7 Colo. 155; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Davis, 13 Ga. 68; Cotten v. Leon County, 6 Fla. 610; Carey v. Giles, 9 Ga. 253; Smithee v. Garth, 33 Ark. 17; King v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 66 N. Car. 277; State v. Moore, 104 N. Car. 714; 17 Am. St. Rep. 696; Eyre v. Jacob, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 422; 73 Am. Dec. 367; Slack v. Jacob, 8 W. Va. 612; Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640; Bridges v. Shallcross, 6 W. Va. 575.

In Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 128, Marshall, C. J., said: "The question whether a law is to be avoided for its repugnancy to the constitution, is at all times a question of much delicacy, which seldom, if ever, has been decided in the affirmative in a doubtful case." See to the same effect Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 625.

In Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 213, Washington, J., said: "If I could rest my opinion in favor of the constitutionality of the law, on which questions arise, on no other ground than this doubt, so felt and acknowledged, that alone, in my estimation, would be a satisfactory vindication of it."

sideration of the law after the meaning of the constitution has been judicially determined.¹

A restricted construction of a statute should be adopted where one more broad would bring the statute in conflict with the constitution;² and, on the other hand, if a restricted construction would reduce the statute to a nullity, as being in contravention of the fundamental law, courts will favor a broader interpretation.³

1. See Cooley on Const. Lim., p. 218; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 72; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. New York, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 10; Coutant v. People, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 511; Clark v. People, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 599; Ex parte M'Collum, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 550; People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 138; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 376.

In Farmers', etc., Bank v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 72, a question was raised as to the validity of a state law, it being contended that it was in contravention of the United States constitution. It was stated by Tilghman, C. J., that there being a doubt as to the meaning of that part of the constitution, the law of the state should be declared valid.

2. Opinion of Justices, 41 N. H. 553; Cook v. Hamilton County, 6 McLean (U. S.) 112; People v. Board of Education, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 400; Stanley v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 100 Mo. 435; Com. v. Butler, 99 Pa. St. 535.

A statute declaring a trust shall be deemed discharged after the lapse of years, may, if necessary to sustain its constitutionality, be construed making the lapse of time prima facie or presumptive evidence that the trust had been discharged, and permitting this presumption to be rebutted by other evidence. Kip v. Hirsch, 18 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 167.

A statute provided that the driver of any vehicle, who, meeting another, shall neglect to turn to the right, should pay to the party injured by such neglect treble damages, and that "the owner of the vehicle so driven shall, if the driver is unable to do so, pay such damages." It was held that by the word "owner" in the last clause, the person in control of the vehicle, either mediately or immediately, was intended, and not necessarily the actual owner. The argument of the court was that any other construction would make the owner of the vehicle liable for the acts of the person in possession of it over whom he had no control, and that an act which thus arbitrarily and without reason made one person liable for the acts of another would be void, as violating that article of the constitution which forbids the taking away of any person's property without due process of law; and, therefore, it was the duty of the court, in conformity with the rule of the text, to give the statute the above construction and thus sustain its validity. Camp v. Rogers, 44 Conn. 291.

The constitution of West Virginia provides that no bill shall be passed by either branch of the legislature without an affirmative vote of a majority of the members elected thereto. An act was passed by the affirmative vote of eleven senators, the body when full consisting of twenty-two members, one member having resigned after the opening of the session at which the act was passed. In Osburn v. Staley, 5 W. Va. 85; 13 Am. Rep. 640, the court construed the words "members elected" as referring to those who were members at the time the vote was taken, to avoid conflicting with the constitution, and to give the act the force of the law.

A provision as to officers' fees should be construed as applying only to future officers, rather than that the act should be set aside as infringing a prohibition of any law increasing fees of officers during their terms of office. Kerrigan v. Force, 68 N. Y. 381.

3. Seneca County v. Allen, 99 N. Y. 532; Com. v. Butler, 99 Pa. St. 535; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Smith, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 63; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. Coons, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 101; Clare v. State, 68 Ind. 26.

In Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Gross, 47 Tex. 428, the court said that the clause "any lands hereafter granted in any manner to any of said companies or corporations for any such object," might be construed as if it read "any lands granted to companies after the adoption of the pending amendment to the constitution," in view of sur-

Courts may resort to implication to sustain a statute, but not to destroy it.¹ A forced construction, however, will not be resorted to to sustain the constitutionality of a statute. If the language will not support any construction consistent with the constitution, it is the duty of the court to declare the statute void.²

b. AS TO JURISDICTION OF COURTS.—There is a presumption against an intention on the part of the legislature to oust courts of their jurisdiction, and any construction leading to such a result is to be avoided if possible.³ And the jurisdiction of superior rounding circumstances and to avoid nullifying a law.

In Bigelow v. West Wisconsin R. Co., 27 Wis. 479, where the charter of a railroad company provided that upon condemnation of land for its road commissioners should "assess the value of the land taken," the court held the words to mean that they should "award a just compensation therefor," since otherwise the constitution of the state would be violated.

A resolution of the legislature in reference to the act of incorporation of the Hartford Bridge Co. contained this clause: "The ferries by law established between the town of Hartford and East Hartford shall be discontinued, and said towns shall never thereafter be permitted to transport passengers across said river." In the case of the Hartford Bridge Co. v. Union Ferry Co., 29 Conn. 210, the court held that the resolution was to be construed as a contract on the part of the legislature, only that the then existing ferries should be discontinued, and that an act passed several years after incorporating the Union Ferry Co. was not unconstitutional, as impairing the obligation of a contract.

1. Atlantic City Water Works Co. v. Consumers Water Works Co., 44 N. J. Eq. 427; Colwell v. May's Landing, etc., Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 249; People v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co., 35 Cal. 617; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 14. See also Cochran v. Van Sur- lay, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 381; 32 Am. Dec. 570.

2. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670; Atty. Gen'l v. Eau Claire, 37 Wis. 400; Bigelow v. West Wisconsin R. Co., 27 Wis. 478; French v. Tesche- maker, 24 Cal. 518; People v. San Fran- cisco, etc., R. Co., 35 Cal. 606; Bailey v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 385; 44 Am. Dec. 593; also Tabor v. Cook, 15 Mich. 322.

For example, a statute making railroad companies liable for all animals killed on the tracks cannot be made constitutional by assuming the con- struction that the killing should be only prima facie evidence of liability. Beilenberg v. Montana Union R. Co., 8 Mont. 271.

3. Crisp v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394; 21 E. C. L. 33; Hartley v. Hooker, 2 Cowp. 523; Cates v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442; Al- bon v. Pyke, 4 M. & G. 424; Shipman v. Hanbest, 4 T. R. 109; King v. London, 9 B. & C. 31; Scott v. Avery, 5 H. L. 811; Rochdale Canal Co. v. King, 14 Q. B. 122; 68 E. C. L. 120; Atty. Gen'l v. Southampton, 17 Sim. 6; Jacobs v. Brett, L. R., 20 Eq. 6; Birley v. Chorl- ton, 3 Bev. 499; Smith v. Whitmore, 2 De G. J. & S. 297; Oram v. Brearey, 2 Ex. Div. 348; In re Twenty-eighth Street, 102 Pa. St. 140; People v. Van- derbilt, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 301; Dick's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 589; Com. v. Betts, 76 Pa. St. 471; Overseers of Poor v. Smith, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 366; White v. Meday, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 486; Fi- delity Trust Co. v. Gill Car. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 737; State v. St. Louis County, 38 Mo. 402; Tackett v. Vog- ler, 85 Mo. 480.

In Com. v. Hudson, 11 Gray (Mass.) 64, where the question was whether a grant of a certain jurisdiction to jus- tices of the peace affected that pre- viously existing in the court of common pleas over the same subject, Shaw, C. J., said: "Before this statute the court of common pleas had jurisdiction over this subject. Is that jurisdiction taken away? It is no answer to say that an- other tribunal has jurisdiction, for that is very common. It is in such case con- current jurisdiction, whether so called in the statute or not. There must be words of limitation to take it away, either by using the word exclusive, or by repealing the former act giving jurisdiction, by which it may appear that the legislature meant not only to confer jurisdiction on justices of the courts can be taken away only by express negative words of a statute or necessary implication.¹ Thus, where equitable jurisdiction is conferred upon courts at law by affirmative words, this alone will not deprive chancery of its jurisdiction in like cases.²

Acts which give justices and other inferior tribunals jurisdiction in certain cases are understood in general, when silent on the subject, as not affecting the power of control and supervision peace, but to take away the other jurisdiction."

A statute, conferring upon the common council of a city jurisdiction to judge of the election of its own members, does not exclude all jurisdiction of the courts in that behalf, unless the grant of power to the council is expressly, or by necessary implication exclusive. State v. Kempf, 69 Wis. 470.

In People v. Vanderbilt, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 301. Ingraham, J., said: "The power to compel a removal of an obstruction does not prevent an application to the court to prohibit the erection of such obstruction before it is completed."

1. Story Eq. Juris., § 80; Rex v. Abbott, 2 Dougl. 553; Albon v. Pyke, 4 M. & G. 424; Crisp v. Bunburry, 8 Bing. 394; 4 T. R. 109; 21 E. C. L. 333; Dement v. Boggess, 13 Ala. 143; Gould v. Hayes, 19 Ala. 450; Com. v. Hudson, 11 Gray (Mass.) 65; Tackett v. Vogler, 85 Mo. 480; State v. St. Louis County, 38 Mo. 403; Wright v. Marsh, 2 Greene (Iowa) 94; Hummer v. Hummer, 3 Greene (Iowa) 42; Fidelity Trust Co. v. Gill Car. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 737; Barnawell v. Threadgill, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 86; Com. v. M'Closkey, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 369; Overseers of Poor v. Smith, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 363; Burginhofen v. Martin, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 478; Kline v. Wood, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 298; Murfreer v. Leeper, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 1; Catlin v. Wheeler, 49 Wis. 507. In State v. Wister, 62 Mo. 592, it was held that where a city charter conferred jurisdiction on the municipal authorities of the city in certain cases, but did not give exclusive jurisdiction in express terms, the cognizance of those cases was not taken from those courts formerly having jurisdictions. See also State v. Harper, 58 Mo. 531; March v. Com., 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 25.

2. Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. 349; Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. C. C. 218; Harrington v. Du Chatel, 1 Bro. C. C. 124; Bromley v. Holland, 7 Ves. 28;

Kemp v. Pryor, 7 Ves. 237; East India Co. v. Boddam, 9 Ves. 464; Ex parte Greenway, 6 Ves. 812; Hartley v. Hooker, 1 Cowp. 524; Varet v. New York Ins. Co., 7 Paige (N. Y.) 560; King v. Baldwin, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 384; 8 Am. Dec. 415; Rathbone v. Warren, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 587; Post v. Kimberly, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 470; Viele v. Hoag, 24 Vt. 46; Dick's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 589; Wesley Church v. Moore, 10 Pa. St. 273; Biddle v. Moore, 3 Pa. St. 161; Wells v. Pierce, 27 N. H. 503; Barnawell v. Threadgill, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 88; Smith v. Hays, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 321; Lambert v. Mallett, 50 Ala. 73; Ryan v. Boyd, 33 Ark. 778; Burton v. Hynson, 14 Ark. 32; Darst v. Phillips, 41 Ohio St. 514; Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 Ohio St. 307; Cram v. Green, 6 Ohio 429; Force v. Elizabeth, 27 N. J. Eq. 408; Irick v. Black, 17 N. J. Eq. 189; Sweeny v. Williams, 36 N. J. Eq. 627; Bright v. Newland, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 440; People v. Houghtaling, 7 Cal. 348; Heath v. Derry Bank, 44 N. H. 174; Phipps v. Kelly, 12 Oregon 213; Union Passenger R. Co. v. Baltimore, 71 Md. 238; Crain v. Barnes, 1 Md. Ch. Dec. 151; 1 Story Eq., § 80; Howell v. Moores, 127 Ill. 68; Waldron v. Simmons, 28 Ala. 629; Cannon v. McNab, 48 Ala. 99; Couch v. Terry, 12 Ala. 225; Millsaps v. Pfeiffer, 44 Miss. 805; Payne v. Bullard, 23 Miss. 88; 50 Am. Dec. 74; Mitchell v. Otey, 23 Miss. 236; Dobyns v. McGovern, 15 Mo. 662; King v. Payan, 18 Ark. 583; McKoin v. Cooley, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 559; Catlin v. Wheeler, 49 Wis. 507.

Upon this ground it is held that equity still gives contribution between sureties where the debt is paid, though assumpsit may be maintained. Mitchell v. Sproul, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 264; Couch v. Terry, 12 Ala. 225.

The mode of proceeding to contest the validity of a will, by a bill in chancery, was held not to have been abrogated by the provision in the stat-which the superior courts exercise over the proceedings of such tribunals.¹ Thus, an enactment to the effect that "no court shall intermeddle" in the cases,² or that the case shall be "heard and finally determined" below, is not to be construed as prohibiting such interference.³ Although it has been said that nothing but express words can take away the jurisdiction of a superior court,⁴ yet it has been held frequently that where the implication is necessary and irresistible that the legislature intended to oust the jurisdiction of the court, the statute must receive such a construction.⁵

ute regulating the jurisdiction of the probate court, authorizing the proceeding to contest a will by petition to the court of common pleas. Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 Ohio St. 307.

The statute of New York, in giving an action at law for a distribution of shares against executors and administrators, did not intend to abridge the power of the court of chancery over the same matters. Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; 8 Am. Dec. 478.

A statute authorizing the plea of "payment after day" at law does not oust the chancellor of his jurisdiction. Harlan v. Wingate, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 138.

A statute authorizing the impeachment of the consideration of specialties at law, does not prevent the chancellor from entertaining jurisdiction, providing no attempt has been made at law to impeach the consideration. Wood v. Kendall, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 212.

A statute of Alabama, authorizing an action at law on a lost note, does not deprive the chancery court of its jurisdiction in such case. Crawford v. Childress, 1 Ala. 482.

A statute authorizing a defendant to impeach the consideration of a bond by special plea, does not impair the jurisdiction of the courts of equity. Case v. Fishback, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 40.

Lost Notes.—The various statutes authorizing the pursuit of a remedy in the courts of law in the case of lost notes, are held not to interfere in the slightest degree with the jurisdiction in equity. Story Eq. Juris., § 81; Walmsley v. Child, 11 Ves. 341; Patton v. Campbell, 70 Ill. 72; Crawford v. Childress, 1 Ala. 482; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Mississippi College, 47 Miss. 562; Bohart v. Chamberlain, 99 Mo. 622; Force v. Elizabeth, 27 N. J. Eq. 408; Mitchell v. Chancellor, 14 W. Va. 22; Hickman v. Painter, 11 W. Va. 386. Also Hardeman v. Battersby, 53 Ga. 36, where warehousemen's receipts for cotton were lost.

1. Jacobs v. Brett, L. R., 20 Eq. 1; Hawes v. Paveley, 1 C. P. Div. 418; Bridge v. Branch, 1 C. P. Div. 633; Oram v. Brearey, 2 Exch. Div. 346; Overseers of Poor v. Smith, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 363; Com. v. M'Closkey, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 369; Burginhofen v. Martin, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 478. See also Walker v. Wynne, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 62; Wakefield v. State, 5 Ind. 195; O'Brian v. State, 12 Ind. 369.

In Com. v. M'Closkey, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 369, it was held that though an act of incorporation constituted certain commissioners judges of elections, and gave them full power and authority to set aside the same and order a new election, as the law might require, yet the superintending jurisdiction of the supreme court was not thereby ousted.

2. Rex v. Moseley, 2 Burr. 1011.

3. Rex v. Plowright, 2 Mod. 99; 2 Hawks P. C., ch. 27, § 23.

4. Rex v. Abbot, Dougl. 553.

5. Cates v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442; Shipman v. Hanbest, 4 T. R. 116; Jacobs v. Brett, L. R., 20 Eq. 6; Oram v. Brearey, 2 Exch. Div. 348; Crisp v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394; 21 E. C. L. 333; Marshall v. Nicholls, 18 Q. B. 882; 83 E. C. L. 882; Boyfield v. Porter, 13 East 200; Ex parte Payne, 5 D. & L. 679; Armitage v. Walker, 2 K. & J. 211; Reeves v. White, 17 Q. B. 995; 79 E. C. L. 994; Wright v. Monarch Bldg. Soc., 5 Ch. Div. 726; Huckle v. Wilson, 2 C. P. Div. 410. See also Rex v. Fell, 1 B. & Ad. 380; 20 E. C. L. 403; Great Northern, etc., Fishing Co. v. Edgekill, 11 Q. B. Div. 225; Hancock County v. Bank of Findley, 32 Ohio St. 194, where statute creates offense and prescribes the remedy. See also Dodson v. Scroggs, 47 Mo. 285; Pearce v. Calhoun, 59 Mo. 271.

Where a clause enacts that it "shall, and may be lawful for justices of the peace to hear and determine offenses

The creation of a new jurisdiction is not to be presumed, in the absence of adequate language.¹ Effect, however, must of course be given to the intention, where a statute without conferring jurisdiction in express terms does so by plain and necessary implication.²

against the act that subjects the offender to penalties not amounting to fifty pounds," with a power to the justices to mitigate the penalties; the same act directing that all penalties which amount to fifty pounds or more shall be sued for in his majesty's court at Westminster, it was held that by necessary implication the courts above were ousted of their jurisdiction in the case of penalties not amounting to fifty pounds. Cates v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442.

In New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 386, it was held that a Massachusetts statute vesting in railroad commissioners the powers and duties of commissioners appointed by the supreme judicial court under a former statute, took away the jurisdiction of that court, and of commissioners appointed by it over proceedings pending before those commissioners at the time of its passage. Gray, J., in delivering the opinion, said: "Even the jurisdiction of a superior court may be ousted by necessary implication, as well as by express words."

Following the rules of the common law a statute will not be construed, unless express words require, to confer jurisdiction on courts established under another power; as, if it is a statute of the United States, to give authority to state tribunals. Bishop on statutory Crimes, § 142; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 42; In re Bruni, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 187.

1. Warwick v. White, Bunb. 106; Kite's Case, 1 B. & C. 107; 8 E. C. L. 44; Rex v. Baines, 2 Ld. Raym. 1269; Reg. v. Cotton, 1 El. & El. 203; 10 E. C. L. 202; Ex parte Story, 3 Q. B. Div. 166; Pierce v. Hopper, 1 Stra. 260; James v. South Western R. Co., L. R., 7 Ex. 296; Streat v. Rothschild, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 95; In re Contested Election, 111 Pa. St. 235; Druse v. Horter, 57 Wis. 644; Hersom's Case, 39 Me. 476.

In Pitman v. Flint, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 506, it is said: "A mere failure of justice would not be a sufficient ground for construing statutes against their clear meaning so as to give a court jurisdiction."

An act providing that compensation should be made to all who should sus-tain damage in carrying out certain works, enacted that "in case of dispute as to the amount" it should be settled by arbitration. It was held not to authorize a reference to arbitration where the liability to make any compensation was in dispute, but must be confined strictly to cases where the amount only was in dispute. Rex v. Metropolitan Com'rs of Sewers, 1 El. & Bl. 694; 72 E. C. L. 694. Compare Bradby v. Board of Health, 4 El. & Bl. 1014; 82 E. C. L. 1014; Reg. v. Burslem, 1 El. & El. 1077; 10 E. C. L. 1077.

Extension of Jurisdiction.—Nor will a construction be adopted which enlarges the jurisdiction of courts, in the absence of express words or necessary implication. Ex parte Story, 3 Q. B. Div. 166; Kite's Case, 1 B. & C. 107; 8 E. C. L. 44; Thomas v. Adams, 2 Port. (Ala.) 188; Grove School Inspectors v. Peoria, 20 Ill. 532; Kertler v. State, 4 Green (Iowa) 293; Thompson v. Cox, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 311; Lad Daffin v. State, 11 Tex. App. 76; Druse v. Horter, 57 Wis. 644; Pringle v. Carter, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 53.

2. The Alina, 5 Exch. Div. 227; Everard v. Kendall, L. R., 5 C. P. 428; Simpson v. Blues, L. R., 7 C. P. 290; Gunnstad v. Price, L. R., 10 Exch. 65; Gaudet v. Brown, L. R., 5 P. C. 134. See also Smith v. Brown, L. R., 6 Q. B. 729; The Dowse, L. R., 3 Ad. & El. 135; Allen v. Garbutt, 6 Q. B. Div. 165; Wood v. Tallman, 1 N. J. L. 153.

A statute provided that any person who exposes in a public place, where animals are commonly exposed for sale, any animal affected with a contagious or infectious disease, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against the act, unless he shows to the satisfaction of the justice before whom he is charged, etc. It was held in Cullen v. Trimble, L. R., 7 Q. B. 416, that jurisdiction was impliedly given to justices summarily to convict and impose a penalty on a person guilty of an offense under this act. See also where jurisdiction was conferred on justice by implication, Johnson v. Colam, L. R., 10 Q. B. 544; Rex v. St. James, 2 Ad. & El. 241; 29 E. C. L. 79.

c. AGAINST UNNECESSARY CHANGE OF LAW.—The presumption is that the legislature does not intend to change or modify the law beyond what it explicitly declares, either in express terms, or by unmistakable implication;¹ for it is not to be supposed that the legislature will overturn an established principle of law without expressing such intention with irresistible clearness.²

In State v. Miller, 23 Wis. 634, Paine, J., said: "Even though an unfounded assumption by the legislature that a particular jurisdiction existed, might not alone be sufficient to create it, yet where the jurisdiction is assumed to exist, an explicit provision made as to its form and mode of exercise, the authority to proceed in that form and mode carries with it, by necessary implication, jurisdiction of the proceedings."

1. 1 Kent's Com. 464; Dwarris 695; River Wear Com'r v. Adamson, 1 Q. B. Div. 554; Graham v. Van Wyck, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 531; Minet v. Leman, 20 Beav. 278; In re Peerless, 1 Q. B. 153; 41 E. C. L. 480; Arthur v. Bokenham, 11 Mod. 150; Manuel v. Manuel, 13 Ohio St. 458; Wilbur v. Crane, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 290; Osgood v. Breed, 12 Mass. 530; Day v. Allender, 22 Md. 527; Heiskell v. Baltimore, 65 Md. 125; Sullivan v. La Crosse, etc., Packet Co., 10 Minn. 386; Hollman v. Bennet, 44 Miss. 323; Lee v. Forman, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 114; State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 33; Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 557; McGinnis v. State, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 46; 49 Am. Dec. 697; Cadwallader v. Harris, 76 Ill. 372; White v. Wager, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 250; 25 N. Y. 328; Howe v. Peckham, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 230; McQueen v. Middletown Mfg. Co., 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 6; Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 197; 44 Am. Rep. 361; People v. Palmer, 109 N. Y. 110; 4 Am. St. Rep. 423; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 35; Fitzgerald v. Quann, 109 N. Y. 444; Huber v. Reily, 53 Pa. St. 112.

In Keech v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 17 Md. 32, Bartol, J., said: "It is a cardinal rule of interpretation that statutes are to be construed in reference to the principles of the common law, for it is not to be presumed that the legislature intended to make any innovation upon the common law further than the case absolutely required. The law rather infers that the act did not intend to make any alteration other than what is specified, and besides what has been plainly pronounced."

A statute which authorized "any" or the "nearest" justice of the peace to try certain cases, would not authorize a justice to try any of the cases outside the terminal limits of his own jurisdiction. In re Peerless, 1 Q. B. 153; 41 E. C. L. 480. See also Rex v. Fylingdales, 7 B. & C. 438; 14 E. C. L. 76; Reg. v. Cheltenham, 1 Q. B. 467; 41 E. C. L. 628; Bonhams Case, 8 Rep. 118a; Rex v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 456.

An act which authorized a distress does not authorize the seizure of goods in custodia legis. Washer v. Elliott, 1 C. P. D. 169.

An act which directs the election of officers should be understood as authorizing it only on a lawful day and not on a Sunday. Rex v. Butler, 1 W. Bl. 649.

An act provided that "any married female may take, convey and devise real or personal property." It was held that married infants were not within the meaning of the statute. The law was not to be altered to that extent. Zimmerman v. Schoenfeldt, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 692.

An act giving an adopted child the right to inherit, was held not intended to change in any respect the law relating to collateral inheritance tax, from which only lineal descendants were exempted. Com. v. Nancrede, 32 Pa. St. 389.

In River Wear Com'rs v. Adamson, 1 Q. B. Div. 546, 2 App. Cas. 743, it was laid down as an established rule of construction that general words and phrases, however wide and comprehensive in their literal sense, must be construed as strictly limited to the immediate objects of the act and as not altering the general principles of the law.

2. U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 358; Horton v. Mobile School Com'r, 43 Ala. 604; Harwood v. Lowell, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 313.

Revised Statutes.—In the revision of statutes, which have been settled by clear adjudications, a mere change of phraseology will not be construed as a change of law, unless the change is such as to show positively an intention to alter it. Hughes v. Farrar, 45 Me.

d. AGAINST UNREASON, INCONVENIENCE, INJUSTICE, ABSURDITY, AND INEFFECTIVENESS.—In order to arrive at the true legislative intent in construing a doubtful statute, that construction should be adopted which is most conformable to reason and justice; the legislature will not be presumed to have intended that which is against reason.¹ But where the language of the statute 72; Yates' Case, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 359; In re Brown, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 316; Dominick v. Michael, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 374; Burnham v. Stevens, 33 N. H. 247; Croswell v. Crane, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 191; People v. Deming, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 271; Hoffman v. Delihanty, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 388; Overfield v. Sutton, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 621; Conger v. Barker, 11 Ohio St. 1; Ennis v. Crump, 6 Tex. 34. See also Hugo v. Miller (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 381; and infra, this title, Same Language and Change of Language. And see Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fort Worth, etc., R. Co., 68 Tex. 98, where it was declared that when the legislature revises the statutes of a state after a particular statute has been construed, and re-enacts substantially the same provisions of this statute, the presumption is that the legislature intended the same construction to be continued. So to the same effect are, Gardener v. Woodyear, 1 Ohio 176; Swazey v. Blackman, 8 Ohio 20; Ash v. Ash, 9 Ohio St. 383, 387; Tyler v. Winslow, 15 Ohio St. 368; Williams v. State, 35 Ohio St. 175; State v. Jackson, 36 Ohio St. 286; State v. Shelby County, 36 Ohio St. 326; State v. Vanderbilt, 37 Ohio St. 640; Bishop's Written Laws, § 98.

And in Virginia the rule is established, in reference to a new code, that the old law is not altered by it unless the intention to alter it plainly appears. Parramore v. Taylor, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 220.

1. Co. Litt. 97 a; Puff. L. N., b. 5, ch. 12, § 8; Reg. v. Brackenridge, L. R., 1 C. C. 133; Ex parte O'Loghlen, L. R., 6 Ch. 406; Rex v. Sussex, 7 T. R. 107; In re Lewis, 1 Q. B. Div. 725; Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell, 1 Exch. Div. 514; Pike v. Nicholas, L. R., 5 Ch. 251; Dixon v. Caledonian, etc., R. Co., 5 App. Cas. 827; Birmingham v. Shaw, 10 Q. B. 868; 59 E. C. L. 867; In re Williams, 2 E. & B. 84; 75 E. C. L. 83; Reg. v. Kingston, El. Bl. & El. 256; 96 E. C. L. 255; Rex v. Higginson, 2 B. & S. 471; Ex parte May, 2 B. & S. 426; 110 E. C. L. 424; Reg. v. Linford, 7 El. & Bl. 950; 90 E. C. L.

949; Rex v. Finnis, 28 L. J. M. C. 201; Rex v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 5 E. & B. 974; 85 E. C. L. 974; Rex v. Croker, Cowp. 30; Pickering v. Marsh, 43 L. J. M. C. 143; Chapman v. Robinson, 1 El. & El. 25; 102 E. C. L. 24; Thompson v. Gibson, 8 M. & W. 288; Page v. Pearce, 8 M. & W. 677; Rex v. Yorkshire, 1 Dougl. 192; Rex v. Dorsetshire, 15 East 200; Rex v. Essex, 1 B. & A. 210; Reg. v. Thackwell, 4 B. & C. 62; 10 E. C. L. 277; Reg. v. Chichester, 29 L. J. Q. B. 23; Hollis v. Marshall, 2 H. & N. 575; Graves' Case, L. R., 4 Q. B. 715; Boyce v. Higgins, 14 C. B. 1; 78 E. C. L. 1; Ex parte Learoyd, 10 Ch. Div. 5; Ex parte Thoday, 2 Ch. Div. 229; Verdin v. Uray, 2 Q. B. Div. 608; Rochfort v. Atherley, 1 Exch. Div. 511; In re Shaftoe's Charity, 3 App. Cas. 872; Rex v. Middlesex, 6 M. & S. 279; 23 E. C. L. 223; Reg. v. Sevenoaks, 7 Q. B. 136; 53 E. C. L. 136; Reg. v. Sussex, 4 B. & S. 966; 116 E. C. L. 964; Reg. v. Trafford, 15 Q. B. 200; 69 E. C. L. 200; Reg. v. Watts, 7 Ad. & El. 461; 34 E. C. L. 146; Reg. v. West Riding, El. Bl. & El. 713; 96 E. C. L. 711. See also Rex v. Middlesex, 3 B. & Ad. 938; Rex v. Toole, 1 M. & R. 728; Wood v. Heath, 4 M. & G. 918; 43 E. C. L. 473; Beckman v. Drake, 2 H. L. 579; Chatterton v. Cave, 2 C. P. Div. 42; Bradbury v. Hotten, L. R., 8 Exch. 1; Planche v. Braham, 4 Bing. N. Cas. 17; 33 E. C. L. 269; D'Almaine v. Boosey, 1 Y. & C. 301; Metropolitan Asylum Dist. v. Hill, 6 App. Cas. 208; Bridge v. Branch, 1 C. P. Div. 633; Ex parte Watton, 17 Ch. Div. 746; Gibson v. Jenney, 15 Mass. 205; Stanwood v. Peirce, 7 Mass. 458; Wales v. Stetson, 2 Mass. 146; 3 Am. Dec. 39; Church v. Crocker, 3 Mass. 17, 21; Com. v. Cambridge, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 272; Com. v. Bailey, 13 Allen (Mass.) 545; Richards v. Dagget, 4 Mass. 537; Eaton v. Green, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 526; Ryegate v. Wardsboro, 30 Vt. 746; McFarland v. Stone, 17 Vt. 173; 44 Am. Dec. 325; Moravian Seminary v. Atwood, 50 Ga. 382; Allen v. Savannah, 9 Ga. 286; Haney v. State, 34 Ark. 263; is plain and unambiguous, it is not allowable to go outside for rules of interpretation; the intention must be followed as expressed in the statute.¹

Buckner v. Real Estate Bank, 5 Ark. 536; State v. De Gress, 53 Tex. 387; Robinson v. Varnell, 16 Tex. 382; McLelland v. Shaw, 15 Tex. 319; Kephart v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 4 Mich. 602; Van Fleet v. Van Fleet, 49 Mich. 610; People v. Burns, 5 Mich. 114; Mulls v. Scott, 99 U. S. 25; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556; U. S. v. The Hunter, Pet. (C. C.) 10; Klinginsmith v. Nole, 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 119; Downey v. Ferry, 2 Watts (Pa.) 304; Com. v. Lentz, 106 Pa. St. 643; Welch v. Kline, 57 Pa. St. 432; Clohessy v. Roedelheim, 99 Pa. St. 56; Grant v. Hickcox, 64 Pa. St. 334; Stewart v. Keemle, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 72; McCloskey v. McConnell, 9 Watts (Pa.) 17; Seymour v. Hubert, 83 Pa. St. 346; Philadelphia v. Edwards, 78 Pa. St. 62; Swift's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 516; Douglass v. Com., 108 Pa. St. 559; Com. v. Mitchell, 82 Pa. St. 343; Findley v. Pittsburgh, 82 Pa. St. 351; Kelly Tp. v. Union Tp., 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 535; Nicholas v. Phelps, 15 Pa. St. 36; Halderman v. Young, 107 Pa. St. 324; Wolcott v. Pond, 19 Conn. 597; Whedon v. Champlin, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 61; Cleveland, etc., Tel. Co. v. Board Fire Com'rs, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 288; People v. Fay, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 398; Varick v. Briggs, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 323; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 330; Samuels v. Com., 10 Bush (Ky.) 491; Chase v. Divinal, 7 Me. 134; Wells v. Somerset, etc., R. Co., 47 Me. 345; Coy v. Coy, 15 Minn. 119; Bell v. Jones, 10 Md. 322; Associates of Jersey Co. v. Davison, 29 N. J. L. 415; State v. Clark, 29 N. J. L. 96; Easley v. Whipple, 57 Wis. 485; Haseltine v. Hewitt, 61 Wis. 131; Gelkey v. Cook, 60 Wis. 133; Learned v. Corley, 43 Miss. 687; Perry County v. Jefferson County, 94 Ill. 214; People v. Admire, 39 Ill. 251; Foley v. Bourg, 10 La. Ann. 129; Storms v. Stevens, 104 Ind. 46; Jeffersonville v. Weems, 5 Ind. 547; Sawyer v. State, 45 Ohio St. 343; State v. Hayes, 81 Mo. 574; Fusz v. Spaunhorst, 67 Mo. 256; Potter v. Douglas County, 87 Mo. 239.

A statute which exempted one swine from attachment and execution was held to apply to the animal when killed. The court, by Parker, C. J., said: "What could have been intended but the sustenance of the poor family by this exemption? To give the strict construction contended for on the part of the defendant would be to convert an intended benefit into an injury; for the swine would be protected until it became fit for food, and then be at the mercy of the creditor. It is said that statutes made in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly. This is true; but they are also to be construed sensibly and with a view to the object aimed at by the legislature." Gibson v. Jenney, 15 Mass. 205.

Bacon gives the following rules: "Interpretation to be given to the language used to express the intention should be such as to make the provision of the statute consistent with reason." 9 Bac. Abr. Statutes (I) 1. "No statute shall be construed in such a manner as to be inconvenient or against reason." 9 Bac. Abr. Statutes (I) 10.

In Varick v. Briggs, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 323, the court by Walworth, C., said: "In construing statutes, however, it is not reasonable to presume that the legislature intended to violate a settled principle of natural justice or to destroy a vested title to property. Courts, however, in construing statutes, will always endeavor to give such an interpretation to the language used as to make it consistent with reason and justice."

Again, in Neenan v. Smith, 50 Mo. 525, it was said that in construing a statute, reference must be had to its object, and it will not be presumed that the legislature intended to authorize a proceeding unreasonable in itself, unless the intention is indicated in express terms.

1. Woodward v. Watts, 2 El. & Bl. 458; 75 E. C. L. 457; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 49 N. Y. 456; Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194; 48 Am. Dec. 248; Collins v. Carman, 5 Md. 503; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 202; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 593; Blake v. Heyward, Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 211.

In Woodward v. Watts, 2 El. & Bl. 457; 75 E. C. L. 457, the court, by Crompton, J., said: "We are here in effect to apply the last part of what has been called the 'golden rule' to this statute, and say that, though the grammatical sense of the words disqualifies the defendant, yet that is such

Against Inconvenience.—There is a presumption against a legislative intent to establish a rule of action which would be attended with inconvenience;¹ and where the language of a statute is ambiguous and admits of more than one construction, one of which leads to great inconvenience, the court may, with a view to avoid such inconvenience, adopt some other construction;² yet an absurdity that the grammatical sense must be modified to avoid it. I cannot apply that to this case. I have great doubt as to what the legislature may have intended; and I do not know that, if this case had been present to their minds, they would have thought this a fit qualification. But supposing I knew what the legislature meant, and that it was not what the words in their grammatical sense mean, still we must go further, and find some words that may express their real intention; for I do not understand the rule of construction to go so far as to authorize us, where the legislature have enacted something to lead us to an absurdity, to repeal that enactment and make another for them, if there are no words to express that intention."

Under a statute which had changed the common law and given to the husband the power to defeat his widow's right of dower by his will, unless she chose to renounce it by her express dissent, the language of the statute being broad enough to comprehend every widow and making no exception in favor of one who is non compos mentis, it was contended that it could apply only to a widow of sound mind, since a widow who is insane possesses no discretion and is incapable of expressing her dissent. But the court, by Eccleston, J., said: "The ill effects of an opposite theory have been eloquently portrayed, and particularly the fear of subjecting an unfortunate wife to the danger of being but poorly provided for by a wealthy, but unfeeling, husband, and leaving her remediless. It would be very proper that the supposed evil or hardship should exert an influence in giving construction to a statute, where its language is ambiguous or doubtful, but when plain and explicit, care should be taken not to allow such considerations to exert an undue influence." Collins v. Carman, 5 Md. 503.

1. U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 386; Baltimore v. Root, 8 Md. 95; Langdon v. Potter, 3 Mass. 221; Ayers v. Knox, 7 Mass. 310; Com. v. Slack, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 306; Putnam v. Long- ley, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 490; Associates of Jersey Co. v. Davison, 29 N. J. L. 415; Water Comr's v. Hudson, 13 N. J. Eq. 420; Divine v. Harvie, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 444; 18 Am. Dec. 194; Kerlin v. Bull, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 178; Bulkley v. Eckert, 3 Pa. St. 368; 45 Am. Dec. 650; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 336; People v. Canal Com'rs, 4 Ill. 153; Gatty v. Fry, 2 Exch. Div. 265; Rex v. Beeston, 3 T. R. 594; Patten v. Rhymer, 3 El. & El. 1; Corbet v. Haigh, 5 C. P. Div. 50; Iles v. West Ham, etc., Committee, 8 Q. B. Div. 69; Whistler v. Forster, 14 C. B. N. S. 248; 108 E. C. L. 246; Austin v. Bunyard, 6 B. & S. 687; 118 E. C. L. 685.

A Massachusetts statute enacted that the pilotage in the harbor of Boston should be formed into two divisions, outward and inward, and imposed a penalty of $50 on any person commissioned as a pilot, who undertook to bring in or carry out of said harbor any vessel drawing nine feet of water, except in his own particular branch. It was sought to recover this penalty from a pilot for undertaking to carry out of the harbor the U. S. frigate "Chesapeake," he being commissioned as a pilot for the inward division and not for the outward division. It was held that this statute did not extend to one who pilots a public vessel of war of the United States—the inconveniences of subjecting a public vessel to local laws respecting pilotage being too manifest to need enumeration. Ayers v. Knox, 7 Mass. 306.

In Gatty v. Fry, 2 Exch. Div. 267, it was held that under the Stamp Act of 1870, the question of the sufficiency of the stamp on a document, and thereby its admissibility in evidence, was to be determined by looking at the instrument itself alone; a contrary conclusion would have introduced the great inconvenience of stopping the trial and holding a collateral inquiry, before the judge could determine whether the stamp was sufficient.

2. Reg. v. Tonbridge, 13 Q. B. Div. 342; Carolina Sav. Bank v. Evans, 28 S. Car. 521.

where the terms are clear and explicit and admit of but one construction, the court is not at liberty to supplement any real or supposed defect in the statute in order to avoid inconvenience, inasmuch as that is exclusively within the province of the legislative department.¹

Against Injustice.—And in conformity with the foregoing principles, wherever a statute is capable of two constructions, one of which would work manifest injustice and the other would work no injustice, it is the duty of the court to adopt the latter,² as it can scarcely be presumed that an injustice was within the legislative intent.³ But it is not within the province of the court to

1. Rex v. Beeston, 3 T. R. 594; Biffin v. Yorke, 5 M. & G. 436; 44 E. C. L. 232; Carolina Sav. Bank v. Evans, 28 S. Car. 521; Dudley v. Reynolds, 1 Kan. 285; Jackson v. Lewis, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 475; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 262; Ludewig v. Pariser, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 246; People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 78; Thaxter v. Jones, 4 Mass. 574; Putnam v. Longley, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 489; Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 479; Douglass v. Essex County, 38 N. J. L. 216.

2. Metropolitan Asylum Dist. v. Hill, 6 App. Cas. 208; River Wear Com'rs v. Adamson, 2 App. Cas. 743; Plumstead Board of Works v. Spackman, 13 Q. B. Div. 878; Smith v. Great Western R. Co., 3 App. Cas. 165; Reg. v. Monck, 2 Q. B. Div. 555; Moore v. Given, 39 Ohio St. 661; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 248; Richards v. Dagget, 4 Mass. 534; Wassell v. Tunnah, 25 Ark. 101; Johnson v. Bush, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 238; Lombard v. Young Men's Library Assoc. Fund, 73 Ga. 322; Murray v. Gibson, 15 How. (U. S.) 421; Ham v. M'Claws, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 98; Chandler v. Lee, 1 Idaho N. S. 349.

Where the inhabitants of a school district voted for an assessment for the purpose of a school building, and before the assessment had been levied, they were formed by the town into another district, it was held that they were not liable to be assessed for the money so voted, as otherwise a great injustice might be done them, if the district to which they belonged then should pass a vote for the same purpose, or if the town should further divide them into another district. Richards v. Dagget, 4 Mass. 534.

Where a statute, containing regulations for preventing collisions at sea, provided that any ship which infringed the regulations should be deemed to be in fault, unless the circumstances of the case made such departure necessary, was held not to apply to a vessel which had violated the regulations by not having up any side lights where this neglect could not possibly have contributed to the accident. The Englishman, 3 P. D. 18.

An act which required that Chinese coming to this country should obtain the permission of, and be identified as being entitled to come by, the Chinese government, and in each case such identity to be evidenced by a certificate issued under the authority of that government, would not apply to a Chinese merchant who had been domiciled in this country for seventeen years past and doing a large business here, and who had gone back to China for the purpose of visiting his relatives, always with the intention of returning to this country. Chief Justice Fuller, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Nothing is better settled than that statutes should receive a sensible construction, such as will effectuate the legislative intention, and, if possible, so as to avoid an unjust or an absurd conclusion." Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47.

3. Ex parte Corbett, 14 Ch. Div. 129; Reg. v. Morris, L. R., C. C. 90; Wright v. London Omnibus Co., 2 Q. B. Div. 271; Hunt v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 112 Ind. 69; Smith v. Moore, 90 Ind. 305; Bradley v. People, 8 Colo. 599; Harris v. Haynes, 30 Mich. 140; McLelland v. Shaw, 15 Tex. 319.

Congress passed an act in 1850 for the relief of a number of our citizens who had been captured by the Mexican army in 1842, and carried by them prisoners into their country. It was held that this could not possibly embrace all those persons who might have been temporarily detained or under arrest during the brief stay of the Mexican add provisions not found in the statute, for the purpose of preventing an apparent hardship.¹

It has been said that injustice, to be of weight in the construction of a statute, must be a manifest injustice, so that it must have been present to the minds of those who were passing the statute.²

Against Absurdity.—There is a strong presumption against absurdity in a statutory provision; it being unreasonable to suppose that the legislature intended their own stultification. So, when the language of an act is susceptible of two senses, that sense will be adopted which will not lead to absurd consequences.³

army in San Antonio, and who were immediately released upon their retreat from that place, as it could not be supposed that the legislature intended to place them upon the same footing with those who had endured the hardships of imprisonment in Mexico. Such a construction would be contrary to all sense of justice and a reflection upon the legislature. McLelland v. Shaw, 15 Tex. 319.

And so the provisions of an act "requiring one month's notice to be served before instituting any proceeding against the 'Metropolitan Board of Works' or any district board, in respect to anything done or intended to be done under their parliamentary power," did not apply to, or affect the rights of, a man who sought to restrain the defendants, by injunction, from running their sewer into a brook which ran by his residence, since to have required him to wait for a month before instituting any proceedings might have subjected him to irreparable damages, which could not possibly have been within the intention of the legislature. Atty. Gen'l v. Hackney Local Board, L. R., 20 Eq. Cas. 626.

Section 12 N. Y. Act 1848 (Laws 1848, ch. 40) requires an annual report to be made by every corporation organized thereunder, and in case of failure in this respect makes the trustees jointly and severally liable "for all the debts of the company then existing, and for all that shall be contracted before such report shall be made." This language is broad enough to include debts due from the corporation to the individual trustees, nevertheless it could not be thought that it was the intention of the legislature to enable trustees, by means of their own neglect, to create a personal liability against their fellow trustees for their own claims against the corporation; such a supposition would be not only a reproach upon the statute, but upon the legislature which enacted it. Briggs v. Easterly, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 60.

And in accordance with the same principles of natural justice and equity, a statute which required every railroad corporation to erect and maintain fences along its line of road, and enacted that "so long as such fences shall not be made and when not in good repair, such railroad corporation shall be liable for the damages which shall be done by the agent or engines of such corporation, to cattle, horses, etc., thereon," could not be construed to apply to every case where the fences were out of repair at the time of the injury, as if some malicious person in the night should throw down the fence and allow the owner's cattle to escape from his fields upon the railroad track and be killed; or where the fences should be swept down by a hurricane and before the company had time to rebuild them the cattle along the line of the road should escape upon it and be killed; but only to cases where the corporation was guilty of some neglect in its duty; the court being unwilling to impute to the legislature so unjust and unreasonable an intent as a contrary construction would hold. Murray v. New York Cent. R. Co., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 342.

1. Cheyenne County v. Bent County, 15 Colo. 326; Cooke v. School District, 12 Colo. 458. In this last case, it is said: "The courts cannot extend the provisions of law enacted for an entirely different purpose, and having no such object in view, to apply to a case in order to furnish the relief demanded, for that would be no less than usurpation. When courts undertake to make laws for 'hard cases' they pass out of their proper sphere." See supra, this title, Literal Construction.

2. Reg. v. Monck, 2 Q. B. Div. 555.

3. Grey v. Pearson, 6 H. L. Cas. 61;

River Wear Com'rs v. Adamson, 2 App. Cas. 743; Ex parte Walton, 17 Ch. Div. 752; Woodward v. Watts, 2 El. & Bl. 452; 75 E. C. L. 452; U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 400; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 202; Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239; Holy Trinity Church v. U. S., 143 U. S. 457; People v. Davenport, 91 N. Y. 574; Alvord v. Lent, 23 Mich. 372; Sprowle v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Perry County v. Jefferson County, 94 Ill. 214; Philadelphia v. Ridge Ave. Pass. R. Co., 102 Pa. St. 197; Jeffersonville v. Weems, 5 Ind. 547.

By an absurdity is meant that which is to be regarded as morally impossible, which is contrary to reason, or, in other words, which could not be attributed to men in their right senses. Potter v. Douglas County, 87 Mo. 239.

Section 8 of the Massachusetts Stat. 1796, enacts that the master of a vessel may refuse the assistance of the pilot, although he should come on board the vessel and offer to pilot her. But in such case, the pilot shall be entitled to half the pilotage fees and shall have his action therefor against the master. And by the 12th section of the same statute, a remedy is given to the pilot against the hull, tackle, etc., of any ship he may have piloted if his fees have not been paid. It was held that this statute applied only to merchant vessels and not to ships of war of the United States. And the court said: "Now it cannot be supposed that the legislature meant to subject the commander of a frigate to such an action, when upon common principles of law such commander would not be personally liable for any service done to his vessel; the government and not the agent being accountable for such service. And it would be absurd to suppose that the legislature had the power, or if it had, would have exercised it, to detain ships of war of the United States engaged, as they possibly might be, in expeditions of importance to the government." Ayers v. Knox, 7 Mass. 306.

The first section of Massachusetts Sts. 1814, ch. 175, provides that, "If any person not being authorized by the board of health or the selectmen of any town in this commonwealth, shall knowingly and willfully dig up, remove or carry away, or aid, or assist in digging up, removing or carrying away, any human body, or the remains thereof, such person shall be imprisoned, etc. This provision taken strictly, would make it necessary, in order to sustain an indictment, to aver and prove that the board of health or selectmen of no town in the commonwealth had given license to do the act complained of. The consequence would be, as oral testimony alone can be admitted on criminal trials of facts provable by witnesses, that the officers of every town to the number of three or four hundred must be summoned and give their personal attendance in the court where such transaction is pending; such an interpretation would lead to an absurdity. It was therefore held sufficient to aver that the defendant was not authorized by the selectmen of the town where the body had been buried. Com. v. Loring, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 369.

"Immediate."—Section 5, art. 29, ch. 29, Gen. Sts. of Kentucky, makes the carrying of concealed weapons lawful "when the person has reasonable ground to believe his person, or the person of some of his family, or his property, is in immediate danger from violence or crime." Section 17, ch. 21, of the Gen. Sts. of that state provides "that all words and phrases shall be construed and understood according to the common and approved usage of language; but technical words and phrases and such others as may have acquired a peculiar and appropriate meaning in law, shall be construed and understood according to such meaning." The court held that the word "immediate" was not a technical word, and that to give it its common and approved meaning, which is "instant, present, without the intervention of time," would lead to these absurd consequences: One who leaves his home to go to a place where it is probable or even certain that he will meet his adversary whom he has reasonable ground to believe will attempt to take his life whenever opportunity is presented, cannot, at the moment of leaving his home, or at any time before he comes into the presence of his enemy, be said to be in immediate danger in the sense in which that phrase is ordinarily used.

. . . And therefore such a person could not lawfully carry concealed weapons while going from his home to the place of anticipated meeting, but must go unarmed, or with his arms exposed to view, until, meeting his enemy, he is in present danger; and then, and then only, he may lawfully conceal them, and when again out of his enemy's presence he can no

The common sense of man approves the judgment that the Bolognian law, which enacted that "whoever drew blood in the streets should be punished with the utmost severity," did not extend to a surgeon who opened the veins of a person who fell down in the street in a fit.¹ The same common sense accepts the ruling that the Stat. of 1 Edw. II, which enacted that a "prisoner who breaks prison shall be guilty of a felony," did not extend to a prisoner who breaks out when the prison is on fire—"for he is not to be hanged because he would not stay to be burned."² And a like common sense sanctions the ruling that an act which punishes the obstruction or retarding of the passage of the mail, or its carrier, does not apply to a case of temporary detention of the mail caused by the arrest of the carrier upon an indictment for murder.³

Where, however, that which is directed to be done is within the sphere of legislation, and the terms employed are clear and explicit, and susceptible of but one interpretation, the consequences thereof, if absurd, can only be avoided by a change of the law itself, to be effected by legislative and not by judicial action.⁴

Against Ineffectiveness.—There is a presumption that the legislature intended that every word and clause in a statute should be of some force and effect; accordingly, courts will, if the language will reasonably permit, so construe a statute that the whole longer lawfully carry them concealed. It was therefore adjudged that when a person has reasonable ground to believe that his person, or the person of some member of his family, will be in immediate danger of violence or crime at the hands of another whenever that person is present, then he may lawfully carry concealed arms whenever and wherever he has reasonable ground to apprehend that he will encounter such person, and be exposed to the apprehended danger. Bailey v. Com., 11 Bush (Ky.) 688.

"Willfully."—In State v. Clark, 29 N. J. L. 96, the act under consideration made it a misdemeanor to "willfully" break down a fence in the possession of another person. The defendant was indicted under that statute. The defense was that the act of breaking down the fence, though willful, was in the exercise of a legal right to go upon his own land. The trial court rejected the testimony offered to sustain the defense, and the supreme court held that this ruling was error. In its opinion the court used this language: "The act of 1855 in terms makes the willful opening, breaking down, or injuring of any fence belonging to or in the possession of another person a misdemeanor. In what sense is the term 'willful' used?

In common parlance, 'willful' is used in the sense of intentional as distinguished from accidental or involuntary. Whatever one does intentionally he does willfully. Is it used in that sense in this act? Did the legislature intend to make the intentional opening of a fence for the purpose of going upon the land of another indictable if done by permission, or for a lawful purpose? . . . We cannot suppose such to have been the actual intent. To adopt such a construction would put a stop to the ordinary business of life. The language of the act, if construed literally, evidently leads to an absurd result. If a literal construction of the words be absurd, the act must be so construed as to avoid the absurdity. The court must restrain the words. The object designed to be reached by the act must limit and control the literal import of the terms and phrases employed."

1. 1 Co. Lit. 18, 19, and note (10); 1 Bl. Com. 60.

2. Plowden 10.

3. U. S. v. Kirby, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 482.

4. Bosley v. Mattingly, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 72; Douglass v. Essex County, 38 N. J. L. 214. In this latter case it was said that it is not the province of courts to supervise legislation and keep it within the bounds of common sense may stand and be effective.¹ To this end words have been supplied, or rejected, their collocation altered, and wrong dates and figures corrected.² But if the language is precise and unambiguous, a construction not supported by it will not be adopted, although the consequence will be to defeat partially or wholly the purposes of the act.³

c. AS TO INCLUDING THE GOVERNMENT.—The government is not bound by a statute unless named therein. Laws are prima facie presumed to be made for subjects only, and the government will not be presumed to be binding itself by them unless this intention affirmatively appears. In England, the crown is not reached except by express words or by necessary implication in any case where it would be ousted of any existing prerogative or interest.⁴ And so in the United States the states and national government are not bound by a general statutory provision whereby any of their prerogatives, rights, titles, or interests will and propriety. See also supra, this title, Literal Construction; infra, Grammatical Construction.

1. The Emily v. The Caroline, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 381; Cook v. Hamilton County, 6 McLean (U. S.) 112; In re New York, etc., Bridge, 72 N. Y. 527; People v. McGloin, 91 N. Y. 241; People v. Matsell, 94 N. Y. 179; Nichols v. Halliday, 27 Wis. 406; State v. Stinson, 17 Me. 154; State v. Blair, 32 Ind. 313; Simmons v. California Powder W'ks, 7 Colo. 285; Chapman v. State, 16 Tex. App. 76.

In Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paine (U. S.) 584, it was said that in the construction of a statute, every part of it must be viewed in connection with the whole so as to make all the parts harmonize if practicable, and give a sensible and intelligible effect to each. Nor should it be presumed that the legislature meant that any part of the statute should be without meaning or without force and effect.

Blackstone gives this illustration: "If land be vested in the king and his heirs by act of Parliament, saving the right of A, and A has at that time a lease of it for three years; here A shall hold it for his term of three years, and afterwards it shall go to the king. For this interpretation furnishes matter for every clause of the statute to work and operate upon." 1 Bl. Com. 88. See supra, this title, Literal Construction.

2. See infra, this title, Exceptional Construction, where the subject is discussed at length, with a large collection of cases and many illustrations.

3. "Our decision," said Lord Tenter-den, in Rex v. Barham, 8 B. & C. 99, 15 E. C. L. 157, "may in this particular case operate to defeat the object of the act, but it is better to abide by this consequence than to put upon it a construction not warranted by the words of the act, in order to give effect to what we may suppose to have been the intention of the legislature." See supra, this title, Literal Construction.

4. Broom's Legal Maxims, p. 72; Jenk. Cent. 307; Willion v. Berkeley, Plowd. 236; Atty. Gen'l v. Donaldson, 10 M. & W. 117; Atty. Gen'l v. Allgood, Parker 3; Bacon's Abr., tit. Prerogative, E 5 (c); Co. Litt. 43b; Chitty's Prerogative 382; Ayscough's Case, Cro. Car. 526; De Bode v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 373; 66 E. C. L. 371; Doe v. Archbishop of York, 14 Q. B. 81; 68 E. C. L. 81; Ledsam v. Russell, 1 H. L. Cas. 687; Rex v. Allen, 15 East 333; Huggins v. Bambridge, Willes 241; Rex v. Wright, 1 Ad. & El. 437; 28 E. C. L. 117; Magdalen College Case, 11 Rep. 74; R. v. Touchin, 2 Ld. Raym. 1066; Feather v. Reg., 6 B. & S. 257; 118 E. C. L. 257; Dixon v. London Small Arms Co., 1 App. Cas. 632; Tobin v. Reg., 32 L. J. 216.

It is to be presumed that the legislature does not intend to deprive the crown of any prerogative right of property unless it expresses its intention to do so in explicit terms, or makes the inference irresistible. Where, therefore, the language of the statute is general, and in its wide and natural sense would divest or take away any prerogative or right from the crown, it is construed so as to exclude that effect.

be impaired, unless by express words or irresistible implication.¹ Thus, the Statutes of Limitation are no bar to claims by Bacon's Abr., tit. Prerogative E 5; Cook's Case, Show. 208.

1. Bishop's Statutory Crimes, § 103; Sedg. on Const. of Statute 337 (2d ed.); Water Com'rs v. Hudson, 13 N. J. Eq. 420; Warren R. Co. v. State, 29 N. J. L. 353; Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 352; Greenwich v. Easton, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 217; Bennett v. McWhorter, 2 W. Va. 441; Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 277; U. S. v. Hewes, Crabbe (U. S.) 307; U. S. v. Greene, 4 Mason (U. S.) 427; U. S. v. Hoar, 2 Mason (U. S.) 314; Gilman v. Sheboygan, 2 Black (U. S.) 510; U. S. v. Shaw, 39 Fed. Rep. 433; U. S. v. Williams, 5 McLean (U. S.) 133; U. S. v. Davis, 3 McLean (U. S.) 483; People v. Herkimer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 345; 15 Am. Dec. 379; People v. Rossiter, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 143; Com. v. Johnson, 6 Pa. St. 136; Com. v. Hutchinson, 10 Pa. St. 466; Jones v. Tatham, 20 Pa. St. 398; Com. v. Baldwin, 1 Watts (Pa.) 54; 26 Am. Dec. 33; Swearingen v. U. S., 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 373; State v. Milburn, 9 Gill (Md.) 105; State v. Bank of Md., 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 216; 26 Am. Dec. 561; Doe v. Deavors, 11 Ga. 79; State v. Garland, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 50; Cole v. White, 32 Ark. 45; Josselyn v. Stone, 28 Miss. 753.

In State v. Kinne, 41 N. H. 241, it is said that, "The state here, like the crown in England, is not bound by a provision of a general statute which affects its prerogatives, rights, or interests, unless expressly named." In that case it was held that under a general provision of the statute that costs shall follow the event of every action or petition unless otherwise directed by law or by the court, no costs could be recovered against the state. See also Reg. v. Beadle, 7 El. & Bl. 492; 90 E. C. L. 490.

Discharge in Bankruptcy.—"A discharge in bankruptcy under a statute which authorizes the government to prove its demands against the bankrupt, and declares the discharge to be a release 'from all debts, claims, liabilities, and demands which were or might have been proved' and 'a full and complete bar to all suits brought on any such debts, claims, liabilities or demands,' is of no avail against a suit by the government." Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 103, citing U. S. v. Herron, 20 Wall.

(U. S.) 251. See also Ex parte Russell, 19 Ves. 165; Ex parte Postmaster Gen'l, 10 Ch. Div. 595; Public Schools v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667; U. S. v. Wilson, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 253; Glenn v. Humphreys, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 424; People v. Rossiter, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 143; People v. Herkimer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 345; 15 Am. Dec. 379; Com. v. Hutchinson, 10 Pa. St. 466.

Eminent Domain.—It has been held that acts authorizing a corporation generally to take lands for the purpose for which it is incorporated, do not give the power of taking lands already used for a public purpose, unless such power is given by express terms or by necessary inferences. In re Cuxfield Board, 19 Beav. 153; Reg. v. McCann, L. R., 3 Q. B. 677; Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339; 67 Am. Dec. 471; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 150; State v. Montclair R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 328; Com. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 25; Boston Water Power Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 360; Little Miami, etc., R. Co. v. Dayton, 23 Ohio St. 510. See also Com. v. Stevens, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 248; Com. v. Coombs, 2 Mass. 492.

A railroad corporation, with only general powers to locate its road and take lands for it, may cross a public highway, upon the ground that it is presumed the legislature so intended from the necessity of things. Starr v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. L. 592.

Counties—Municipalities.—In Cole v. White County, 32 Ark. 51, it is said: "It is a well settled rule that in the construction of statutes declaring or affecting rights and interests, general words do not include the state or affect its rights, unless it be especially named, or it be clear by necessary implication that the state was intended to be included;" and in that case it was held that "Counties which are component and essential parts of a state and the necessary agencies of its government, embodiments of the public, are no more embraced in the general words of the statute than the state itself." Mr. Bishop says, however, that "The reasons of the rule that in the construction of statutes general words do not bind the state would seem not in general to extend it to municipal corporations."

the government, unless the government is included by express words.¹

It is said that the aforesaid presumption does not apply when the act is made for the public good, advancement of learning, religion and justice, relief of the poor, prevention of fraud, or suppression of injury and wrong.² But it is probably more accurate to say that the government is not excluded from the operation of a statute where neither its prerogative rights nor property are in question.³

1. Lambert v. Taylor, 4 B. & C. 138; 10 E. C. L. 293; Lindsay v. Miller, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 666; People v. Gilbert, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 227, note; Com. v. Johnson, 6 Pa. St. 136.

2. Bishop's Statutory Crimes, § 103; Chit. Prer. 382; Case of Ecclesiastical Persons, 5 Rep. 14a; Lord Berkeley's Case Plowd. 246; Magdalen College Case, 11 Rep. 70b & 73a; Rex v. Wright, 1 Ad. & El. 436; 28 E. C. L. 117; Mildmay's Case, 6 Rep. 48; Rex v. Archbishop of Armage, Stra. 516; Doe v. Deavors, 11 Ga. 79; Com. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 25; Atty. Gen'l v. Newman, 1 Price 438; Martin v. State, 24 Tex. 61. See also Green v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 655.

In Atty. Gen'l v. Radloff, 10 Exch. 84. Pollock, C. B., said: "The crown is not bound with reference to matters affecting its property or person, but is bound with respect to the practice in the administration of justice."

In Doe v. Deavors, 11 Ga. 79, it was decided that the state was bound by acts exempting certain articles of personal property from levy and sale for debts, so that they could not be seized and sold under execution for taxes. The court said: "In our judgment, the state falls within the operation of a public law, passed for the benefit of the poor, and the state falls within the policy of our own legislation upon this subject-matter." See also State v. Pitts, 51 Mo. 133; State v. Geddis, 44 Iowa 537; Hume v. Gossett, 43 Ill. 297; Loomis v. Gerson, 62 Ill. 11.

3. For a number of old English statutes which were held to apply to the crown, although the crown was not expressly named therein, see Bacon's Abr. tit. Prerogative E 5.

Statutes establishing general rules of procedure in civil actions have been held to bind the government. Green v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 655; Fink v. O'Neil, 106 U. S. 272.

An English statute which was passed for the better administration of justice, and which enacted that writs of error upon judgments given in any of the superior courts should be returned to the exchequer chamber, was held to apply to a judgment on an indictment; although the crown was not named or referred to in the act, no prerogative was affected by this construction. Rex v. Wright, 1 Ad. & El. 434; 28 E. C. L. 117.

When a state steps down into the arena of common business in concert or in competition with her citizens, she goes divested of her sovereignty, and the reason for the maxim nullum tempus occurrit regi no longer applies. Calloway v. Cossart, 45 Ark. 81.

In Com. v. Garrigues, 28 Pa. St. 12; 70 Am. Dec. 103, it was held that the commonwealth was bound by a statute made to prevent tortious usurpations, and to regulate and preserve the right of all elections. It was said: "But it is argued that the commonwealth is not bound by the statute. It is true that the general rule in England is that the king is not bound by a statute if he be not named in it. But this rule has many exceptions. All statutes made to suppress wrong, to take away fraud, to prevent the decay of religion, to prevent tortious usurpations, or to secure to electors the right to make free election, are excepted out of this rule in England, and bind the king, although he be not named. 5 Coke's Rep. 14b; Dwarries on Statutes, 27, 28. The act of 1854 comes within the spirit of several of these exceptions. In addition to this, the subject-matter, being one in which the commonwealth is the chief party in interest, plainly indicates an intention to bind the state. If this were not the construction, the statute would be almost inoperative."

In U. S. v. Knight, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 315, it was said: "Without undertaking to lay down any general rule as applicable to cases of this kind, we feel satisfied that when, as in this case, a statute which proposes only to regulate the mode of proceeding in suits,

f. AS TO GRAMMATICAL CONSTRUCTION.—It is an elementary rule in the construction of statutes that phrases and sentences are to be construed according to the rules of grammar, the presumption being that they were used by the law makers according to their grammatical import.¹ This rule of construction, however, must give way to the manifest intention of the legislature, and grammatical sense and structure of the sentences will not be adhered to if inconsistent with declared purpose, or if to do so would involve inconsistency or absurdity.²

does not divest the public of any right, does not violate any principle of public policy, but on the contrary makes provision in accordance with the policy of the government, as enacted by many acts of previous legislation, to conform to state laws in giving persons imprisoned until their execution the privilege of jail limits, we shall best carry into effect the legislative intent by construing the executions at the suit of the United States to be embraced within the act of 1828."

1. Bacon's Abr. Statutes I, 2; MacDougall v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 755; 73 E. C. L. 755; Mattison v. Hart, 14 C. B. 385; 78 E. C. L. 383; Christopherson v. Lotinga, 15 C. B. N. S. 809; 109 E. C. L. 808; Everett v. Wells, 2 M. & G. 269; Smith v. Bell, 10 M. & W. 378; Becke v. Smith, 2 M. & W. 195; Warburton v. Loveland, 1 H. & B. 648; Richards v. McBride, 8 Q. B. Div. 119; Cull v. Austin, L. R., 7 C. P. 234; Waugh v. Middleton, 8 Exch. 356; Dame's Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 422; Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 97.

2. Eyston v. Studd, 2 Plowd. 463; Reg. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 129; 38 E. C. L. 70; Atty. Gen'l v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 378; Miller v. Salomon, 7 Exch. 475; Becke v. Smith, 2 M. & W. 195; Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 199; Hollingworth v. Palmer, 2 Exch. 267; Ex parte Rashleigh, 2 Ch. Div. 13; Abel v. Lee, L. R., 6 C. P. 371; Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365; Jackson v. Topping, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 388; 19 Am. Dec. 515; People v. Gates, 56 N. Y. 387; Fisher v. Connard, 100 Pa. St. 69; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; People v. Hill, 3 Utah 334; George v. Board of Education, 33 Ga. 344.

In Warburton v. Loveland 1 H. & B. 648, it was said: "It is a rule in the construction of statutes that, in the first instance, the grammatical sense of the words is to be adhered to. If that is contrary to or inconsistent with any expressed intention or any declared purpose of the statute, or if it would involve any absurdity, repugnancy or inconsistency in its change of provisions, the grammatical sense must then be modified, extended or abridged, so far as to avoid such inconsistencies, but no further."

In Mattison v. Hart, 14 C. B. 385; 78 E. C. L. 383, Jarvis, C. J., said: "It is a golden rule of construction to give to words used by a legislature their plain and natural meaning, unless it is manifest from the general scope and intention of the statute that injustice and absurdity will result from so construing them."

In Abel v. Lee, L. R., 6 C. P. 371, Willes, J., said: "No doubt the general rule is that the language of an act is to be read according to its ordinary grammatical construction, unless so reading it would entail some absurdity, repugnancy or injustice."

An act provided that "any person acting in contravention of this section shall forfeit all fish taken by him, and any net used by him in taking the same." In Ruther v. Harris, 1 Exch. Div. 97, it was held that the purpose of the act should not be defeated by adhering to the grammatical construction of the sentence; and the court construed the words "used by him in taking the same" to mean "used for the purpose of taking the same," where defendant had fished but caught nothing.

In Kelly v. McGuire, 15 Ark. 588, it was said: "It would be unsafe to construe a statute according to mere grammatical rules or to rely on the punctuation as any material aid in ascertaining the true meaning. Neither bad grammar nor bad English will vitiate a statute any more than a deed."

In Fisher v. Connard, 100 Pa. St. 69, Paxson, J., said: "The grammatical construction of a statute is one mode of interpretation, but it is not the only mode

Neither bad grammar nor bad English will defeat the operation of a statute.¹ In accordance with strict grammatical construction, qualifying words and phrases should be confined to their next antecedent, in the absence of punctuation showing a different intent.² This rule is frequently of no effect, and indeed is so often disregarded that the contrary might seem to be established; but, whatever be the rule, it is subservient to the real purpose of the statute; and qualifying words and phrases may be extended to all the parts of the sentence,³ and even to words in other secand it is not always the true mode. We may assume that the draughtsman understood the rules of grammar, but it is not always safe to do so." And declaring the construction of a statute in question, said, "and if this makes good law, the grammatical construction is not so important."

In Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 312, Sharswood, J., said: "It is better always to adhere to a plain, common-sense interpretation of the words of a statute than to apply to them refined and technical rules of grammatical construction."

Improper Tense.—A different tense may be adopted than that used in a statute when the real intention of the legislature calls for it, as in Maysville, etc., R. Co. v. Herrick, 13 Bush (Ky.) 123. Where a statute provided that "a married woman who shall come to this commonwealth without her husband," etc., it was held that the effect of the statute must not be confined by grammatical construction; but it being the purpose of the statute to extend the rights given there to those who had come as well as to those who should come, it should be so construed as to give it that effect.

An act provided that "25,000 acres of land shall be allowed for and given to Major General Nathaniel Greene." In Rutherford v. Greene, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 196, it was held that the land was given by force of that act—that the words were words of absolute donation, and the gift not dependent upon future legislation.

1. Kelly v. McGuire, 15 Ark. 588; Garrigus v. Parke County, 39 Ind. 76; Murray v. State, 21 Tex. App. 620; 57 Am. Rep. 623.

2. Dwarris on Stat. 590, 591; Steinland v. Hopkins, 9 M. & W. 178; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray (Mass.) 385; State v. Jernigan, 3 Murphy (N. Car.) 18; State v. Brown, 3 Hiesk. (Tenn.) 1; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; State v. Conklin, 34 Wis. 25. See also Fowler

v. Tuttle, 24 N. H. 22; Fisher v. Connard, 100 Pa. St. 63; Waters v. Campbell, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 121.

A statute making provision for the adoption of a statute by a city or town, required that it should be adopted "at a legal meeting of the city council of the city or the inhabitants of the town, called for that purpose." In Quinn v. Lowell Electric Light Corp., 140 Mass. 106, it was held that the clause "called for that purpose" applied to the meeting of the inhabitants only; but this decision was upon the ground of the purpose of the statute rather than upon any grammatical rule.

A statute authorized the town or city to appropriate money for suitable buildings or rooms, and for the foundation of a library, a sum not exceeding one dollar for each of its ratable polls. In Dearborn v. Brookline, 97 Mass. 469, it was held that the words "not exceeding" did not necessarily qualify or limit the entire clause; but in this case also the question was settled upon consideration of the intention of the legislature, rather than upon the grammatical structure of the sentence.

A statute provided that "The annual meeting for election of officers shall be held on the first Sunday of July in each year, and the monthly meeting shall be held on the first Tuesday of each month at half past seven o'clock P. M." It was held that the real purpose of the act was to define the hour of the monthly meeting only. State v. Conklin, 34 Wis. 21.

3. Ebys Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 311; Coxson v. Doland, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 66; Hart v. Kennedy, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 290; Gyger's Estate, 65 Pa. St. 311; Dearborn v. Brookline, 97 Mass. 470.

In State v. Jernigan, 3 Murphy (N. Car.) 18, Taylor, C. J., said: "The rule of grammar that words shall be referred to the next antecedent, has been adopted and enforced in the law from an early period, and has had a tions to effectuate the legislative intention, which is the true end of all rules of construction.¹

"Or" and "And."—The disjunctive particle "or" and the conjunction "and" should not be treated as interchangeable, and are not to be substituted the one for the other, except when it is apparent that they are used indifferently. Where it is clear that they have been so used, and the intention of the legislature requires them to be so construed, courts will not hesitate to interpret "and" as meaning "or," and vice versa.²

*g. SAME LANGUAGE AND CHANGE OF LANGUAGE.*³—When an act or part thereof which has received a judicial interpretation is re-enacted in the same terms, or where words used in a statute have a definite and well-known meaning in law, that construction or that meaning must be considered to have the sanction of the legislature unless the contrary appears.⁴

direct influence upon the decisions of many cases. But much to the credit of the sages of the law, it has uniformly been received and practiced upon with its proper limit and qualification so as to fulfill the intention of the legislature in civil matters, to ascertain the design of parties in private contracts, and to furnish a rational exposition of every instrument, public or private, that called for the judgment of the court."

The act establishing the metropolitan police provided that "no person holding office under this act shall be liable to military or jury duty, nor to arrest on civil process, or the service of subpoenas from civil courts, whilst actually on duty." In Hart v. Kennedy, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 432, it was held that this provision should be read as meaning, "nor whilst actually on duty to arrest on civil process, or to service of subpoenas from civil courts."

General Words and Expressions.—It seems to be the rule in construction that general words and expressions at the end of a sentence qualify the whole. Dwarris on Statutes, 704; Rex v. Shipton, 8 B. & C. 94; 15 E. C. L. 155; Great Western R. Co. v. Swindon, etc., R. Co., 9 App. Cas. 808.

In Coxson v. Doland, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 68, Daly, J., said: "The grammatical rule, which is also the legal rule in construing statutes, is that where general words occur at the end of a sentence they refer to and qualify the whole. While if they are in the middle of the sentence and sensibly apply to a particular branch of it they are not to be extended to that which follows." Citing Rex v. Shipton, 8 B. & C. 94; 15 E. C. L. 155; Dwarris on Stats. 704.

1. U. S. v. Babbitt, 1 Black (U. S.) 55; State v. Forney, 21 Neb. 226; State v. Zanesville, etc., Turnpike Co., 16 Ohio St. 320; Matthews v. Com., 18 Gratt. (Va.) 989.

2. See AND, vol. 1, p. 569; OR, vol. 17, p. 218. See also McConky v. Alexandria County, 56 Cal. 83; Union Ins. Co. v. U. S., 6 Wall. (U. S.) 759; Com. v. Griffin, 105 Mass. 185; State v. Pool, 74 N. Car. 402; State v. Custer, 65 N. Car. 339; Bollin v. Shiner, 12 Pa. St. 205; Barker v. Esty, 19 Vt. 131.

3. See also infra, this title, Adopted Statutes, Context.

4. Mansell v. Reg., 8 El. & Bl. 93; 92 E. C. L. 92; Ex parte Campbell, L. R., 5 Ch. 706; Williams v. Lear, L. R., 7 Q. B. 285; Ex parte Thorne, 3 Ch. Div. 458; Ex parte Attwater, 5 Ch. Div. 30; Greaves v. Tofield, 14 Ch. Div. 571; Bustros v. White, 1 Q. B. Div. 425; Dale's Case, 6 Q. B. Div. 453; Barlow v. Teal, 15 Q. B. Div. 403; Clark v. Wallond, 52 L. J. Q. B. 322; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440; U. S. v. Mooney, 116 U. S. 104; U. S. v. Central Pac. R. Co., 118 U. S. 235; U. S. v. Wilson, Baldw. (U. S.) 95; The Devonshire, 13 Fed. Rep. 39; Duramus v. Harrison, 26 Ala. 326; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Anthony v. State, 29 Ala. 27; Glass v. State, 30 Ala. 531; Bank of Mobile v. Meagher, 33 Ala. 622; O'Byrnes v. State, 51 Ala. 25; Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 42; Ex parte Matthews, 52 Ala. 51; Woolsey v. Cade, 54 Ala. 378; 25 Am. Rep. 711; Huddleston v. Askey, 56 Ala. 218; Posey v. Pressley, 60 Ala. 243; Morrison v. Stevenson, 69 Ala. 448; Snider v. Burks, 84 Ala. 57; McKenzie v. State, 11 Ark. 594; People v. Webb, 38

Cal. 467; In re Baker, 55 Cal. 303; Eck v. Hoffman, 55 Cal. 502; Harvey v. Travellers' Ins. Co. (Colo. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 935; State v. Swope, 7 Ind. 91; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Guard, 24 Ind. 222; County Seat of Linn County, 15 Kan. 500; State v. Brewer, 22 La. Ann. 273; Myrick v. Hasey, 27 Me. 9; 46 Am. Dec. 583; Cota v. Ross, 66 Me. 161; Tuxbury's Appeal, 67 Me. 269; State v. Cumberland County, 78 Me. 103; McKee v. McKee, 17 Md. 352; Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 413; Com. v. Hartnett, 3 Gray (Mass.) 451; Grace v. McElroy, 1 Allen (Mass.) 566; Cronan v. Cotting, 104 Mass. 248; 6 Am. Rep. 232; Low v. Blanchard, 116 Mass. 274; Collins v. Wilhoit, 35 Mo. App. 585; Gould v. Wise, 18 Nev. 253; Tomson v. Ward, 1 N. H. 12; Mooers v. Bunker, 29 N. H. 420; Frink v. Pond, 46 N. H. 126; Murphy's Case, 23 N. J. L. 180; Perkins v. Smith, 116 N. Y. 441; Hakes v. Peck, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 104; Adams v. Turrentine, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 147; Bridgers v. Taylor, 102 N. Car. 86; Gray v. Askew, 3 Ohio 480; Turney v. Yeoman, 14 Ohio 218; Grogan v. Garrison, 27 Ohio St. 63; Bulkley v. Stephens, 29 Ohio St. 622; State v. Jackson, 36 Ohio St. 286; Gonder v. Estabrook, 33 Pa. St. 375; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., 104 Pa. St. 89; Evans v. Ross, 10 Pa. St. 235; Apple v. Apple, 1 Head (Tenn.) 352; Munson v. Hallowell, 26 Tex. 484; 84 Am. Dec. 582; Timmins v. Bonner, 58 Tex. 558; Sanders v. Bridges, 67 Tex. 94; Hussey v. Moser, 70 Tex. 44; Harrington v. Smith, 28 Wis. 43.

If an act of Parliament uses the same language which was used in a former act of Parliament referring to the same subject and passed for the same purpose and for the same object, the safe and well-known rule of construction is to assume that the legislature in using well-known words upon which there have been well-known decisions, used those words in the sense which the decisions have attached to them. Greaves v. Tofield, 14 Ch. Div. 571; Clark v. Wallond, 52 L. J., Q. B. 323.

Where words have been long used in a technical sense and have been judicially construed to have a certain meaning, and have been adopted by the legislature as having a certain meaning prior to the particular statute in which they are used, the rule of construction requires the words used in such statute to be construed according to the sense in which they have been so previously used, although that sense may vary from the strict literal meaning of the words. Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mattichand, 8 Moore P. C. 4.

When words are used in a statute which, when used in reference to the same subject, have obtained a fixed and definite meaning at common law, the inference is that they were intended to be used in their common-law sense. Ex parte Vincent, 26 Ala. 145; 62 Am. Dec. 714. See also infra, this title, Technical Terms.

Code.—The re-enactment, in a code, of provisions substantially the same as those contained in former statutes, is the legislative adoption of a known and judicial construction. Duramus v. Harrison, 26 Ala. 326; Ex parte Banks, 28 Ala. 28; Anthony v. State, 29 Ala. 27; Bank of Mobile v. Meagher, 33 Ala. 622; Huddleston v. Askey, 56 Ala. 218; Posey v. Pressley, 60 Ala. 243; Morrison v. Stevenson, 69 Ala. 448; Snider v. Burks, 84 Ala. 57; Potter v. State, 92 Ala. 40.

English and French Texts.—In construing those parts of the Louisiana Code which re-enact provisions originally enacted in both French and English, both texts may be taken into consideration to aid in ascertaining their meaning as parts of one law; and obscurities or ambiguities in the English text may be often cleared up by referring to the greater precision of the French text; although, if the two texts cannot be reconciled, the English must prevail. Hudson v. Grieve, 1 Mart. (La.) 143; State v. Dupuy, 2 Mart. (La.) 177; Breedlove v. Turner, 9 Mart. (La.) 353; Chretien v. Theard, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 582; Borel v. Borel, 3 La. 30; Durnford v. Clark, 2 La. 128; State v. Moore, 8 Rob. (La.) 518; State v. Mix, 8 Rob. (La.) 549; State v. Ellis, 12 La. Ann. 390; State v. Judge of Eighth Dist. Ct., 22 La. Ann. 581; Lafourche Parish v. Terrebonne Parish, 34 La. Ann. 1233. See also Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707.

Constitution.—When a constitutional provision has received a settled judicial construction and is afterwards incorporated into a new or revised constitution, it must be presumed to have been retained with the knowledge of that construction; and the courts will, therefore, feel bound to adhere to that construction. Ex parte Roundtree, 51 Ala. 42.

In the amendment, re-enactment, or revision of a statute a mere change of phraseology works no change in the established interpretation thereof, unless it clearly appears that such was the intention of the legislature.¹ Nor will the omission of a material

Punctuation.—A semicolon was used in a certain section of a code. This section was divided into two members by the construction of the court. The code was afterwards revised and the semicolon retained. It was held that its retention and use indicated the legislative adoption of the prior judicial construction placed on the statute. Potter v. State, 92 Ala. 39.

1. Cates v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442; Reg. v. Ingham, 5 B. & S. 271; 117 E. C. L. 269; Reg. v. Buttle, L. R., 1 C. C. 251; Hadley v. Perks, L. R., 1 Q. B. 457; Hudson v. Midland R. Co., L. R., 4 Q. B. 370; Skinner v. Usher, L. R., 7 Q. B. 427; Mitchell v. Simpson, 25 Q. B. Div. 189; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619; Taylor v. Bowker, 111 U. S. 110; Bradley v. State, 69 Ala. 318; Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 356; State v. Smith, 46 Iowa 672; Overfield v. Sutton, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 621; Allen v. Ramsey, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 635; Hughes v. Farrar, 45 Me. 72; Sheffield v. Lovering, 12 Mass. 492; Woodward v. Spurr, 138 Mass. 593; Hittinger v. Boston, 139 Mass. 19; Wright v. Dressel, 140 Mass. 149; McNamara v. Minnesota Cent. R. Co., 12 Minn. 388; Burwell v. Tullis, 12 Minn. 572; Gaston v. Merriam, 33 Minn. 279; Hugo v. Miller (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 381; Dawson v. Dawson, 23 Mo. App. 173; Stump v. Hornback, 94 Mo. 33; Crowell v. Clough, 23 N. H. 209; Sloan v. Bryant, 28 N. H. 71; Mooers v. Bunker, 29 N. H. 420; Burnham v. Stevens, 33 N. H. 247; Murphy's Case, 23 N. J. L. 192; State v. Hale, 25 N. J. L. 328; Taylor v. Delancy, 2 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 151; Yates' Case, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 359; Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 722; 11 Am. Dec. 351; In re Brown, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 316; Douglass v. Howland, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 47; Theriat v. Hart, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 380; Gaffney v. Colvill, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 574; Parmelee v. Thompson, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 79; Humbert v. Protestant Episcopal Church, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 312; Dunham v. Waterman, 17 N. Y. 13; 72 Am. Dec. 406; Hall v. Western Transp. Co., 34 N. Y. 286; Elwood v. Klock, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 55; Douglas v. Douglas, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 144; Hoffman v. Delihanty, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 391; Orser's Estate, 4 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 134;

Du Bois v. Brown, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 317; Dominick v. Michael, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 408; Taggard v. Roosevelt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 102; 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 143; People v. Deming, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 274; Coxson v. Doland, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 67; Gardener v. Woodyear, 1 Ohio 176; Swazey v. Blackman, 8 Ohio 20; Ash v. Ash, 9 Ohio St. 387; Conger v. Barker, 11 Ohio St. 13; Boley v. Ohio L. Ins., etc., Co., 12 Ohio St. 144; Tyler v. Winslow, 15 Ohio St. 368; Dutoit v. Doyle, 16 Ohio St. 405; Marienthal v. Mosler, 16 Ohio St. 569; Williams v. State, 35 Ohio St. 177; State v. Shelby County, 36 Ohio St. 330; State v. Vanderbilt, 37 Ohio St. 640; Allen v. Russell, 39 Ohio St. 337; State v. Stockley, 45 Ohio St. 308; Chambers v. Carson, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 9; Com. v. Rainey, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 186; McMicken v. Com., 58 Pa. St. 213; Ennis v. Crump, 5 Tex. 34; Clark v. Powell, 62 Vt. 442; Whitcomb v. Davenport, 63 Vt. 656; Winterfield v. Strauss, 24 Wis. 394.

In dealing with the statute which professes merely to repeal a former statute of limited operation and to re-enact its provisions in an amended form, it is not necessary to presume the intention to extend the operation of those provisions to classes of persons not previously subject to them. Brown v. McLachlan, L. R. 4 P. C. 550.

Where laws antecedent to their revision were settled either by clear expression in the statutes or adjudications on them, a mere change of phraseology shall not be deemed or construed to be a change of the law, unless such phraseology plainly shows an intention in the legislature to work a change. Taylor v. Delancey, 2 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 151.

Act of 1818 required the defendant in a judgment by confession to make a "particular" statement and specification of "the nature and consideration" of the debt or demand, and where the demand arose on a note, bond, or other specialty, the "origin and consideration" of the same was required to be "particularly set forth." Section 383, subd. 2. of the Code of Procedure requires the defendant to "state concisely the facts out of which it (the money due or to become due) arose, and to show word in the amendment, re-enactment, or revision of a statute change the law, unless such be the evident intent of the legislature.¹ But a deliberate or material change of expression must be taken prima facie to import a change of intention.² And where that the sum confessed therefor is justly due or to become due." It was held that the provision of the code did not change the law. Dunham v. Waterman, 17 N. Y. 13; 72 Am. Dec. 406.

Several statutes provided that the widow of an intestate in the absence of children of the intestate "shall be entitled to the whole residue of the personal property after the debts, funeral charges, and other incidental expenses shall have been paid." These statutes were revised, and the revision provided that, in a like case, "the widow shall be entitled to all the personal estate as next of kin, which shall be subject to distribution upon settlement of the estate." It was held that the former rule as to the time when the widow's right to her share of the personal property accrued, was not changed by the revision. Conger v. Barker, 11 Ohio St. 14.

"Upon a revision of statutes a different interpretation is not to be given to them without some substantial change of phraseology; some change other than what may have been necessary to abbreviate the former law." McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619.

Before the courts may pronounce a change in the law in an amendment, revision, or re-enactment of statutes, such intent must be evident, and language must be employed which is not susceptible of any other just construction. Bradley v. State, 69 Ala. 318.

The change in the phraseology of a statute made by means of a general revision of the entire body of law, cannot be regarded as so clearly indicative of a special design and purpose on the part of the legislature as when the change is made by direct amendment. Hugo v. Miller (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 381.

1. Horn v. Ion, 4 B. & Ad. 78; 24 E. C. L. 28; Bond v. Rosling, 1 B. & S. 371; 101 E. C. L. 369; per Byles, J., in Tidey v. Mollett, 16 C. B. N. S. 298; 111 E. C. L. 296; McCalmont v. Rankin, 2 De G. M. & G. 418; Parker v. Taswell, 2 De G. & J. 559; Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 2 De G. F. & J. 508; Reg. v. Hulme, L. R., 5 Q. B. 379; In re Wood, L. R., 7 Ch. 306; In re Wright, 3 Ch. Div. 78; Ford v. Ford, 143 Mass. 578; State v. Sparrow, 89 Mich. 269; Gaston v. Merriam, 33

Minn. 279; Croswell v. Crane, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 195; Douglas v. Douglas, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 145; Painesville, etc., R. Co. v. King, 17 Ohio St. 543; State v. Shelby County, 36 Ohio St. 330; Whitcomb v. Davenport, 63 Vt. 656.

Where a statute requiring witnesses before an election commission to answer incriminating questions and indemnifying them from prosecution for the offense confessed, provided the commissioners certified that the witnesses had truly answered the questions, the law was held not to be changed by a later statute which failed to require the answers to be true. Reg. v. Hulme, L. R., 5 Q. B. 377.

Where a bankruptcy law making an assignment by a debtor of all his property an act of bankruptcy, omitted the words "with intent to defeat or delay his creditors," contained in former acts, no alteration was held to be made in the law. In re Wood, L. R., 7 Ch. 302.

Where a later act permitting divorce on the ground of desertion omitted the words "without the consent of the party deserted," which were contained in an earlier act on the subject, it was held that the law was not changed; the omitted words being implied in the phrase "deserted." Ford v. Ford, 143 Mass. 578.

2. Rex v. Great Bolton, 8 B. & C., 71 15 E. C. L. 154; St. Losky v. Green, 9 C. B. N. S. 375; 99 E. C. L. 375; Ricket v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 2 H. L. 207; Reg. v. Bullock, L. R., 1 C. C. 117; Lawrence v. King, L. R., 3 Q. B. 348; Reg. v. Price, L. R., 6 Q. B. 416; Dickenson v. Fletcher, L. R., 9 C. P. 8; U. S. v. Bashaw, 1 C. C. A. 653; Lehman v. Robinson, 59 Ala. 240; Heinssen v. State (Colo.), 29 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 532; Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Versailles Woollen Co., 59 Conn. 347; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 191; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Com. v. Messenger, 4 Mass. 462; Rutland v. Mendon, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 156; State v. Hale, 25 N. J. L. 328; James v. Patten, 6 N. Y. 9; 55 Am. Dec. 376; Taggard v. Roosevelt, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 102; 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 143; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 403; Rich v. Keyser, 54 Pa. St. 89.

Where a statute conferred powers, in the omission of material words plainly indicates an intent to change the law, effect must be given to such intent.¹

h. AGAINST REPEAL BY IMPLICATION.—See infra, this title, Repeal.

i. AGAINST RETROACTION.—See infra, this title, Retrospective Laws.

8. Strict, Liberal, and Exceptional Construction—a. STRICT CONSTRUCTION—(1) Definition.—Strict construction, as applied to statutes, means that they are not to be so extended by implication beyond the legitimate import of the words used in them as to embrace cases or acts not clearly described by such words and to bring them within the prohibition or penalty of such statutes. It does not mean that words shall be so restricted as not to have their full meaning, but that everything shall be excluded from the operation of statutes so construed which does not clearly come within the meaning of the language used.²

language substantially identical, on the tax assessor and tax collector, in reference to assessments previously overlooked or withheld, and a change was subsequently made in the language of the statute by which the powers were conferred on these officers in special sections and in changed and varying language, it was held that a change of law was intended. Lehman v. Robinson, 59 Ala. 240.

If one of two statutes using distinct language, imposes a penalty under certain circumstances, and the other does not, it is always an argument that the legislature did not intend to impose a penalty in the latter case, for where they did so intend they plainly said so. Dickenson v. Fletcher, L. R., 9 C. P. 8.

In Reg. v. Price, L. R., 6 Q. B. 416; Cockburn, C. J., said that when the legislature in legislating in pari materia and substituting certain provisions in an act for those which existed in an earlier one, has entirely changed the language of the enactment, it must be taken to have done so with some intention and motive.

1. West v. Francis, 5 B. & Ald. 737; 7 E. C. L. 247; Reg. v. Llangian, 4 B. & S. 249; 116 E. C. L. 247; Wills v. Russell, 100 U. S. 621; Broadbuss v. Broadbuss, 10 Bush (Ky.) 299; Buck v. Spofford, 31 Me. 36; Pingree v. Snell, 42 Me. 53; Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Blackburn v. Walpole, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 104; State v. Clark, 57 Mo. 25; Young v. Dake, 5 N. Y. 465; 55 Am. Dec. 356; Lyon v. Smith, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 126; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio St. 403; Poe v. State, 85 Tenn. 499.

When a statute is revised and parts are omitted in the revision, those parts are not to be revived by construction. Pingree v. Snell, 42 Me. 53; Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Lyon v. Smith, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 126.

Among the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, as revised by the New York legislature, was one relating to the manner of creating an estate or interest in land, and of assigning it, etc.; another prescribed the requisites of a valid contract for the sale of lands or any interest in lands; and both by way of exception left "leases for a term not exceeding one year" and "contracts for the leasing for a period not longer than one year" unaffected by the formalities and requisites therein prescribed, but omitted the words "from the making thereof" which were found in the statute before revision. It was held that the legislature intended to dispense entirely with the qualifications which the latter words would seem to import. Young v. Dake, 5 N. Y. 467; 55 Am. Dec. 356, overruling Crosswell v. Crane, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 191.

2. Rawson v. State, 19 Conn. 299; Daggett v. State, 4 Conn. 61; 10 Am. Dec. 100; State v. Powers, 36 Conn. 77; Melody v. Reab, 4 Mass. 471; State v. Graham, 38 Ark. 519; Watervliet Turnpike Co. v. McKean, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 616; Austin v. State, 71 Ga. 595; Jordt v. State, 31 Tex. 571; 98 Am. Dec. 550; Bettis v. Taylor, 8 Port. (Ala.) 564; Andrews v. U. S., 2 Story (U. S.) 202; U. S. v. Bassett, 2 Story (U. S.) 389; Schooner Enterprise, 1 Paine (U. S.) 32; U. S. v. Sheldon, 2

(2) Penal Statutes.—It is a well-settled rule of law that penal statutes are to be construed strictly;¹ but the cases reveal con-

Wheat. (U. S.) 199; U. S. v. Ellis, 51 Fed. Rep. 808; Nicholson v. Fields, 31 L. J. Exch. 235; 7 H. & N. 817.

In U. S. v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 460, which was an indictment under the slave trade act of April 20th, 1818, Story, J., said: "This is a penal act and is to be strictly construed; that is, with no intendment or extension beyond the import of the words used."

In Schooner Enterprise, 1 Paine (U. S.) 32, Livingston, J., said: "While it is said that penal statutes are to receive a strict construction, nothing more is meant than that they shall not, by what may be thought their spirit or equity, be extended to offenses other than those which are specially and clearly described and provided for. The court is not, therefore, as the appellant supposes, precluded from inquiring into the intention of the legislature. However clearly the law be expressed, this must ever, more or less, be a matter of inquiry. The court is not, however, permitted to arrive at this intention by mere conjecture, but it is collected from the object which the legislature had in view and the expressions used, which should be competent and proper to apprise the community at large of the rule which it is intended to prescribe for their government."

In State v. Powers, 36 Conn. 77, Park, J., said: "The letter of remedial statutes may be extended to include cases clearly within the mischief the statute was intended to remedy, unless such construction does violence to the language used. But a consideration of the old law, the mischief and the remedy, are not enough to bring cases within the purview of penal statutes. They must be expressly included by the words of the statute. This is all the difference between a liberal and a strict construction of a statute. A case may come within the one unless the language excludes it, while it is excluded by the other unless the language includes it."

1. Bac. Abr., vol. 9, Stat. (I) 9; 1 Bl. Com. 88; Rex v. Harvey, 1 Wils. 164; Fletcher v. Lord Sondes, 3 Bing. 580; Jenkinson v. Thomas, 4 T. R. 665; Martin v. Ford, 5 T. R. 101; Cone v. Bowles, 1 Salk. 205; Warne v. Varley, 6 T. R. 443; Rex v. Handy, 6 T. R. 286; Graff v. Evans, 8 Q. B. Div. 377; Walton v. State, 62 Ala. 197; Huffman v.

State, 29 Ala. 40; Crosby v. Hawthorn, 25 Ala. 221; Grooms v. Hannon, 59 Ala. 510; Brooks v. State, 88 Ala. 122; State v. Graham, 38 Ark. 519; Anthony v. Manlove, 53 Ark. 423; Brooks v. Western Union Tel. Co., 56 Ark. 224; Ex parte McNulty, 77 Cal. 164; 11 Am. St. Rep. 257; Brooks v. People, 14 Colo. 413; Holland v. State, 34 Ga. 455; Atlanta v. White, 33 Ga. 229; U. S. v. Athens Armory, 35 Ga. 344; Southwestern R. Co. v. Cohen, 49 Ga. 627; Renfroe v. Colquitt, 74 Ga. 619; State v. Lovell, 23 Iowa 304; Hanks v. Brown, 79 Iowa 560; People v. Peacock, 98 Ill. 172; Woolverton v. Taylor, 132 Ill. 197; 22 Am. St. Rep. 521; Hankins v. People, 106 Ill. 628; Steel v. State, 26 Ind. 82; State v. Coffing, 3 Ind. App. 304; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Steele, 108 Ind. 163; Sondheim v. Gilbert, 117 Ind. 71; 10 Am. St. Rep. 23; Simms v. Bean, 10 La. Ann. 346; State v. Whetstone, 13 La. Ann. 376; State v. McCrystol, 43 La. Ann. 907; State v. Glaudi, 43 La. Ann. 914; Pierce's Case, 16 Me. 255; State v. Archer, 73 Md. 44; Com. v. Loring, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Com. v. Fisher, 17 Mass. 49; Shaw v. Clark, 49 Mich. 384; 43 Am. Dec. 474; Van Buren v. Wylie, 56 Mich. 501; People v. Gadway, 61 Mich. 285; 1 Am. St. Rep. 578; State v. Walsh, 43 Minn. 444; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 623; Merrill v. Mechior, 30 Miss. 516; Foote v. Vanzandt, 34 Miss. 40; Haynie v. State, 32 Miss. 400; State v. Williams, 35 Mo. App. 541; Pacific v. Seifert, 79 Mo. 210; Lair v. Killmer, 25 N. J. L. 522; Wilson v. Wentworth, 25 N. H. 247; Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; Dewey v. Goodenough, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 54; Foster v. Rhoads, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 191; In re Baker, 29 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 485; People v. Masonic Guild, etc., Ben. Assoc. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 806; Hines v. Wilmington R. Co., 95 N. Car. 434; Hall v. State, 20 Ohio 7; Ramsey v. Toy, 10 Ohio 493; Horner v. State, 1 Oregon 267; Mayor v. Davis, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 269; Gallagher v. Neal, 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 183; Warner v. Com., 1 Pa. St. 154; 44 Am. Dec. 114; Bucher v. Com., 103 Pa. St. 528; State v. Solomons, 3 Hill (S. Car.) 96; State v. Wilcox, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 278; Randolph v. State, 9 Tex. 521; Smith v. State, 17 Tex. 191; U. S. v. Hall, 6

siderable variety in the degree of strictness insisted upon by the courts.¹

It is the object of the construction of penal, as of all other statutes, to ascertain the true legislative intent; and while the courts will not, on the one hand, apply such statutes to cases

Cranch (U. S.) 171; U. S. v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 119; U. S. v. Starr, Hempst. (U. S.) 469; U. S. v. 1412 Gallons Distilled Spirits, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 428; U. S. v. Clayton, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 219; Schooner Enterprise, 1 Paine (U. S.) 32; Andrews v. U. S., 2 Story (U. S.) 202; Whitney v. Emmett, Baldw. (U. S.) 303; U. S. v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 76; U. S. v. Moulton, 5 Mason (U. S.) 537; American Fur Co. v. U. S., 2 Pet. (U. S.) 367; Schooner Harriet, 1 Story (U. S.) 251; U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 385; Schooner Industry, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 114; U. S. v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624; U. S. v. Huggett, 40 Fed. Rep. 636; In re McDonough, 49 Fed. Rep. 360; U. S. v. Garretson, 42 Fed. Rep. 22; U. S. v. Ellis, 51 Fed. Rep. 808.

1. In 1 Bl. Com. 88, it is said that the offense of stealing one horse was held not to be within the statute 1 Edw. VI, ch. 12, providing that those who were convicted of stealing horses should be deprived of the benefit of clergy. The annotator (Judge Cooley) remarks: "It would be universally conceded at the present day that any such decision would be unsound, and, indeed, absurd. It would be in the face of the cardinal rule of statutory construction, that the manifest intent of the legislature shall prevail. When the plural term is used, the single instance is comprehended unless a different intent is manifest." Citing Hassel's Case, Leach, Cro. Cas. 1. But in Jordt v. State, 31 Tex. 571, it was held that proof of the theft of a gelding would not sustain an indictment for stealing a horse. The court said: "The appellant in this case was indicted for stealing a horse. The proof showed that the property taken was a gelding, an animal which may be, like all eunuchs, of no sex. The criminal code provides that where words in the masculine gender are used in the penal statutes of the state, they shall include the feminine also. This does not come within the category of that general provision, for a gelding is neither the one nor the other."

In the old English decisions, the rigid strictness indicated by the case referred to by Blackstone is not always maintained. The statute of Marlebridge, ch. 24, against committing waste, although penal, was construed liberally. Hammond v. Webb, 10 Mod. 282.

It was held that an offender who had been guilty of arson was not entitled to benefit of clergy, notwithstanding it was not expressly taken away by any statute. Powtler's Case, 11 Coke 34.

Statute 25 Eliz. 3, made it treason for a servant to kill his master. A servant who had killed his master's wife was adjudged guilty of treason under the statute. Strange v. Croker, Plowd. 16.

Statutes 7 Hen. VII, ch. 1, & 3 Hen. VIII, ch. 1, declared it felony for a soldier to depart from his captain without license. It was held that a soldier who had so departed from one to whom he had been delivered to be brought to the seaside was guilty of felony. Soldier's Case, Cro. Car. 71.

So also, it was held that if the extending of a penal statute by an equitable construction were more advantageous than prejudicial to the majority of the people, it might, by the rules of law, be so extended. Platt v. Sheriffs of London, Plowd. 36; 10 Mod. 117.

But where a voter received money after an election for having voted for a particular candidate, but no agreement for any such payment was made before the election, it was held no offense within 2 Geo. II, ch. 24, § 7, although within the mischief to be remedied. Huntingtower v. Gardiner, 1 B. & C. 297; 8 E. C. L. 128.

It was made penal, by 14 & 15 Vict., ch. 105, § 3, to "personate any person entitled to vote." It was held that one who personated a dead man who would, if living, have been entitled to vote, could not be convicted under the statute. Whitely v. Chappell, L. R., 4 Q. B. 147.

An act declaring it larceny for the bailee to convert to his own use property delivered to him to be "carried for hire" does not include one to whom property is delivered for storage. State v. Stoller, 38 Iowa 321.

So 24 & 25 Vict., ch. 96, providing for the punishment of those who misapprowhich are not within the obvious meaning of the language employed by the legislature, even though they be within the mischief intended to be remedied,¹ they will not, on the other hand, apply the rule of strict construction with such technicality as to defeat the purpose of ascertaining the true meaning and intent.²

priate property intrusted to them "for safe custody," does not include an agent intrusted with money for investment on mortgage. Reg. v. Newman, 8 Q. B. Div. 706.

And where an attorney had raised a loan for his client on mortgage, and misappropriated a portion of the money before delivering it to the mortgagor, it was held that no offense had been committed under the statute. 24 & 25 Vict., ch. 96; Reg. v. Cooper, L. R., 2 C. C. 123.

1. Crosby v. Hawthorn, 25 Ala. 221; Parkinson v. State, 14 Md. 184; 74 Am. Dec. 522; Hanks v. Brown, 79 Iowa 560; State v. Coffing, 3 Ind. App. 304; Com. v. Loring, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 370; Reed v. Davis, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 514; State v. Finch, 37 Minn. 433; State v. Walsh, 43 Minn. 444; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 623; Ex parte Kohler, 74 Cal. 38; Butler v. Ricker, 6 Me. 268; U. S. v. Huggett, 40 Fed. Rep. 636; U. S. v. Garretson, 42 Fed. Rep. 22; U. S. v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 76; Connolly v. People, 42 Ill. App. 36; State v. Indiana, etc., R. Co. (Ind. 1892), 32 N. E. Rep. 817; Daggett v. State, 4 Conn. 61; 10 Am. Dec. 100.

In State v. Finch, 37 Minn. 433, the court said: "Before conduct, hitherto innocent, can be adjudged to have been criminal, the legislature must have defined the crime, and the act in question must clearly appear to be within the prohibitions or requirements of the statute, that being reasonably construed for the purpose of arriving at the legislative intention as it has been declared. It is not enough that the case may be within the apparent reason and policy of the legislation upon the subject, if the legislature has omitted to include it within the terms of its enactments. What the legislature has from inadvertence or otherwise omitted to include within the express provisions of a penal law, reasonably construed, the courts cannot supply."

In U. S. v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 76, Marshall, C. J., said: "The rule that penal laws are to be construed strictly, is perhaps not much less old than construction itself. It is founded on the tenderness of the law for the rights of individuals; and on the plain principle that the power of punishment is vested in the legislative, not in the judicial department. It is the legislature, not the court, which is to define a crime, and ordain its punishment. It is said, that notwithstanding this rule, the intention of the law-maker must govern in the construction of penal, as well as other statutes. This is true. But this is not a new independent rule which subverts the old. It is a modification of the ancient maxim, and amounts to this, that though penal laws are to be construed strictly, they are not to be construed so strictly as to defeat the obvious intention of the legislature. The maxim is not to be so applied as to narrow the words of the statute to the exclusion of cases which those words, in their ordinary acceptation, or in that sense in which the legislature has obviously used them, would comprehend. The intention of the legislature is to be collected from the words they employ. Where there is no ambiguity in the words, there is no room for construction. The case must be a strong one indeed, which would justify a court in departing from the plain meaning of words, especially in a penal act, in search of an intention which the words themselves did not suggest. To determine that a case is within the intention of a statute, its language must authorize us to say so. It would be dangerous, indeed, to carry the principle, that a case which is within the reason or mischief of a statute, is within its provisions, so far as to punish a crime not enumerated in the statute, because it is of equal atrocity, or of kindred character, with those which are enumerated. If this principle has ever been recognized in expounding criminal law, it has been in cases of considerable irritation, which it would be unsafe to consider as precedents forming a general rule for other cases."

2. U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 395; U. S. v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624; State v. McCrystol, 43 La. Ann. 907; State v. Glaudi, 43 La. Ann. 914; State v. Archer, 73 Md. 44; Indianapolis v.

The rule under consideration applies not only to statutes relating to criminal offenses, but also to all statutes which impose, as punishment, any penalties, pecuniary or otherwise, or forfeitures of money or other property or of vested rights, or provide for the recovery of damages beyond just compensation to the party injured, whether such penalties, forfeitures, or damages are to be enforced and recovered at the suit of the state or a private individual.¹

Huegele, 115 Ind. 581; State v. Godfrey, 97 N. Car. 507.

In U. S. v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 395, Swayne, J., said: "We are not unmindful that penal laws are to be construed strictly. It is said that this rule is almost as old as construction itself. But whenever invoked it comes attended with qualifications and other rules no less important. It is by the light which each contributes that the judgment of the court is to be made up. The object in construing penal, as well as other statutes, is to ascertain the legislative intent. That constitutes the law. If the language be clear it is conclusive. There can be no construction where there is nothing to construe. The words must not be narrowed to the exclusion of what the legislature intended to embrace; but that intention must be gathered from the words, and they must be such as to leave no room for a reasonable doubt upon the subject. It must not be defeated by a forced and overstrict construction. The rule does not exclude the application of common sense to the terms made use of in the act, in order to avoid an absurdity which the legislature ought not to be presumed to have intended. When the words are general and include various classes of persons, there is no authority which would justify a court in restricting them to one class and excluding others, where the purpose of the statute is alike applicable to all. The proper course in all cases is to adopt that sense of the words which best harmonizes with the context and promotes, in the fullest manner, the policy and objects of the legislature. The rule of strict construction is not violated by permitting the words of the statute to have their full meaning, or the more extended of two meanings, as the wider popular instead of the more narrow technical one; but the words should be taken in such a sense, bent neither one way nor the other, as will best manifest the legislative intent."

In State v. McCrystal, 43 La. Ann.

907, the court said: "We admit the cardinal rule that penal statutes are to be strictly construed and are not to be extended to cases not included within the clear and obvious import of their language; but this rule is not to be applied with such unreasonable and technical strictness as to defeat the very purpose of all rules of construction, which is to ascertain the true meaning and intent of the statute. We are not to invent doubts or magnify quibbles, but are diligently to seek the legislative intent, as expressed in the words of the statute, aided by all other rules of interpretation, and when satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt of what that intent really is, it is our duty to apply and enforce it."

1. Henderson v. Sherborne, 2 M. & W. 236; Nicholson v. Fields, 7 H. & N. 810; Fletcher v. Hudson, 51 L. J. Q. B. 48; Gorton v. Champneys, 1 Bing. 287; Grooms v. Hannon, 59 Ala. 510; Brooks v. Western Union Tel. Co., 56 Ark. 224; White v. Steam Tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462; Ex parte Kohler, 74 Cal. 38; Renfro v. Colquitt, 74 Ga. 618; Hanks v. Brown, 79 Iowa 560; Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; Palmer v. York Bank, 18 Me. 166; 36 Am. Dec. 710; Abbott v. Wood, 22 Me. 541; Cumberland, etc., Canal Corp v. Hitchings, 57 Me. 146; Cole v. Groves, 134 Mass. 471; Read v. Stewart, 129 Mass. 407; Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 96; 23 Am. Dec. 662; Reed v. Davis, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 513; Suffolk Bank v. Worcester Bank, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 106; Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 Mich. 217; Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390; St. Louis v. Goebel, 32 Mo. 295; Maxwell v. Rives, 11 Nev. 213; Aechternacht v. Watmough, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 162; Marston v. Tryon, 108 Pa. St. 270; Titusville's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 600; Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119; Bayard v. Smith, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 88; Merchants' Bank v. Bliss, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 225; 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 365; Sickles v. Sharp, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 497; Allen v. Stevens,

It has been held that statutes which are both penal and remedial are to be construed strictly, in so far as they inflict punishment upon offenders, but that in their remedial features they are to be liberally and beneficially construed.¹ But the courts do not 29 N. J. L. 509; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. L. 623; Shotwell v. Demman, 1 N. J. L. 174; Allaire v. Howell Works Co., 14 N. J. L. 21; Stone v. Lannon, 6 Wis. 497; Cohn v. Neeves, 40 Wis. 393; Schooner Bolina, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 75; Farmers', etc., Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29.

A statute imposing penalties on railroad companies for discriminations in freight rates is penal within the rule. Hines v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 95 N. Car. 434. So also is a statute prescribing a forfeiture for usury.

In Coble v. Schoffner, 75 N. Car. 42, the court said: "There is no question but that a statute prescribing a forfeiture of all interest is a penal statute, and is to be construed strictly. It cannot be construed by implication, or otherwise than by the express letter. It cannot be extended, by even an equitable construction, beyond the plain import of its language." Citing Smithwick v. Williams, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 268; State v. Knight, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 267.

A statute authorizing a judgment for double damages is penal within the rule, and its repeal after verdict and before judgment takes away the right to such recovery. Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390.

A statute imposing a penalty on an officer who shall demand and take excessive fees is penal. Aechternacht v. Watmough, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 162, correcting a dictum to the contrary in Jackson v. Purdue, 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 523.

A statute imposing interest at 12 per cent. on overdue taxes is penal, and such interest can be collected only from the date of notice and demand. Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119; citing Easton Bank v. Com., 10 Pa. St. 451.

A statute authorizing the recovery of a penalty for failure to satisfy a judgment of record, after payment thereof, within a certain time after a request to do so, is penal, and a request made to the attorney of record is not sufficient. It must be shown that a personal request was made to the judgment creditor. Marston v. Tryon, 108 Pa. St. 270.

A statute authorizing a third person to recover from the winner treble the amount of money won at gambling is penal within the rule. Cole v. Groves, 134 Mass. 471.

A statute authorizing the recovery of treble damages for the conversion of logs or lumber is penal and must be construed strictly. Cohn v. Neeves, 40 Wis. 393.

So also a statute making void gambling contracts, cannot be so extended as to work a forfeiture of rights acquired by contracts not within the letter of the statute. Hanks v. Brown, 79 Iowa 560.

An act authorizing the recovery of a penalty for leaving open a swinging gate across a private or by-road is penal and should be construed strictly. Allen v. Stevens, 29 N. J. L. 509.

An act imposing a penalty on a telegraph company for refusing to "transmit over its wires to localities on its line" any message tendered for transmission, is penal, and will not be construed to impose a penalty for refusing to deliver a message after it has been transmitted. Brooks v. Western Union Tel. Co., 56 Ark. 224.

An act authorizing the recovery of a penalty from a mortgagee for a failure or refusal to satisfy a mortgage after payment of the amount secured thereby, is penal, and it was held that it did not authorize the institution of a suit against the assignee of the mortgagee. Grooms v. Hannon, 59 Ala. 510, citing Fairley v. Davis, 6 Ala. 375; Russell v. Irby, 14 Ala. 131; Jones v. Brooks, 30 Ala. 588; Connolly v. Alabama, etc., Rivers R. Co., 29 Ala. 373.

Statutes which require formalities in the making and execution of contracts on pain of invalidity, are in a sense penal, and should be construed strictly so as to give to contracting parties as much freedom as is consistent with the positive provisions of the law. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, p. 657, et seq.

1. Gorton v. Champneys, 1 Bing. 301; Short v. Hubbard, 2 Bing. 349; 9 E. C. L. 429; 2 Bing. 445; 9 E. C. L. 474; Bones v. Booth, 2 W. Bl. 1226; Cumming v. Fryer, Dudley (Ga.) 182.

In Short v. Hubbard, 2 Bing. 349; 9 E. C. L. 429, Best, C. J., said: "The twenty-third section of 11 Geo. II, is remedial, and we are authorized by the rules for construing statutes in putting always adhere strictly to this rule. Many remedial statutes have been construed liberally throughout, notwithstanding the imposition of penalties for their violation, on the ground that their primary object was redress and not punishment.¹

It has been held that penal laws should not be extended to new things which were not in being at the time of their passage, nor to offenses created and defined by subsequent statutes.² But upon it a liberal construction. The twenty-second section is penal, and according to the same rules it has been construed strictly as appears from the cases to which we have been referred. But there is no impropriety in putting a strict construction on a penal clause and a liberal construction on a remedial clause in the same act of Parliament. This has been done on the statutes which make it felony to burn houses and other property, and give those who suffer from the felony a remedy against the hundred."

In 1 Bl. Com, p. 88, it is said: "Statutes against frauds are to be liberally and beneficially expounded. This may seem a contradiction to the last rule; most statutes against frauds being in their consequences penal. But this difference is here to be taken: where the statute acts upon the offender and inflicts a penalty, as the pillory or a fine, it is then to be taken strictly; but when the statute acts upon the offense, by setting aside the fraudulent transaction, here it is to be construed liberally."

In Gorton v. Champneys, 1 Bing. 287, 301, Park, J., quoted the language of Blackstone with approval and applied it to the case at bar.

1. Carey v. Giles, 9 Ga. 253; Ellis v. Whitlock, 10 Mo. 781; Sickles v. Sharp, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 497; Gray v. Bennett, 3 Met. (Mass.) 522; Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 94; 23 Am. Dec. 662; Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price 301; Taylor v. U. S., 3 How. (U. S.) 197.

In Gray v. Bennett, 3 Met. (Mass.) 522, which was a bill in equity brought by the assignee of an insolvent debtor to recover treble the amount of usurious interest paid by the insolvent to the defendant, the statute authorizing such recovery was held remedial and entitled to liberal construction. The court, after reviewing the history of such legislation in Massachusetts, said: "Admitting, then, as the fact was, that the original statutes were clearly penal, the present law while it is penal to some extent in its consequences is in fact so modified that it may be said to be adopted into the family of remedial statutes, and though a brother of the half blood is nevertheless entitled to its share of the inheritance, or, in other words, has the like privilege of a liberal construction with those statutes which are wholly remedial. . . . Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price 301, was an action of debt founded upon the statute of 11 Geo. II, ch. 19, against the defendant for assisting a tenant of the plaintiff in fraudulently removing property from demised premises to prevent the plaintiff from distraining them for arrears of rent, for which injury, double the value of the goods removed is given by the statute. . . . The court held that the statute was purely and entirely remedial, providing for giving double the value for the aggravation of the injury done to the landlord by the wrongful removal and concealment of the property; and this also where the action was not against the tenant. In a case arising in this commonwealth, Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 94; 23 Am. Dec. 662, which was an action on the statute 1786, ch. 81, to recover double damages for an injury to the plaintiff caused by a defect in a highway, the court in giving judgment say: 'We think the action is purely remedial and has none of the characteristics of a penal transaction. All damages for the neglect or breach of duty operate to a certain extent as punishment, but the distinction is that it is prosecuted for the purpose of punishment and to deter others from offending in like manner. Here the plaintiff set out the liability of the town to repair and an injury to himself from a failure to perform that duty. The law gives him enhanced damages; but still they are recoverable to his own use and in form and substance the suit calls for indemnity.'" See infra, this title, Liberal Construction.

2. Reg. v. Smith, L. R., 1 C. C. 266; Fost. Cr. L., p. 373; Wells v. Porter, 3 Scott 141; 2 Bing. N. Cas. 722; 29 E. C. L. 469; Oakley v. Rigby, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 732; 3 Scott 194; 29 E. C. L. 469;

if the new thing or new offense is a species of a genus which was known to the common law, or was the subject of former legislation, it may come within the punitive sanctions of the common law or former statute law.¹

Elsworth v. Cole, 2 M. & W. 31; Robson v. Fallows, 4 Scott 43; 3 Bing. N. Cas. 392; 32 E. C. L. 173; Hewitt v. Price, 5 Scott N. R. 229; 4 M. & G. 355; 43 E. C. L. 188; Williams v. Tyre, 18 Beav. 366; Com. v. Wells, 110 Pa. St. 463; Com. v. Howe, 144 Mass. 144.

In Reg. v. Smith, L. R., 1 C. C. 266, it appeared that statute 24 and 25 Vict., ch. 96, § 91, enacted that whosoever should receive any chattel, the stealing or taking whereof should amount to felony, either at common law or by virtue of that act, knowing the same to have been feloniously stolen or taken, should be guilty of felony. 31 and 32 Vict., ch. 116, § 1, enacts that if any person being a member of any co-partnership, shall steal or embezzle any money or goods of or belonging to such co-partnership, every such person shall be liable to be dealt with, tried, convicted, and punished for the same as if such person had not been or was not a member of such co-partnership. It was held not an offense under the former act to receive goods stolen from a firm by one of the co-partners knowing them to have been stolen, although the stealing is made a felony by the latter act. Bovill, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, after referring to the rule against extending penal enactments by construction, said: "This latter rule may be illustrated by reference to the Stat. 31 Eliz., ch. 12, § 5, which took away clergy from an accessory in horse stealing, upon which it was held that the enactment extended only to such persons as were in judgment of law accessories at the time the act was made; viz., accessories at common law, and not to such as were made accessories by subsequent statute; and, therefore, a person knowingly receiving a stolen horse, though made an accessory by subsequent statutes, was held not to be ousted of clergy by the statute of Eliz. Fost. Crown Law, p. 372. Upon these grounds, we think the statute 24 and 25 Vict., ch. 96, § 91, cannot be extended by construction so as to include a receiver of property stolen by a partner so as to make such receiver liable in the discretion of the court to the graver punishment of fourteen years' penal servitude thereby imposed, as the prisoner would be, if this conviction were sustained, a circumstance which makes the authorities cited from Foster specially applicable."

The stock jobbing act declared void all such contracts in "any public or joint stock or other public securities whatsoever." It was held not to apply to foreign securities which were not dealt in at the time of its enactment. Wells v. Porter, 3 Scott 141; 2 Bing. N. Cas. 722; 29 E. C. L. 469; Oakley v. Rigby, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 732; 3 Scott 194; 29 E. C. L. 469; Elsworth v. Cole, 2 M. & W. 31; Robson v. Fallows, 4 Scott 43; 3 Bing. N. Cas. 392; 32 E. C. L. 173; Morgan v. Pebrer, 4 Scott 230; 3 Bing. N. Cas. 457; 32 E. C. L. 202. Or to contracts for the sale of railway shares which were not in existence at the time of its enactment. Hewitt v. Price, 5 Scott N. R. 229; 4 M. & G. 355; 43 E. C. L. 188; Williams v. Tyre, 18 Beav. 366; 18 Jur. 442.

In Com. v. Wells, 110 Pa. St. 463, it was held that a wager upon the result of a primary election was not a penal offense within the provisions of the acts of March 24, 1817, and July 2, 1839, on the ground that these acts being penal in their nature would not be extended to primary elections which did not exist at the time of the passage of the same.

In Com. v. Howe, 144 Mass. 144, it is held that Public Statutes, ch. 7, § 57, providing for the punishment of any one who should at any national, state, or municipal election knowingly cast more than one ballot at one time of balloting, did not apply to ballots given at a municipal election of the state upon the question of granting licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

1. Collier v. Worth, 1 Exch. Div. 464; Reg. v. Cottle, 16 Q. B. 412; Milton v. Faversham, 10 B. & S. 548; Atty. Gen'l v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 378; Atty. Gen'l v. Saggars, 1 Price 182; Gambart v. Ball, 14 C. B. N. S. 306; 108 E. C. L. 305; Graves v. Ashford, L. R., 2 C. P. 410; Taylor v. Goodwin, 4 Q. B. Div. 228; Parkyn v. Priest, 7 Q. B. Div. 313.

In Reg. v. Smith, L. R., 1 C. C. 266, Bovill, C. J., said: "The subject of extending statutes by inference to include

Where the penal clause is less comprehensive than the body of the act, the courts will not extend the penalties provided therein to classes of persons or things not embraced within the penal clause, even where there is a manifest omission or oversight on the part of the legislature.¹

cases not originally contemplated is one which has given rise to several decisions, the leading characteristic of which is that the earlier statute deals with a genus within which a new species is brought by a subsequent act. Thus, choses in action were not originally within 13 Eliz., ch. 5, against fraudulent conveyance; that statute being applicable only to property which could be taken in execution. Sims v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & El. 536; 40 E. C. L. 117. But as to the choses in action made subject to execution by 1 & 2 Vict., ch. 110, there can be no doubt that by the conjoint operation of that act and the 13 Eliz., ch. 5, such choses in action having become by new enactment a species of the genus property subject to execution, did, without any express exactment to that effect in the latter statute, become subject to the operation of the former act. Norcutt v. Dodd, Cr. & Ph. 100; Barrack v. McCulloch, 3 K. & J. 110."

In Gambart v. Ball, 14 C. B. N. S. 306; 108 E. C. L. 305, and Graves v. Ashford, L. R., 2 C. P. 410, it was held that the piracy of a picture or engraving by the process of photography was within the statutes of 8 Geo. II, ch. 13, 7 Geo. III, ch. 38, and 17 Geo. III, ch. 57, for the protection of artists and engravers, although the art of photography was not known at the time of their enactment.

In Collier v. Worth, 1 Exch. Div. 464, it appears that by a local act of 1822, no person was allowed to sell fish within the town of R., except in the market place thereof, and that any person offending against this provision should forfeit a sum of money. In 1876, the respondent sold fish on M. street, which was then a main thoroughfare of the town of R., but in 1822 was a green field. It was held that the word town as used in the act meant the collection of buildings from time to time called the town of R., and that the respondent had been guilty of an offense against the act.

In Taylor v. Goodwin, 4 Q. B. Div. 228, an information had been preferred by a police inspector against the appellant for furiously driving a carriage on the highway. It appeared that the appellant had been riding a bicycle on the highway at a furious pace on the occasion in question. It was held that a bicycle was a carriage within the provision of an act preventing such driving.

And in Parkyns v. Priest, 7 Q. B. Div. 313, the appellant was the inventor and owner of a tricycle on which he rode on the highway. He was arrested for a violation of the act regulating the operation of locomotives on the highway. It appeared that there was a contrivance by which the tricycle might be propelled by steam. It was held that the tricycle was a locomotive within the meaning of the act, although it had not been invented at the passage of the act.

1. Coe v. Lawrence, 1 El. & Bl. 516; 72 E. C. L. 516; Thomas v. Stephenson, 2 El. & Bl. 108; 75 E. C. L. 107; Underhill v. Longridge, 29 L. J. M. C. 65; Ex parte National Mercantile Bank, 15 Ch. Div. 42; Broadhead v. Holdsworth, 2 Exch. Div. 321; Southwestern R. Co. v. Cohen, 49 Ga. 627; Brooks v. State, 88 Ala. 122; U. S. v. Ten Cases of Shawls, 2 Paine (U. S.) 162.

In Thomas v. Stephenson, 2 El. & Bl. 108; 75 E. C. L. 107, it appeared that under Statute 5 & 6 Wm. IV, ch. 63, § 28, an inspector is authorized at all reasonable times to enter any shop, and there to examine all weights and measures, steelyards, or other weighing machines, and "if, upon examination, it shall appear that the said weights and measures are light or otherwise unjust, the same shall be seized and forfeited, and the person or persons in whose possession the same shall be found, shall, upon condiction, forfeit a sum not exceeding £10." It was held that under this provision the inspector was not given authority to seize any weighing machine, although found to be unjust, but only weights and measures.

In Broadhead v. Holdsworth, 2 Ex. Div. 321, it appears that the Vaccination Act of 1871, § 7, provides that every certificate of a child being unfit for or insusceptible of successful vaccination shall be transmitted to the vaccination officer under a penalty on failure to do so. It was held that a parent who had a certificate that the child had already had smallpox and who had failed to forward it to the vaccination officer was not liable under the statute. In Southwestern R. Co. v. Cohen, 49 Ga. 627, it was held that a statute providing for the inspection of weights and measures, and providing penalties against those who sold by weights not inspected and marked, did not apply to those who bought by such weights.

(3) In Derogation of Common Right.—All statutes which encroach on the personal or property rights of the individual are to be construed strictly.¹ In this class are embraced all statutes which work a forfeiture or confiscation of the private property of a particular person or of a particular class of persons,² and acts

In Brooks v. State, 88 Ala. 122, it appears that the penal clause of the statute regulating the practice of medicine in the state of Alabama, is much less comprehensive than the civil provisions in the act regulating such practice, and it was held that the penalties provided by the statute could not be imposed upon any who were not clearly within the provisions of the penal clause.

But in Williams v. Evans, 1 Exch. Div. 277, it appears that the Highway Act, 5 & 2 Wm. VI, ch. 50, provides that any person who, riding a horse or beast or driving any sort of carriage, shall ride or drive the same furiously so as to injure the life or limb of any passenger, every person so offending, being convicted of such offense before any two justices of the peace, shall for every such offense forfeit any sum not exceeding £5, in case such driver shall not be the owner of such wagon, cart, or other carriage, and in case the offender be the owner of such wagon, cart, or other carriage, then any sum not exceeding £10. The appellant was convicted by justices, of furiously riding on the back of a horse along the highway, and the penalty of one pound was imposed. It was held that although the word "rider" was not mentioned in the penal clause of the section, the justices had jurisdiction to convict the appellant, and the respondent was entitled to the judgment of the court.

1. Wells v. London, etc., R. Co., 5 Ch. Div. 126; In re Lundy Granite Co., L. R., 6 Ch. 462; Ex parte Jones, 10 Ch. App. 663; Ex parte Sheil, 4 Ch. Div. 789; Randolph v. Milman, L. R., 4 C. P. 107; Green v. Reg., 1 App. Cas. 513; Harrod v. Worship, 1 B. & S. 381;

101 E. C. L. 380; Yarmouth v. Simmons, 10 Ch. Div. 518; Hughes v. Chester, etc., R. Co., 21 L. J. Ch. 97; Booth v. State, 4 Conn. 65; Tuttle v. State, 4 Conn. 68; Richardson v. Emswiler, 14 La. Ann. 668; Pelham v. Steamboat Messenger, 16 La. Ann. 99; Webb v. Baird, 6 Ind. 13; Doe v. Avaline, 8 Ind. 6; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Kinney, 8 Ind. 402; Gunter v. Leckey, 30 Ala. 591; Pinkham v. Dorothy, 55 Me. 135; Mitchell v. Rockland, 45 Me. 496; Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194; 48 Am. Dec. 248; Savannah v. Hartridge, 8 Ga. 23; Young v. McKenzie, 3 Ga. 40; Rothgerber v. Dupuy, 64 Ill. 452; Walker v. Chicago, 56 Ill. 277; McAfee v. Southern R. Co., 36 Miss. 669; Smith v. Spooner, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 229; Sewell v. Jones, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 412; Com. v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. (Mass.) 55; Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 140; Melody v. Reab, 4 Mass. 473; Danvers v. Boston, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 513; Billerica v. Chelmsford, 10 Mass. 394; Monson v. Chester, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 385; Sprague v. Birdsall, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 419; Ramsay v. Gould, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 398; Port-wardens v. Cartwright, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 236; Marsh v. Nelson, 101 Pa. St. 51; Stewart v. Com., 10 Watts (Pa.) 307; Morris v. Balderston, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 459; McGlade's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 338; Palairat v. Snyder, 106 Pa. St. 227; Brady v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 11 Mich. 451; Harrison v. Leach, 4 W. Va. 383; Harrison v. Smith, 4 W. Va. 97; Pendleton v. Barton, 4 W. Va. 496; Coleman v. Hart, 37 Wis. 180; Strong v. Birchard, 5 Conn. 357; Chalker v. Chalker, 1 Conn. 79; 6 Am. Dec. 206; Johnson v. Stanley, 1 Root (Conn.) 245.

2. Russell v. Transylvania University, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 432; U. S. v. Athens Armory, 35 Ga. 344; 2 Abb. (U. S.) 129; Wells v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 5 Ch. Div. 126; In re Lundy Granite Co., L. R., 6 Ch. 467; Ex parte Jones, 10 Ch. App. 665; Randolph v. Milman, L. R., 4 C. P. 107; Ex parte Sheil, 4 Ch. Div. 789; Polk v. The J. W. French, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 429; U. S. v. La Coste, 2 Mason (U. S.) 129.

In Wells v. London, etc., R. Co., 5 which authorize the impressment of private property for public use in case of pestilence or war.¹

Ch. Div. 126, an act of Parliament obtained by the company reciting that it was expedient that the rights of way in respect to certain footways which crossed the railway on the level should be extinguished, and enacting that all rights of way in, over, or affecting the footways numbered 2, 4, 5, 6 and 7 on the deposited plan should be extinguished, no provision for compensation being made, was before the court for construction. The right of way in question was marked "roadway and footway." It was held that the act extinguishing the rights to a footway would not include also that of a roadway. Bramwell, J. A., said: "I agree that we ought to construe this act of Parliament according to the fair meaning of the words even supposing the true construction of the act does an injustice to the party. But we may well approach the construction of an act of Parliament of this kind in the belief that it was not intended to confiscate a private right, for this would be a simple case of confiscation, and we are not to suppose that this was intended by the legislature or sought for by the railway company. The statute recites that it is expedient that the rights of way therein mentioned should be extinguished, but it certainly is not expedient that a private right should be taken away without making compensation."

In Ex parte Jones, 10 Ch. App. 663, it appears that a creditor sued out a writ of fiery facias and delivered it to the sheriff. Earlier in the same day the debtor filed a petition for liquidation or composition, and obtained an injunction restraining the proceedings in the execution. At the first meeting of the creditors a resolution was passed to accept the composition. The injunction was subsequently dissolved by the chief judge, and on appeal his decision was affirmed. James, L. J., said: "I am of opinion that the decision of the chief judge was quite right. In order to take away a legal right from anybody, it is necessary to show express words in the act, or clear implication. In this case, the respondents have by due process of law obtained a security on all the goods which the sheriff could seize. That was their legal right and they have it still, unless it can be shown to have been taken away from them. If the petition had resulted in a bankruptcy or a liquidation, no doubt their right would have been lost, because the goods would have been not the goods of the debtor, but the goods of the trustee. But in a composition the goods of the debtor do not cease to be his goods, that is of the essence of the composition."

In Ex parte Sheil, 4 Ch. Div. 789, an act of 1865, the Partnership Law Amendment Act, was before the court. The act provided that advances of money by way of loans to a person engaged or about to engage in any trade or undertaking, upon a contract in writing with such person, that the lender shall receive a rate of interest varying with the profits, or shall receive a share of the profits arising from carrying on such trade or undertaking, shall not of itself constitute the lender a partner with the person or persons carrying on such trade or undertaking or render him responsible as such, but that in the event of any such trader as aforesaid being adjudged bankrupt, the lender of any such loan as aforesaid shall not be entitled to recover any portion of his principal or the profits or interest payable in respect to such loan until the claims of the other creditors of the said trader for valuable consideration in money or money's worth have been satisfied. It appeared that a loan was made to a trader at a rate of interest varying with the profits of his business, but the amount of the loan with interest was secured by a mortgage to the lender on the stock and good will of the trader's business. The trader became bankrupt, and it was sought to avoid the mortgage under the act above referred to. It was held that the enforcement of a mortgage lien was not a collection of the debt within the meaning of the statute, and that to deprive the mortgagee of this right would be a confiscation of property which would not be presumed, from the language of the act, to be authorized.

In Steamboat Ohio v. Stunt, 10 Ohio St. 582, it was held that a statute which authorized the seizure of one man's property for the payment of another's obligation must be construed strictly on the ground that such procedure was practically a confiscation.

1. In Pinkham v. Dorothy, 55 Me. 135, it was held that the right to im-

Statutes which prescribe the manner in which persons shall use their private property,¹ or restrict and regulate the disposition thereof,² are against common right, and must be construed strictly.

Statutes passed in the exercise of the police power of the state, restricting and regulating property rights³ or the pursuit of use-press property to be used for the taking care of persons infected with sickness dangerous to the public health could only be exercised when expressly granted.

In White v. Ivey, 34 Ga. 186, it was held that authority to impress private property to be used for a hospital in time of war may not be exercised unless expressly granted by legislative enactment.

1. Morris v. Balderston, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 459; Steil v. Sunderland, 6 H. & N. 796; Port-wardens v. Cartwright, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 236; Tyack v. Brumley, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 519. In Morris v. Balderston, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 459, it was held that a statute which provided that no lot of the width of sixteen feet or less should be incumbered with more than four and one-half inches of a brick party wall, would not be construed to include a lot sixteen feet and one-half inch in width.

Port-wardens v. Cartwright, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 236, was a suit instituted by the master and port-wardens of the port of New York against the defendants to recover a penalty alleged to have been incurred under an act of the legislature conferring upon the port-wardens of the city the exclusive power to make surveys of vessels deemed unfit to proceed to sea, and to judge of the repairs which might be necessary for the safety of such vessels on their intended voyage. It appeared that the defendants had put into port with a vessel in a damaged condition, and, before proceeding with the voyage, had employed a private person to examine and make survey of the vessel and determine the necessary repairs. It was held no offense within the statute. Paine, J., in his concurring opinion, said: "I acquiesce in the opinion of the court in this case and in the reasons upon which it is founded. Those reasons I understand to be that the statute upon which the plaintiffs sue is against common right, and is, therefore, to be construed strictly; and that the plaintiffs have not made out such a state of facts as entitled them to sue upon it."

2. Richardson v. Emswiler, 14 La. Ann. 668; Sewall v. Jones, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 412; McGlade's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 338; Palairer v. Snyder, 106 Pa. St. 227. In McGlade's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 338, it was held that a gift for charitable purposes made within one month of the decease of the donor was not within the statute providing that no estate, real or personal, should thereafter be bequeathed, devised or conveyed to any body politic, or to any person in trust for religious or charitable uses, except the same be done by deed or will attested by two credible and at the time disinterested witnesses at least one calendar month before the decease of the testator or alienor, and that all dispositions of property contrary thereto should be void and go to the residuary legatee or next of kin. In Sewall v. Jones, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 412, it was held that an act imposing a duty on sales by auction did not extend to leases by auction.

3. Booth v. State, 4 Conn. 65; Tuttle v. State, 4 Conn. 68; Brady v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 11 Mich. 425; Welch v. Stowell, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 332; Com. v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. (Mass.) 55; Com. v. Sylvester, 13 Allen (Mass.) 247; Austin v. Murray, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 121; Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315; 12 Am. Rep. 694; Louisville v. Webster, 108 Ill. 414; In re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98; 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377; 52 Am. Rep. 34; Waynehmer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; Port-wardens v. Cartwright, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 236; Walker v. Board of Public Works, 16 Ohio 540; Stewart v. Com., 10 Watts (Pa.) 306; McGlade's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 338; State v. Gilman, 33 W. Va. 146; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 137; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661; Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 36.

In Booth v. State, 4 Conn. 65, it appears that a building, erected originally for a meeting-house and subsequently used for a joiner's shop, was extensively repaired and converted into a dwelling house. It was held that such repairs ful occupations and callings¹ are to be construed strictly; as are also statutes in derogation of the personal rights of individuals.²

(4) In Derogation of Common Law.—Where a statute is inconsistent with the common law, the statute will prevail and the com-and alterations did not constitute the erection of a dwelling house within the statute to secure the city of New Haven from damage by fire.

And in Tuttle v. State, 4 Conn. 68, it appeared that a building was removed and extensively repaired, and an addition made thereto the same width, height, and slope of roof as the original. It was held that these acts did not constitute the erection of a building within the statute to secure the city of New Haven from damage by fire.

In Stewart v. Com., 10 Watts (Pa.) 306, which was an indictment charging the defendant with the erection of a wooden building within the city of Pittsburgh contrary to the ordinance, the jury found that he had erected a building composed partly of brick and partly of wood. It was held that the erection of such a building was not an offense within the ordinance.

But in Wadleigh v. Gilman, 12 Me. 403; 28 Am. Dec. 188, an ordinance prohibiting the erection of wooden buildings in the city of Bangor within certain limits was construed liberally; it being held that a removal of a wooden building to the inhabited district, or even from one part of such district to another, was within the meaning of the term erection used in the ordinance.

1. In Carberry v. People, 39 Ill. App. 506, it was held that an act requiring pharmacists to register and pay a fee, was in derogation of common right and must be strictly construed. And where a pharmacist who was entitled to registration paid his fee, he was entitled to proceed in his business until the expiration of the year, and could not be held liable in a criminal prosecution because of the delay of the board of pharmacists in issuing a certificate.

In Gunter v. Leckey, 30 Ala. 591, it was held that an act requiring a license to sell could not be extended to trading and bartering.

2. Pelham v. Steamboat Messenger, 16 La. Ann. 99; Smith v. Spooner, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 229; Ash v. Abdy, 3 Swanst. 664; Ramsey v. Gould, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 398; Harrison v. Leach, 4 W. Va. 383; Harrison v. Smith, 4 W. Va. 97; Pendleton v. Barton, 4 W. Va. 496; Coleman v. Hart, 37 Wis. 180; Sprague

v. Birdsall, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 419; Webb v. Baird, 6 Ind. 13.

In Sprague v. Birdsall, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 419, it appears that the act to incorporate the Cayuga Bridge Company provides that it shall not be lawful for any person to cross the lake within three miles of the bridge without paying toll. It was held that embarking upon one side of the lake six miles from the bridge and crossing in such a direction as to leave the lake within sixty rods of the bridge on the other side, is not such crossing within the miles as was contemplated by the act. The act further provided that any person might pass with his own boat within three miles. It was held that any one might cross in his sleigh on the ice within the provisions of this proviso and according to the general intent of the act, which is that all persons who are compelled to resort to others to assist them in passing should cross the bridge.

In Harrison v. Leach, 4 W. Va. 383, it was held that the act requiring a test oath by suitors is in derogation of common right, and that a party who sought to avail himself of the provisions of the act ought to be held to state a case with the utmost precision, such as would be required in a plea in abatement, that is, certainty to a certain extent in every particular.

In Webb v. Baird, 6 Ind. 13, it was held that a statute requiring an attorney at law or other person to render gratuitous services in civil cases was against common right and would not be extended by construction so as to include criminal offenses.

In Coleman v. Hart, 37 Wis. 180, it was held that a law prohibiting a county treasurer or a county clerk or any of their deputies from purchasing directly or indirectly property sold for taxes at any tax sale, or to purchase any tax certificate or tax deed held by the county, except for and in behalf of the county, must be construed strictly, and would not prohibit the county treasurer or his deputy from purchasing a tax certificate from any other party than the county and having a deed issued to him thereon.

In Smith v. Spooner, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 229, it was held that an act avoiding mon law must give way; but this will result only from the express language of the statute or from necessary implication; for it is a well-established rule of construction that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly.¹

every gift, bargain, sale, or transfer of any real or personal estate made by a spendthrift after the complaint of the selectmen to the judge of probate and the order of notice thereon in case a guardian was afterwards appointed to the spendthrift, did not apply to promissory notes. But see Manson v. Felton, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 206, where it is held that a spendthrift under guardianship is not competent to make a valid contract for the payment of money.

1. Sedgw. 271, note; Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 459; Newell v. Wheeler, 48 N. Y. 488; Burnside v. Whitney, 21 N. Y. 148; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601; Sharpe v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76; Gilbert v. Columbia Turnpike Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 107; Striker v. Kelly, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 323; Doughty v. Hope, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 249; Sherwood v. Reade, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 431; Sharpe v. Johnson, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 92; Smith v. Moffat, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 65; Graham v. Van Wyck, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 532; Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 157; 44 Am. Rep. 361; Bussing v. Bushnell, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 382; Rue v. Alter, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 119; Millered v. Lake Ontario, etc., R., 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 238; Manhattan Co. v. Laimbeer, 108 N. Y. 578; Dean v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 119 N. Y. 540; Lord v. Parker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 127; Melody v. Reab, 4 Mass. 471; Wilbur v. Crane, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 284; Gibson v. Jenney, 15 Mass. 205; Howes v. Newcomb, 146 Mass. 76; Haas v. Shaw, 91 Ind. 384; Taylor v. Garnett, 110 Ind. 287; Barnett v. Harshbarger, 105 Ind. 410; Cadwallader v. Harris, 76 Ill. 370; Schuyler County v. Mercer, 9 Ill. 20; Brown v. Fifield, 4 Mich. 322; Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. St. 293; Esterley's Appeal, 54 Pa. St. 192; McMullin v. McCreary, 54 Pa. St. 230; Dyson v. West, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 567; State v. Lash, 16 N. J. L. 380; 32 Am. Dec. 397; Bailey v. Bryan, 3 Jones (N. Car.) 357; 67 Am. Dec. 246; Lock v. Miller, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 13; Gunter v. Leckey, 30 Ala. 591; Hotaling v. Cronise, 2 Cal. 60; Bottomly v. Grace Church, 2 Cal. 90; Turner v. Tuolumne Co. Water Co., 25 Cal. 397;

Young v. McKenzie, 3 Ga. 31; Hemingway v. Scales, 42 Miss. 1; 97 Am. Dec. 425; 2 Am. Dec. 586; Hollman v. Bennett, 44 Miss. 322; Hays v. Miller, 1 Wash. Ter. 143; Harrison v. Leach, 4 W. Va. 383.

In Hollman v. Bennett, 44 Miss. 322, the court said: "The common law of England brought over by the colonists, so far as applicable to the new circumstances and conditions of the people and the country, and so far as not changed by statute, is the law of this state; and the courts will construe strictly laws in modification or derogation thereof, assuming that the legislature has, in the terms used, expressed all the change it intended to make in the old law, and will not, by construction or intendment, enlarge its operation."

In Pendleton v. Bank of Ky., 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 148, it was held that a joint action could not be maintained against the drawer and indorser of a foreign bill of exchange for the amount of the debt without interest and cost of protest, under a statute which provided that such action might be brought for the debt, interest and costs of protest, on the ground that the statute was in derogation of the common law and should be construed strictly. Citing Wilson v. Lenox, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 211; Johnson v. Bank of Ky., 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 119.

In Harrison v. Leach, 4 W. Va. 383, it was held that the suitor's test oath act which provided that the plaintiff must take a stated oath in certain cases or be liable to be non-suited, was in derogation of a common-law right, and could not be extended beyond its express terms.

A statute preventing a concurrent (remedy) action for the recovery of the mortgage debt, pending a foreclosure suit, is in derogation of the common law, and therefore should be strictly construed. Hays v. Miller, 1 Wash. Ter. 143.

In Miller v. Childriss, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 320, where a statute, giving the right to sureties to be discharged from a note or obligation upon refusal of the creditor, after notification, to sue the principal, provided that such notice should be in writing and proved by two

And the common law will be held to be no further abrogated than is expressly declared, or the clear import of the language used absolutely requires. The law rather presumes that the legislature did not intend to make any change other than what is specified and plainly pronounced.¹ And even the liberal construction of remedial statutes may be modified by this rule.²

As a rule, affirmative words without negative words do not annul the common law, but it is well established that a statute which treats of the whole of any subject-matter abrogates the common law on that subject, as a subsequent statute treating of the whole witnesses, it was held that the provisions of the statute should be strictly followed, as the act was in derogation of the common law.

Statutes in regard to chattel mortgages, upon compliance with which the mortgagor may retain possession of the property mortgaged, are in derogation of the common law, and are to be strictly construed. To be valid as to third parties, no provision of the act can be neglected. Crane v. Chandler, 5 Colo. 21; Porter v. Dement, 35 Ill. 478; Gassner v. Patterson, 23 Cal. 299; Dufficy v. Shields, 63 Cal. 332; Butte Hardware Co. v. Sullivan, 7 Mont. 312.

Statutes making the real estate of a deceased person liable for his debts are in derogation of the common-law rights of the heir, and should be construed strictly. Hollman v. Bennett, 44 Miss. 322; Dean v. Dean, 3 Mass. 258; Drinkwater v. Drinkwater, 4 Mass. 356; Mitchell v. Lunt, 4 Mass. 658.

So statutes giving administrators power over real estate are in derogation of the common law and are strictly construed. Jones v. Lamar, 34 Fed. Rep. 454.

Commercial Law.—In Louisiana this same rule of construction has been applied to the commercial law. In Crowell v. Van Bibber, 18 La. Ann. 637, it was held that laws in derogation of the commercial law should be strictly construed, and that a statute would not be construed as restraining this law without a clear expression of such purpose on the part of the legislature. See also State v. Whetstone, 13 La. Ann. 376.

1. 1 Kent's Com. 464; Ash v. Abdy, 3 Swanst. 664; Scaife v. Stovall, 67 Ala. 237; Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 37; Wilbur v. Crane, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 284; Keech v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 17 Md. 32; Hooper v. Baltimore, 12 Md. 464; Heiskell v. Baltimore, 65 Md. 125; Dean v. Metropoli- tan El. R. Co., 119 N. Y. 540; People v. Bristol, etc., Turnpike Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 222; Jackson v. Bradt, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 169; In re Heath, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 52; People v. Hall, 80 N. Y. 117; Manhattan Co. v. Lambeer, 108 N. Y. 578; Berley v. Rampacher, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 183; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 221; Howe v. Peckham, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 229; People v. Palmer, 109 N. Y. 110; 4 Am. St. Rep. 423; Tinsman v. Belvidere, etc., R. Co., 26 N. J. L. 148; 69 Am. Dec. 565; Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470; Mayo v. Wilson, 1 N. H. 55; Davis v. Com., 17 Gratt. (Va.) 617; Potter's Dwarris, 70-71-219; 2 Inst. 199; R. v. Moseley, 2 Burr. 1011; Rex v. Cumberland, 6 T. R. 194.

In Thompson v. Weller, 85 Ill. 197, the court said: "In the construction of statutes in derogation of the common law, courts cannot properly give force to the statute beyond what is expressed by its words or necessarily implied from what is expressed."

2. In Smith v. Moffat, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 65, the court said, in reference to a remedial statute which gave a landlord a summary remedy to recover possession, "The object of that statute was to remedy evils alluded to; and so far it is to be construed liberally to see that it carries out the purposes for which it was designed. But as the remedy was sought to be attained by a summary proceeding under the statute, which was in derogation of the common law, in that respect the statute is to be strictly construed."

In Webb v. Mullin, 78 Ala. 111, although it was held that the statute was remedial and should have a liberal construction, the court said: "But being in modification of the common law it will not be presumed to modify it further than is expressly declared; and construction and intendment will not be resorted to for the purpose of extending its operation."

subject-matter of a previous statute will be a virtual repeal of the previous statute.¹

Statutes changing the common law rules of evidence and the law concerning the competency of witnesses, should be construed strictly.²

Statutes conferring powers and rights upon married women are in derogation of the common law, and are to be construed strictly.³ And although these enabling statutes should be construed so as to effect the purpose and object of the legislature,

1. Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026; Rex v. Davis, 1 Leach C. C. 306; Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 37; Jennings v. Com., 17 Pick. (Mass.) 80; Com. v. Marshall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 350; 22 Am. Dec. 377; Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 537; 7 Am. Dec. 99; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Com. v. Evans, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 429; Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill (Md.) 138; 43 Am. Dec. 306; Leighton v. Walker, 9 N. H. 62; State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 41; Gilkey v. Cook, 60 Wis. 139.

In Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 37, the court said: "A statute is impliedly repealed by a subsequent one revising the whole subject-matter of the first. Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 545; 7 Am. Dec. 99; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; and in the case of a statute revising the common law, the implication is at least equally strong."

In State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 39, Green, C. J., said: "It is conceded that where a statute has varied the whole subject of the common law in regard to a particular crime, and has changed the character of the offense, or the nature or degree of punishment, that the statute must be regarded as a virtual repeal of the common law, because such must be presumed to have been the intention of the legislature. But unless such intent is manifest, the repeal by implication cannot be inferred."

2. Dyson v. West, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 567; Broadbent v. State, 7 Md. 416; Thistle v. Frostburg Coal Co., 10 Md. 129; Smith v. Randall, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 495; Hotaling v. Cronise, 2 Cal. 60; Sheetze v. Hanbest, 81 Pa. St. 100; Packer v. Noble, 103 Pa. St. 188; Dequasie v. Harris, 16 W. Va. 345; Warner v. Fowler, 8 Md. 25.

In Dewey v. Goodenough, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 54, the court said: "At common law the party could not be a witness for himself to prove any part of the issue, and the statute authorizing it is not to be extended in his behalf, beyond what it clearly imports."

So it is held that statutes compelling persons to give evidence against themselves must be strictly construed, and never be extended beyond the limits to which the strictest interpretation of the language of the legislature confines them. Broadbent v. State, 7 Md. 416.

An act permitting a party to prove his own accounts by oath or affirmation, being in derogation of the common law, must be construed strictly. Warner v. Fowler, 8 Md. 25.

Husband and Wife.—In Dwelly v. Dwelly, 46 Me. 377, where a statute provided that no person should be excused or excluded from being a witness in any civil suit or proceeding, at law or in equity, by reason of his interest in the event of the same, as party or otherwise, "except in certain cases set out," it was held that this act, being in derogation of the common law, should be construed strictly and not extended so as to remove the incompetence of husband and wife as witness for or against each other, for it could not be presumed that the legislature intended to abrogate the rule of the common law.

Jurors.—So statutes which permit the testimony of jurors to be introduced on a motion for a new trial, to show that the verdict was made by lot, are held to be strictly construed, as in derogation of the common law. Turner v. Tuolumne Co. Water Co., 25 Cal. 397. See Taylor v. Garnett, 110 Ind. 289.

3. Married Women's Acts.—Alexander v. Saulsbury, 37 Ala. 375; Perryman v. Greer, 39 Ala. 133; Canty v. Sanderford, 37 Ala. 91; Ashford v. Watkins, 70 Ala. 156; Warfield v. Rav-esies, 38 Ala. 518; Cook v. Meyer, 73 Ala. 580; Gibson v. Marquis, 29 Ala. 668; Graham v. Van Wyck, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 532; Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 19; Chambovet v. Cagney, 35 N. Y. Super. Ct. 474; Reynolds v. Robinson, 64 N. Y. 589; Bertles v.

yet they are not to be extended by construction, nor is the common law to be altered beyond what is plainly expressed or manifestly intended.¹

Nunan, 92 N. Y. 152; 44 Am. Rep. 361; Thompson v. Weller, 85 Ill. 197; Cunningham v. Hanney, 12 Ill. App. 437; Lord v. Parker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 128; Brown v. Fifield, 4 Mich. 322; Marburg v. Cole, 49 Md. 402; 33 Am. Rep. 266; Compton v. Pierson, 28 N. J. Eq. 229; Triplett v. Graham, 58 Iowa 135; Pettit v. Fretz, 33 Pa. St. 118; Quick v. Miller, 103 Pa. St. 67; Dorris v. Erwin, 101 Pa. St. 239; Longey v. Leach, 57 Vt. 377.

1. Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 19; Diver v. Diver, 56 Pa. St. 109; Bergey's Appeal, 60 Pa. St. 418; 100 Am. Dec. 578; Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285. Also Olive v. Walton, 33 Miss. 103.

In Haas v. Shaw, 91 Ind. 384. Howk, J., speaking of such statutes, said: "While the provisions of the act must be liberally construed according to their true intent and meaning, yet, as they are in derogation of the common-law rule, they are not to be enlarged by construction beyond the plain meaning of the language used by the law-making power in their enactment."

In Kelso v. Tabor, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 129, Potter, J., said: "These statutes in their creation of new powers and authorities are limited and confined to those powers which are expressed; or, in other words, they are not to be made, by construction, to extend to any object or purpose beyond that expressed."

An act which provided that the property of a married woman "shall be owned, used and enjoyed, etc., as if she were a feme sole," was held not to enable her to sell, incumber, or give it away without the consent of her husband. Pettit v. Fretz, 33 Pa. St. 118; Haines v. Ellis, 24 Pa. St. 255; Moore v. Cornell, 68 Pa. St. 320; Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285.

In Compton v. Pierson, 28 N. J. L. 229, it was held that the Married Woman's Act of 1852, which was intended to secure to married women during coverture the use of their real and personal property, did not confer upon them the right of testamentary disposition. Pentz v. Simonson, 13 N. J. Eq. 232; Naylor v. Field, 29 N. J. L. 287.

Contracts.—The power conferred on the wife to make contracts cannot be extended beyond the clear expression or necessary implication of the statute.

Cook v. Meyer, 73 Ala. 580; Carpenter v. Mitchell, 50 Ill. 471; Thompson v. Weller, 85 Ill. 197; Lord v. Parker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 128; Moore v. Cornell, 68 Pa. St. 320; Quick v. Miller, 103 Pa. St. 68; Dorris v. Erwin, 101 Pa. St. 245; Eckert v. Reuter, 33 N. J. L. 268.

So also in Yale v. Diederer, 18 N. Y. 265; 72 Am. Dec. 503, a statute, though it expressly authorized a married woman to hold, convey, and devise her real and personal property, was held not to remove her common-law incapacity to contract debts. Gardiner v. Gardiner, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 528; Colvin v. Currier, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 371.

In Jones v. Crosthwaite, 17 Iowa 393, it was held that the statute for the protection of married women, while it gave them the power to make contracts in reference to their own property by necessary implication, did not confer on them the right to contract in reference to other property.

Contracts Between Husband and Wife.

—While by statute the wife may make contracts in the same manner as if she were sole, the Massachusetts courts have not allowed the statute to be construed as removing the common-law incapacity so far as to allow the validity of contracts between husband and wife; but on the contrary, have repeatedly held that a promissory note or any other personal contract made between husband and wife is absolutely void. Ingham v. White, 4 Allen (Mass.) 412; Lord v. Parker, 3 Allen (Mass.) 127; Fowle v. Torrey, 135 Mass. 87; Bassett v. Bassett, 112 Mass. 99. And this same doctrine is held in other states. See Barnett v. Harshbarger, 105 Ind. 413; Savage v. O'Neil, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 374; Eckert v. Reuter, 33 N. J. L. 266. And statutes authorizing a married woman to convey and devise real and personal property will not be construed as abrogating the common law which forbids her conveying to her husband. White v. Wager, 25 N. Y. 328; Corn Exchange Ins. Co. v. Babcock, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 222; Winans v. Peebles, 32 N. Y. 423; Meeker v. Wright, 76 N. Y. 270; Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 19.

Liberally Construed.—In Michigan a very different rule prevails in the interpretation of these statutes. In DeVries v. Conklin, 22 Mich. 258, Cooley, J.,

And generally, the common-law incidents of marriage are swept away only by express enactment or necessary implication.¹

said: "We have construed this law liberally with a view to effectuate its general purpose. We have sustained contracts made by married women for the purchase of property on credit; though perhaps they might not come strictly within the terms of the statutes." Tillman v. Shackleton, 15 Mich. 447; 93 Am. Dec. 198.

And in White v. Zane, 10 Mich. 333, the court held the common law to be abolished by the Married Woman's Act of that state. See also Burdeno v. Amperse, 14 Mich. 97; 90 Am. Dec. 225; Tillman v. Shackleton, 15 Mich. 455; 93 Am. Dec. 198; Tong v. Marvin, 15 Mich. 60; Rankin v. West, 25 Mich. 195.

So in Kentucky in Hannon v. Madden, 10 Bush (Ky.) 664, the court held that the legislature intended their married woman's law as a substitute for the common law, and that it should be given a liberal construction to promote the object of its enactment. And in Iowa these statutes are given a liberal construction on the same ground. Kramer v. Rebman, 9 Iowa 144.

1. Neelly v. Lancaster, 47 Ark. 175; 58 Am. Rep. 752; Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 160; 44 Am. Rep. 361; Haines v. Ellis, 24 Pa. St. 255; Glover v. Alcott, 11 Mich. 470; Thompson v. Weller, 85 Ill. 197; Hays v. Hays, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 31.

The statute providing that the property of a married woman, . . . whether acquired before or after marriage, shall, notwithstanding her marriage, be and remain her sole and separate property, and may be used, collected and invested by her in her own name, and shall not be subject to the interference or control of her husband or liable for his debts, was held not to abolish the husband's right of curtesy. Neelly v. Lancaster, 47 Ark. 175; 58 Am. Rep. 752.

Suits.—In Fitzgerald v. Quann, 109 N. Y. 441, it was held that a provision of a statute declaring that a married woman may be sued in any of the courts of the state, and that a judgment recovered against her may be enforced by execution, does not assume to enact that the wife may sue alone in all cases—but when suable, e. i., in actions in reference to her separate estate, she may be sued in any of the courts.

In Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 19, Potter, J., said: "I shall feel bound to hold that the unity of a person created by the marriage contract between husband and wife, has been no further severed than the statutes in express terms or by necessary implication have effected that purpose." In this case it was held that statutes enfranchising married women would not be construed as conferring any new rights on the husband, such as power to sue his wife.

In Vankirk v. Skillman, 34 N. J. L. 114, it appears that an act provided "in all cases where a married woman transacts any business or purchases any property, and debts and claims thereby remain unsatisfied, it shall be lawful for any person holding such debt or claim to institute a suit for the recovery of the same in any court of law of this state against the husband and wife, or against the survivor of them," etc. The court held that this act referred only to such contracts as are made by a married woman when the consideration moves to herself, and would not be extended so as to include contracts of suretyship, or those of a merely collateral obligation.

In Thynne v. St. Maur, 34 Ch. Div. 465, it was held that the Married Woman's Act of 1882, which provides that she shall be capable of suing and being sued . . . in all respects as if she were a feme sole, does not abrogate the common law principle that a married woman cannot fill the office of next friend, or guardian ad litem. See also MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14, p. 589.

Tenancy by Entirety.—These statutes are not so construed as to make husband and wife joint tenants, or tenants in common, where property is conveyed to them as husband and wife. The common-law rule that they are tenants by entirety prevails, unless the contrary intent is clearly expressed. Goelet v. Gori, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 314; Torrey v. Torrey, 14 N. Y. 430; Farmers', etc., Nat. Bank v. Gregory, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; Miller v. Miller, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 444; Beach v. Hollister, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 519; Freeman v. Barber, 3 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 574; Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 152; 44 Am. Rep. 361; Zornlein v. Bram, 100 N. Y. 12; Washburn v. Burns, 34 N. J. L. 18; Robinson v. Eagle, 29 Ark. 202; Diver v. Diver, 56 Pa. St. 106; French v. Mehan, 56 Pa. St. 286; Bates v. Seely, 46 Pa. St. 248; Mc-

It has been held that statutes providing for mechanics' liens ought to be strictly construed, because they make distinctions between citizens and confer special privileges in derogation of the common law.¹ On the other hand, it has been held that, in view of their remedial nature, and of the public policy of protecting the laborer, these statutes should receive a liberal construction in favor of the mechanic; and this view seems to be more generally adopted.² But where undue advantage is given the mechanic, in Curdy v. Canning, 64 Pa. St. 39; Fisher v. Provin, 25 Mich. 347; McDuff v. Beauchamp, 50 Miss. 531; Marburg v. Cole, 49 Md. 402; 33 Am. Rep. 266; Pray v. Stebbins, 141 Mass. 219; 55 Am. Rep. 462; Bennett v. Child, 19 Wis. 362; 88 Am. Dec. 692; Chandler v. Cheney, 37 Ind. 391; Patton v. Rankin, 68 Ind. 245; 34 Am. Rep. 254; Carver v. Smith, 90 Ind. 222; 46 Am. Rep. 210.

In Cooper v. Cooper, 76 Ill. 57, a different doctrine was held. The court, however, recognizing the decisions of the other states, said: "But it may be our statute is materially different from theirs. But if it is not, still the tenor of our legislation has been broader and more liberal." See also Clark v. Clark, 56 N. H. 109.

Meeker v. Wright, 76 N. Y. 262, held tenancy by entirety to be abolished by the law relating to married women, but this case has been overruled by Bertles v. Nunan, 92 N. Y. 152; 44 Am. Rep. 361; and Zornlein v. Bram, 100 N. Y. 12.

1. Wade v. Reitz, 18 Ind. 307; Chapin v. Persse, etc., Paper Works, 30 Conn. 461; 79 Am. Dec. 263; Cook v. Heald, 21 Ill. 425; Brady v. Anderson, 24 Ill. 110; Rothgerber v. Dupuy, 64 Ill. 452; Lynch v. Cronan, 6 Gray (Mass.) 531; Schulenburg v. Bascom, 38 Mo. 188; Roberts v. Fowler, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 632; Rafter v. Sullivan, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 262; Ayres v. Revere, 25 N. J. L. 474; Associates of Jersey Co. v. Davison, 29 N. J. L. 415; Greenough v. Nichols, 30 Vt. 768.

In Esterley's Appeal, 54 Pa. St. 192, the court said: "The judicial mind ought to incline to a strict limitation of the terms of the statute upon the principle that statutes in derogation of the common law and contrary to the general policy of the public are always to be strictly construed."

A statute giving liens to the creditors of a contractor does not apply to the creditors of a sub-contractor. Wood v.

Donaldson, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 550; Harlan v. Rand, 27 Pa. St. 511.

In Willard v. Magoon, 30 Mich. 273, Graves, Ch. J., said: "It is undoubtedly true that the legislature intended that actions under the statute in question should be prosecuted in a manner to exempt them from technical refinements; but when we consider that the remedy looks to a somewhat summary subjection of real property under loose verbal arrangements, and to the passage and findings of titles to land as the result of compulsory proceedings, it appears too clear to be disputed, that all matters of substance, and every step in any way essential to the security of rights and titles, ought to be strictly insisted on." To the same effect is Wagar v. Briscoe, 38 Mich. 587.

2. Tuttle v. Montford, 7 Cal. 358; Buck v. Brian, 2 How. (Miss.) 880; Buchanan v. Smith, 43 Miss. 90; Weatherby v. Sinclair, 43 Miss. 189; Collins Granite Co. v. Devereux, 72 Me. 422; Putnam v. Ross, 46 Mo. 337; Oster v. Rabeneau, 46 Mo. 595; Donaldson v. Wood, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 399; Montandon v. Deas, 14 Ala. 33; 48 Am. Dec. 84; Thomas v. Huesman, 10 Ohio St. 152; Barnes v. Thompson, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 313; Gilman v. Gard, 29 Ind. 291; In re Hope Min. Co., 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 710.

The law favors the claims of mechanics, and the court will give a free interpretation to statutes in favor of the laborer. Buchanan v. Smith, 43 Miss. 90.

In De Witt v. Smith, 63 Mo. 266, Wagner, J., said: "The courts at one time held that enactments for mechanics' liens were in derogation of the common law, and their provisions should therefore be construed strictly against those who sought to avail themselves of their benefit. But the better doctrine now is that these statutes are highly remedial in their nature and should receive a liberal construction to advance the just and beneficent objects had in view in their passage."

derogation of the rights of others, the courts have adopted a strict construction, and have not extended the operation of the statute beyond its clear requirements.¹

A statute instituting a new remedy for an existing right does not take away a pre-existing remedy without express words or necessary implication; the new remedy is cumulative and either may be pursued. Where they are not inconsistent, but can well stand together, the old is never to be abrogated by the act creating the new remedy.² But when a right is created by a statute and a specific remedy is provided, the right can be vindicated in

1. Noll v. Swinesford, 6 Pa. St. 187; Mushlitt v. Silvermann, 50 N. Y. 360; Consociated Presbyterian Soc. v. Staples, 23 Conn. 544; Wagar v. Briscoe, 38 Mich. 587.

So when the effect of a lien law was to charge the lands of a party with a debt not contracted by him or for his ultimate benefit, the court held that it should receive a strict construction. Associates of Jersey Co. v. Davison, 29 N. J. L. 415.

In Wagar v. Briscoe, 38 Mich. 592, Graves, J., said, in reference to the mechanics' lien laws: "This court has repeatedly declared in substance that these acts are innovations upon the common law over the rights of property, by permitting the institution of private charges on property without or against the owner's consent, and without any judicial or other official sanction, and by authorizing an enforcement of such charges by unusual and summary methods, and that the provision of these enactments cannot be extended in their operation and effect beyond the plain and fair sense of the terms, and that parties asserting liens or titles resting upon them must bring themselves and their titles plainly and distinctly within these terms, . . . and that every essential statutory step, either in the creation, continuance or enforcement of the lien has been duly taken."

In Ayers v. Revere, 25 N. J. L. 475, Green, C. J., said: "The statute charges the property of one man with the debt of another. Though the owner may have paid the contractor in full for the erection of the building and for all the materials used in its construction, his property is nevertheless charged by the default of the contractor with the repayment of the debt. It gives preference to one class of creditors over another. . . . It gives to the favored creditor a remedy not only against his debtor, but against an innocent third party with whom he has never contracted and for whom he has never labored. It gives him a summary remedy which, if enforced, may compel the owner to pay a debt which he has once satisfied in full. . . . The statute is not of that purely remedial character which calls for a peculiarly liberal construction at the hands of the court."

Where the lien of the mechanic is clearly and primarily enacted for his protection as a personal benefit, and the aid of the court is invoked by an assignee, such assignee must clearly show that the statute authorizes the transfer. Roberts v. Fowler, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 263.

2. Potter's Dwarris 70; Sedgw. St. 38, 39; Collinson v. Newcastle, etc., R. Co., 1 Car. & K. 546; 47 E. C. L. 545; Castle's Case, Cro. Jac. 644; Litchfield v. Simpson, 8 Q. B. 65; 55 E. C. L. 65; Rex v. Wright, 1 Burr. 544; Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13; Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490; 48 Am. Dec. 59; Jennings v. Com., 17 Pick. (Mass.) 82; Methodist Church v. Remington, 1 Watts (Pa.) 218; 26 Am. Dec. 61; Wilson v. Myers, 4 Hawk. (N. Car.) 73; 15 Am. Dec. 510; Almy v. Harris, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; Farmers' Turnpike Road Co. v. Coventry, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 389; Scidmore v. Smith, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 322; Loo-ney v. Hughes, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 605; People v. Stevens, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 341; Clark v. Brown, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 213; People v. Bristol, etc., Turnpike Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 222; Farmers' Bank v. Hale, 59 N. Y. 61; Stafford v. Ingersol, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 38; Renwick v. Morris, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 621; Behan v. People, 17 N. Y. 516; Lane v. Salter, 51 N. Y. 1; Burnham v. Onderdonk, 41 N. Y. 425; Fremain v. Richardson, 68 N. Y. 617; Critenden v. Wilson, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 165; 15 Am. Dec. 462; Gooch v. Stephenson, 13 Me. 371; Dawson v. Miller, 20 Tex. 171; 70 Am. Dec. 380; Thouvenin v.

no other way than that prescribed by the law. The remedy is exclusive.¹

(5) Statutes Delegating Powers—The power of eminent domain belongs in the first instance to the state exclusively, and when the legislature delegates such power to municipal or private corpora-

Rodrigues, 24 Tex. 468; Booker v. McRoberts, 1 Call (Va.) 243.

A statute authorizing suits to be brought, etc., on lost bonds and notes, was held cumulative, and not to repeal any remedy which previously existed. Branch Bank v. Tillman, 12 Ala. 214.

In Colden v. Eldred, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 220, the court decided that the common-law remedy of trespass was not taken away by the statutory remedy of distress and sale of beasts, damage feasant; but that such remedy was merely cumulative.

A new remedy given by statute, upon failure of a bidder to comply with the terms of a probate sale, is cumulative, and does not take away the common-law remedy or remedy by suit, to compel specific performance. Dawson v. Miller, 20 Tex. 171; 70 Am. Dec. 380.

At common law, keeping swine in the city of London was a nuisance and of course indictable. By a statute the hogs were liable to be seized, etc.; but it was held that notwithstanding the statute, the offense was still indictable. Rex v. Wigg, 2 Salk. 460. But see Com. v. Cromley, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 179.

Statutory Submission.—A statute prescribing certain forms for submission to arbitrators, and allowing the parties to agree that a judgment of a court of record, designated in the instrument of submission, shall be rendered upon the award, gives a cumulative remedy; and an award pursuant to a submission which would have been valid at common law, but which did not conform to the statute, will support an action. Lamar v. Nicholson, 7 Port. (Ala.) 158; Burnside v. Whitney, 21 N. Y. 149; Wells v. Lain, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 99; Diedrick v. Richley, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 271; Logsdon v. Robert, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 256; Evans v. McKinsey, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 264; Richardson v. Cassily, 3 Watts (Pa.) 320. See also Dickerson v. Tyner, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 253. But see Deerfield v. Arms, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 480; 32 Am. Dec. 228.

1. Miller v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2305; Bickford v. Hood, 7 T. R. 620; Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 227; Janney v. Buell, 55 Ala. 408;

Phillips v. Ash, 63 Ala. 414; Chandler v. Hanna, 73 Ala. 390; Bassett v. Carleton, 32 Me. 553; 54 Am. Dec. 605; Dudley v. Mayhew, 3 N. Y. 9; Almy v. Harris, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; Renwick v. Morris, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 621; In re Townsend, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 31; Hollister v. Hollister Bank, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 245; People v. Hall, 80 N. Y. 117; People v. Hazard, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 207; Smith v. Lockwood, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 209; Smith v. Drew, 5 Mass. 514; Andover, etc., Turnpike Corp. v. Gould, 6 Mass. 40; 4 Am. Dec. 80; Franklin Glass Co. v. White, 14 Mass. 286; Chestnut Hill Turnpike Co. v. Martin, 12 Pa. St. 361; Huntington, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Brown, 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 463; App v. Dreisbach, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 287; 21 Am. Dec. 447; State v. Cole, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 1; Lang v. Scott, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 405; 12 Am. Dec. 257; Sturgeon v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 39; Storms v. Stevens, 104 Ind. 46; Butler v. State, 6 Ind. 165; Toney v. Johnson, 26 Ind. 382; McCormack v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 9 Ind. 283; Journey v. State, 1 Mo. 428; Riddick v. Governor, 1 Mo. 147.

So where a statute authorizes an injury, as in the case of acts allowing lands to be condemned for roads, canals, etc., and provides a remedy for it, no action will lie at common law. Sudbury Meadows v. Middlesex Canal, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 36; Dodge v. Essex Com'rs, 3 Met. (Mass.) 380. See also Boston v. Shaw, 1 Met. Mass. 130; Wiley v. Yale, 1 Met. (Mass.) 553; Elder v. Bemis, 2 Met. (Mass.) 599; Calking v. Baldwin, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 667; 21 Am. Dec. 168.

But where the statute creating a new right provides no remedy for its infraction, the common law will supply the remedy. Beckford v. Hood, 7 T. R. 620; Dudley v. Mayhew, 3 N. Y. 9; Smith v. Drew, 5 Mass. 514; Chisholm v. Northern Transp. Co., 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 363; In re Townsend, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 31; Burnham v. Onderdonk, 41 N. Y. 425; Lynes v. State, 5 Port. (Ala.) 236; 30 Am. Dec. 557; Branch Bank v. Tillman, 12 Ala. 214; Russell v. Irby, 13 Ala. 131.

tions, the act under which the right to exercise the power is claimed must be construed strictly;¹ and the procedure provided for the exercise of the power of condemnation must be pursued strictly in all respects.²

So also statutes delegating the power to levy taxes or local assessments must be construed strictly. The power may not be exercised unless it be authorized by clear and unambiguous language or by necessary implication, and, when exercised, it must be confined to the purposes for which it is authorized.³ So also

1. Martin v. Rushton, 42 Ala. 289; Reynolds v. Speers, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 34; Spofford v. Bucksport, etc., R. Co., 66 Me. 26; Binney's Case, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 99; Lea v. Johnston, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 15; Belknap v. Belknap, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 463; 7 Am. Dec. 548; Watson v. The Acquackanonck Water Co., 36 N. J. L. 195; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Gilbert, 71 Ga. 591; Doe v. Hileman, 2 Ill. 323; Morris v. Chicago, 11 Ill. 650; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Wiltse, 116 Ill. 449; Belcher Sugar Refining Co. v. St. Louis Grain Elevator Co., 82 Mo. 121; Cox v. Tipton, 18 Mo. App. 450; Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; Central R. Co. v. Hudson Terminal R. Co., 46 N. J. L., 289; Miami Coal Co. v. Wigton, 19 Ohio St. 560; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Bruce, 102 Pa. St. 23; Simpson v. South Staffordshire Water Works Co., 34 L. J. Eq. 380; Gray v. Liverpool, etc., R. Co., 9 Beav. 391; In re Claiborne Street, 4 La. Ann. 7; In re Exchange Alley, 4 La. Ann. 4; In re Philip Street, 10 La. Ann. 313. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 1041, and EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 522.

2. Roberts v. Williams, 15 Ark. 43; Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306; 73 Am. Dec. 575; Curran v. Shattuck, 24 Cal. 427; Lincoln v. Colusa County, 28 Cal. 662; Damrell v. San Joaquin County, 40 Cal. 154; Young v. McKenzie, 3 Ga. 31; Pike County v. Griffin, etc., Plank Road Co., 9 Ga. 475; Hyslop v. Finch, 99 Ill. 171; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 78 Ill. 96; New Orleans v. Sohr, 16 La. Ann. 393; Jefferson v. Delachaise, 22 La. Ann. 26; State v. Van Geison, 15 N. J. L. 339; Griscom v. Gilmore, 15 N. J. L. 475; State v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 309; State v. Bergen, 33 N. J. L. 72; Harris v. Marblehead, 10 Gray (Mass.) 40; Wamesit Power Co. v. Allen, 120 Mass. 352; Kroop v. For-

v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42; Stockett v. Nicholson, Walk. (Miss.) 75; Bohlman v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 40 Wis. 157; St. Louis v. Franks, 78 Mo. 41; Harbeck v. Toledo, 11 Ohio St. 219; Killbuck Private Road, 77 Pa. St. 39; Adams v. Clarksburg, 23 W. Va. 203; Bartleson v. Minneapolis, 33 Minn. 468; Miller v. Brown, 56 N. Y. 383.

3. Paine v. Spratley, 5 Kan. 525; Leavenworth v. Norton, 1 Kan. 432; Burnes v. Atchison, 2 Kan. 454; Taylor v. Donner, 31 Cal. 480; Emery v. San Francisco Gas Co., 28 Cal. 354; Bucknall v. Story, 36 Cal. 67; Swamp Land Dist. v. Haggin, 64 Cal. 204; Mason v. Police Jury, 9 La. Ann. 368; Moseley v. Tift, 4 Fla. 402; St. Louis v. Laughlin, 49 Mo. 559; State v. Van Every, 75 Mo. 530; Mobile v. Yuille, 3 Ala. 137; 36 Am. Dec. 441; Lot v. Ross, 38 Ala. 156; Mobile v. Baldwin, 57 Ala. 61; 29 Am. Rep. 712; Stone v. Mobile, 57 Ala. 61; Savannah v. Hart-ridge, 8 Ga. 23; Augusta v. Dunbar, 50 Ga. 387; Caldwell v. Rupert, 10 Bush (Ky.) 182; Kniper v. Louisville, 7 Bush (Ky.) 599; Murray v. Tucker, 10 Bush (Ky.) 240; Collins v. Louisville, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 134; Vance v. Little Rock, 30 Ark. 439; Ottawa v. Spencer, 40 Ill. 211; English v. People, 96 Ill. 566; Webster v. People, 98 Ill. 343; Scammon v. Chicago, 40 Ill. 146; Wright v. Chicago, 20 Ill. 252; Chicago v. Wright, 32 Ill. 192; Drake v. Phillips, 40 Ill. 388; Hyde Park v. Borden, 94 Ill. 26; Gridley v. Bloomington, 88 Ill. 555; 30 Am. Rep. 566; Jeffries v. Lawrence, 42 Iowa 498; Dubuque v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 47 Iowa 201; Harmony Tp. v. Osborne, 9 Ind. 458; Kyle v. Malin, 8 Ind. 34; Nelson v. La Porte, 33 Ind. 258; Jackson v. Newman, 59 Miss. 385; 42 Am. Rep. 367; Boston v. Schaffer, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 419; Annapolis v. Harwood, 32 Md. 471; St. Mary's, etc., School v. Brown, 45 Md. 310; Vasant v. Har- statutes authorizing the sale of land for taxes are to be strictly construed; and a strict compliance with all the material requirements of the statute is necessary.¹

Municipal corporations and counties have no power to subscribe and pay for the stock of private corporations, in the absence of express authority from the legislature, and statutes which confer such authority are construed with great strictness.² Charters of all corporations are grants of power to exercise a franchise, and son v. Baltimore, 8 Md. 352; In re Second Avenue M. E. Church, 66 N. Y. 395; Sharpe v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76; Sharpe v. Johnson, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 92; Dyckman v. New York, 5 N. Y. 434; Howell v. Buffalo, 15 N. Y. 512; Bennett v. Buffalo, 17 N. Y. 385; Manice v. New York, 8 N. Y. 120; Rathbun v. Acker, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 393; Merritt v. Port Chester, 71 N. Y. 309; 27 Am. Rep. 47; Zanesville v. Richards, 5 Ohio St. 589; Mays v. Cincinnati, 1 Ohio St. 268; Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio 318; Asheville v. Means, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 406; Sewall v. St. Paul, 20 Minn. 511; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Portland, 2 Oregon 81; State v. Maysville, 12 S. Car. 76; Columbia v. Hunt, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 550; State v. Jersey City, 26 N. J. L. 444; State v. Guttenberg, 39 N. J. L. 660; Columbia v. Beasley, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 240; Dean v. Gleason, 16 Wis. 1; Peters v. Lynchburg, 76 Va. 927; Schoolfield v. Lynchburg, 78 Va. 366; Richmond v. Daniel, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 387; Orange, etc., R. Co. v. Alexandria, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 176; Henry v. Chester, 15 Vt. 460; Heine v. Levee Com'rs, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 660; Meriweather v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472.

It has been held that where express authority to incur a debt is granted, the authority to levy a tax to pay it results by necessary implication, if nothing indicates a contrary intent on the part of the legislature. U. S. v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 381; Ralls County Ct. v. U. S., 105 U. S. 733.

1. Waldron v. Chastaney, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 62; Warner v. Howell, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 12; Segee v. Thomas, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 11; Piatt v. McCullough, 1 McLean (U. S.) 82; Bright v. Boyd, 1 Story (U. S.) 487; Stead v. Cource, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 403; McClung v. Ross, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 116; Thatcher v. Powell, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 119; Ronken-dorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 349; Clarke v. Strickland, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 439; Miner v. McLean, 4 McLean (U.

S.) 138; Mayhew v. Davis, 4 McLean (U. S.) 213; Parker v. Overman, 18 How. (U. S.) 137; (reversing Hempst. (U. S.) 692); Ogden v. Harrington, 6 McLean (U. S.) 418; Stansbury v. Taggart, 3 McLean (U. S.) 457; Washington v. Platt, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 681; Mason v. Fearson, 9 How. (U. S.) 248; Holyroyd v. Pumphrey, 18 How. (U. S.) 69; Thompson v. Carroll, 22 How. (U. S.) 422; Bradley v. Conner, 5 Cranch (C. C.) 615; Rodbird v. Rodbird, 5 Cranch (C. C.) 125; Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 329; McGunne-gle v. Rutherford, Hempst. (U. S.) 45; Ransom v. Williams, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 313; Denike v. Rourke, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 39; Walker v. Moore, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 256; Harkness v. Board of Public Works, 1 McArthur (D. C.) 121; Coombs v. O'Neal, 1 McArthur (D. C.) 405; LeRoy v. Reeves, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 102; Gould v. Day, 94 U. S. 405; Rule v. Parker, Cooke (Tenn.) 365; Bush v. Williams, Cooke (Tenn.) 360; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 487; Ritter v. Worth, 58 N. Y. 627; Cruger v. Dougherty, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 464; National F. Ins. Co. v. McKay, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 445; Finlay v. Cook, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

2. Wetumpka v. Wetumpka Wharf Co., 63 Ala. 611; English v. Clicot County, 26 Ark. 454; Jacksonport v. Watson, 33 Ark. 704; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 516; People v. Coon, 25 Cal. 635; McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 247; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Jones v. Columbus, 25 Ga. 610; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; Aurora v. West, 22 Ind. 88; 85 Am. Dec. 413; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Attica, 56 Ind. 476; Lafayette v. Cox, 5 Ind. 38; Atchison v. Butcher, 3 Kan. 104; Burnes v. Atchison, 2 Kan. 454; Gaddis v. Richland County, 92 Ill. 119; Pitzman v. Freeburg, 92 Ill. 111; Welch v. Post, 99 Ill. 471; McManus v. Duluth, etc., R. Co. (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 980; St. Louis v. Alexander, 23 Mo. 483; Starin are, in a sense, to be construed strictly; that is, the powers exercised by corporations are to be confined to those expressly granted in their charters and those incident to or necessary for the exercise of such express grants.¹

And it may be stated generally that where special powers for the accomplishment of a particular purpose are conferred by stat-

v. Genoa, 23 N. Y. 439; Gould v. Sterling, 23 N. Y. 439; Rome Bank v. Rome, 18 N. Y. 38; People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551; Cook v. Sumner Spinning, etc., Co., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 698; Nichol v. Nashville, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 252; Milan Taxpayers v. Tennessee, Cent. R. Co., 11 Lea (Tenn.) 330; Kelley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 139; Norton v. Dyersburg, 127 U. S. 160; Wells v. Supervisors, 102 U. S. 625; Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 165; Katzenberger v. Aberdeen, 16 Fed. Rep. 745; Savannah v. Kelly, 108 U. S. 184; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 676; Lewis v. Shreveport, 3 Woods (U. S.) 205; St. Joseph Tp. v. Rogers, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 644; Thomson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 327; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Iola, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 353; 20 Wall. (U. S.) 655; Pulaski v. Gilmore, 21 Fed. Rep. 870; Ottawa v. Carey, 108 U. S. 110; Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657.

1. Colman v. Eastern, etc., R. Co., 10 Beav. 1; East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 11 C. B. 775; 73 E. C. L. 775; Solomons v. Laing, 12 Beav. 339; Bagshaw v. Eastern Union R. Co., 7 Hare 114; Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co. v. London, etc., R. Co., 22 L. J. Ch. 682; Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Hawkes, 5 H. L. Cas. 348; In re Dudley, 8 Q. B. Div. 93; Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653; Atty. Gen'l v. Great Eastern R. Co., 5 App. Cas. 481; London, etc., R. Co. v. Limehouse Board, 2 K. & J. 123; 26 L. J. Ch. 164; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 518; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 587; St. Clair County Turnpike Co. v. Illinois, 96 U. S. 63; Huntington v. National Sav. Bank, 96 U. S. 388; North Western Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 666; Thomas v. Richmond, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 349; State v. Mobile, 5 Port. (Ala.) 279; Vandall v. South San Francisco Dock Co., 40 Cal. 83; Winter v. Muscogee R. Co., 11 Ga. 438; Bowling Green, etc., R. Co. v. Warren County Ct., 10 Bush (Ky.) 712; South Newmarket Meth. Seminary v. Peaslee, 15 N. H. 330; Downing

v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 231; Hartford Bridge Co. v. Union Ferry Co., 29 Conn. 210; Fuller v. Plainfield Academic School, 6 Conn. 532; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 501; New London v. Brainard, 22 Conn. 552; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 357; 8 Am. Rep. 243; New York Firemen Ins. Co. v. Sturges, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 675; New York Firemen Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 699; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Remer, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 130; LeCouteulx v. Buffalo, 33 N. Y. 333; Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 352; 67 Am. Dec. 471; Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa. St. 303; 67 Am. Dec. 464; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Erie, 27 Pa. St. 380; Pennsylvania, etc., Nav. Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 248; 29 Am. Dec. 543; Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581; 20 Am. Rep. 95; St. Louis v. Weber, 44 Mo. 547; Matthews v. Skinker, 62 Mo. 329; 21 Am. Rep. 425; Shawmut Bank v. Plattsburgh, etc., R. Co., 31 Vt. 491; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Franks, 41 Miss. 494; Leonard v. Canton, 35 Miss. 189; Petersburgh v. Metzker, 21 Ill. 205; Whitman Gold, etc., Min. Co. v. Baker, 3 Nev. 386; White's Bank v. Toledo F., etc., Ins. Co., 12 Ohio St. 601; Lima v. Cemetery Assoc., 42 Ohio St. 128; 51 Am. Rep. 809; Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Sutton Parish v. Cole, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 240; Hood v. Dighton Bridge, 3 Mass. 263; Stetson v. Kempton, 13 Mass. 272; 7 Am. Dec. 145; Perry v. Wilson, 7 Mass. 393; Com. v. Smith, 10 Allen (Mass.) 448; 87 Am. Dec. 672; Richardson v. Sibley, 11 Allen (Mass.) 65; 87 Am. Dec. 700; Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 115 Mass. 347; Whittenton Mills v. Upton, 10 Gray (Mass.) 582; 71 Am. Dec. 681; Mills v. Williams, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) 558; Bridge Co. v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 81, 503; Waxahachie v. Brown, 67 Tex. 519.

In Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23, Parker, C. J., said: "The power of corporations is derived only from the act, grant, charter or ute upon corporations or individuals, the acts conferring such powers are to be construed strictly and the powers cannot be exercised for any collateral purpose.¹

(6) Grants of Monopolies.—All grants by the legislature of exclusive privileges to corporations or individuals must be construed strictly against the grantees and in favor of the public,² and the charters of municipal corporations are construed so strictly in that regard that nothing short of express authority from the legislature will authorize their creating monopolies or granting special privileges.³

patent by which they are created. In this commonwealth the source and origin of such power is the legislature, and corporations are to exercise no authority, except what is given by express terms or by necessary implication by that body."

In Gaines v. Coates, 51 Miss. 342, it is said that "a corporation created by statute possesses only those powers which the charter confers upon it either expressly or as incidental to its very existence, and in order to derive a power in a corporation by implication, it must appear that the power thus sought to be implied is so necessary to the enjoyment of some specially granted right, that without it the right would fail." Citing McIntyre v. Ingraham, 35 Miss. 25, and Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 636. See also CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 207; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 1041; ULTRA VIRES.

1. Galloway v. London, L. R., 1 H. L. 34; Reg. v. Cousins, 4 B. & S. 849; 116 E. C. L. 849; Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 145; The Killarney, Lush. 202; The Earl of Auckland, Lush. 164; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; Richter v. Hughes, 2 B. & C. 499; 9 E. C. L. 162; Calder, etc., Nav. Co. v. Pilling, 14 M. & W. 76; Shawnee County v. Carter, 2 Kan. 115; Garrigus v. Pike County, 39 Ind. 66; State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 528; Pike County v. Rowland, 94 Pa. St. 238; Geter v. Tobacco Com'rs, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 354. See also cases cited in the last five notes, and Hughes v. Chester, etc., R. Co., 21 L. J. Ch. 97; Anonymous, Loft 438; Rex v. Croker, Cowp. 26; Scales v. Pickering, 4 Bing. 448; 1 M. & P. 195; 15 E. C. L. 37.

In Richter v. Hughes, 2 B. & C. 499; 9 E. C. L. 162, by a local act for the building of a chapel the trustees were authorized to appoint officers and to borrow thirty thousand pounds, which was to be payable out of the burial fees and rates and assessments to be made in pursuance of the act. They borrowed more than thirty thousand pounds. It was held that all assessments to pay the interest on the sum borrowed were void, on the ground that the power conferred upon them by the act had not been strictly pursued.

In Reg. v. Cousins, 4 B. & S. 849; 116 E. C. L. 849, it was held that the appointment of one person only by the justices of the peace as an overseer of the poor of a parish was void under Stat. 43 Eliz., ch. 2, which authorized the justices to appoint to the office four, three or two substantial householders, although there was no other household resident in the parish qualified for appointment.

2. Reed v. Ingham, 3 El. & Bl. 888; 77 E. C. L. 889; Direct U. S. Cable Co. v. Anglo-American Tel. Co., 2 App. Cas. 394, 412; Foley v. Fletcher, 3 H. & N. 781; Stourbridge Canal v. Wheely, 2 B. & Ad. 793; Westfall v. Mapes, 3 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 198; Lehigh Water Co.'s Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 515; Fanning v. Gregoire, 16 How. (U. S.) 524; Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 145; Wheeling Bridge Co. v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 34 W. Va. 155; affirmed Belmont Bridge Co. v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 138 U. S. 287; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 540; Bridge Co. v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 81; State v. Curry, 1 Nev. 251; Lake v. Virginia, etc., R. Co., 7 Nev. 294; Binghampton Bridge Case, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 51; Cleveland v. Norton, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 380, per Shaw, C. J.

3. Minturn v. Larue, 23 How. (U. S.) 435; Richmond County Gas, etc., Co. v. Middletown, 59 N. Y. 228; Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 116 N. Y. 167; Brenham v. Brenham Water Co., 67 Tex. 542; Altgelt v. San Antonio, 81 Tex. 436; Saginaw Gas Light

(7) Exemptions from Liabilities.—Acts creating exemptions from common-law liabilities are construed strictly. A party who claims such an exemption must bring his case within the letter and spirit of the statute.¹ Statutes providing for homestead exemptions and the exemption of a certain amount of personal property from execution have been put in this class,² but by the weight of authority they are exceptions to the rule.³ So too

Co. v. Saginaw, 28 Fed. Rep. 529; Nash v. Lowry, 37 Minn. 261; Long v. Duluth, 49 Minn. 280; State v. Cincinnati Gas-Light, etc., Co., 18 Ohio St. 262; Parkersburg Gas Co. v. Parkersburg, 30 W. Va. 435; Birmingham, etc., Street R. Co. v. Birmingham Street R. Co., 79 Ala. 465; Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co., 132 Ind. 575; Vincennes v. Citizens Gas Light Co., 132 Ind. 114; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. New Orleans, 44 La. Ann. 748; North Baltimore Pass. R. Co. v. Baltimore (Md. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 470; Houston v. City Houston St. R. Co., 83 Tex. 548.

1. Gale v. Laurie, 5 B. & C. 156; 12 E. C. L. 187; Smith v. Kirby, 1 Q. B. Div. 131; The Protector, 1 W. Rob. 45; The Diana, 4 Moore P. C. 11; The Ionia, L. R., 1 P. C. 426; Willis v. Long Island R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 398; affirmed 34 N. Y. 670; Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313; 84 Am. Dec. 442; Andrews v. Schott, 10 Pa. St. 47; Vandike v. Roskam, 67 Pa. St. 330; Maloney v. Bruce, 94 Pa. St. 249; Eliot v. Himrod, 108 Pa. St. 569; Pierce v. Bryant, 5 Allen (Mass.) 91.

In Gale v. Laurie, 5 B. & C. 156; 12 E. C. L. 187, it was held that the statute providing that shipowners should not be liable for damages done by their ships without their default beyond the value of the ship and its freight, must be construed strictly against the owner, and that everything on the ship belonging to the owner was liable for such damage.

In Willis v. The Long Island R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 398, it appeared that the general railroad act provided that in case any passenger should be injured while on the platform of any car in violation of the printed regulations of the company posted up at the time in a conspicuous place inside of its passenger cars then in the train, such company should not be liable for the injury, provided the said company at the time furnished room inside its passenger cars sufficient for the proper accommodation of its passengers. The statute was strictly construed as being one exempting the company from liability, and it was held that a passenger was not obliged to go from one car to another while the train was in motion to search for a seat, neither was he bound to require a person occupying an entire seat to make room for him nor displace him so as to obtain a seat though the seat were large enough for two persons to occupy, nor was it the duty of a passenger to require persons to displace articles which they had placed upon a seat in order that he might be seated, but that it was the duty of the railroad company to furnish accommodations mentioned in the statute—the room and the seats—and not merely to furnish passengers with the means of obtaining them.

In Maloney v. Bruce, 94 Pa. St. 249, it was held that parties who seek to have the advantages of a partnership and yet limit their liability to creditors by taking advantage of the Limited Partnership Act must comply strictly with all the provisions of such act.

2. Guillory v. Deville, 21 La. Ann. 686; Crilly v. Sheriff, 25 La. Ann. 219; Briant v. Lyons, 29 La. Ann. 64; Todd v. Gordy, 28 La. Ann. 666; Kinder v. Lyons, 38 La. Ann. 713; Grimes v. Bryne, 2 Minn. 106; Ward v. Huhn, 16 Minn. 159; Rue v. Alter, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 119; Garaty v. Du Bose, 5 S. Car. 500.

3. Allman v. Gann, 29 Ala. 240; Favers v. Glass, 22 Ala. 621; 58 Am. Dec. 272; Sallee v. Waters, 17 Ala. 482; Noland v. Wickham, 9 Ala. 169; 44 Am. Dec. 435; Wassell v. Tunnah, 25 Ark. 101; Tumlinson v. Swinney, 22 Ark. 408; 74 Am. Dec. 432; Montague v. Richardson, 24 Conn. 346; 63 Am. Dec. 173 (but see Seeley v. Gwillim, 40 Conn. 106); Good v. Fogg, 61 Ill. 449; 14 Am. Rep. 71; Deere v. Chapman, 25 Ill. 610; 79 Am. Dec. 350; Bevan v. Hayden, 13 Iowa 122; Davis v. Humphrey, 22 Iowa 137; Kenyon v. Baker, 16 Mich. 373; King v. Moore, 10 Mich. 538; Alvord v. Lent, 23 Mich. 369; Vogler v. Montgomery, 54 Mo. 577; Wade v. Jones, 20 Mo. 75; 61 Am. Dec. 584; Megehe v. Draper, 21 Mo. 510; 64 Am. Dec. 245; Carpenter v.

there is a presumption that all property is subject to the common burden of taxation, and statutes which make exceptions to the rule must be construed strictly.¹

To this class belong also bankruptcy and insolvency laws which provide for the discharge of an insolvent debtor's liabilities without full payment of his debts. In order that the debtor may be entitled to his discharge the provisions of the statute must be strictly pursued.²

(8) Statutes Creating Liabilities.—Statutes which create liabilities where, at common law, none existed, or which increase common-law liabilities, are, as a rule, construed strictly. In such cases, the newly created liability will not be extended beyond the Herrington, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 370; 37 Am. Dec. 239; Wilcox v. Hawley, 31 N. Y. 648; Stewart v. Brown, 37 N. Y. 350; 93 Am. Dec. 578; Ford v. Johnson, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 364; Becker v. Becker, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 497; Shaw v. Davis, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 389; Tillotston v. Wolcott, 48 N. Y. 188; Buxton v. Dearborn, 46 N. H. 44; Peverly v. Sayles, 10 N. H. 356; Lindley v. Davis, 7 Mont. 206; Campbell v. Adair, 45 Miss. 178; Richardson v. Buswell, 10 Met. (Mass.) 506; 43 Am. Dec. 450; Gibson v. Jenney, 15 Mass. 205; Richardson v. Duncan, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 220; Webb v. Brandon, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 285; Hawthorne v. Smith, 3 Nev. 182; 93 Am. Dec. 397; Cobbs v. Coleman, 14 Tex. 594; Anderson v. McKay, 30 Tex. 190; Rogers v. Ferguson, 32 Tex. 534; Comstock v. Becket, 63 Wis. 656; Gilman v. Williams, 7 Wis. 329; 76 Am. Dec. 219; Binzel v. Grogan, 67 Wis. 147; Connaughton v. Sands, 32 Wis. 387; Kuntz v. Kinney, 33 Wis. 503; Mundell v. Hammond, 40 Vt. 641; Webster v. Orne, 45 Vt. 40; Carrington v. Herrin, 4 Bush (Ky.) 624; Kelley v. McFadden, 80 Ind. 536; Puett v. Beard, 86 Ind. 172; 44 Am. Rep. 280; Barkley v. Mahon, 95 Ind. 101; Butner v. Bowser, 104 Ind. 255; In re Jones, 2 Dill (U. S.) 343.

1. See TAXATION, Exemptions, where this subject is fully discussed.

2. Salters v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 339; Stanton v. Ellis, 12 N. Y. 575; 64 Am. Dec. 512; McNair v. Gilbert, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 344; Slidell v. McCrea, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 156; Ely v. Cooke, 28 N. Y. 365; Hale v. Sweet, 40 N. Y. 97; People v. Gray, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 468; 19 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 238; Dieckhoff v. Ahlborn, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 372; People v. Daly, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 641; 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 325; In re

Underwood, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 59; Morewood v. Hollister, 6 N. Y. 309; In re Cohen, 18 Civ. Proc. Rep. (N. Y.) 156; In re Tolman, 83 Me. 353; In re Harrison, 46 Minn. 331.

In Salters v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 346, Walworth, Ch., said: "But statutes of this description which are intended to deprive the creditor of all remedy for the recovery of an honest debt, must be construed strictly, and should not be extended by implication beyond the fair and legitimate meaning of the terms used by the legislature."

In Re Tolman, 83 Me. 353, under a statute requiring a trader to keep proper books, it was held that one could not be said to keep proper books of account who keeps merely memorandum books containing deliveries of milk to customers, some informal accounts or settlements, and an occasional inventory of farming stock, but nothing to indicate where or how the principal proceeds of his business have been expended. The court said: "The counsel for the insolvent thinks it a hardship to require an honest debtor in such limited and humble business, without education in the matter of books and accounts, to keep books of account as a condition of a discharge from debt, in case of his financial misfortune. There can be no remedy but an appeal to the legislature."

In Re Harrison, 46 Minn. 331, it was held that an assignment under the insolvent law must assign all the insolvent's unexempt property wherever situated, and his right to a discharge depended upon his having bona fide subjected all of it to the proceeding so that it might be appropriated, so far as it would go, to the payment of his debts; and that the doing by him in that state or elsewhere of any act mentioned in the tenth section of the insolvency act expressed provisions of the statute.¹ It has been held that statutes which give a right of action to the personal representative of the deceased for tortious acts resulting in death should be construed strictly.² But, on the other hand, it is held that such statutes are remedial, inasmuch as they simply provide a remedy for an obvious wrong, and that they should be construed liberally,³ except in so far as they provide for the recovery of punitive damages.⁴ So also statutes which impose upon the stockholders of corporations a liability for the corporate debts in addition to the value of their stock are not to be extended beyond the plain meaning of the language employed.⁵

Statutes imposing costs may be classed among statutes creat-

as amended, whether the property was situated in that state or elsewhere, would defeat his right to the discharge.

1. In re Hollister Bank, 27 N. Y. 393; Hollister v. Hollister Bank, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 245; Steamboat Ohio v. Stunt, 10 Ohio St. 582; Cohn v. Neeves, 40 Wis. 393; Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. St. 293; Lane's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 49; 51 Am. Rep. 166; O'Reilly v. Bard, 105 Pa. St. 569; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 538; Detroit v. Putnam, 45 Mich. 265; Detroit v. Chaffee, 70 Mich. 80.

2. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Hine, 25 Ohio St. 629; Hamilton v. Jones, 125 Ind. 176; Burns v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 169; Jackson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 87 Mo. 422; 56 Am. Rep. 460; Daly v. Stoddard, 66 Ga. 145; Eustace v. Jahns, 38 Cal. 3.

3. Soule v. New York, etc., R. Co., 24 Conn. 575; Lamphear v. Buckingham, 33 Conn. 237; Merkle v. Bennington Tp., 58 Mich. 156; 55 Am. Rep. 666; Haggerty v. Central R. Co., 31 N. J. L. 349; Bolinger v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 418; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Shacklett, 10 Ill. App. 404; Hayes v. Williams, 17 Colo. 465; Beech v. Bay State Co., 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 415; 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1; 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 248.

4. In Shelby County v. Searce, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 576, it appeared that one section of the Kentucky statute giving a right of action for tortious acts producing death, provided for compensatory damages only when death resulted from simple negligence or carelessness, while another provided for punitive damages for the loss or destruction of life by willful neglect of another person. The court held, the first section being entirely remedial, it should be construed liberally, but that the third section, providing for punitive damages, being chiefly penal, should be interpreted strictly.

5. Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 192; Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 489; Chamberlin v. Huguenot Mfg. Co., 118 Mass. 532; Priest v. Essex Hat Mfg. Co., 115 Mass. 380; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371; Knowlton v. Ackley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 93; Stedman v. Eveleth, 6 Met. (Mass.) 114; O'Reilly v. Bard, 105 Pa. St. 569; Mean's Appeal, 85 Pa. St. 75; Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. St. 293; Youghioghenny Shaft Co. v. Evans, 72 Pa. St. 331; Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1; Diven v. Lee, 36 N. Y. 302; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 120; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503; Mokelumne Hill Canal, etc., Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; 73 Am. Dec. 658; Salt Lake City Nat. Bank v. Hendrickson, 40 N. J. L. 52; Grose v. Hilt, 36 Me. 22; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 511; 71 Am. Dec. 559; Windham Provident Sav. Inst. v. Sprague, 43 Vt. 502; Dauchy v. Brown, 24 Vt. 197; Bassett v. St. Albans Hotel Co., 47 Vt. 313; Dewey v. St. Albans Trust Co., 57 Vt. 332.

In Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 192, Shaw, C. J., said: "To create any individual liability of members for the debt of a corporation, a body politic created by law and regarded as a legal being distinct from that of all the members composing it and capable of contracting and being contracted with as a person, is a wide departure from established rules of law founded in consideration of public policy and depending solely upon provisions of positive law. It is therefore to be construed strictly and not extended beyond the limits to which it is plainly carried by such provision of the statute."

But in Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., ing liabilities which did not exist at common law, and it has been held that they are to be construed strictly;¹ and so as to statutes allowing compensation to officers.²

(9) Statutory Remedies and Proceedings.—When a statute gives a right or a remedy which did not exist at common law, and provides a specific method of enforcing it, the mode of procedure provided by the statute must be pursued strictly.³

2 Story (U. S.) 432, Judge Story gave the same statute a more liberal construction, holding that the provision "that every person who shall become a member of any manufacturing corporation which may be hereafter established in this commonwealth shall be liable in his individual capacity for all debts contracted during the time of his continuing a member of such corporation," included also a claim for tortious infringement of a patent right.

Officers of Corporations.—In Rorke v. Thomas, 56 N. Y. 560, which was an action by creditors against the trustees of a corporation to charge them individually with the payment of a debt of the company to the plaintiffs, under section 13, ch. 40, Laws of 1848, upon the ground that the defendants while they were such trustees declared and paid to the stockholders of the company a dividend which diminished the amount of its capital stock, it was held that the statute was penal in its nature, and was not to be extended beyond the clear import of the language employed in it.

1. Cone v. Bowles, 1 Salk. 205; Cobb v. Mid-Wales R. Co., L. R., 1 Q. B. 351; Dent v. State, 42 Ala. 514; State v. Kinne, 41 N. H. 238; Van Horne v. Petrie, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 213; Farrington v. Rennie, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 220; Briggs v. Allen, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 538; Van Hovenburgh v. Case, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 541; Dockstader v. Sammons, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 546; Clark v. Dewey, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 251; Walker v. Sheftall, 73 Ga. 806.

2. In United States v. Clough, (C. C. A.) 55 Fed. Rep. 373, which was an action brought by a United States commissioner against the government for fees earned as such commissioner, the court said: "We do not concur in the opinion of the court in McKinstry v. U. S., 40 Fed. 813, as to the principle to be followed in the construction of the fee bill. We do not know any rule of public policy or of practical experience which requires that where a statute allowing an officer's compensation 'admits of two interpretations, the words should be construed liberally in favor of the officer and not strictly in favor of the United States.' The well-known abuses under the fee system by which the government has been defrauded of large amounts through unconscionable charges and the lax administration of the law in this respect would seem to require a strict interpretation in favor of the United States rather than in favor of the officer."

But in U. S. v. Morse, 3 Story (U. S.) 87, Story, J., in construing an act which provided that no deputy collector should receive more than one thousand dollars for any services performed for the United States in any office or capacity, held that it applied only to emoluments received as deputy collector and did not prevent one who was also an inspector from collecting his fees as such.

3. Cole v. Muscatine, 14 Iowa 296; Moore v. White, 45 Mo. 206; St. Pancras v. Batterbury, 2 C. B. N. S. 477; 89 E. C. L. 471; Dudley v. Mayhew, 3 N. Y. 9; First Nat. Bank v. Lamb, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 434; U. S. v. Wyngall, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 16; Olcott v. Frazier, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 562; Sharpe v. Speir, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 76; Sharpe v. Johnson, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 92; In re Petition of Ford, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 92; O'Donnell v. McIntyre, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 615; Wheeler v. Mills, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 644; Whitney v. Thomas, 23 N. Y. 281; Hascal v. Madison University, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 174; In re Petition of Folsom, 2 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 55; People v. Gates, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 291; People v. Adirondack Co., 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; People v. Hillsdale, etc., Turnpike Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 190; Westbrook v. Willey, 47 N. Y. 457; Cruger v. Dougherty, 43 N. Y. 107; Weed v. Lyon, Walk. Ch. (Mich.) 77; Galpin v. Abbott, 6 Mich. 17; Thurston v. Prentiss, 1 Mich. 193; Kroop v. Forman, 31 Mich. 144; Bennett v. Olney, 56 Mich. 634; Lane v. Burnap, 39 Mich. 736; Burnett v. Scully, 56 Mich. 374; Welker v. Potter, 18 Ohio St. 85; Dennison v. Blumenthal, 37 Ill. App. 385; Wistar v. Kammerer, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 100; Day v. Cushman, 2 Ill. 475; Chapin v. Persse, etc.,

(10) Statutes Imposing Taxes.—In England, it is a firmly established rule that statutes imposing public burdens in the form of taxation are to be construed strictly. Where there is an ambiguity in the language which raises a doubt as to the legislative intent, such doubt must be resolved in favor of the persons upon whom it is sought to impose the burden.¹

But in the United States there is an irreconcilable conflict of Works, 30 Conn. 461; 79 Am. Dec. 263; Souter v. The Sea Witch, 1 Cal. 162; Logwood v. Planters', etc., Bank, Minor (Ala.) 23; Childress v. McGehee, Minor (Ala.) 131; Crawford v. State, Minor (Ala.) 143; Yancy v. Hankins, Minor (Ala.) 171; Hale v. Burton, Dudley (Ga.) 105.

Statutes giving married women the right to make contracts which they could not make at common law, must be followed strictly when they prescribe the manner of exercising such right. Bartlett v. O'Donoghue, 72 Mo. 563; Hoskinson v. Adkins, 77 Mo. 537; Bagby v. Emberson, 79 Mo. 139; Beckman v. Stanley, 8 Nev. 257; Shumaker v. Johnson, 35 Ind. 33; Mattox v. Hightshue, 39 Ind. 95; Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308; Armstrong v. Ross, 20 N. J. Eq. 109; Trimmer v. Heagy, 16 Pa. St. 484; Glidden v. Strupler, 52 Pa. St. 400; Dunham v. Wright, 53 Pa. St. 167; Graham v. Long, 65 Pa. St. 385; Miller v. Wentworth, 82 Pa. St. 280; Innis v. Templeton, 95 Pa. St. 262; 40 Am. Rep. 643; Miller v. Ruble, 107 Pa. St. 395; Montoursville Overseers v. Fairfield Overseers, 112 Pa. St. 199. See also, supra, this title, In Derogation of Common Law.

In Bensley v. Mountain Lake Water Co., 13 Cal. 306; 73 Am. Dec. 573, the court said: "All statutory modes of divesting titles are strictly construed. He who relies for a title upon an extraordinary mode of acquisition not by the will of the owner, express or implied, but against his will and by the mandate of the law, must show for his warrant a strict compliance with those statutory rules from which his title accrues."

Where parties undertake to enter into a submission to arbitration under a statute, they must follow strictly the statutory requirements. Abbott v. Dexter, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 108; Monosiet v. Post, 4 Mass. 532; Barnett v. Peck, 6 Vt. 456; Willingham v. Harrell, 36 Ala. 583; Halloran v. Bray, 29 Ga. 422. See also infra, this title, Mandatory or Directory; ATTACHMENT, vol. 1, p. 894; GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, p. 1096;

MECHANICS' LIENS, vol. 15, p. 1; SERVICE OF PROCESS vol. 22, p. 107; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 509.

1. Gurr v. Scudds, 11 Exch. 190; Warrington v. Furber, 8 East 242; Williams v. Sangar, 10 East 66; Wroughton v. Turtle, 11 M. & W. 561; Denn v. Diamond, 4 B. & C. 243; 10 E. C. L. 320; Tomkins v. Ashby, 6 B. & C. 541; 13 E. C. L. 249; Doe v. Snaith, 8 Bing. 146; 21 E. C. L. 253; Burder v. Veley, 12 Ad. & El. 246; 40 E. C. L. 48; Atty. Gen'l v. Middleton, 3 H. & N. 138; In re Micklethwait, 11 Exch. 452; Marquis of Chandos v. Com'rs, 6 Exch. 464; Caswell v. Cook, 11 C. B. N. S. 637; 103 E. C. L. 635; Oriental Bank v. Wright, 5 App. Cas. 842; Pryce v. Monmouthshire, etc., Canal Co., 4 App. Cas. 197; Reg. v. Barclay, 8 Q. B. Div. 306; Daines v. Heath, 3 C. B. 938; 54 E. C. L. 937; Gosling v. Veley, 12 Q. B. 407; 64 E. C. L. 405; Iles v. West Ham Assessment Committee, 8 Q. B. Div. 69; Partington v. Atty. Gen'l, L. R., 4 H. L. 122; Shaw v. Rudder, 9 Ir. C. L., N. S. 214; Reg. v. Mallow Union, 12 Ir. C. L., N. S. 35.

In Doe v. Snaith, 8 Bing. 147; 21 E. C. L. 253, Tindal, C. J., said: "As all stamp acts, being a burden on the subject, must be clearly expressed wherever they impose the burden, I should say that even if there were doubt we should take the smaller sum."

In Wroughton v. Turtle, 11 M. & W. 561, Parke, Baron, said: "It is a well-settled rule of law that every charge on the subject must be imposed by clear and unambiguous words."

In Marquis of Chandos v. Com'rs, 6 Exch. 464, Pollock, C. B., said: "It is a well-established rule in the construction of revenue acts that a duty cannot be imposed on the subject except by clear words. The meaning of the legislature must be distinctly made out from the terms of the statute."

In Gurr v. Scudds, 11 Exch. 190, Pollock, C. B., said: "If there is any doubt as to the meaning of the stamp act, it ought to be construed in favor of authority on this point. Many decisions approve and follow the English rule of strict construction;¹ but, on the other hand, it has been held in the United States courts that revenue laws are remedial and should receive a liberal construction,² although the subject, because a tax cannot be imposed without clear and express words for that purpose."

In Williams v. Sangar, 10 East 66, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said: "In the construction of these tax acts we must look at the strict words, however we may sometimes limit the generality of the expression used in them; but we must construe those words according to their plain meaning with reference to the subject-matter."

1. U. S. v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story (U. S.) 369; Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 202; Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 387; U. S. v. Watts, 1 Bond (U. S.) 580; U. S. v. 84 Boxes of Sugar, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 453; Sewall v. Jones, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 412; Green v. Holway, 101 Mass. 248; 3 Am. Rep. 339; Barnes v. Doe, 4 Ind. 132; Williams v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 36; Smith v. Waters, 25 Ind. 397; Williamsburg v. Lord, 51 Me. 599; Boyd v. Hood, 57 Pa. St. 98; Cahoon v. Coe, 57 N. H. 556.

In U. S. v. 84 Boxes of Sugar, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 453, McLean, J., said: "The statute under which these sugars were seized and condemned is a highly penal law, and should, in conformity with the rule on the subject, be construed strictly."

In Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 387, Story, J., said: "I may add in this connection that laws imposing duties are never construed beyond the natural import of the language, and duties are never imposed upon the citizens upon doubtful interpretations; for every duty imposes a burden on the public at large and is construed strictly, and must be made out in a clear and determinate manner from the language of the statute."

In U. S. v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story (U. S.) 369, the same learned judge said: "It is, as I conceive, a general rule in the interpretation of all statutes levying taxes or duties upon subjects or citizens not to extend their provision by implication beyond the clear import of the language used or to enlarge their operation so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out although standing upon a close analogy. In every case, therefore, of doubt, such statutes are construed most strongly against the government and in favor of the subjects or citizens, because burdens are not to be imposed nor presumed to be imposed beyond what the statutes expressly and clearly import. The revenue statutes are in no just sense either remedial laws or laws founded upon any public policy, and therefore are not to be liberally construed."

In Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 202, Nelson, J., said: "Another principle may also be invoked which is that in cases of serious ambiguity in the language of the act, or doubtful classification of articles, the construction is to be in favor of the importer, as duties are never imposed on the citizens upon vague or doubtful interpretations."

In Sewall v. Jones, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 412, Parker, C. J., said: "Statutes which impose restrictions upon trade or common occupations, or which levy an excise or tax upon them, must be construed strictly."

In Green v. Holway, 101 Mass. 248; 3 Am. Rep. 339, the court said: "Acts imposing duties of any kind are not to be extended by doubtful interpretation, but are to be construed by the rule that every charge upon the subject must be created by clear, unambiguous words."

2. Cliquot's Champagne, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 145; Taylor v. U. S., 3 How. (U. S.) 197; U. S. v. Hodson, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 406; U. S. v. 100 Barrels of Spirits, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 305; U. S. v. Willetts, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 220; U. S. v. 36 Barrels of High Wines, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 459; U. S. v. 3 Tons of Coal, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 379; U. S. v. Olney, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 275; 28 Cases, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 63; U. S. v. Cases of Cloths, Crabbe (U. S.) 356. Taylor v. U. S., 3 How. (U. S.) 197, is cited by the subsequent cases in that court as the authority upon which these decisions rest. But an examination of the case reveals the fact that Judge Story, who delivered the opinion, did not decide that revenue laws were remedial. And Judge Cooley, in his Treatise on Taxation (2d ed.), p. 271, note 3, says: "The opinion in this last case (Taylor v. U. S., 3 How. (U. S.) 197) was given by Mr. Justice Story, and the language made use of, which recent decisions indicate a return to the rule of strict construction.¹ Again, some of the courts take an intermediate position and hold that such statutes are neither penal nor remedial, and should receive an interpretation in accordance with the obvious intention and meaning of the legislature without invoking the rules of strict and liberal construction.²

consists largely in a quotation from the opinion given in the lower court, does not express his own views so clearly as was customary with that learned judge. . . . It would have been a remarkable circumstance if Mr. Justice Story had overruled his own opinion (U. S. v. Wigglesworth), delivered so recently that, at that time, his son (and reporter) had not issued the volume containing it."

In Cliquot's Champagne, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 145, Swayne, J., said: "Revenue laws are not penal laws in the sense that it requires them to be considered with great strictness in favor of the defendant. They are rather to be regarded as remedial in their character and intended to prevent fraud, suppress public wrong, and promote public good. They should be so construed as to carry out the intention of the legislature in passing them, and most effectually accomplish this object," citing Taylor v. U. S., 3 How. (U. S.) 210.

In U. S. v. Hodson, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 406, Swayne, J., again said: "The revenue statutes are not to be regarded as penal and therefore to be construed strictly; they are remedial in their character and are to be construed liberally to carry out the purpose of their enactment," citing Cliquot's Champagne, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 145.

In criticizing this case (U. S. v. Hodson, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 406), Judge Cooley in his Treatise on Taxation (2d ed.), pp. 270, 271, says: "It seems highly probable that the word 'remedial' has been employed by the learned judge delivering the opinion in this case in a sense different from that in which it is commonly used in the law. A remedial law, as the term is generally employed, is something quite different from the revenue laws." After examining the definitions of a remedial law by the elementary writers, the learned author continues: "These considerations would seem to justify the conclusion that the learned judge in applying the word 'remedial' to tax laws has used it in some political or special rather than in the strict legal sense, and that it was not the intention of the court to overrule the opinion of Mr. Justice Story in Wigglesworth's Case."

1. In American Net, etc., Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, the court said: "We think the intention of Congress that these goods should be classified as 'gilling twine' is plain; but were the question one of doubt, we should still feel obliged to resolve that doubt in favor of the importer, since the intention of Congress to impose a higher duty should be expressed in clear and unambiguous language," citing U. S. v. Isham, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 496; Hartman v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, and Gurr v. Scudds, 11 Exch. 190.

In Rice v. U. S., 53 Fed. Rep. 910, the court quoted the language of Judge Story in U. S. v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story (U. S.) 369, as the correct statement of the law, and cited American Net, etc., Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 474, among other authorities in support of the rule of strict construction.

2. U. S. v. Breed, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 159; U. S. v. 1,412 Gallons Distilled Spirits, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 428; Hubbard v. Brainard, 35 Conn. 568; Cornwall v. Todd, 38 Conn. 447. See also Higgins v. Rinker, 47 Tex. 303.

In U. S. v. Breed, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 159, it is said: "Revenue and duty acts are not in the sense of the law penal acts, and are not, therefore, to be construed strictly; nor are they, on the other hand, acts in furtherance of private rights and liberty, or remedial, and therefore to be construed with extraordinary liberality. They are to be construed according to the true import and meaning of their terms; and when the legislative intention is ascertained, that, and that only, is to be our guide in interpreting them."

In Hubbard v. Brainard, 35 Conn. 568, Butler, J., said: "A law imposing a tax is not to be construed strictly because it takes money or property in invitum (although its provisions are for that reason to be strictly executed), for it is taken as a share of a necessary public burden; nor liberally, like laws

(11) Statutes Conferring Right to Sue State.—A state cannot be sued in its own courts unless it has expressly consented to such action. And a statute permitting such suits is in derogation of sovereign power and must be construed strictly.¹

(12) Statutes Affecting Jurisdiction of Courts.—Acts creating courts of limited jurisdiction are construed strictly, and the powers of such courts will not be extended by implication further than is necessary for the exercise of the jurisdiction expressly conferred upon them.² On the other hand, it is a well-settled rule of construction that the jurisdiction of superior courts cannot be taken away except by express words or by necessary and irresistible implication.³ And if the jurisdiction is con-intended to effect directly some great public object, but fairly for the government and justly for the citizen, and so as to carry out the intention of the legislature gathered from the language used, read in connection with the general purpose of the law, and the nature of the property on which the tax is imposed, and of the legal relation of the taxpayer to it."

1. Greene v. Graham, 29 Ala. 61; State v. Stout, 7 Neb. 89; Rose v. Governor, 24 Tex. 496; Raymond v. State, 54 Miss. 562; 28 Am. Rep. 382; citing State v. Joiner, 23 Miss. 500; Parmilee v. McNutt, 1 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 179; Josselyn v. Stone, 28 Miss. 753. But see State v. Curran, 12 Ark. 321, where it appears that the state constitution contains a mandatory provision directing the legislature to make provision for suing the state, and a statute making such provision was construed liberally.

For presumptions against the sovereign's being included when not expressly mentioned in a statute, see supra, this title, Presumptions as to Including Government.

2. Thompson v. Cox, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 311; Pringle v. Carter, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 53; School Inspectors v. People, 20 Ill. 525; Steamboat Delta v. Walker, 24 Ill. 233; Wakefield v. State, 5 Ind. 195; Matlock v. Strange, 8 Ind. 57; O'Brian v. State, 12 Ind. 369; Martin v. Fales, 18 Me. 23; 36 Am. Dec. 693; Call v. Mitchell, 39 Me. 465; State v. Metzger, 26 Mo. 65; Williams v. Bower, 26 Mo. 601; State v. Anderson, 2 Overt (Tenn.) 6; 5 Am. Dec. 648; Walker v. Wynne, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 62; Vanbibber v. Vanbibber, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 53; Caulfield v. Stevens, 28 Cal. 118; East Union Tp. v. Ryan, 86 Pa. St. 459; Diss Urban Sanitary Authority

v. Aldrich, 2 Q. B. Div. 179; Flower v. Lloyd, 6 Ch. Div. 297; Hartley v. Hooker, 2 Cowp. 523; Montreal v. Stevens, 3 App. Cas. 605.

In Hartley v. Hooker, 2 Cowp. 523, Lord Mansfield, said: "If a new offense is created by statute, and a special jurisdiction out of the course of the common law is prescribed, it must be followed. If not strictly pursued all is a nullity and coram non jndice, and objections may be taken in any stage of the cause."

Where a limited jurisdiction is given by statute, the act should be construed strictly as to the extent of the jurisdiction and liberally as to the mode of proceeding. Barret v. Chitwood, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 431; Russell v. Wheeler, 1 Hempst. (U. S.) 3.

3. Barnawell v. Threadgill, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 86; Com. v. Hudson, 11 Gray (Mass.) 64; Com. v. White, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 453; Gould v. Hayes, 19 Ala. 450; Burginhofen v. Martin, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 479; Overseers of Poor v. Smith, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 363; Com. v. McCloskey, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 369; In re Twenty-eighth Street, 102 Pa. St. 140; Wright v. Marsh, 2 Greene (Iowa) 94; Murfree v. Leeper, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 1; State v. St. Louis County Ct., 38 Mo. 403; Tackett v. Vogler, 85 Mo. 480 (overruling Stamps v. Bridwell, 57 Mo. 22, and Williams v. Payne, 80 Mo. 409); Fidelity Trust Co. v. Gill Car Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 737; Rex v. Abbott, 2 Doug. 553, note; Cates v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442; Shipman v. Hanbest, 4 T. R. 109; Albon v. Pyke, 4 M. & G. 424; 43 E. C. L. 222; Balfour v. Malcolm, 8 C. & F. 500; Jacobs v. Brett, L. R., 20 Eq. 1; Rex v. London, 9 B. & C. 27; 17 E. C. L. 325; Crisp v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394; 21 E. C. L. 333; Reeves v. White, 17 Q. B. 995; 79 E. C. L. 995;

stitutional, the legislature has no power to enlarge or abridge it at all.¹

(13) Private Acts.—Acts conferring special privileges upon or granting public property to private individuals or corporations are construed strictly against the grantees and in favor of the state.² Such acts are in the nature of common assurances, but the rule of construction of contracts between private individuals is exactly reversed when the government is the grantor. This rule is adopted on the ground that the language used is not that

Richards v. Dyke, 3 Q. B. 256; 43 E. C. L. 724; Timms v. Williams, 3 Q. B. 413; 43 E. C. L. 798.

In Barnawell v. Threadgill, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 86, Ruffin, C. J., said: "The rule of construction is settled that statutes which merely give affirmative jurisdiction to one court, do not oust that previously existing in another court. There is nothing incongruous in concurrent jurisdiction. And, therefore, that of the court of equity or of the higher courts proceeding according to the course of the common law is never taken away but by plain words or as plain intendments."

In Com. v. Hudson, 11 Gray (Mass.) 65, Shaw, C. J., said: "It is contended that the word concurrent being omitted in section 2 the justices of the peace have exclusive jurisdiction. It is immaterial whether it was omitted by amendment or not. Taking the language of the statute as it is, what is the effect of this section? Before this statute, the court of common pleas had jurisdiction over its subject-matter. Is that jurisdiction taken away? It is no answer to say that another tribunal has jurisdiction, for that is very common. It is, in such case, concurrent jurisdiction whether so called in the statute or not. Then is the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas, which it had before, taken away? There must be words of limitation to take it away, either by using the word 'exclusive' or by repealing the former act giving jurisdiction by which it may appear the legislature meant not only to confer jurisdiction on justices of the peace, but also to take away the other jurisdiction."

1. Dillard v. Noel, 2 Ark. 449; Hicks v. Bell, 3 Cal. 219; Meyer v. Kalkmann, 6 Cal. 582; Parsons v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 5 Cal. 43; 63 Am. Dec. 76; Com. v. Allegheny County, 37 Pa. St. 237; State v. Mace, 5 Md. 337; State v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 18 Md. 193; Chandler v. Nash, 5 Mich.

409; Waldby v. Callendar, 8 Mich. 430; Jones v. Smith, 14 Mich. 334; Heath v. Judge, 37 Mich. 372; Averill v. Perrott, 74 Mich. 296; Vail v. Dinning, 44 Mo. 210; Landers v. Staten Island R. Co., 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 346; Callanan v. Judd, 23 Wis. 343; Connors v. Gorey, 32 Wis. 518; Galsworthy v. Durrant, 8 W. R. 594.

2. Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Co., 1 M. & K. 162; Gildart v. Gladstone, 11 East 685; Rex v. Croke, Cowp. 301; Lofft 438; Dock Co. v. La Marche, 8 B. & C. 52; 15 E. C. L. 153; Dudley Canal Co. v. Grazebrook, 1 B. & Ad. 59; Eton College v. Bishop of Winchester, Lofft 401; Hull Dock Co. v. Browne, 2 B. & Ad. 45; Rex v. Cumberworth, 4 Ad. & El. 741; 31 E. C. L. 170; Webb v. Manchester R. Co., 4 Myl. & C. 116; Stockton, etc., R. Co. v. Barrett, 11 Cl. & F. 590; 7 M. & G. 870 (per Lords Lyndhurst and Brougham in House of Lords); Scales v. Pickering, 4 Bing. 448; 15 E. C. L. 37; Parker v. Great Western R. Co., 7 M. & G. 253; 49 E. C. L. 253; Eversfield v. Mid-Sussex R. Co., 3 De G. & J. 286; Simpson v. Staffordshire Water Works, 34 L. J. Ch. 380; Reg. v. Wycombe R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 310; Morgan v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 4 C. P. 97; Fenwick v. East London R. Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 544; Atty. Gen'l v. Furness R. Co., 47 L. J. Ch. 776; Lamb v. North London R. Co., L. R., 4 Ch. 522; Clowes v. Staffordshire Potteries Waterworks Co., L. R., 8 Ch. 125; Stourbridge Canal v. Wheeley, 2 B. & Ad. 792; Abergavenny v. Brace, L. R., 7 Exch. 160; Moran v. Miami County, 2 Black (U. S.) 722; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 411; Mills v. St. Clair County, 8 How. (U. S.) 581; Binghamton Bridge Case, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 51; U. S. v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 738; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412; Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Missouri River Packet Co., 125 U. S. 271; Rice v. Railroad Co., 1 Black (U. S.)

of the grantor, but that of the grantees who sought and obtained the enactment of such statutes.¹ But such acts are laws as well

358; Ohio Life, etc., Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. (U. S.) 435; Leavenworth, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., 92 U. S. 733; Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Litchfield, 23 How. (U. S.) 66; St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Phelps, 26 Fed. Rep. 569; Broadbent v. Tuscaloosa Scientific, etc., Assoc., 45 Ala. 170; Hartford Bridge Co. v. Union Ferry Co., 29 Conn. 210; Campbell's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360; Young v. McKenzie, 3 Ga. 31; Macon v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 7 Ga. 221; Pike County v. Griffin, etc., Plank Road Co., 9 Ga. 475; Sugar v. Sackett, 13 Ga. 462; Miners' Bank v. U. S., 1 Greene (Iowa) 553; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Kinney, 8 Ind. 402; Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 145; Wales v. Stetson, 2 Mass. 143; 3 Am. Dec. 39; Hood v. Dighton Bridge, 3 Mass. 263; Perry v. Wilson, 7 Mass. 393; St. Louis River, etc., Co. v. Nelson Lumber Co. (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 976; Sprague v. Birdsall, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 419; Rathbun v. Acker, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 393; Drake v. Drake, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 110; Perry v. Newsom, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 28; Lee v. Shankle, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 313; Raleigh, etc., R. Co. v. Reid, 64 N. Car. 155; McAden v. Jenkins, 64 N. Car. 796; McAfee v. Southern R. Co., 36 Miss. 669; Bank of Louisiana v. Williams, 46 Miss. 618; 12 Am. Rep. 319; Gaines v. Coates, 51 Miss. 335; State v. Bentley, 23 N. J. L. 538; Bridge Co. v. Hoboken Land, etc., Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 81, 503; Morris Canal, etc., Co. v. Central R. Co., 16 N. J. Eq. 436; Water Com'rs v. Hudson, 13 N. J. Eq. 420; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. L. 623; Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; Jersey City Gas Light Co. v. Consumers' Gas Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 427; Townsend v. Brown, 24 N. J. L. 80; Currier v. Marietta, etc., R. Co., 11 Ohio St. 228; Stormfeltz v. Manor Turnpike Co., 13 Pa. St. 555; Bank of Pennsylvania v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 144; Packer v. Sunbury, etc., R. Co., 19 Pa. St. 211; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Canal Com'rs, 21 Pa. St. 9; Allegheny v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 26 Pa. St. 355; Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa. St. 303; 67 Am. Dec. 464; West Branch Boom Co. v. Dodge, 31 Pa. St. 285; Com. v. Central Pass. R. Co., 52 Pa. St. 506; Talmadge v. North American Coal, etc., Co., 3 Head (Tenn.) 337; Brennan v. Bradshaw, 53 Tex. 330. See also Tompkins v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 6; 18 Fed. Rep. 344; 21 Fed. Rep. 370.

1. In Parker v. Great Western R. Co., 7 M. & G. 288; 49 E. C. L. 287, Tindal, C. J., said: "And it is to be observed that the language of these acts of Parliament is to be treated as the language of the promoters of them. They ask the legislature to confer great privileges upon them, and profess to give the public certain advantages in return. Acts passed under such circumstances should be construed strictly against the parties obtaining them, but liberally in favor of the public."

In Raleigh, etc., R. Co. v. Reid, 64 N. Car. 155, Pearson, C. J., said: "It is well settled that contracts made by the state with individuals, in granting charters, are not to be construed by the same rules as contracts between individuals. In the latter, the rule of the common law, which is the same as common sense, is, 'words are to be taken in the strongest sense against the party using them,' on the idea that self-interest induces a man to select words most favorable for himself. It is otherwise when the state is a party, for it is known that in obtaining charters, although the sovereign is presumed to use the words, in point of fact the bills are drafted by individuals seeking to procure the grant; and that 'the promoters,' as they are styled in England, or the 'lobby members,' as they are styled on this side of the Atlantic, have the charters or acts of incorporation drafted to suit their own purposes." This language is quoted and approved in McAden v. Jenkins, 64 N. Car. 801. Raleigh, etc., R. Co. v. Reid, 64 N. Car. 155, was reversed, on constitutional grounds, by the Supreme Court of the United States in 13 Wall. (U. S.) 269.

In Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 145, Parsons, C. J., said: "Private statutes made for the accommodation of particular citizens or corporations ought not to be construed to affect the rights or privileges of others, unless such construction results from express words or from necessary implication."

In Morris Canal, etc., Co. v. Central R. Co., 16 N. J. Eq. 436, the court said: "It is a well-settled rule of construction as contracts, and when the language leaves no doubt as to the legislative intent, there is no room for construction. The will of the legislature should control.¹

b. LIBERAL CONSTRUCTION—(1) Definition.—A liberal construction is that by which the letter of the statute² is enlarged or restrained so as more effectually to accomplish the purpose intended. It is called also “equitable construction.”³ in regard to a public grant that the grantee can take nothing not clearly given him by the grant. In cases of doubt the grant is construed in favor of the state and most strongly against the grantee.”

In May v. Frazee, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 391; 14 Am. Dec. 169, the court by Mills, J., said: “It is true, it is decided by this court in the case of Elmondorff, etc. v. Carmichael, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 472; 14 Am. Dec. 86, that the recital in a private act of assembly cannot be evidence against strangers, or conclude their rights; still, if admissions were there made against the parties procuring the passage of the act, such admissions ought to be heard against them, on the principle that their writings and sayings may be used as evidence against them, and not for them. The recitals in such an act, as said in the case before cited, are evidence that facts were so represented to the legislature by the petitioners.”

1. Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 97 U. S. 491; Winona, etc., R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618; St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Grenhalgh, 26 Fed. Rep. 563; Wolcott v. Des Moines Co., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 681; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755; Dubuque, etc., R. Co. v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 109 U. S. 329; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629; Nash v. Sullivan, 29 Minn. 206; Jackson, etc., R. Co. v. Davison, 65 Mich. 416, citing Johnson v. Ballou, 28 Mich. 384; Bowes v. Haywood, 35 Mich. 241; Fenn v. Kinsey, 45 Mich. 446; Rogers v. Port Huron, etc., R. Co., 45 Mich. 460; Farnsworth v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 92 U. S. 49.

In Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 97 U. S. 491, Field, J., said: “It is always to be borne in mind in construing a congressional grant, that the act by which it is made is a law as well as a conveyance, and that such effect must be given to it as will carry out the intent of Congress. That intent should not be defeated by applying to the grant the rules of the common law which are properly applicable only to transfers between private parties. To the validity of such transfers it may be admitted that there must exist a present power of identification of the land, and that where no such power exists, instruments with words of present grant are operative if at all only as contracts to convey; but the rules of the common law must yield in this as in all other cases to the legislative will.”

Quoted with approval in Nash v. Sullivan, 29 Minn. 214.

In Jackson, etc., R. Co. v. Davison, 65 Mich. 430, the court, after analyzing the argument of defendant’s counsel, said: “The fault of this reasoning is that it seeks to apply the principles which relate to common-law grants between private persons to an act of the legislature which differs from a grant of a private person in that it is both a grant and a law, and, as such, the intent of the law is to be kept in view and its purpose effectuated whenever the subject-matter of the grant comes in controversy; and that construction must be placed upon it which will preserve and carry out the object of the legislature, however such construction may conflict with the principles of the common law or prevent the attaching of equities which would spring from transactions between private parties.”

2. 1 Bouv. Inst. 87.

3. Bouv. Law Dict., tit. Construction; Anderson’s Law Dict., tit. Construction.

“By an equitable construction, a case not within the letter of a statute is sometimes holden to be within the meaning, because it is within the mischief for which a remedy is provided. The reason for such construction is that the law maker could not set down every case in express terms.” Bacon’s Abr., tit. Statute (I) 6.

“In law, all cases cannot be foreseen or expressed. The object of interpreting laws by what is called ‘equity,’ supplies as far as possible this deficiency by a recurrence to natural principles of

(2) Early Application of Rule.—As formerly understood, equitable construction extended to general cases the application of statutes which literally included special cases only.¹ And the doctrine was frequently invoked to exclude from the operation of a statute cases which were clearly within its letter, on the ground that they were not within the spirit and reason of the act.²

(3) The Modern Rule.—The extreme cases of equitable construction, it has been said, were justified only by the great con-justice. It is the same with cases excepted by reason and necessity out of the prescribed rules." Potter's Dwaris 239.

When the expression in a statute is special or particular, but the reason is general, the expression should be deemed general. 1 Kent Com. 462; 10 Coke 101b; Eshleman's Appeal, 74 Pa. St. 47; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 380; 8 Am. Rep. 243; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 258.

In Somerset v. Dighton, 12 Mass. 383, it is said: "But in the exposition of statutes such a construction will be given as will best effectuate the intention of the makers. In some cases the letter of a statute may be restrained by an equitable construction; in others enlarged; and in others, the construction may be even contrary to the letter, for a case may be within the letter and not within the meaning of a statute."

1. The word "ancestor" was construed to include "predecessor." 2 Inst. 242. A statute relating to "executors" was held to apply also to "administrators." Eyston v. Studd, 2 Plowd. 465. See Hoguet v. Wallace, 28 N. J. L. 526. A statute naming the "warden of the Fleet" was construed to include all jailers. Platt v. Lock, 1 Plowd. 35. An act giving a bill of exceptions to the rulings of the judges of the court of common pleas was construed to apply to all the superior courts at Westminster, and to the county courts, hundred courts, and courts baron, on the ground that they were still more liable to err. 2 Inst. 426; Strother v. Hutchinson, 4 Bing. N. Cas. 83; 33 E. C. L. 283. And a statute which directed judges of the king's bench to hear their cases in due order was extended by equitable construction to the judges of the other courts. 2 Inst. 256. The statute of Gloucester which named London only was held to apply to all cities and boroughs. 2 Inst. 321. A statute directing judges not to interfere with the Bishop of Norwich or his clergy in spiritual suits was held to protect all other bishops. 2 Inst. 487. See Platt v. Sheriffs of London, 1 Plowd. 36. A statute which enacted that a vessel should not be adjudged a wreck, if a man, a dog, or a cat escaped from it, was held to include a ship from which any other animal escaped. 2 Inst. 165; 5 Rep. 107. In Hill v. Grange, 1 Plowd. 178, it was said: "When an act is made to remedy any mischief, there, in order to aid things in like degree, one action has been used for another; one thing for another; one place for another, and one person for another, notwithstanding that in some cases the thing is penal." See also Wheatley v. Lane, 1 Saund. 216, and note to Eyston v. Studd, 2 Plowd. 465.

2. The equitable doctrine of part performance, whereby contracts within the letter of the Statute of Frauds are excluded from its operation by judicial construction, arose from the operation of this rule. The declared purpose of the act was to prevent frauds and perjuries, and cases in which there was no danger of either were said to be out of the statute. Atty. Gen'l v. Day, 1 Ves. 221 (per Lord Hardwicke); Lincoln v. Wright, 4 De G. & J. 16; Haigh v. Kaye, L. R., 7 Ch. 474; Williams v. Evans, L. R., 19 Eq. 547; Ungley v. Ungley, 5 Ch. Div. 887; Bond v. Hopkins, 1 S. & L. 433 (per Lord Redesdale); Lester v. Foxcroft, 1 Colles 108; Webster v. Webster, 27 L. J. Ch. 115; Wilson v. West Hartlepool Co., 2 De G. J. & G. 475; Nunn v. Fabian, L. R., 1 Ch. 35; Hughes v. Morris, 2 De G. M. & G. 349. The application of the rule to these cases was never recognized by the common-law courts. Cocking v. Ward, 1 C. B. 858; 50 E. C. L. 858; Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East 159. See FRAUDS, STATUTES OF, vol. 8, p. 738.

So, too, decisions extending the time within which a new action might be brought, where a former one was brought within the time named in the ciseness of ancient statutes.¹ Again, it has been remarked that the lax interpretation of the period may have caused much of the looseness and lack of precision in the language employed by Parliament in contemporaneous statutes.² Whatever necessity there may have been for this method of construction in early times, it has long been considered dangerous,³ and the courts have grown much more conservative. The modern rule is that where the language of a statute is plain and unambiguous it must not be modified by the courts; and if an ambiguity arises, the operation of the statute may be enlarged or restrained so far as is necessary to carry out the ascertained will of the legislature and no farther.⁴

Statute of Limitations, and was abated by the death of one of the parties, were due to an equitable construction of the Statute of Limitations. Hodsden v. Harridge, 2 Wm. Saund. 642; Curlewis v. Mornington, 7 El. & Bl. 283; 90 E. C. L. 281; Wilcox v. Huggins, 2 Str. 907; Fitzgib. 172, 189; Piggott v. Rush, 4 Ad. & El. 912; 31 E. C. L. 228.

So, where an act declared that no method of assigning or transferring stock, except that provided in the act, should be valid, and directed that the owner might devise it by will attested by two witnesses, it was held that where the owner devised stock by an unattested will, the executor was bound by the direction for the disposition of the property, notwithstanding the invalidity of the devise. Ripley v. Waterworth, 7 Ves. 440; Franklin v. Bank of Eng., 1 Russ. 589.

To this class of decisions belong also refusals on the part of courts of equity to give relief against usurious contracts without payment of the debts and lawful interest. Benfield v. Solomon, 9 Ves. Jr. 184; Eslava v. Elmore, 50 Ala. 587; Pickett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; Tooke v. Newman, 75 Ill. 215; Rogers v. Rathbun, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 367; Mitchell v. Oakley, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 68; Fulton Bank v. Beach, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 429; Utica Ins. Co. v. Scott, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 606; Jackson v. Varick, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 294; Miller v. Ford, 1 N. J. Eq. 358; Jordan v. Trumbo, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 102; Legoux v. Wante, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 184; McRaven v. Forbes, 6 How. (Miss.) 569.

1. 2 Inst. 401; 10 Rep. 30b.

In Gwynne v. Burnell, 6 Bing. N. Cas. 453; 37 E. C. L. 451, Lord Brougham, after characterizing such construction as legislation and not interpretation, said: "This becomes particularly improper in dealing with a modern statute, because the extreme conciseness of the ancient statutes was the only ground for the sort of legislative interpretation frequently put upon their words, and the prolixity of modern statutes is still more remarkable than the shortness of the old."

2. Wilson v. Knubley, 7 East 134; 3 Smith 128 (per Lord Ellenborough).

3. Brandling v. Barrington, 6 B. & C. 475; 13 E. C. L. 238 (per Lord Tenterden); Gwynne v. Burnell, 6 Bing. N. Cas. 453; 37 E. C. L. 451 (opinion of Lord Brougham); Colleham v. Cook, Willes 397 (per Willes, C. J.); Guthrie v. Fisk, 3 B. & C. 183; 110 E. C. L. 48; Entick v. Carrington, 19 How. St. Tr. 1029, 1060.

4. Ex parte Walton, 17 Ch. Div. 746; Edwards v. Edwards, 2 Ch. Div. 291; Abley v. Dale, 11 C. B. 390; 73 E. C. L. 389; Castrique v. Page, 13 C. B. 463; 76 E. C. L. 462; Mattison v. Hart, 14 C. B. 385; 78 E. C. L. 383; Macdougall v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 769; 73 E. C. L. 767; Gether v. Capper, 15 C. B. 706; 80 E. C. L. 704; Perry v. Skinner, 2 M. & W. 476; Eastern Union R. Co. v. Cochrane, 9 Exch. 204; Hollingsworth v. Palmer, 4 Exch. 267; Heslop v. Baker, 6 Exch. 740; Warburton v. Loveland, 1 H. & B. 648; Atty. Gen'l v. Hallett, 2 H. & N. 375; In re Hammersmith Rent Charge, 4 Exch. 100.

In Ex parte Walton, 17 Ch. Div. 746, Jessel, M. R., said: "I should like to say a word or two as to the rules which are binding on all courts in regard to the construction of statutes as well as of all other instruments. Whatever may have been the case in times past, in modern times those rules have become perfectly well settled. They have become much more limited as regards the power of the courts and at the same time so well recognized as to be binding on this court and all other courts."

In Caledonian R. Co. v. North British R. Co., 6 App. Cas. 114, Lord Sel-

The American rule is in substantial accord with the modern English rule. It is laid down as a fundamental principle of construction that effect must be given to the intent of the legislature, and where that intent is plainly expressed the language must be taken in its plain and ordinary signification. But when the court is confronted with an ambiguity, or an absurdity would arise from giving the language its ordinary meaning, the rules of construction are invoked to ascertain the true legislative intent, and the letter of an act may be sacrificed only so far as is necessary to give effect to such intent.¹

borne, in construing the statute then under consideration, said: "The more literal construction ought not to prevail, if (as the court below has thought) it is opposed to the intentions of the legislature as apparent by the statute; and, if the words are sufficiently flexible to admit of some other construction by which that intention will be better effectuated." And in the same case at page 131, Lord Blackburn said: "Lord Wensleydale used to enunciate (I have heard him many and many a time) that which he called the golden rule for construing all written engagements. I find that he stated it very clearly and accurately in Grey v. Pearson, 6 H. L. Cas. 106, in the following terms: 'I have been long and deeply impressed with the wisdom of the rule now I believe universally adopted, at least in the courts of law in Westminster Hall, that in construing wills, and indeed statutes, and all written instruments, the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to, unless that would lead to some absurdity, or some repugnance or some inconsistency with the rest of the instrument, in which case the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words may be modified so as to avoid that absurdity or inconsistency, but no further.' I agree in that completely; but, unfortunately, in the cases in which there is real difficulty, it does not help us much, because the cases in which there is real difficulty are those in which there is a controversy as to what the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words used, with reference to the subject-matter, is."

In Abley v. Dale, 11 C. B. 390; 73 E. C. L. 389, Jervis, C. J., said: "If the precise words used are plain and unambiguous, in our judgment we are bound to construe them in their ordinary sense, even though they do lead in our view of the case to an absurdity or manifest injustice. Words may be modified or varied where their import is doubtful or obscure, but we assume the functions of legislators when we depart from the ordinary meaning of the precise words used merely because we see, or fancy we see, an absurdity or manifest injustice from an adherence to the literal meaning."

1. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 2 Ala. 571; Thompson v. State, 20 Ala. 54; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; Reynolds v. Holland, 35 Ark. 56; Haney v. State, 34 Ark. 263; Ex parte Ellis, 11 Cal. 222; People v. Dana, 22 Cal. 11; Smith v. Randall, 6 Cal. 47; 65 Am. Dec. 475; Tynan v. Walker, 35 Cal. 634; Farrell Foundry v. Dart, 26 Conn. 376; George v. Board of Education, 33 Ga. 344; Erwin v. Moore, 15 Ga. 361; Chandler v. Lee, 1 Idaho, N. S. 349 (to avoid absurdity); Frye v. Chicago etc., R. Co., 73 Ill. 399; Castner v. Walrod, 83 Ill. 171; 25 Am. Rep. 369; Perry County v. Jefferson County, 94 Ill. 214 (where literal interpretation leads to an absurdity); People v. Hoffman, 97 Ill. 234; Maxwell v. Collins, 8 Ind. 38; Miller v. State, 106 Ind. 415; Middleton v. Greeson, 106 Ind. 18; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Wilson, 108 Ind. 308; State v. Poydras, 9 La. Ann. 165; Bathurst v. Course, 3 La. Ann. 260; Commercial Bank v. Foster, 5 La. Ann. 516; Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285; Whitney v. Whitney, 14 Mass. 92; Somerset v. Dighton, 12 Mass. 383; Staniels v. Raymond, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 314; Shaw, C. J., in Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 370; 35 Am. Dec. 326; Wilde, J., in Doane v. Phillips, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 226; Burlingame v. Bell, 16 Mass. 318; Holbrook v. Holbrook, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 250; Mendon v. Worcester, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 235; Com. v. Cambridge, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 267; Brown v. Pendergast, 7 Allen (Mass.) 427; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 1; Beall v. Harwood, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 167; 3 Am. Dec. 532; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403; Ingraham v. Speed, 30 Miss. 410; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 17; Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 469; Barstow v. Smith, Walk. (Mich.) 394; State v. King, 44 Mo. 283; Riddick v. Governor, 1 Mo. 147; Riddick v. Walsh, 15 Mo. 519; State v. Brewster, 42 N. J. L. 125; Brown v. Wright, 13 N. J. L. 240; Associates of Jersey Co. v. Davison, 29 N. J. L. 415; Tonnele v. Hall, 4 N. Y. 140; Hyatt v. Taylor, 42 N. Y. 259; Jackson v. Collins, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 89; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; 8 Am. Rep. 243; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228; Murray v. New York Cent. R. Co., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 339; Allen v. Parish, 3 Ohio 198; Keith v. Quinney, 1 Oregon 364; Bradbury v. Wagonhorst, 54 Pa. St. 180; State v. Clarks-ville, etc., R. Co., 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 88; People v. Hill, 3 Utah 344 (false reference corrected); Simonds v. Powers, 28 Vt. 354; Ryegate v. Wardsboro, 30 Vt. 746; Gilkey v. Cook, 60 Wis. 133 (to avoid absurdity); Palms v. Shawano County, 61 Wis. 211 ("south" read "north"); Encking v. Simmons, 28 Wis. 272; Chapman v. State, 16 Tex. App. 76; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. U. S.) 627; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 64; U. S. v. Buchanan, 9 Fed. Rep. 689.

In Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 366; 35 Am. Dec. 326, Shaw, C. J., said: "It is unquestionably a well-settled rule of construction, applicable as well to penal statutes as to others, that when the words are not precise and clear, such construction will be adopted as shall appear most reasonable and best suited to accomplish the objects of the statute, and where any particular construction would lead to an absurd consequence, it will be presumed that some exception or qualification was intended by the legislature to avoid such conclusion."

In Encking v. Simmons, 28 Wis. 272, Dixon, C. J., said: "The proposition, however it may once have been held or considered, that the courts, upon what is termed an equitable construction or otherwise, may, against the plain language of the statute, in opposition to the intent clearly expressed by the words, mitigate the 'violence of the letter' by introducing exceptions where the statute itself contains none, so as to relieve in cases of hardship or particular inconvenience, has been too long and too frequently rejected to be now the subject of serious argument or doubt. Such doctrine, if it ever existed, was long since exploded, and the rule now uniformly recognized and acted upon is, that whatever else may be done with the words of a statute, they may never, in the language of Lord Bacon, 'be taken to a repugnant intent.'"

In Farrell Foundry v. Dart, 26 Conn. 376, Storrs, C. J., said: "The rule of expounding statutes referred to by the plaintiff in error by which they may be sometimes extended beyond their words, does not apply to this case, because it is resorted to only in furtherance of the clear intention of the legislature, and where the words of an act are not plain or are doubtful."

In Swift v. Luce, 27 Me. 285, Shepley, J., said: "But courts of justice can give effect to legislative enactments only to the extent to which they may be made operative by a fair and liberal construction of the language used. It is not their province to supply defective enactments by an attempt to carry out fully the purposes which may be supposed to have occasioned those enactments. This would be but an assumption by the judicial of the duties of the legislative department."

In Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403, Stewart, J., said: "It is only in cases where the meaning of a statute is doubtful that the courts are authorized to indulge in conjecture as to the intention of the legislature, or to look to consequences in the construction of the law."

In Rudderow v. State, 31 N. J. L. 512, Elmer, J., said: "No principle is better settled or more important to be faithfully adhered to by courts called upon to enforce written statutes than, in the absence of ambiguity in the language used, no exposition shall be made which is in opposition to the express words; or, as the maxim is sometimes expressed, it is not allowed to interpret what has no need of interpretation."

In State v. Brewster, 42 N. J. L. 125, the court said: "Unless an intent, differing from that which arises from the literal sense of the words used, results from a resort to the context of the section or from acts in pari materia, the only duty of the court is to construe the words of the section naturally and literally." citing Douglass v. Essex County, 38 N. J. L. 214; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Com'rs, 18 N. J. L. 71; Townsend v. Brown, 24 N. J. L. 89; Gay v. Hervey, 41 N. J. L. 39.

(4) Remedial Statutes.—Remedial statutes are made to supply defects or abridge superfluities in the law;¹ and the rule is that they are to be construed liberally for the suppression of the mischief and the advancement of the remedy.² In construing such statutes, the old law, the mischief, and the remedy must be kept in mind;³ and, within the limits of the modern rule just examined, that which is within the mischief intended to be remedied

In U. S. v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 399, Washington, J., said: "Where a law is plain and unambiguous, whether it be expressed in general or limited terms, the legislature should be intended to mean what they have plainly expressed, and consequently no room is left for construction. But, if from a view of the whole law or from other laws in pari materia, the evident intention is different from the literal import of the terms employed to express it in a particular part of the law, that intention should prevail, for that, in fact, is the will of the legislature."

1. 1 Black. Com. 86-87.

2. Drayton v. Grimke, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 392; Blake v. Heyward, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 208; Turtle v. Hartwell, 6 T. R. 429; Twycross v. Grant, 2 C. P. Div. 530; Wimbish v. Tailbois, 1 Plowd. 47; Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7b; Magdalen College's Case, 11 Rep. 74; St. Peter's v. Middleborough, 2 Y. & J. 196; Johnes v. Johnes, 3 Dow. 15; Atcheson v. Everitt, 1 Cowp. 391; Daputo v. Wyllie, L. R., 5 P. C. 482; Reg. v. Pilkington, 2 El. & Bl. 546; 75 E. C. L. 546; U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 565; U. S. v. Rhodes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 36; Jacob v. U. S., 1 Brock. (U. S.) 520; Vigo's Case, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 648; Silver v. Ladd, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 226; Parks v. Turner, 12 How. (U. S.) 46; Sprowl v. Lawrence, 33 Ala. 674; White County v. Key, 30 Ark. 603; White v. Steam Tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462; Cullerton v. Mead, 22 Cal. 95; Wolcott v. Pond, 19 Conn. 597; First School Dist. v. Ufford, 52 Conn. 44; Neal v. Moultrie, 12 Ga. 104; Shumate v. Williams, 34 Ga. 251; State v. Blair, 32 Ind. 313; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 52 Ill. 260; Jackson v. Warren, 32 Ill. 331; Smith v. Stevens, 82 Ill. 554; New Orleans v. St. Romes, 9 La. Ann. 573; Fox v. Sloo, 10 La. Ann. 11; Brown v. Pendergast, 7 Allen (Mass.) 427; Whitney v. Whitney, 14 Mass. 88; Edwards v. Goulding, 38 Miss. 118; Excelsior Mfg. Co. v. Keyser, 62 Miss. 155; Franklin v. Franklin, 1 Md. Ch. 342; Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47

Md. 217; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Briggs, 22 N. J. L. 676; Davenport v. Barnes, 2 N. J. L. 211; Smith v. Allen, 79 Me. 536; Smith v. Moffat, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 65; Hudler v. Golden, 36 N. Y. 446; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 304; Gillespie v. Winberg, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 325; Stuyvesant v. New York, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 604; Hart v. Albany, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 571; Gillet v. Moody, 3 N. Y. 479; Wilber v. Paine, 1 Ohio 256; Pancoast v. Ruffin, 1 Ohio 385; Burgett v. Burgett, 1 Ohio 481; 13 Am. Dec. 634; McCormick v. Alexander, 2 Ohio 74; Tucker v. Constable, 16 Oregon 407; Poor Dist. v. Poor Dist., 109 Pa. St. 579; Hassenplug's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 527; Quinn v. Fidelity Ben. Assoc., 100 Pa. St. 382; Schuylkill Nav. Co. v. Loose, 19 Pa. St. 15; Taylor v. McGill, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 294; Thorpe v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 27 Vt. 147; Congdon v. Congdon, 59 Vt. 597; Janesville Hay Tool Co. v. Boyd, 35 W. Va. 240; and other cases cited in other notes to this section.

3. Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7b; Plowd. 205; Co. Litt. 11, 42.

In 1 Black. Com. 87, it said: "There are three points to be considered in the construction of all remedial statutes; the old law, the mischief, and the remedy; that is, how the common law stood at the making of the act; what the mischief was for which the common law did not provide, and what remedy the Parliament hath provided to cure this mischief. And it is the business of the judges so to construe the act as to suppress the mischief and advance the remedy." Cited with approval in State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48; State v. Denny, 67 Ind. 155; Davis v. Tarwater, 13 Ark. 58; McKenzie v. Murphy, 24 Ark. 155; Wassell v. Tunnali, 25 Ark. 101; Wallis v. Smith, 29 Ark. 354.

In Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7b, Plowd. 205, the following resolutions of the barons of the exchequer were declared to be essential in the construction of all statutes: "For the sure and true interpretation of all statutes in general, be they penal or beneficial, restrictive or is considered within the statute though not within the letter, and, that which is not within the mischief is not considered within the statute, though within the letter.¹ This class of statutes is very comprehensive and includes acts on a great variety of subjects, enlarging of the common law, four things are to be discerned and considered: First, What was the common law before the making of the act? Second, What was the mischief and defect against which the common law did not provide? Third, What remedy the Parliament hath resolved and appointed to cure the disease of the commonwealth? And, Fourth, the true reason of the remedy. It was then held to be the duty of the judges at all times to make such construction as should suppress the mischief and advance the remedy; putting down all subtle inventions and evasions for continuance of the mischief, et pro privato commodo; and adding force and life to the cure and remedy according to the true intent of the makers of the act, pro bono publico." See also Mayo v. Wilson, 1 N. H. 55; Howe v. Peckam, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 229; Van Horne v. Dorance, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 316; Talbot v. Simpson, Pet. (C. C.) 188.

1. Eyston v. Studd, 2 Plowd. 464; Woodruff v. State, 3 Ark. 285; Maxwell v. Collins, 8 Ind. 38; Smith v. Stevens, 82 Ill. 554; State v. Boyd, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 374; Baltimore v. Root, 8 Md. 95; State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48; People v. Lacombe, 99 N. Y. 43; Simonton v. Barrell, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 362; Brown v. Gates, 15 W. Va. 165; U. S. v. Freeman, 3 How. (U. S.) 565.

In State v. Canton, 43 Mo. 48, the court said: "It is an established rule applicable to the construction of all remedial statutes that cases within the reason, though not within the letter of a statute, shall be embraced by its provisions; and that cases not within the reason, though within the letter, shall not be taken to be within the statute."

In State v. Boyd, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 375, the court said: "Statutes are sometimes extended to cases not within the letter of them, and cases are sometimes excluded from the operation of statutes though within the letter, on the principle that what is within the intention of the makers of a statute is within the statute though not within the letter; and that what is within the letter of the statute and not within the intention of the makers is not within the statute, it being an acknowledged rule in construction of statutes that the intention of the makers ought to be regarded."

In Phillips v. Pope, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 172, the court said: "It is said that to construe a statute as if certain words which it contains were not in it and as if it did contain other words which are not in it, is transcending the judicial function and assuming that of the legislature. But while it is admitted that the court has no power to make the law, it is equally true that it is their province and duty so to expound the statutes as to ascertain and effectuate the will of the law-makers. And experience has shown that if every word or clause of every statute were to have its literal force and effect without regard to the context and spirit of the whole or to the subject-matter or the causes or consequences of the enactment, and of the construction, some statutes might be found wholly incapable of enforcement, while others might in their operation defeat, or fall entirely short of, their manifest object."

In Mason v. Rogers, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 377, the court said: "The literal interpretation of an act is certainly not the interpretation which either reason or law requires to be given to it; for it is not the words of the act but the will of the legislature which constitutes the law; and though words are the most common they are not the only signs of the legislative will. . . . And it is therefore an established rule of construction, applicable to all remedial statutes, that cases within the reason, though not within the letter of the statute, shall be embraced by its provisions, and cases not within the reason, though within the letter, shall not be taken to be within the statute," citing Stradling v. Morgan, 1 Plowd. 206, and Eyston v. Studd, 2 Plowd. 464.

In People v. Lacombe, 99 N. Y. 49, the court said: "A strict and literal interpretation is not always to be adhered to, and where the case is brought within the intention of the makers of the statute, it is within the statute, although by a technical interpretation it is not within the letter. It is the spirit and purpose of the statute which are to be regarded in its interpretation, and if these find fair expression in the statute, some of the more important of which are acts for the suppression of fraud;¹ acts concerning the administration of justice;² acts providing for the redemption of property sold for the non-payment of taxes;³ acts regulating the practice of law;⁴ acts it should be so construed as to carry out the legislative intent, even though such construction is contrary to the literal meaning of some of the provisions of the statute. A reasonable construction should be adopted in all cases where there is a doubt or uncertainty in regard to the intention of the law-makers," citing People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 95 N. Y. 558; Burch v. Newbury, 10 N. Y. 389; Oswego Starch Factory v. Dolloway, 21 N. Y. 461; People v. New York Cent. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 78; Donaldson v. Wood, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 397; Watervliet Turnpike Co. v. McKean, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 619; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 370; 35 Am. Dec. 326.

1. Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7b; Wimbish v. Tailbois, 1 Plowd. 47; White County v. Key, 30 Ark. 603; White v. Steam Tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 470; Carey v. Giles, 9 Ga. 253; Sharp v. New York, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 572; Fitzhugh v. Anderson, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 289; 3 Am. Dec. 625; Hahn v. Salmon, 20 Fed. Rep. 801; Bank of U. S. v. Lee, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 107.

In Carey v. Giles, 9 Ga. 259, it is said: "It is a fundamental maxim of the common law, as laid down by Lord Bacon, and one which is never lost sight of by the courts, that a statute made for the suppression of a fraud, or to give a more speedy remedy for a right, ought to be construed liberally, because such construction is for the furtherance of justice."

In Bank of U. S. v. Lee, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 118, the court said: "That a liberal construction should be given to the clause in the Virginia statute for the suppression of fraud, we admit; this is the well-established rule in construing the statutes of Elizabeth, which the first section of the Virginia statute substantially adopts," citing Heydon's Case, 3 Rep. 7b; 1 Black. Com. 88; Fitzhugh v. Anderson, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 289; 3 Am. Dec. 625.

2. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 1 Gill (Md.) 84; White County v. Key, 30 Ark. 603; Willis v. Fincher, 68 Ga. 444; Fisher v. Hervey, 6 Colo. 16; State v. Buchanan County Ct., 41 Mo. 254; Quinn v. Fidelity Ben. Assoc., 100 Pa. St. 382; Hassenplug's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 527;

Clark's Succession, 11 La. Ann. 124; Larkin v. Saffarans, 15 Fed. Rep. 147.

Under the Common-Law Procedure act of 1854, which provided for a discovery of documents upon an affidavit by a party to an action, it was held that the affidavit must be made by the party and not by his attorney. Christopherson v. Lotinga, 15 C. B. N. S. 809; 109 E. C. L. 808; Herschfeld v. Clarke, 11 Exch. 712. But in Kingsford v. Great Western R. Co., 16 C. B. N. S. 761; 111 E. C. L. 761, it was held that where the party applying for a discovery was a corporation, the affidavit might be made by the attorney as the corporation could not make it.

Statutes giving the right of appeal are liberally construed in furtherance of justice, and such an interpretation as will work a forfeiture of such right is not to be favored. Pearson v. Lovejoy, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 407; Arceneaux v. Benoit, 21 La. Ann. 673; Converse v. Burrows, 2 Minn. 240.

3. Alter v. Shepherd, 27 La. Ann. 207; Corbett v. Nutt, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 464.

In Dubois v. Hepburn, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 22, the court said: "A law authorizing the redemption of lands so sold, ought to receive a liberal and benign construction in favor of those whose estates will be otherwise divested, especially where the time allowed is short, an ample indemnity given to the purchaser, and a penalty is imposed on the owner."

4. Statutes relating to amendments are liberally construed in furtherance of trial upon the merits. Fidler v. Hershey, 90 Pa. St. 366; Bolton v. King, 105 Pa. St. 83; Dick's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 596; Nash v. Adams, 24 Conn. 33; Spencer v. Howe, 26 Conn. 201; Hoyt v. Smith, 27 Conn. 472; Beers v. Woodruff, etc., Iron Works, 30 Conn. 308; Stuart v. Corning, 32 Conn. 105; Bulkley v. Andrews, 39 Conn. 523.

A statute regulating the amount of attorneys' fees in mortgage foreclosures has been given a retrospective operation. Kossuth County v. Wallace, 60 Iowa 508.

Statutes extending the time within which new actions may be brought in providing indemnity for those who suffer damages by reason of some other person's exercise of a statutory privilege ;¹ acts making towns liable for injuries caused by defects in highways ;² a statute giving double damages for injuries by dogs ;³ acts to quiet title to real estate ;⁴ statutes of mortmain ;⁵ acts to legitimate the offspring of marriages otherwise void ;⁶ registration acts ;⁷ an act requiring a non-suited plaintiff to pay the costs of the first action before bringing a second ;⁸ an act abolishing forms of action ex contractu ;⁹ and acts to prevent unjust discrimination by railroads.¹⁰ It has been held that acts providing for laborers' liens are remedial and should be construed liberally.¹¹ Statutes for the benefit of married women should be construed liberally,¹² as should also statutes passed for the public good ;¹³ and by the weight of authority, statutes providing for homestead and personal property exemptions are entitled to a liberal construction.¹⁴

c. EXCEPTIONAL CONSTRUCTION—(1) In General.—When to give the words of a statute their ordinary meaning, or to adhere strictly to the arrangement of words and phrases of sentences, would result in manifest contradiction of, or inconsistency with, the plain purpose of the law, evident mistakes, accidental omissions, and the improper use of words, may be remedied, the ordinary meaning may be modified, and even the structure of sentences may be altered, to prevent such a result.¹⁵ cases where actions were brought within the time specified in the Statute of Limitations, but failed through some error, are construed liberally. Coffin v. Cottle, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 383; Johnston v. Sikes, 56 Conn. 589.

1. Boston, etc., Mill Corp. v. Gardner, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 37 (per Parker, C. J.); New York v. Lord, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 285.

2. Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 94; 23 Am. Dec. 662 (per Shaw, C. J.).

3. Mitchell v. Clapp, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 278; Le Forest v. Tolman, 117 Mass. 109; 19 Am. Rep. 400.

4. Holmes v. Chester, 26 N. J. Eq. 79.

5. Doe v. Waterton, 3 B. & Ald. 151; 5 E. C. L. 247.

6. Brower v. Bowers, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 214; Baity v. Cranfill, 91 N. Car. 293; 49 Am. Rep. 641; Beall v. Beall, 8 Ga. 210.

7. Cheval v. Michals, 1 Stra. 664; Worsley v. Demattos, 1 Burr. 467; Le Neve v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 648; Doe v. Allsop, 5 B. & Ald. 142; 7 E. C. L. 46; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Talbot, 113 Ind. 373; Janesville Hay Tool Co. v. Boyd, 35 W. Va. 240.

8. Smith v. Allen, 79 Me. 536.

9. Jones v. Gordon, 124 Pa. St. 263.

10. Kentucky, etc., Bridge Co. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 567; State v. Fremont, etc., R. Co., 22 Neb. 313.

11. In re Hope Mining Co., 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 710; Pinkerton v. Le Beau (S. Dak. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 97, where it is said that the rule of strict construction has been abolished by statute. But see Esterley's Appeal, 54 Pa. St. 192, where it is held that such statutes are in derogation of the common law and should be construed strictly. See also supra, this title, Strict Construction—In Derogation of Common Law.

12. Warford v. Noble, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 324.

13. U. S. v. State Bank, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 35; Beaston v. Farmers' Bank, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 134; Marshall v. Vultee, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 294.

14. See supra, this title, Strict Construction—Exemptions from Liabilities.

15. Atty. Gen'l v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 398; Miller v. Salomons, 7 Exch. 475; Becke v. Smith, 2 M. & W. 195; Wright v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 97; Hollingworth v. Palmer, 4 Exch. 267; Ex parte Rashleigh, 2 Ch. Div. 9; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 366; 35 Am. Dec. 326. See also AND, vol.

It is often provided in statutes that acts done "under," "by virtue of," or "in pursuance of," the same shall not be actionable, except on certain conditions; and the statutes set forth the time and manner of proceeding when such acts are actionable. It is obvious that these words are not to be taken in their literal import, for acts done strictly under authority of the law cannot be actionable. Such provisions have been uniformly extended to those cases where the defendant has acted with honest intention under color of the statute, but where his acts or omissions are not in truth such as are justified by the statutes conferring upon him his authority.¹

(2) Interpolation and Elimination.—Courts cannot add to, or

1, p. 569; OR, vol. 17, p. 218; supra, this title, Presumptions—as to Grammatical Construction.

1. Wilson v. Halifax, L. R., 3 Exch. 114; Newton v. Ellis, 5 El. & Bl. 115; 85 E. C. L. 114; Greenway v. Hurd, 4 T. R. 553; Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & Ald. 330; 5 E. C. L. 307; Roberts v. Orchard, 2 H. & C. 769; Hughes v. Buckland, 15 M. & W. 346; Booth v. Clive, 10 C. B. 827; 70 E. C. L. 826; Carpue v. London, etc., R. Co., 5 Q. B. 747; 48 E. C. L. 746; Tarrant v. Baker, 14 C. B. 199; 78 E. C. L. 198; Burling v. Harley, 3 H. & N. 271; Hopkins v. Crowe, 4 Ad. & El. 774; 31 E. C. L. 177; Kine v. Evershed, 10 Q. B. 143; 59 E. C. L. 142; Hermann v. Seneschal, 13 C. B. N. S. 392; 106 E. C. L. 391; Downing v. Capel, L. R., 2 C. P. 461; Leete v. Hart, L. R., 3 C. P. 322; Chamberlain v. King, L. R., 6 C. P. 474; Selmes v. Judge, L. R., 6 Q. B. 724; Mason v. Aird, 51 L. J. Q. B. 244; Denny v. Thwaites, 2 Exch. Div. 21; Mitchell v. Cowgill, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 20.

In Jones v. Hughes, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 301; 9 Am. Dec. 364, where the Act of Assembly extended to the magistrate the privilege of a previous notice of action for acts done "in the execution of his office," Gibson, J., said: "It may be laid down as a general rule that wherever the officer has acted honestly, although mistakenly; where he supposed he was in the execution of his duty, although he had no authority to act, he is entitled to protection of the Act of Assembly."

In Booth v. Clive, 10 C. B. 827; 70 E. C. L. 826, where an act provided that in actions and in prosecutions to be commenced against any person for anything done "in pursuance of the act," a notice in writing of such action and the cause thereof should be given to the defendant one calendar month at least before the commencement of the action, it was held in a case against the judge of a county court for making an order committing the plaintiff to jail for disobedience of an order for payment of certain installments, after due service upon him of a writ of prohibition, that if the defendant acted upon the bona fide belief that his duty as judge of the county court rendered it incumbent upon him to do so, notwithstanding the prohibition, the act should be considered as done in pursuance of the county court act and the judge was entitled to notice of action.

In Read v. Coker, 13 C. B. 850; 76 E. C. L. 848, Maule, J., approving and following Booth v. Clive, 10 C. B. 827; 70 E. C. L. 826, said: "It decides that a party is entitled to notice of action provided he has acted bona fide in belief that he is pursuing the statute, even though there may be no reasonable foundation for such belief."

And in Horn v. Thornborough, 3 Exch. 846, Rolfe, B., said: "I am reported to have said in Hughes v. Buckland, 15 M. & W. 265, and I have no doubt correctly, that 'All who bona fide and reasonably think that they fill the character mentioned in the several statutes, and act in pursuance of them, are protected.'"

Acts "Under Warrant."—In Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & Ald. 330, 5 E. C. L. 307, where an act for the protection of constables, provided protection for such officers for anything done in obedience to any warrant, it was held that a constable who, acting under a warrant commanding him to take the goods of A, took the goods of B, believing them to belong to A, was entitled to the protection of the act.

So in Gosdon v. Elpick, 4 Exch. 445, take from, the words of a statute to give effect to any supposed intention of the legislature; but when the intention can be ascertained with reasonable certainty, words may be altered or supplied in the statute, so as to give it effect and avoid any repugnancy to, or inconsistency with, such intention.¹

it was held that a constable who acts bona fide, believing that he is doing his duty, is, though mistaken, within the protection of that act.

And in Wedge v. Berkeley, 6 Ad. & El. 663, 34 E. C. L. 167, it was held that a magistrate, sued for detaining goods on suspicion of felony, was entitled to notice under that act if he proceeded under a bona fide belief that he was executing his duty, although it were proved that he had no reasonable ground of suspicion.

"Done" Including "Omitted."—These statutes requiring notice of action for anything "done" under them are construed as including omission of an act which ought to be done, as well as the commission of a wrongful one. Wilson v. Halifax, L. R., 3 Exch. 114; Poulsum v. Thirst, L. R., 2 C. P. 449; Newton v. Ellis, 5 El. & Bl. 115; 85 E. C. L. 114.

1. Quin v. O'Keeffe, 10 Ir. C. L. N. S. 393; East London R. Co. v. Whitechurch, L. R., 7 H. L. 89; In re Wainwright, 1 Phil. 258; The Beta, 3 Moo. N. S. 23; Ex parte Greenwood, 27 L. J. 28; Moyle v. Jenkins, 51 L. J. Q. B. 112; Wilson v. Nightingale, 8 Q. B. 1035; 55 E. C. L. 1034; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 491; Donohue v. Ladd, 31 Minn. 244; Furey v. Gravesend Tp., 104 N. Y. 410; Thurston v. State, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 115; Worth v. Peck, 7 Pa. St. 268; Big Black Creek Imp. Co. v. Com., 94 Pa. St. 455; Fairchild v. Masonic Hall Assoc., 71 Mo. 526.

"If in any law we find the omission of something essential to it, or which is a necessary result of its provisions and requisite to give the law its full effect, we may supply what is wanting, but not expressed, and extend the law to what it was manifestly intended to embrace but in its terms does not include." Potter's Dwarris, 140, 141.

In Philadelphia v. Ridge Ave. Pass. R. Co., 102 Pa. St. 196, where an act authorizing the directors of a road to declare dividends of the profits "at such time or times as they may deem expedient," further provided, that "the said company shall annually pay into the treasury of the city of Philadelphia, for the use of the said city, the tax of six per centum upon so much of any dividend declared which may exceed six per centum upon their said capital stock," it was held that the provision for the payment annually of a tax on any dividend declared, etc., contemplated that said tax should be based on the aggregate dividends declared in any one year and not upon any single dividend. To accomplish this purpose, the court thought it essential to supply the words "within the year."

An act provided that no witness before an election inquiry should be excused from answering self-criminating questions relating to corrupt practices at the election under inquiry, and entitled him, when he answered every question relating to those matters, to a certificate of indemnity declaring that he had answered all such criminating questions. It was held that the words "truly in the opinion of the commissioners" should be understood or inserted. Reg. v. Hulme, L. R. 5 Q. B. 377.

An act provided that "this act shall take effect from and after the 15th day of May next." It was held, that in view of all its provisions and the purpose of the act, it was evidently in the mind of the legislature that the act should take effect from and after the 15th day of May next thereafter; and the act was so construed. Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 472.

A statute provided that a person, on conviction of a specified offense, was to be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, and an amendatory act added the words "or by fine and imprisonment, one or both, at the discretion of the jury trying the same." The court held that it was required to supply after the word "or" the words "be punished." Turner v. State, 40 Ala. 21.

In an act making it penal "to buy, sell or receive from any slave," etc., the word "to" was interpolated to give effect to the word "sell." Worrell v. State, 12 Ala. 732.

A law provided that "the keeper of a boarding house shall have the same lien upon, and right to retain, the baggage and effects of any boarder for the amount which may be due for board by such boarder, to the same extent and in the same manner as innkeepers have such lien and such right of detention." It was held that the words "with respect to the baggage and effects of their guests" should be supplied to give effect to the obvious intention of the law. Nichols v. Halliday, 27 Wis. 406.

And, on the other hand, words and phrases which might operate to defeat the clear purpose of a statute, or which would have no sensible meaning, should be eliminated; notwithstanding the rule that full effect must be given to every part of a statute.¹

An act provided, that "if an insolvent petitions" for a discharge from prison, the insolvent court should refer his petition to the court of the district where he was imprisoned, but made no provision for cases where the petitioner was a creditor. The court, however, considered that the intention to include the latter sufficiently appeared, and the words "if an insolvent petitions" were understood to have merely put that case as an example of the more general intention, viz., if a petition be presented. Reg. v. Dowling, 8 El. & Bl. 605; 92 E. C. L. 605.

A statute authorized an aqueduct company to take and use the waters of two ponds named, and of a certain lake. It was further provided in the statute that nothing in the act should be construed to authorize the company "to raise the water of any of said ponds above higher-water mark, nor to drain any of them below low-water mark." It was held that the restriction applied to the lake as well as to the ponds. Brickett v. Haverhill Aqueduct Co., 142 Mass. 394.

Transposition.—The imperfect meaning of phrases may be corrected in order to give effect to a statute, by changing the order of the words. Lyde v. Barnard, 7 M. & W. 101. So the phrase "current expenses of the year" was read "expenses of the current year." Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488. See also Matthews v. Com., 18 Gratt. (Va.) 989; Doe v. Considine, 6 Wall. (U.S.) 458.

Strict Construction.—Interpolation and the insertion of words, and exceptional construction generally, although necessary to effect the evident intention of the law-makers, has been forbidden in acts within the rule of strict construction. In Underhill v. Longbridge, 29 L. J. M. C. 654, where the owner of mines was required, under penalty, in case, first, of loss of life in the mine by accident, or, second, of personal injury arising from explosion, to send notice of such accident within twenty-four hours "from the loss of life" (omitting the case of personal injury), the court refused to supply the obvious omission in the latter branch of the sentence, and held that notice was not necessary where personal injury from explosion, short of loss of life, had occurred.

An act which empowered inspectors to examine "weights, measures and scales" in shops, and if, upon examination, it should appear that the said weights or measures were light or unjust, to seize them, was held not to authorize the seizure of scales. Thomas v. Stephenson, 2 El. & Bl. 108; 75 E. C. L. 107.

To effectuate the intention of the legislature, it was necessary to interpolate the words "any other person who." The court refused to do this, as the result would have been to bring a person within a penal enactment. Reg. v. Davis, L. R., 1 C. C. 272. See also Ex parte National Mercantile Bank, 15 Ch. Div. 42; Broadhead v. Holdsworth, 2 Exch. Div. 321; Coe v. Lawrence, 1 El. & Bl. 516; 72 E. C. L. 516.

In Southwestern R. Co. v. Cohen, 49 Ga. 627, where an act prohibited the collection of the consideration for any commodity sold by weight or measures not properly marked, the court refused to extend the act so as to include the consideration for articles bought by such weight and measures.

1. Lyde v. Barnard, 7 M. & W. 116; Hall v. Knox, 4 B. & S. 515; 116 E. C. L. 514; U. S. v. Rossvally, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 157; U. S. v. Stern, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 512; McCahan v. Hirst, 7 Watts (Pa.) 175; Com. v. Marshall, 69 Pa. St. 332; State v. Lee, 37 Iowa 402; State v. Beasley, 5 Mo. 91; State v. Heman, 70 Mo. 441; Pond v. Maddox, 38 Cal. 572; Chapman v. State, 16 Tex. App. 76.

In Stone v. Yeovil, 1 C. P. Div. 701, Brett, J., said: "It is a canon of construction, that if it be possible, effect must be given to every word of an act of Parliament, or other document; but that, if there be a word or phrase therein to which no sensible meaning can be given, it must be eliminated." And in this case, the word "such," in the act under consideration, which provided for the assessment of purchase money for lands taken from parties under disability and compensation for injury, "to any such lands" was eliminated as being inconsistent with the clear intention.

(3) Correction of Obvious Errors.—Where it is manifest upon the face of an act that an error has been made in the use of words, the court may correct the error and read the statute as corrected, in order to give effect to the obvious intention of the legislature.¹

In U. S. v. Stern, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 512, where an act relating to the offense of bribing officers of the United States provided, that if any one shall be thereof convicted, he shall be liable to indictment, etc., the words "shall be thereof convicted" were eliminated, on the ground that their retention would render the statute inoperative.

An act provided that "if any guardian of any white female under the age of eighteen years, or of any other person under whose care or protection any such female shall have been confided, shall defile her," etc. It was held that the word "of" before "any other person" should be stricken out. State v. Acuff, 6 Mo. 55.

In State v. Beasley, 5 Mo. 91, it was held that the word "such" should be stricken from the phrase "if any such person or persons," because it was apparent that it had no reference to anything preceding it.

1. Haney v. State, 34 Ark. 263 ("fifth" read "fourth"); Metropolitan Board of Works v. Steed, 8 Q. B. D. 445 ("or" read "nor"); People v. Hoffman, 97 Ill. 234 ("ad satisfaciendum" read "ad respondendum"); Jocelyn v. Barrett, 18 Ind. 128 ("acts" read "act"); Moody v. Stephenson, 1 Minn. 401 ("penal judgments" read "final judgments"); Graham v. Charlotte, etc., R. Co., 64 N. Car. 631 ("venire" read "venue"); Gould v. Wise, 18 Nev. 253 ("on" read "or"); Levering v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 459 ("or" read "on"); Ex parte Hedley, 31 Cal. 109 ("without" read "within"); Chambers v. State, 25 Tex. 307 ("provisions" read "proviso"); Burch v. Newbury, 10 N. Y. 374 ("first day of July" read "first Monday in July"); Mankel v. U. S., 19 Ct. of Cl. 295 ("Lewis Mankel" read "Louis Mankel").

In Lancaster Co. v. Frey, 128 Pa. St. 593, the word "county" was corrected and read "city." Clark, J., speaking of the use of the word "county" in the statute, said: "It is a mistake apparent on the face of the act which may be rectified by the context. In making this correction we are not to be understood as correcting the act of the legislature. We are enabled to carry out the intention of the legislature from the plain and obvious meaning of the context in which the real purpose or intention of the legislature is manifest. It falls within the province of the courts to correct a merely clerical error in an act of the assembly when, as it is written, it involves a manifest absurdity, and the error is plain and obvious."

Erroneous Descriptions May be Corrected.—Brown v. Hamlett, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 732; Reynolds v. Holland, 35 Ark. 56; State v. Orange, 32 N. J. L. 49; State v. Platt, 2 S. Car. 150; 16 Am. Rep. 647; Atty. Gen'l v. Chicago, etc., R. Co. 35 Wis. 557; State v. Timme, 56 Wis. 423.

An act contained a description of property as "Dennis" Mill property; it, however, appeared that there was no "Dennis" Mill property, but "Dunn's" Mill property, answering the description, and was clearly that intended by the act; the court corrected the description. Lindsley v. Williams, 20 N. J. Eq. 93.

And in Palms v. Shawano County, 61 Wis. 215, the word "south" in the description of county boundaries was considered a clerical error, and was corrected so as to read "north." The court said: "The word 'south' destroys all sense of the description; the word 'north' makes it sensible, and the boundary complete." And this rule was stated: "The court will inspect the whole act, and if the true intention of the legislature can be reached, the false description will be rejected as surplusage or words substituted in place of those wrongfully used which will give effect to the law."

In State v. Timme, 56 Wis. 425, Cassoday, J., said: "We agree that questions of misdescription in statutes, like all other questions calling for construction, merely present questions of intent," and held that "Northern Mechanical and Agricultural Society" in an act was a

The power to make such corrections is well established, but it is exercised only where the error is so manifest as to leave no doubt in the judicial mind as to the actual intent of the legislature.¹

9. Special Classes—a. PRIVATE AND SPECIAL—(1) In General.—The rules of interpretation applicable to private statutes do not, as a rule, differ from those applicable to public and general acts.²

(2) General and Particular Statutes and Clauses.—A general law will not repeal an earlier special act by mere implication.³

sufficient description for "The Northern Wisconsin Agricultural and Mechanical Association."

Mistakes in Codifications and Compilations May be Corrected.—Atlanta v. Gate City Gas Light Co., 71 Ga. 106; State v. Lee, 37 Iowa 404; Mobile Sav. Bank v. Patty, 16 Fed. Rep. 751.

Misrecitals of Dates May be Rejected.—Shrewsbury v. Boylston, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 105.

In Amendatory and Supplementary Acts, Erroneous References to Other Acts or Sections May be Corrected.—People v. King, 28 Cal. 265; Murray v. Hobson, 10 Colo. 66; School Directors v. School Directors, 73 Ill. 249; Poock v. Lafayette Bldg. Assoc., 71 Ind. 357; Winona v. Whipple, 24 Minn. 61; Blake v. Brackett, 47 Me. 28; Pue v. Hetzell, 16 Md. 539; Gibson v. Belcher, 1 Bush (Ky.) 145; Watervliet Turnpike Co. v. McKean, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 616; People v. Clute, 50 N. Y. 451; 10 Am. Rep. 508; Bradbury v. Wagonhorst, 54 Pa. St. 180; Com. v. Marshall, 69 Pa. St. 332; Madison, etc., R. Co. v. Reynolds, 3 Wis. 287; Custin v. Viroqua, 67 Wis. 314; State v. McCracken, 42 Tex. 383; People v. Hill, 3 Utah 334.

1. Blanchard v. Sprague, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 279; De Sentmanat v. Soule, 33 La. Ann. 609; Hicks v. Jamison, 10 Mo. App. 35; McConvill v. Jersey City, 39 N. J. L. 38; Com. v. Bank, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 177; Ward v. Ward, 37 Tex. 89; Harrington v. Smith, 28 Wis. 44; Green v. Wood, 7 Q. B. 178; 53 E. C. L. 178; Doe v. Moffatt, 15 Q. B. 257; 69 E. C. L. 256.

In Lancaster County v. Frey, 128 Pa. St. 599, the court said: "The power is undoubted, but it can only be exercised when the error is so manifest, upon an inspection of the act, as to preclude all manner of doubt, and when the correction will relieve the sense of the statute from an actual absurdity and carry out the clear purpose of the legislature."

2. Bartlett v. Morris, 9 Port. (Ala.) 266.

The construction of private acts is to be governed by the principles of common law, and applied to the subject in a manner analogous to the rules of interpretation in a private deed or conveyance. Eton College v. Bishop of Winchester, Lofft 401.

Ambiguous words in a private act incorporating a public company, are to be construed against the company and in favor of private property. Scales v. Pickering, 4 Bing. 448; 15 E. C. L. 37. For example, statutory provisions as to compensation for damage in a local and personal act must be regarded as a contract between the parties, whether made by their mutual consent or forced on them by the legislature. Roths v. Kirkcaldy, etc., Waterworks Com'rs, 7 App. Cas. 707.

3. Lyn v. Wyn, Bridg. 127; Williams v. Pritchard, 4 T. R. 2; Rex v. St. Pancras Church, 6 Ad. & El. 314; 33 E. C. L. 86; Shepherd v. Hodsman, 18 Q. B. 316; 83 E. C. L. 316; Westbrook v. Blythe, 3 El. & Bl. 742; 77 E. C. L. 741; London, etc., R. Co. v. Limehouse Board, 3 K. & J. 123; Fitzgerald v. Champneys, 2 Johns. & H. 54; Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De G. M. & G. 31; Thames Conservancy v. Hall, L. R., 3 C. P. 415; Thorpe v. Adams, L. R., 6 C. P. 125; Reg. v. Champneys, L. R., 6 C. P. 394; Abergavenny v. Brace, L. R., 7 Exch. 145; Dodds v. Shepherd, 1 Exch. Div. 78; Garnett v. Bradley, 2 Exch. Div. 351; reversed 3 App. Cas. 944, on the ground that, in the statute construed, the legislature clearly intended to repeal an earlier special act; but the rule itself was approved; Walsall v. London, etc., R. Co., 4 App. Cas. 467; Seward v. The Vera Cruz, 10 App. Cas. 68; per Kay, J., in Gard v. Sewer Com'rs, 28 Ch. Div. 486; In re Smith's Estate, 35 Ch. Div. 595; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 44; State v. Stoll, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 425; Cass Co. v. Gillett, 100 U. S. 585; Louisiana v. Taylor, 105 U. S. 454; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556; Chew Heong v. U.

S., 112 U. S. 536; Lewis v. Sherman County, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 377; Third Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 8 Fed. Rep. 721; Gilchrist v. Helena, etc., R. Co., 47 Fed. Rep. 595; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. State, 29 Ala. 573; Daughdrill v. Alabama L. Ins., etc., Co., 31 Ala. 100; Pearce v. Bank of Mobile, 33 Ala. 702; Magruder v. State, 40 Ala. 347; Ex parte Selma, etc., R. Co., 46 Ala. 245; Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170; McFarland v. State Bank, 4 Ark. 415; Ex parte Trapnall, 6 Ark. 14; Babcock v. Helena, 34 Ark. 502; Blackwell v. State, 45 Ark. 90; Chamberlain v. State, 50 Ark. 132; Baughner v. Rudd, 53 Ark. 417; Crosby v. Patch, 18 Cal. 439; Whitaker v. Haynes, 49 Cal. 596; Wood v. Board of Election Com'rs, 58 Cal. 561; People v. Clunie, 70 Cal. 504; Home for Inebriates v. Reis, 95 Cal. 142; Schwenke v. Union Depot, etc., Co., 7 Colo. 512; Coe v. Meriden, 45 Conn. 156; Beach v. Meriden, 46 Conn. 502; Luke v. State, 5 Fla. 185; Haywood v. Savannah, 12 Ga. 404; Erwin v. Moore, 15 Ga. 361; Pausch v. Guerrard, 67 Ga. 319; Montezuma v. Minor, 70 Ga. 191; Ottawa v. La Salle Co., 12 Ill. 339; Spring v. Olney, 78 Ill. 101; Covington v. East St. Louis, 78 Ill. 548; Litchfield Coal Co. v. Taylor, 81 Ill. 590; Allen v. People, 84 Ill. 504; Gunnarssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 569; East St. Louis v. Maxwell, 99 Ill. 439; Holton v. Daly, 106 Ill. 139; Hyde Park v. Oakwoods Cemetery Assoc., 119 Ill. 141; Butz v. Kerr, 123 Ill. 659; Pana v. Lippincott, 2 Ill. App. 473; Braceville v. Doherty, 30 Ill. App. 645; Rushville v. Rushville, 32 Ill. App. 320; 39 Ill. App. 504; Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165; Waterworks Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 381; Evansville v. Summers, 108 Ind. 189; Walter v. State, 105 Ind. 589; Cole v. Jackson County, 11 Iowa 552; Burlington v. Leebrick, 43 Iowa 252; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 70; Tyler v. Elizabethtown, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.) 510; Com. v. Cain, 14 Bush (Ky.) 525; Adams Express Co. v. Owensboro, 85 Ky. 265; Bank of Louisiana v. Farrar, 1 La. Ann. 49; De Armas' Case, 10 Martin (La.) 172; State v. Kitty, 12 La. Ann. 805; Beridon v. Barbin, 13 La. Ann. 458; St. Martin v. New Orleans, 14 La. Ann. 113; Bond v. Hiestand, 20 La. Ann. 140; Third Ward School Dist. v. School Directors, 23 La. Ann. 158; State v. Labatut, 39 La. Ann. 513; State v. Buckner, 42 La. Ann. 74; State v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 44 Md. 167; Garrett v. Janes, 65 Md. 260; Nichols

v. Bertram, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 342; Gage v. Currier, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 399; Brown v. Lowell, 8 Met. (Mass.) 172; Tracy v. Goodwin, 5 Allen (Mass.) 409; Calder v. Haynes, 7 Allen (Mass.) 387; Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322; State v. Archibald, 43 Minn. 328; Mauro v. Buffington, 26 Mo. 184; State v. McDonald, 38 Mo. 529; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 459; State v. Draper, 47 Mo. 29; State v. Fiala, 47 Mo. 310; McVey v. McVey, 51 Mo. 406; Kansas City v. Johnson, 78 Mo. 661; State v. Green, 87 Mo. 583; Manker v. Faulhaber, 94 Mo. 430; State v. Frazier, 98 Mo. 426; St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Cudmore, 103 Mo. 634; Blanchard v. Wolff, 1 Mo. App. 528; State v. Wesleyan Cemetery Assoc., 11 Mo. App. 570; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Hill, 12 Mo. App. 163; State v. Fitzporter, 17 Mo. App. 271; State v. Willard, 39 Mo. App. 251; Jackson v. Washington County, 34 Neb. 680; Stonington Sav. Bank v. Davis, 14 N. J. Eq. 290; Cross v. Morristown, 18 N. J. Eq. 305; State v. Branin, 23 N. J. L. 484; State v. Mellick, 25 N. J. L. 563; State v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. 170; State v. Morristown, 33 N. J. L. 57; State v. Mills, 34 N. J. L. 177; State v. Trenton, 36 N. J. L. 201; State v. Com'rs, 38 N. J. L. 472; North Hudson R. Co. v. Hoboken, 41 N. J. L. 78; State v. Hill, 42 N. J. L. 351; State v. Williamson, 44 N. J. L. 165; State v. Stevenson, 44 N. J. L. 371; In re Evergreens, 47 N. Y. 216; In re Central Park Com'rs, 50 N. Y. 493; People v. Quigg, 59 N. Y. 83; Van Denburgh v. Greenbush, 66 N. Y. 1; People v. Brinkerhoff, 68 N. Y. 259; In re Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 69 N. Y. 209; People v. Essex County, 70 N. Y. 228; Whipple v. Christian, 80 N. Y. 523; McKenna v. Edmundstone, 91 N. Y. 231; Graf v. Cunningham, 109 N. Y. 369; Buffalo Cemetery Assoc. v. Buffalo, 118 N. Y. 61; People v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 254; 20 Am. St. Rep. 732; Deposit v. Vail, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 315; Deposit v. Devereux, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 317; People v. Westchester County, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 353; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Delaware County, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5; People v. Edson, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 64; People v. Myers, 33 N. Y. St. Rep. 18; Bergman v. Wolff, 33 N. Y. St. Rep. 499; McRae v. Wessel, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 153; Robbins v. State, 8 Ohio St. 191; State v. Roosa, 11 Ohio St. 16; Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 472; Shunk v. First Nat. Bank, 22

Ohio St. 515; State v. Newton, 26 Ohio St. 206; Com'rs v. Board of Public Works, 39 Ohio St. 628; State v. Darke County, 43 Ohio St. 315; State v. Sturgess, 10 Oregon 58; Brown v. County Com'rs, 21 Pa. St. 39; Omit v. Com., 21 Pa. St. 426; Dyer v. Covington Tp., 28 Pa. St. 186; Jefferson County v. Reitz, 56 Pa. St. 44; Bounty Accounts, 70 Pa. St. 92; Rounds v. Waymart, 81 Pa. St. 395; Kilgore v. Com., 94 Pa. St. 495; Com. v. Erie R. Co., 98 Pa. St. 127; Rhein Bldg. Assoc. v. Lea, 100 Pa. St. 210; Seifried v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 200; Com. v. Judges, 102 Pa. St. 228; Harrisburg v. Sheck, 104 Pa. St. 53; Lackawanna County v. Stevens, 105 Pa. St. 465; Dick's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 589; Dunlap v. Com., 108 Pa. St. 607; Mallory v. Reinhard, 115 Pa. St. 25; Evans v. Phillipi, 117 Pa. St. 226; 2 Am. St. Rep. 655; Rymer v. Luzerne County, 142 Pa. St. 108; Providence v. Union R. Co., 12 R. I. 473; State v. Young, 30 S. Car. 399; Ellis v. Batts, 26 Tex. 703; Cascades R. Co. v. Sohns, 1 Wash. Ter. 557; Tacoma Land Co. v. Pierce County, 1 Wash. 485; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Haas, 2 Wash. 376; Conley v. Calhoun County, 2 W. Va. 420; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Hoard, 16 W. Va. 270; Mason v. Harper's Ferry Bridge Co., 17 W. Va. 396; Powell v. Parkersburg, 28 W. Va. 698; Sturm v. Fleming, 31 W. Va. 701; Mead v. Bagnall, 15 Wis. 156; Walworth County v. Whitewater, 17 Wis. 193; Janesville v. Markoe, 18 Wis. 351.

In Foster's Case, 11 Rep. 63a, it was said: "It must be known that, forasmuch as acts of Parliament are established with such gravity, wisdom, and universal consent of the whole realm, for the advancement of the commonwealth, they ought not, by any constrained construction out of the general and ambiguous words of a subsequent act, to be abrogated."

In Lyn v. Wyn, Bridg. 127, it was said that, "The law will not allow the exposition to revoke or alter by construction of general words any particular statute, where the words may have their proper operation without it."

The general principle to be applied to the construction of a statute is, that a general act is not to be construed to repeal a previous particular act, unless there is some express reference to the previous legislation on the subject, or unless the two acts are necessarily inconsistent. Thorpe v. Adams, L. R., 6 C. P. 125.

In Seward v. The Vera Cruz, 10 App. Cas. 68, Selborne, L. C., said: "If anything be certain, it is this, that where there are general words in a later act capable of reasonable and sensible application without extending them to a subject specially dealt with by earlier legislation, you are not to hold that earlier and special legislation indirectly repealed, altered or derogated from, merely by force of such general words, without any indication of a particular intention to do so."

Where there is an act of Parliament which deals in a special way with a particular subject-matter, and that is followed by a general act of Parliament which deals in a general way with the subject-matter of the previous legislation, the court ought not to hold that general words in such a general act effect a repeal of the prior and special legislation, unless it can find some reference in the general act to the prior and special legislation, or unless effect cannot be given the provisions of the general act without holding that there was such repeal. In re Smith's Estate, 35 Ch. Div. 595.

The reasons of this rule are well stated in Fitzgerald v. Champneys, 2 Johns. & H. 54, per Wood, V. C.: "In passing a special act, the legislature had their attention directed to the special case which the act was meant to meet, and considered and provided for all the circumstances of that special case; and having so done, they are not to be considered by a general enactment, passed subsequently, and making no mention of any such intention, to have intended to derogate from that which by their own special act they had thus carefully supervised and regulated."

Where a privilege has been granted by an act of Parliament, it cannot be taken away without a direct repeal of that act, or inference from another so strong of intention to take it away as to authorize the court to say the two acts cannot stand together. Walsall v. London, etc., R. Co., 4 App. Cas. 467.

Mere general words in a subsequent affirmative statute, not referring expressly to a former specific statute, are not sufficient to effect a repeal of the former statute, if both statutes can stand together; nor will the mere mention in a subsequent statute of an intention to repeal a former special statute, operate, by implication, to repeal the former statute; in order to accomplish such repeal, there must be a clause to that effect in the later statute. Mahoney v. Wright, 10 Ir. C. L., N. S. 420.

In State v. Stoll, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 425, it was said by Hunt, J.: "The provisions of the special charter or special authority derived from the legislature, are not affected by general legislation on the subject. The two are to be deemed to stand together; one as the general law of the land, the other as the law of the particular case."

A special act is not modified or controlled by a subsequent general act upon the same subject, unless the latter clearly manifests on its face such an intention. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. State, 29 Ala. 573.

Laws of local and special application are never to be deemed repealed by general legislation, except upon the most unequivocal manifestation of an intent to that effect by language showing that the attention of the legislature was called to the special act, and that the general act was intended to embrace the special cases; and the mere fact that the general act contains a clause repealing acts inconsistent with it, does not diminish the force of this rule. Home for Inebriates v. Reis, 95 Cal. 142.

A special statute providing for a particular case or application to a particular locality, is not repealed by a statute general in its terms and application, unless the intention of the legislature to repeal or alter the special law is manifest, although the terms of the general act would, if taken strictly and but for the special law, include the cases provided for by it. Van Denburgh v. Greenbush, 66 N. Y. 1, affirming 4 Hun (N. Y.) 795. Especially is this true where both acts were before the legislature at the same time and passed at the same session. Deposit v. Vail, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 315; Mead v. Bagnall, 15 Wis. 156.

It is a well-settled rule that "a statute general in its terms and without negative words will not be construed to repeal, by implication, the particular provisions of a former one which are special in their application to a particular case, or class of cases, unless the repugnancy be so glaring and irreconcilable as to indicate the legislative intention to repeal." Robbins v. State, 8 Ohio St. 191.

In Seifried v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 200, Trunkey, J., said: "It is against reason to suppose that the legislature, in framing a general system for the state, intended to repeal a special act which the local circumstances of one county has made necessary."

Rarely, if ever, does a case arise where it can justly be held that a general statute repeals a local act by mere implication. Mallory v. Reinhard, 115 Pa. St. 25.

The repeal of a special statute passed for a special purpose must be either express, or the manifestation of the legislative intent to repeal must be so clear as to be equivalent to an express direction. Com. v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 81 Va. 355.

In Chesapeake, etc., R. v. Hoard, 16 W. Va. 279. Moore, J., said: "It appears to be well settled that a statute, general in its terms and without negative words, will not be construed to repeal, by implication, the particular provisions of a former one, which are special in their application to a particular case, or class of cases, unless the repugnancy be so glaring and irreconcilable as to indicate the legislative intention to repeal."

Illustrations—A partial exemption from the payment of rates for borough improvement purposes, conceded by a local act, was not taken away by the mere passing of general public acts for similar purposes. Walsall v. London, etc., R. Co., 4 App. Cas. 467.

Where a statute authorized the county commissioners to build and keep in repair county buildings, and to borrow money under certain conditions for that purpose, and a subsequent statute provided for issuing county bonds to aid in building railroads and other works of internal improvement, it was held that although courthouses are works of internal improvement, yet inasmuch as their erection had been provided for by the first-named act, they were not embraced within the general terms of the latter. Lewis v. Sherman County, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 377.

The provision of the Missouri constitution defining the qualifications of voters, but making no reference to registration, did not repeal that part of a special act incorporating a city, which provided for the registration of voters at city elections. State v. Frazier, 98 Mo. 426.

Where an act provides for a municipal government and the creation of a special jurisdiction, and every part of the enactment is designed to make a part of the complete whole, and all together constituting an entire system perfect in itself, such act is not affected

But where the later general act is necessarily inconsistent with the prior special act, or with the special provisions of an earlier act, the legislature must be deemed to have intended to repeal the special law.¹ Particular or specific words or provisions will by a later statute describing the jurisdiction of an appellate court by general rules having no reference to special and particular enactments covering special cases. In re Central Park Com'rs, 50 N. Y. 497.

A special act passed for the benefit of a municipality, authorizing it to bring actions for penalties for violation of the provisions of the act as to the sale of liquor, is not repealed, by implication, by a general act passed at the same session of the legislature for the suppression of intemperance, directing that the overseers of the poor shall sue to recover penalties provided for in the general act. Deposit v. Vail, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 310.

In England it seems to be well settled that a general act will not supersede a particular custom. Rex v. Pugh, Dougl. 188; Simon v. Moss, 2 B. & Ald. 543; Leicester v. Burgess, 5 B. & Ad. 246; 27 E. C. L. 75; Rex v. St. James' Church, 5 Ad. & El. 391; 31 E. C. L. 362; Green v. Reg., 1 App. Cas. 513. But see contra Rex v. Hogg, 1 T. R. 721; Dunbar v. Roxburgh, 3 C. & F. 354.

In several cases, too, certain customs of London have been held to be superseded by general laws. See Salters Co. v. Jay, 3 Q. B. 109; 43 E. C. L. 654; Reg. v. London, 13 Q. B. 1; 66 E. C. L. 1; Merchant Tailors v. Truscott, 11 Exch. 855. This rule has no application in the United States, as these customs seem to be unknown to American law.

For the application of this rule to charters of municipal corporations, see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 974.

1. Rex v. Poor Law Com'rs, 6 Ad. & El. 48; 33 E. C. L. 11; Great Cent. Gas. Consumers' Co. v. Clarke, 13 C. B. N. S. 838; 106 E. C. L. 837; Parry v. Croyden Commercial, etc., Gas Co., 11 C. B. N. S. 579; 103 E. C. L. 578; affirmed on appeal, 15 C. B. N. S. 568; 109 E. C. L. 566; Duncan v. Scottish, etc., R. Co., 2 Sc. App. 20; Stuart v. Jones, 1 El. & Bl. 23; 72 E. C. L. 22; Bramston v. Colchester, 6 El. & Bl. 246; Thorpe v. Adams, L. R., 6 C. P. 125; Reg. v. Champneys, L. R., 6 C. P. 394; Luckcraft v. Pridham, 6 Ch. Div. 205; In re

Williams, 36 Ch. Div. 577; Garnett v. Bradley, 3 App. Cas. 944; Mersey Docks v. Lucas, 8 App. Cas. 891; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Cheyenne, 113 U. S. 516; Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 11; Maxwell v. State, 89 Ala. 150; Davis v. Railway, 53 Ark. 117; State v. Conkling, 19 Cal. 501; People v. Burt, 43 Cal. 560; People v. Sargent, 44 Cal. 430; Fraser v. Alexander, 75 Cal. 147; People v. Henshaw, 76 Cal. 436; Ex parte Ah You, 82 Cal. 339; Kennedy v. Board of Education, 82 Cal. 483; McGivney v. Pierce, 87 Cal. 124; Pausch v. Guerrard, 67 Ga. 319; Montezuma v. Minor, 70 Ga. 191; Spring v. Olney, 78 Ill. 101; Allen v. People, 84 Ill. 502; Water Com'rs v. Conkling, 113 Ill. 340; Dutton v. Aurora, 114 Ill. 138; Culbertson v. Fulton, 127 Ill. 41; Waterworks Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 381; De Armas' Case, 10 Martin (La.) 172; State v. Kitty, 12 La. Ann. 805; Beridon v. Barbin, 13 La. Ann. 458; Bond v. Hiestand, 20 La. Ann. 140; State v. Labatut, 39 La. Ann. 513; State v. Buckner, 42 La. Ann. 74; Starbird v. Brown, 84 Me. 238; Frederick v. Groshon, 30 Md. 436; State v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 44 Md. 131; Willing v. Bozman, 52 Md. 44; State v. Falkenham, 73 Md. 463; Howe v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 240; Brown v. Lowell, 8 Met. (Mass.) 172; Tracy v. Goodwin, 5 Allen (Mass.) 409; State v. Percy, 44 Mo. 159; Pacific R. Co. v. Cass County, 53 Mo. 17; State v. Severance, 55 Mo. 378; State v. Dallas County Ct., 72 Mo. 329; Manker v. Faulhaber, 94 Mo. 430; State v. Frazier, 98 Mo. 426; Pool v. Brown, 98 Mo. 675; State v. Bennett, 102 Mo. 356; St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Cudmore, 103 Mo. 634; Blanchard v. Wolff, 1 Mo. App. 528; State v. Wesleyan Cemetery Assoc., 11 Mo. App. 570; State v. Fitzporter, 17 Mo. App. 271; Mechanics', etc., Bank v. Bridges, 30 N. J. L. 112; State v. Miller, 30 N. J. L. 368; 86 Am. Dec. 188; State v. Mills, 34 N. J. L. 177; State v. Com'rs, 37 N. J. L. 228; State v. Williamson, 44 N. J. L. 165; Brown v. Mullica Tp., 48 N. J. L. 449; State v. Camden, 50 N. J. L. 87; State v. East Orange, 50 N. J. L. 354; Haynes v. Cape May, 52 N. J. L. 180; State v. Harrington Tp. (N. J. 1892), 23

Atl. Rep. 666; Harrington v. Trustees, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 547; People v. Essex County, 70 N. Y. 228; McKenna v. Edmundstone, 91 N. Y. 231; People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182; People v. Westchester County, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 353; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Delaware County, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5; Robbins v. State, 8 Ohio St. 191; Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 472; Knox County v. McComb, 19 Ohio St. 320; Shunk v. First Nat. Bank, 22 Ohio St. 515; Ex parte Van Hagan, 25 Ohio St. 426; State v. Newton, 26 Ohio St. 206; Nusser v. Com., 25 Pa. St. 126; Keller v. Com., 71 Pa. St. 413; Seifried v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 200; Cumru Tp. v. Poor Directors, 112 Pa. St. 268; Com. v. McCandless (Pa. 1888), 12 Atl. Rep. 440; Cascades R. Co. v. Sohns, 1 Wash. Ter. 557; Tacoma Land Co. v. Pierce County, 1 Wash. 485; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Haas, 2 Wash. 376; Mason v. Harper's Ferry Bridge Co., 17 W. Va. 396; Sturm v. Fleming, 31 W. Va. 701; Kellogg v. Oshkosh, 14 Wis. 623.

In Garnett v. Bradley, 3 App. Cas. 952, Lord Hatherley said: "When an act of Parliament repeals a preceding act which relates to certain definite subject-matter distinctly laid down for the guidance of those who are to be operated upon by the act of Parliament in that special matter, or to a particular class of persons who are to be either protected, or it may be, affected adversely by a particular clause of the enactment, then the legislature is presumed to have had that very special subject-matter and that very special class of persons in contemplation when the subsequent statute was passed; and if there was a general act subsequently passed, the generality of which was large enough, so far as words go, to comprehend the particular matter dealt with in the previous enactment, it will be considered whether or not, as regards the persons who are to be affected or protected by the act, persons who are not in any way mentioned or specified by the subsequent general act are to be injuriously affected by an adverse enactment, or deprived of a benefit they are entitled to under a previous enactment. And in that case the court, in construing the subsequent general act of Parliament, would expect to find something or other pointing out that the intention of the legislature had been turned towards the former special enactment, and, in passing the general act, that it had made the new enactment with the view of embracing every case (including that special case) embraced within the provisions of the previous act. That is to say, it does not necessarily follow that the previous act is to remain standing notwithstanding the general provision in a subsequent act, if it is found on the consideration of the acts that such is not the intention of the legislature." See also, In re Williams, 36 Ch. Div. 577.

In People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182, it was said, by Andrews, J.: "It will be found, I think, on examining the cases in which courts have held that a special law was not repealed by a subsequent general law on the same subject, that they are, as a general rule, cases where the legislature was not dealing directly with the subject of the prior law, and it was not in the mind of the legislature when the general law was enacted, or where the special law was part of the system of local administration, or where it was possible to assign a reasonable motive for retaining the special and peculiar provisions of the special act, notwithstanding the enactment of a subsequent general rule covering the same subject." Accordingly the court held, Rapallo and Earle, J.J., dissenting, that section 72 of the Penal Code, punishing the crime of bribery, repealed section 58 of the New York City Consolidation act providing for the same offense within the city of New York.

A general law applicable to the entire state will not modify or repeal a special act, unless by express words, or necessary implication. But there is no rule of law prohibiting a repeal of a special act by a general one, nor is there any principle forbidding such repeal without use of express words declaratory of the legislative intent to repeal the prior law. The question is always one of intention, and the purpose to abrogate the particular enactment by a later general enactment, is sufficiently manifested when the provisions of both cannot stand together. State v. Williamson, 44 N. J. L. 167; State v. Comr's, 37 N. J. L. 228.

A general law, enacted to carry out a constitutional provision, supersedes, and by implication repeals, every private or special law inconsistent therewith. Cumru Tp. v. Poor Directors, 112 Pa. St. 268 (opinion of trial judge).

Illustrations.—The provisions of the New Jersey act of March 24, 1885, regarding the building of main sewers control also the general words or provisions of the same act.¹ And the rule is the same when the general terms occur in another by cities and the condemnation of lands therefor, supersede special provisions in city charters on the same subject, except in so far as they are retained or adopted by the act. State v. Jersey City, 54 N. J. L. 49.

A general act, prescribing the punishment of a specific offense throughout the state, operates as a repeal of a public local act prescribing a different penalty for a particular locality. Nusser v. Com., 25 Pa. St. 126.

1. Standon v. Oxford University, W. Jones 17, 26; Rex v. Archbishop of Armagh, 8 Mod. 8; De Winton v. Brecon, 26 Beav. 533; Taylor v. Oldham, 4 Ch. Div. 395; Atty. Gen'l v. Lamplough, 3 Exch. Div. 214; Pennington v. Cox, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 52; Adams v. Woods, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 341; U. S. v. Buffalo Park, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 190; Seeley v. Koox, 2 Woods (U. S.) 370; U. S. v. Garretson, 42 Fed. Rep. 22; People v. Wells, 11 Cal. 329; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Vining, 27 Ind. 518; Covington v. McMickle, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 262; Rogers v. Beiller, 3 Martin (La.) 672; St. Martin v. New Orleans, 14 La. Ann. 114; Stockett v. Bird, 18 Md. 484; State v. Green, 24 Mo. App. 227; McCann v. McLennan, 2 Neb. 286; Albertson v. State, 9 Neb. 429; Richardson County v. Miles, 14 Neb. 311; People v. Krank, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 636; State v. Trenton, 38 N. J. L. 64; Hoey v. Gilroy, 129 N. Y. 132; Felt v. Felt, 19 Wis. 193; State v. Goetze, 22 Wis. 350.

If a particular thing be given or limited in the preceding part of a statute, this shall not be taken away or altered by any subsequent general words. Standon v. Oxford University, W. Jones 26.

Where an act expresses a general intention, and also a particular intention incompatible with the general intention, the particular intention is to be considered in the nature of an exception. Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 180; 15 E. C. L. 409.

In De Winton v. Brecon, 26 Beav. 533, the master of the rolls held that, "where an act of Parliament contains two sets of provisions, one giving specific and precise directions to do particular things, and the other, in general terms, prohibiting certain acts which would, in the general sense of the words used, include the particular acts before authorized, then the general clause does not control the specific enactments; as, if an act of Parliament authorized a corporation to sell a particular piece of land, and by a subsequent general clause in the act it was declared that nothing therein contained should authorize the company to sell any land, the general clause would not control the particular enactment, which would take effect notwithstanding the prior exception was not clearly and distinctly expressed in the general clause." Quoted in State v. Trenton, 38 N. J. L. 67, where Van Syckel, J., added: "When the intention of the law-giver which is to be sought after in the interpretation of the statute, is specifically declared in a prior section as to a particular matter, it must prevail over a subsequent clause in general terms which might, by construction, conflict with it. The legislature must be presumed to have intended what it expressly stated, rather than that which might be inferred from the use of general terms."

General provisions in an act of Parliament do not override special provisions. So that where an act contains special provisions as to particular property, they must be read as exceptions to the general provisions, whether contained in the same or any other act. Taylor v. Oldham, 4 Ch. Div. 395.

Where special words are followed by general words in any statute, any subject-matter which is aptly described by the special words comes within the purview of the statute by force of the special words and not of the general words. If, therefore, special words are repealed, the subject-matter ceases to be within the purview of the statute, though aptly described by the general words in the absence of the special words. Atty. Gen'l v. Lamplough, 3 Exch. Div. 214. The facts of this case well illustrate the point: A statute imposed a stamp duty on a number of articles specifically named in the schedule, and, among others, "on waters, videlicet, all artificial mineral waters, and all waters impregnated . . . with carbonic-acid gas. and all compositions in a liquid or solid state, to be used for the purpose of compounding or making any of" such waters; and also by a general clause at the end of the schedule, on "all other . . . waters" to be used as medicine.

statute,¹ regardless of priority of enactment.² For example, in construing revenue laws, general provisions imposing duties, though sufficiently broad to cover an article specifically taxed, will not affect the specific provision, when contained in the same

A later statute repealed so much of the former act as was contained in the words commencing "waters, videlicet." It was held that a composition sold in solid state and containing three ingredients, one of which was a medicine, and the other two being added to evolve carbonic-acid gas when it was dissolved in water, was taxable as such by the special clause, and, on repeal thereof, did not become taxable under the general clause.

In Hoey v. Gilroy, 129 N. Y. 138, O'Brien, J., said: "When a statute contains two distinct provisions, one being specific, with precise directions to do a particular thing or permit it to be done, and the other generally prohibiting certain acts which in their general sense include the particular thing authorized by the direction, the general prohibitive clause does not control the specific authority. When a general intention is expressed, and also a particular intention, incompatible with the general intention, the particular intention is to be considered in the nature of an exception."

In construing a statute containing a general enactment and also a particular enactment, the effort must be, in the first instance, to harmonize all the provisions of the statute by construing all parts together; and it is only when, on such construction, the repugnancy of specific provisions to the general language is plainly manifested that the intent of the legislature, as declared in the general enacting part, is superseded. State v. Com'rs, 37 N. J. L. 228.

In Felt v. Felt, 19 Wis. 193, it was held that a section which covered a justice's jurisdiction in an action upon a note given for more than one hundred dollars, "which has been reduced by credits or payments indorsed thereon to an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars," should control another provision in the same act, which gave to justices general jurisdiction in actions upon contracts where the debt or balance due, or damages claimed, do not exceed one hundred dollars; following the settled rule of construction, that specific provisions relating to a particular subject must govern in respect to that subject as against general provisions in other parts of the law, which might otherwise be broad enough to include it.

1. Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 180; 15 E. C. L. 409; Mahoney v. Wright, 10 Ir. C. L. N. S. 420; Newcastle v. Morris, L. R., 4 H. L. 661; Taylor v. Oldham, 4 Ch. Div. 395; Doggett v. Walter, 15 Fla. 355; Gunnarssohn v. Sterling, 92 Ill. 569; Titcomb v. Union Marine, etc., Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 326; Finney v. Brant, 19 Mo. 42; St. Louis v. Alexander, 23 Mo. 508; Albertson v. State, 9 Neb. 429; Richardson County v. Miles, 14 Neb. 311.

A particular provision of the Bankruptcy act of 1849 rendered traders, having privilege of Parliament, liable to the bankruptcy laws, but the privilege of freedom from personal arrest was expressly reserved to them. The act of 1861 made all debtors (non-traders as well as traders) liable to the bankruptcy laws, but nothing was said in the act to reserve to debtors, who had privilege of Parliament, their freedom from personal arrest. It was held that the provision of the Bankruptcy act of 1849, reserving freedom from personal arrest, applied to the persons designated by the act of 1861. Newcastle v. Morris, L. R., 4 H. L. 661.

2. General and specific provisions in apparent contradiction, whether in the same or different statutes, and without regard to priority of enactment, may subsist together, the specific qualifying and supplying exceptions to the general. Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504.

A general affirmative statute does not repeal a prior particular statute, or particular provisions of a prior statute, upon the same subject, unless negative words are used, or unless there would be an invincible repugnancy between the two. In the absence of such repugnancy or negative words, the more specific statute, or provision, would control the general, without regard to their order and dates, and the two acts may be interpreted as operating together, the specific provisions qualifying or furnishing exceptions to those which are general. Chamberlain v. State, 50 Ark. 132.

In Com'rs v. Board of Public Works, 39 Ohio St. 632, it was said: "The decided weight of authority supports the proposition that when there is a general, act,¹ or repeal it when contained in an earlier act,² and this rule is applicable both to statutes decreasing and statutes increasing duties.³

A general act will be repealed pro tanto by a subsequent special act when the two acts cannot stand together.⁴

and also one local and special, law on the same subject in conflicting terms, neither necessarily abrogates the other, but both are permitted to stand together, and it is immaterial which is of the later date."

1. Homer v. Austin, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 486; Arthur v. Lahey, 96 U. S. 112; Arthur v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 143; Arthur v. Stephani, 96 U. S. 125; Robertson v. Glendenning, 132 U. S. 158; Seeberger v. Cahn, 137 U. S. 97; American Net, etc., Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468; Chung Yune v. Kelly, 14 Fed. Rep. 643.

2. Movins v. Arthur, 95 U. S. 144; Arthur v. Lahey, 96 U. S. 112; Arthur v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 143; Vietor v. Arthur, 104 U. S. 498; Barber v. Schell, 107 U. S. 617; Chung Yune v. Kelly, 14 Fed. Rep. 643.

3. Arthur v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 143.

4. Ex parte Kelly, 9 Ir. R. C. L. 114; Hill v. Hall, 1 Exch. Div. 411; Yarmouth v. Simmons, 10 Ch. Div. 528; Kankakee County v. Ætna L. Ins. Co., 106 U. S. 668; U. S. v. 10,000 Cigars, Woolw. (U. S.) 123; Brinson v. State, 89 Ala. 105; Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 315; Ex parte Smith, 40 Cal. 419; Talcott v. Harbor Com'rs, 53 Cal. 199; Macon v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 7 Ga. 221; Garden v. People, 20 Ill. 431; Berry v. People, 36 Ill. 423; Fant v. People, 45 Ill. 259; Siebold v. People, 86 Ill. 33; Com. v. Pointer, 5 Bush (Ky.) 301; Adams Express Co. v. Owensboro, 85 Ky. 265; Hussey v. Manufacturers', etc., Bank, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 421; Howell v. Cassopolis, 35 Mich. 471; Dewey v. Central Car, etc., Co., 42 Mich. 399; Tierney v. Dodge, 9 Minn. 166; Shelton v. Baldwin, 26 Miss. 439; Baldwin v. Green, 10 Mo. 410; Dunscomb v. Maddox, 21 Mo. 144; Deters v. Renick, 37 Mo. 599; State v. Clarke, 54 Mo. 17; 14 Am. Rep. 471; Smith v. Clark County, 54 Mo. 69; State v. Greene County, 54 Mo. 550; State v. De Bar, 58 Mo. 395; State v. Lewis, 5 Mo. App. 465; State v. Clarke, 25 N. J. L. 54; State v. Kelly, 34 N. J. L. 75; McGavisk v. State, 34 N. J. L. 509; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 221; Excise Com'rs v. Burtis, 103 N. Y. 136; Egypt Street, 2 Grant's Cas.

(Pa.) 454; Isham v. Bennington Iron Co., 19 Vt. 230; In re Snell, 58 Vt. 207; Wells v. Austin, 59 Vt. 159; St. Johnsbury v. Thompson, 59 Vt. 300; 59 Am. Rep. 731; McConiha v. Guthrie, 21 W. Va. 134.

Illustrations of Repeal.—Where a local act imposed a penalty of £200 on any gas or other company for suffering any impure matter to flow into any stream, to be sued for by a common informer, and a subsequent general act imposed a like penalty for the same offense, such penalty to be recovered by the person into whose water such substance should be conveyed, or whose water should be fouled by any such act, it was held that the later provision was pro tanto a repeal of the former. Parry v. Croydon, etc., Commercial Gas, etc., Co., 11 C. B. N. S. 579; 103 E. C. L. 578; affirmed on appeal, 15 C. B. N. S. 568; 109 E. C. L. 566.

Where a gas company was, by its act of incorporation, restricted to a specified charge, and by a subsequent public act for the supply of gas to the metropolis, an increased standard of purity in the illuminating power was required from the companies electing to adopt the provisions of that act as to price, purity, and illuminating power, and an increased charge permitted to be made by such companies, it was held that the company, after electing to adopt such provisions, was no longer subject to the restriction contained in its private act. Great Cent. Gas Consumers' Co. v. Clark, 13 C. B. N. S. 838; 106 E. C. L. 837.

Where there is a general law prescribing and defining the powers, duties, and mode of procedure of a public board, and a special law is passed relating to the particular matter coming within the general scope of the powers of the board, the two laws are to be read together. The general law is applicable to the particular matter, except in so far as the provision is made in the special law conferring powers or prescribing duties or modes of procedure different from those mentioned in the general law. Talcott v. Harbor Com'rs, 53 Cal. 199.

The charter of an incorporated vil-

The English rule that a private act will not repeal an earlier private act, except by express enactment,¹ has not been followed lage authorizing it to "regulate" its victual houses, repeals, by implication, the general law authorizing the selectmen of a town to license persons to keep such houses, and confers upon the village power to license. St. Johnsbury v. Thompson, 59 Vt. 300; 59 Am. Rep. 731.

Where a prior statute is general in its terms, and prohibits the taking of a certain species of property in any case whatever, and a subsequent statute is limited or special in its terms, and authorizes the taking of such property in certain described localities only, the latter will be held to be a limitation or qualification of the former, and the prohibition will apply to all cases except to the localities thus specified in the subsequent statute. McConiha v. Guthrie, 21 W. Va. 134.

Cases Where It Was Held that No Repeal Was Intended.—Where a general act prescribed the manner in which, and the material of which, chimneys were to be built, and a subsequent local statute enacted that in a certain borough the chimneys of every new building were to be constructed as determined or approved by the corporation, and, if no direction should be given by the corporation, prescribing different directions from those contained in the general act, it was held that the subsequent local statute had not repealed the prior general law within that borough. Hill v. Hall, 1 Exch. Div. 411.

A charter of a railway company authorizing townships, corporate towns and cities along its line to subscribe to the capital stock of such company, does not limit the operation of the general laws of the state authorizing counties to subscribe for stock in the company and issue bonds therefor. Kankakee County v. Ætna L. Ins. Co., 106 U. S. 668.

A special law admitting interested parties to testify in a certain contingency, does not repeal an earlier general law admitting interested parties to testify as witnesses in all cases. U. S. v. 10,000 Cigars, Woolw. (U. S.) 123.

An act incorporating a town and investing the authorities of the town with certain powers, does not divest the state or county courts of powers vested in them by a general law, unless the act of incorporation declares the powers vested in the corporation to be exclusive. Baldwin v. Green, 10 Mo. 410.

An interpretation of a special law, having for its object the collection of a special poll tax, should not be adopted if it will interfere with the purpose of the general law, unless there is the clearest language to justify it. State v. Douglass, 33 N. J. L. 363.

An amendment to a city charter creating a board of charities and police, with the powers of overseers of the poor in towns, did not give such board the power to sue for penalties incurred for violation of the excise law; but such penalties are to be recovered in the name of the board of commissioners of excise, under the general provisions of the laws of 1878, that where there is no overseer of the poor, such penalty shall be sued for and recovered by, and in the name of, such board of excise commissioners. Excise Com'rs v. Burtis, 103 N. Y. 136.

A general law forbidding the opening of a road or street through any burial ground is not repealed or suspended by a subsequent special act extending the boundaries of a borough, and authorizing commissioners to lay out, mark, etc., such streets as they shall deem necessary. It was held that such roads could not encroach upon a cemetery; as the grounds were protected by a general law. The court held that the laws were not inconsistent. Egypt Street, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 455.

Where there has been a general enactment covering any subject in general terms which included a particular case, and a subsequent enactment makes a rule for that particular case, the latter is deemed to be all that the legislature finally intended for the regulation of that case. Excelsior Petroleum Co. v. Lacey, 63 N. Y. 422.

In Isham v. Bennington Iron Co., 19 Vt. 240, Redfield, J., said: "I know of no rule of construction of statutes of more uniform application than that later or more specific statutes do, as a general rule, supersede former and more general statutes so far as the new and specific provisions go."

A village charter authorizing it to restrain all kinds of gaming, repeals by implication an earlier general statute empowering the selectmen of towns to permit or forbid the use of billiard tables. In re Snell, 58 Vt. 207.

1. Jenkins 198; Birkenhead Docks v.

in the United States, the general rules as to repeal by implication being held applicable in such cases.¹ Where a special act refers to or incorporates a general one, the provisions of the special act will prevail over those of the general one conflicting therewith.² In such case, the repeal or amendment of the general law does not affect the special law,³ and on repeal of the special law, the general law is revived.⁴

b. ADOPTED STATUTES.—Congress or a state legislature, in Laird, 4 De G. M. & G. 732; Purcell v. Wolverhampton New Water Works Co., 10 C. B., N. S. 587; 100 E. C. L. 586. See also London, etc., R. Co. v. Limehouse Board, 3 K. & J. 123. But in Daw v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 12 C. B., N. S. 161; 104 E. C. L. 161, it was held that where two special statutes gave authority to two public bodies to exercise powers which could not consistently with the object of the legislature co-exist, the earlier was necessarily repealed by the later statute.

In the eleventh case in Jenkins 198 it was held that "a special statute does not derogate from a special statute without express words of abrogation."

Wherever the legislature has, by a special act, conferred powers on a corporation or body of commissioners for an object of public benefit, those powers are not affected by a subsequent statute giving to other persons, for another public purpose, inconsistent powers in terms which, from their generality, would seem to overrule the powers given by the former act. London, etc., R. Co. v. Limehouse Board, 3 K. & J. 123. See also New Haven v. New Haven Water Co., 44 Conn. 105.

1. Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596; Savannah v. Kelly, 108 U. S. 184; Ex parte Trapnall, 6 Ark. 9; McDonough County v. Campbell, 42 Ill. 490; People v. Barr, 44 Ill. 198; Cumberland v. Magruder, 34 Md. 381; In re Martz's Election, 110 Pa. St. 502; Schneider v. Staples, 66 Wis. 167. See, however, New Haven v. New Haven Water Co., 44 Conn. 105.

Where two acts are passed, one to authorize the towns in a certain group of counties to aid in the construction of one line of railroad, and the other to authorize the towns in another group of counties to aid in the construction of another line of road, and one county is common to both groups, the later act does not repeal the other act, either totally or partially, as to such county. Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596.

An act to authorize a city to obtain money on a loan for the purpose of contributing to works of internal improvement, was held not repealed by a subsequent act which provided that all bonds theretofore issued by the city should be valid and which gave the city power to cause other bonds to be issued for purposes of internal improvement. Savannah v. Kelly, 108 U. S. 184.

Where all the essential provisions of a special act of assembly are supplied by a later special act, the former will be deemed to have been repealed by implication, although there be no repealing clause. In re Martz's Election, 110 Pa. St. 502.

2. Purcell v. Wolverhampton, New Water Works Co., 10 C. B., N. S. 576; 100 E. C. L. 575; In re Westminster Estate, 4 De G. J. & S. 232; Simpson v. South Staffordshire Water Works Co., 4 De G. J. & S. 678; Atty. Gen'l v. Great Eastern R. Co., L. R., 7 Ch. 475; affirmed on appeal, L. R., 6 H. L. 367; London, etc., R. Co. v. Wandsworth, L. R., 8 C. P. 185; Metropolitan Dist. R. Co. v. Sharpe, 5 App. Cas. 425.

3. Schwenke v. Union Depot, etc., Co., 7 Colo. 512; Nunes v. Wellisch, 12 Bush (Ky.) 363; Darmstaetter v. Moloney, 45 Mich. 621; Gloversville v. Howell, 70 N. Y. 287.

A village charter passed after the general excise law, providing that actions for penalties for violation of the excise laws in said village shall be brought in the corporate name of the village, is not affected by an amendment to the general law vesting the power of suing for penalties in the overseers of the poor of the county. Gloversville v. Howell, 70 N. Y. 287.

4. London, etc., R. Co. v. Wandsworth, L. R., 8 C. P. 185; People v. Hunt, 41 Cal. 435. Compare McConiha v. Guthrie, 21 W. Va. 134. But see State v. Lewis, 5 Mo. App. 465, in which it was held that the repeal of the provision of the charter of St. Louis which repealed the general laws providing for adopting an English statute, is deemed to have adopted also the construction put thereon by the English courts.¹ The same rule applies where the statute of one state has been adopted by the legislature of another²—the construction of the statute by the the suppression of prostitution in the city of St. Louis, did not revive the general law.

1. Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 264; Tayloe v. Thomson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 358; Kenall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 625; Ex parte Wells, 18 How. (U. S.) 311; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 628; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263; Kirkpatrick v. Gibson, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 391; Ullman v. Meyer, 10 Fed. Rep. 242; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 2 Ala. 571; Alsop v. Nichols, 9 Conn. 364; State v. Rowley, 12 Conn. 101; Grattan v. Grattan, 18 Ill. 171; 65 Am. Dec. 726; Tyler v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151; Fisher v. Deering, 60 Ill. 114; Hopkins v. Medley, 97 Ill. 402; Fall v. Hazelrigg, 45 Ind. 586; 15 Am. Rep. 278; Johnson v. Johnson, 106 Ind. 475; Maltby v. Cooper, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 60; Sheffield v. Lovering, 12 Mass. 494; Com. v. Hartnett, 3 Gray (Mass.) 450; Bigelow v. Morong, 103 Mass. 289; Com. v. Taylor, 132 Mass. 262; Ryalls v. Mechanics' Mills, 150 Mass. 191; Ingraham v. Regan, 23 Miss. 213; Marqueze v. Caldwell, 48 Miss. 23; Skouten v. Wood, 57 Mo. 380; Skrainka v. Allen, 76 Mo. 384; Waterford, etc., Turnpike v. People, 9 Barb. (N.Y.) 161; Burgett v. Burgett, 1 Ohio 473; 13 Am. Dec. 634; Brice v. Myers, 5 Ohio 124; Munson v. Hallowell, 26 Tex. 475; 84 Am. Dec. 582; Adams v. Field, 21 Vt. 256.

In Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 18, Story, J., in construing a patent law, said: "Where English statutes—such, for instance, as the Statute of Frauds and the Statute of Limitations—have been adopted into our own legislation, the known and settled construction of those statutes by courts of law has been considered as silently incorporated into the acts, or has been received with all the weight of authority. Strictly speaking, that is not the case in respect to the English statute of monopolies, which contains an exception in which grants of patents for inventions have issued in that country. The language of that clause of the statute is not . . . identical with ours, but the construction of it adopted by the English courts and the principles in practice which have long regulated the grants of their patents as they must have been known and are tacitly referred to in some of the provisions of our own statutes, afford material to illustrate it." See also Griswold v. Seligman, 72 Mo. 123.

In Carthart v. Robinson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 280, Marshall, C. J., said: "The rule which has been uniformly observed by this court in construing statutes is to adopt the construction made by the courts of the country by whose legislature the statute was enacted. This rule may be susceptible of some modification when applied to British statutes which are adopted in any of these states. By adopting them, they become our own as entirely as if they had been enacted by the legislature of the state. The received construction in England at the time they are admitted to operate in this country—indeed, to the time of our separation from the British empire—may very properly be considered as accompanying the statutes themselves, and forming an integral part of them. But however we may respect subsequent decisions, and certainly they are entitled to great respect, we do not admit their absolute authority. If the English courts vary their construction of a statute which is common to two countries, we do not hold ourselves bound to fluctuate with them." But see Hogg v. Emerson, 6 How. (U. S.) 483.

So far as Congress in the act to regulate commerce adopted the language of the English Traffic Act, it is to be presumed that it had in mind the construction given by the English courts to the adopted language, and intended to incorporate it into the statute. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 263.

In Adams v. Field, 21 Vt. 266, the court, per Bennett, J., said: "When our Statute of Wills was enacted, the statute of Charles II had received a long, fixed, and well-known construction. But when we adopt an English statute, we take it with the construction which it had received—and this upon the ground that such was the implied intention of the legislature."

2. Allen v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 120 U. S. 34; Coulam v. Doull, 133 U. S.

216; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293; Coulter v. Stafford, 48 Fed. Rep. 266; People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; 60 Am. Dec. 581; Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 254; People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 477; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 384; Omaha, etc., Smelting Co. v. Tabor, 13 Colo. 58; 16 Am. St. Rep. 185; White v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 5 Dakota 508; Campbell v. Quinlin, 4 Ill. 288; Little v. Smith, 5 Ill. 402; Ballance v. Rankin, 12 Ill. 420; 54 Am. Dec. 412; Rigg v. Wilton, 13 Ill. 15; 54 Am. Dec. 419; Grattan v. Grattan, 18 Ill. 171; 65 Am. Dec. 726; Tyler v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151; Potter v. Potter, 41 Ill. 84; Streeter v. People, 69 Ill. 598; Freese v. Tripp, 70 Ill. 496; Gage v. Smith, 79 Ill. 219; Martin v. Judd, 81 Ill. 488; Cole v. People, 84 Ill. 216; Hudson v. King, 23 Ill. App. 118; Cole v. Bentley, 26 Ill. App. 260; Glaubenslee v. Low, 29 Ill. App. 408; Harrison v. Hill, 37 Ill. App. 32; Langdon v. Applegate, 5 Ind. 327; Clark v. Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co., 44 Ind. 263; Fall v. Hazelrigg, 45 Ind. 585; 15 Am. Rep. 278; Eldridge v. Kuehl, 27 Iowa 163; Fairfield v. McNany, 37 Iowa 77; Jamison v. Burton, 43 Iowa 282; Bemis v. Becker, 1 Kan. 226; Stebbins v. Guthrie, 4 Kan. 353; Doyle v. Boyle, 19 Kan. 171; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Franklin, 23 Kan. 80; Holden v. Garrett, 23 Kan. 111; Dilley v. McGregor, 24 Kan. 362; Hamilton v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 39 Kan. 56; Overall v. Overall, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 504; Carney v. Hampton, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 231; Com. v. Hartnett, 3 Gray (Mass.) 450; Bigelow v. Morong, 103 Mass. 289; Pratt v. American Bell Tel. Co., 141 Mass. 225; 55 Am. Dec. 465; Drennan v. People, 10 Mich. 175; Shaw v. Hoffman, 25 Mich. 162; Harrison v. Sager, 27 Mich. 476; Greiner v. Klein, 28 Mich. 12; Daniels v. Clegg, 28 Mich. 32; In re St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 37 Minn. 169; Nicolett Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; 8 Am. St. Rep. 643; Daily v. Swope, 47 Miss. 367; Marqueze v. Caldwell, 48 Miss. 31; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 463; Skouten v. Wood, 57 Mo. 380; Griswold v. Seligman, 72 Mo. 110; Skrainka v. Allen, 76 Mo. 384; Bowers v. Smith (Mo.), 16 L. R. A. 754; Collins v. Wilhoit, 35 Mo. App. 585; Lindley v. Davis, 6 Mont. 453; First Nat. Bank v. Bell, etc., Min. Co., 8 Mont. 32; Hess v. Pegg, 7 Nev. 23; Frankel v. Creditors, 20 Nev. 49; Burgett v. Burgett, 1 Ohio 473; 13 Am. Dec. 634; Gray v. Askew, 3 Ohio 480; Irwin v.

Bank of Bellefontaine, 6 Ohio St. 88; Favorite v. Booher, 17 Ohio St. 554; Trabant v. Rummell, 14 Oregon 17; Munson v. Hallowell, 26 Tex. 475; 84 Am. Dec. 582; Doswell v. Buchanan, 3 Leigh (Va.) 365; 23 Am. Dec. 280; Danville v. Pace, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 1; 18 Am. Rep. 663; Atty. Gen'l v. Brunst, 3 Wis. 787; Ableman v. Booth, 11 Wis. 524, note by Dixon, C. J.; Draper v. Emerson, 22 Wis. 150; Perkins v. Simonds, 28 Wis. 94; Poertuer v. Russel, 33 Wis. 201; State v. Brophy, 38 Wis. 426; Wiesner v. Zaun, 39 Wis. 219; Westcott v. Miller, 42 Wis. 461; Kilkelly v. State, 43 Wis. 609.

Constitution.—When the California constitutional convention, in framing the organic law of the state, thought proper to borrow provisions from the constitutions of other states, which provisions had already received a judicial construction, they adopted them in view of such construction, and acquiesced in its correctness. People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; 60 Am. Dec. 580. See also Hess v. Pegg, 7 Nev. 23; Langdon v. Applegate, 5 Ind. 327.

This rule is to be taken with some limitation; for example, where a statute of Massachusetts was substantially followed by the legislature of California, and as enacted in California was followed in Utah, and in Massachusetts it received a construction by the supreme judicial court which the Supreme Court of California had, before the adoption of the statute in Utah, declined to follow, the court of Utah was at liberty to adopt the construction which was in accordance with its own judgment, and it was not obliged to follow the construction given to it by the California court. Coulam v. Doull, 133 U. S. 216.

The rule that the known and settled construction of a statute of one state shall be regarded as accompanying its adoption by another, is not applicable where that construction had not been announced when the statute was adopted, nor when the statute is changed in the adoption. Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293.

In Little v. Smith, 5 Ill. 402, the court, speaking of this rule of construction, said that in the matter of practice this rule was not inflexible, as a construction which may be adapted to the general system of practice in another state may not be very well suited to the system in operation in Illinois.

And in Rigg v. Wilton, 13 Ill. 18; 54 courts of the former is adopted with the statute; and so where a statute is adopted by Congress.¹

c. PROVISOS, EXCEPTIONS, AND SAVING CLAUSES.—A proviso is something engrafted upon an enactment, and is used for the purpose of taking special cases out of the general act and providing specially for them.² An exception is a clause similar to the

Am. Dec. 419, the same court said that where a statute adopted from another state "has there received a definite construction, and one that is consistent with the spirit and policy of our laws, it may with propriety be applied to the statute" to be construed.

An act adopted from another state stands on the same footing, and is subject to the same rules of construction, as all other legislative enactments, though the construction placed upon the law by the courts of the country in which it was first enacted is entitled to very great consideration, and very strong reasons should exist to warrant a departure therefrom. Ingraham v. Regan, 23 Miss. 213.

In interpreting a statute adopted from another state "it must be remembered that its adoption here brings it into subordination to the fundamental law of Missouri, and that prior decisions elsewhere construing enactments on the same general topic cannot properly be followed if inconsistent with that fundamental law." Bowers v. Smith (Mo. 1892), 16 L. R. A. 758.

The Insolvency act in Nevada was borrowed from California. The construction put thereon by the California courts was based on the policy of the laws of that state to procure the discharge of insolvent debtors. The Nevada court held that as the main purpose of the Nevada law was the ratable distribution of the insolvent's property among his creditors, the reasons for the California law did not exist in Nevada, and that the adoption of the statute was not an adoption of the construction. Frankel v. Creditors, 20 Nev. 49.

In Snoddy v. Cage, 5 Tex. 106, decided in 1849, it was held that the enactment of a law in terms similar to the provisions of a statute of a foreign country did not involve the adoption of the construction which the courts of that country might have given to the provisions of the statute. But see Munson v. Hallowell, 26 Tex. 475, where the general rule is acquiesced in.

As to limitations of this rule, see further Gray v. Askew, 3 Ohio 466.

1. Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558; Sanger v. Flow, 48 Fed. Rep. 152.

The provisions of an act of Congress which recognized the judicial system of the District of Columbia by abolishing the old courts and by establishing the present supreme court of the District with its general and special terms, and which were adopted from the New York statutes in substantially the same language, are to be construed in the sense in which they were understood at the time in the system from which they were taken. Metropolitan R. Co. v. Moore, 121 U. S. 558.

2. Potter's Dwarris 118; In re Webb, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 247; Boon v. Juliet, 2 Ill. 258; Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 237; Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; Minis v. U. S., 15 Pet. (U. S.) 445; Treasurer v. Clark, 19 Vt. 129; Walsh v. Van Horn, 22 Ill. App. 170.

It is not the office of a proviso to confer power, but to except something from the enacting clause. Chicago v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 126 Ill. 276. See also In re Webb, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 247; The Irresistible, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 551.

The office of the proviso generally is either to except something from the enacting clause, or to qualify or restrain its generality, or to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation of it, as extending to cases not intended by the legislature to be brought within its purview. Minis v. U. S., 15 Pet. (U. S.) 445. See also Beaumont v. Irvin, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 301.

In Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 30, Marshall, C. J., said: "The proviso is generally intended to restrain the enacting clause and to except something which would otherwise have been within it, or in some measure to modify the enacting clause." See also McRae v. Holcomb, 46 Ark. 306.

The proviso is a limitation or exception to a grant made or authority conferred, the effect of which is to declare that one shall not operate or the other be exercised unless in the case pro-proviso, exempting from the operation of an enactment that which but for it would have been included.¹ A saving clause in a statute is an exception of a special thing out of general things mentioned in the statute;² it is ordinarily a restriction in a repealing act, and saves rights, pending proceedings, penalties, etc., from the annihilation which would result from unrestricted repeal.³

The particular intent expressed in a proviso or exception will control the general intent of the enactment.⁴

The proviso should be confined to what immediately precedes, unless the contrary intent clearly appears;⁵ and should be construed with the section with which it is connected.⁶ This rule is not, however, absolute, and if the context requires, the proviso may be construed as a limitation extending over more than what immediately precedes, or may amount to an independent enactment.⁷

vided. Voorhees v. Jackson, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 471.

1. Bouvier's L. Dict., tit. Proviso; Bish. Stat. Cr., § 58. See Voorhees v. Jackson, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 449; McRae v. Holcomb, 46 Ark. 306; Mullins v. Surrey County, 5 Q. B. Div. 170.

2. Potter's Dwarris 117; Hollowell v. Corporation of Bridgewater, 2 And. Rep. 192.

Where a new statute adopted on the same subject as a prior one, repeals the former law, with a saving clause in the repealing section as to existing suits or litigation, the saving in such case is in legal effect a limitation on the repealing clause, and operates to continue in force the old law as to existing suits and proceedings. Dobbins v. First Nat. Bank, 112 Ill. 553.

3. Com. v. Marshall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 350; 22 Am. Dec. 377; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Com. v. Edwards, 4 Gray (Mass.) 1; Com. v. Bennett, 108 Mass. 30; 11 Am. Rep. 304; The Irresistible, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 551; U. S. v. Helen, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 203; U. S. v. Kohnstamm, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 222; Taylor v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 93; Governor v. Howard, 1 Murphy (N. Car.) 465; Smith v. Banker, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 142; People v. Gill, 7 Cal. 356; Rex v. Justices of London, 3 Burr. 1456; Cochran v. Taylor, 13 Ohio St. 382; Files v. Fuller, 44 Ark. 273; Gilliland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 569; Beatty v. People, 6 Colo. 538; Harris v. Townshend, 56 Vt. 716.

4. State v. Goetze, 22 Wis. 363; Ihmssen v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 32 Pa. St. 153; Gregory's Case, 6 Rep. 19b. See also Foster's Case, 11 Co. 56b.

5. Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; Dollar Sav. Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. (U. S.) 227; Pearce v. Bank of Mobile, 33 Ala. 693; Gast v. Board of Assessors, 43 La. Ann. 1104; Wolf v. Banereis, 72 Md. 481; Ex parte Partington, 6 Q. B. 649; 51 E. C. L. 648; Rex v. Newark-upon-Trent, 3 B. & C. 59; 10 E. C. L. 17.

In Rawls v. Doe, 23 Ala. 248, it was said: "As the natural and appropriate office of a proviso is to restrain or qualify some preceding matter, we think upon sound principles of construction it should be confined to what precedes, unless it is clear that it was intended to apply to subsequent matter. In the present case, we can perceive no good reason why the limitation of the proviso should be extended to the third section. On the contrary the effect of such an application would be to give to that section a partially retrospective operation which, although allowed, is not a construction favored by our courts."

6. Callaway v. Harding, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 547; Spring v. Olney, 78 Ill. 101; Lehigh County v. Meyer, 102 Pa. St. 479; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray (Mass.) 382; Mechanics', etc., Bank's Appeal, 31 Conn. 63; Rogers v. Bass, 6 Iowa 405.

Effect of Repeal of Enacting Clause.—So intimate is the connection between the proviso and the enacting clause, that the repeal of the latter necessarily repeals the former, which is not continued in force as an independent enactment. Church v. Stadler, 16 Ind. 463.

7. Traders' Nat. Bank v. Lawrence Mfg. Co., 96 N. Car. 298; Wartenleben v. Halthcock, 80 Ala. 565; Rex v. Thelkeld, 4 B. & Ad. 245; 24 E. C. L. 50; Wells v. Iggulden, 3 B. & C. 189; 10 E. C. L. 48; U. S. v. Babbitt, 1

When the legislature has attached a proviso to a section, the natural presumption is that, but for the proviso, the enacting part of the statute would have included the subject-matter of the proviso.¹ But where it is clear that the language of the enacting clause does not include the subject-matter of the proviso, a strained construction to that language has been refused, although the refusal rendered the proviso of no effect.²

A proviso which restricts an enacting clause which is general in its scope, is to be strictly construed.³ In statutes which are strictly construed, however, as, for example, penal statutes, provisos must be liberally construed.⁴

Statutes providing that the repeal of an act shall not affect any rights which have accrued under it, any duty imposed, any penalty incurred, nor any proceeding commenced, etc., are not infrequent. Such statutes are in the nature of general saving clauses; and though, of course, not binding upon a subsequent legislature, Black (U. S.) 55; Mechanics', etc., Bank's Appeal, 31 Conn. 63; Friedman v. Sullivan, 48 Ark. 213; Cumberland v. Magruder, 34 Md. 381.

So the word "proviso" instead of limiting a preceding section may introduce an independent paragraph. Georgia R., etc., Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174.

In State v. Eskridge, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 415, it was held that where by a declaratory provision, the legislature enacted that a thing might be done which before that time was lawful, and added a proviso that nothing therein was to be so construed as to permit some matter embraced in the general provision to be done, this was an implied prohibition of such act, though before that time it was lawful.

The territorial act of Iowa, 1839, defined the crime of murder, and prescribed the penalty; the act of 1843 repealed the act of 1839, with a proviso, that any person who had committed any crime punishable by it, should be prosecuted and punished according to it, the same as if the repealing act had not been passed; the code of 1851 repealed all acts passed prior to it, with a saving, that crimes committed under any act repealed by it, should not be affected by the repeal: Held, that there is no law in force for punishing the offense of murder committed in 1840; that the code of 1851 only repealed the act of 1843, and did not repeal the act of 1839, for it had before been repealed, and hence there was no saving clause in the code providing for the punishment of crimes committed under the last-named act. Jones v. State, 1 Iowa 395.

1. Mullins v. Surrey County, 5 Q. B. Div. 173; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 191; Tinkham v. Tapscott, 17 N. Y. 152. See also Downs v. Huntington, 35 Conn. 591.

In Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 438, Marshall, C. J., for the court, said: "If it be the rule of interpretation to which all assent, that the exception of a particular thing from general words, proves that, in the opinion of the law-giver, the thing excepted would be within the general clause had the exception not been made, we know no reason why this general rule should not be as applicable to the constitution as to other instruments."

2. Mullins v. Surrey County, 5 Q. B. Div. 173. See also U. S. v. Gilmore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 330; Tinkham v. Tapscott, 17 N. Y. 152.

3. U. S. v. Dickson, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 141; Bragg v. Clark, 50 Ala. 363; Bird v. Jones, 37 Ark. 195; McRae v. Holcomb, 46 Ark. 306; Nolan v. Harden, 43 Ark. 307; Wassell v. Armstrong, 35 Ark. 247; Blood v. Fairbanks, 50 Cal. 420; Willingham v. Smith, 48 Ga. 580; McRae v. Holcomb, 46 Ark. 306; Epps v. Epps, 17 Ill. App. 196; Butts v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 63 Miss. 462; Looker v. Davis, 47 Mo. 140; Cumberland v. Magruder, 34 Md. 381; Roberts v. Yarbboro, 41 Tex. 449; Southgate v. Goldthwaite, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 367. See Potter v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 163; Clark's Appeal, 58 Conn. 207. Compare Foster v. Pritchard, 2 H. & N. 151; Rogers v. Vass, 6 Iowa 405.

4. Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; In re Ankrim, 3 McLean yet courts, in construing the repealing act, will adhere to them, unless a contrary intent of the legislature plainly appears.¹

The rule that all parts of a statute are to be construed together and effect given to the whole, if possible, is to be observed in the construction of provisos and saving clauses.² But a distinction has been made where the proviso or saving clause is totally repugnant to the purview, or enacting part of the statute. In cases of (U. S.) 285. For provisos in penal statutes, see Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119; Dull v. People, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 91; Sneed v. Com., 6 Dana (Ky.) 339; Sanders v. State, 77 Ind. 227; People v. Gill, 7 Cal. 356; White v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 518; Jackson v. Moye, 33 Ga. 296.

1. Com. v. Sullivan, 150 Mass. 316; Com. v. Desmond, 123 Mass. 407; U. S. v. Reisinger, 128 U. S. 398; U. S. v. Barr, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 254; U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 45 Fed. Rep. 178; State v. Kansas City R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 722; Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 580; State v. Boyle, 10 Kan. 113; State v. Crawford, 11 Kan. 32; Willetts v. Jeffries, 5 Kan. 473; Harris v. Townshend, 56 Vt. 716; Pratt v. Jones, 25 Vt. 303; Grace v. Donovan, 12 Minn. 580; Brisbin v. Farmer, 16 Minn. 215; People v. Quinn, 18 Cal. 121; Jordan v. State, 38 Ga. 585; Volmer v. State, 34 Ark. 487; Sanders v. State, 77 Ind. 227; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown, 108 Ind. 538; Acree v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 353; Com. v. Sherman, 85 Ky. 686; State v. Shaffer, 21 Iowa 486; Tipton v. Carrigan, 10 Ill. App. 318; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; State v. Ross, 49 Mo. 416; Rogers v. Pacific R. Co., 35 Mo. 153; Lakeman v. Moore, 32 N. H. 410; Hall v. Hall, 64 N. H. 295; State v. Proctor, 90 Mo. 334; Garland v. Hickey, 75 Wis. 178; National Bank v. Lemke (N. Dak. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 921. See also Ex parte Larkins (Okla. 1891), 25 Pac. Rep. 745.

In People v. McNulty, 93 Cal. 437, it was said: "It is quite clear that a general saving clause, if it be clothed in apt language to express the purpose, is as efficient as a special clause expressly inserted in a particular statute. This proposition is too plain to need the support of authority, but there are authorities directly to the point."

In Mongeon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613, the court refused to apply the provision of the general repealing act of 1828, providing that "No offense committed, or penalty incurred, previous to the time when any statutory provision shall be repealed shall be affected by such repeal," to subsequent legislation, saying, "The legislature could not declare in advance the intent of subsequent legislatures, or the effect of subsequent legislation upon existing statutes." See also Nash v. White's Bank, 105 N. Y. 245.

In Files v. Fuller, 44 Ark. 280, the court, in speaking of such a statute, said: "This statute has very little importance save in hermeneutics, and has been rarely invoked, for no legislature has power to prescribe to the courts rules of interpretation, or to fix for future legislatures any limits of power as to the effect of their action. Any subsequent legislature might make its repealing action operate in pending suits, as effectually as if no such statute existed, and the courts are quite free to consider what the subsequent legislature did in fact intend, or had power to do. Still it has kept its place on the statute books, and it is persuasive at least, that subsequent legislatures meant to keep in harmony with it, and in their legislation supposed it would go without saying, that when a repeal was made, all rights in suits pending under the old statutes would be preserved."

As to what is included under the term "proceeding" in such a clause, see Beatty v. People, 6 Colo. 538; Gordon v. State, 4 Kan. 489; PROCEEDING, vol. 19, p. 220.

2. Rex v. Archbishop of Armagh, 8 Mod. 8; Savings Inst. v. Makin, 23 Me. 360.

"The true principle undoubtedly is, that the sound interpretation and meaning of the statute on a view of the enacting clause, saving clause, and proviso, taken and construed together, is to prevail. If the principal object of the act can be accomplished and stand under the restriction of the saving clause, or proviso, the same is not to be held void for repugnancy." 1 Kent's Com. 463, note, commenting upon Savings Inst. v. Makin, 23 Me. 360.

such repugnance, it has been held that the saving clause is void, and the purview of the statute will prevail¹; but that the proviso will stand as the later expression of the legislative will, and the purview must give way.² This distinction has been criticized by eminent writers as unsound, on the ground that the whole of an act is now passed at the same time, and it cannot fairly be said that any part of it expresses the last intention of the legislature, and on the further ground that there is, in this regard, really no essential difference between a saving clause and a proviso, both being employed to limit the operation of the purview, or enacting part of the statute.³ And it has been held that both should be kept within their legitimate bounds, and neither should be allowed to render the body of the statute entirely inoperative.⁴

d. INCONSISTENT CLAUSES AND STATUTES.—See infra, this title, In Pari Materia; Repeal; Context.

10. Associated Words —a. NOSCITUR A SOCIIS.—It is a fundamental principle in the construction of statutes that the meaning of a word or phrase may be ascertained by reference to the meaning of other words or phrases with which it is associated.⁵ The rule is embodied in the familiar maxim noscitur a sociis. To illustrate: a statute prohibiting the “having or keeping” gun-

1. Wood's Case, 1 Rep. 47; Walsingham's Case, 2 Plowd. 565; Farmers' Bank v. Hale, 59 N. Y. 59; Yarmouth v. Simmons, 10 Ch. Div. 518.

In 1 Black. Com. 89, it is said: “A saving totally repugnant to the body of the act, is void. If, therefore, an act of Parliament vests land in the king and his heirs, saving the right of all persons whatsoever; or vests the land of A in the king, saving the right of A; in either of these cases the saving is totally repugnant to the body of the statute, and, if good, would render the statute of no effect or operation, and, therefore, the saving is void, and the land vests absolutely in the king.”

2. Atty. Gen'l v. Chelsea Water Works, Fitzg. 19; Rex v. Middlesex, 2 B. & Ad. 818; 22 E. C. L. 190; Bac. Abr., tit. Statutes (1); Townsend v. Brown, 24 N. J. L. 80; Farmers' Bank v. Hale, 59 N. Y. 59; White v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 534. See also Packer v. Sunbury, etc., R. Co., 19 Pa. St. 219; Ryan v. State, 5 Neb. 276; Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 232.

3. 1 Kent's Com. 463; Bish. Stat. Cr. (2d ed.), §§ 63-65; Potter's Dwarries 118.

4. Jackson v. Moye, 33 Ga. 302, where it was held that a proviso was repugnant to the body of the act, and was therefore void. Mason v. Boom Co., 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 252.

In Dugan v. Bridge Co., 27 Pa. St. 309; 67 Am. Dec. 464, it is said that it is a general principle in the construction of statutes, that a proviso, or saving clause, which is directly repugnant to the purview or body of the act, is not to have effect.

In 1 Kent's Com. 463, the learned author said: “But it may be remarked upon this case of Fitzg. (Atty. Gen'l v. Chelsea Water Works, Fitzg. 19), that a proviso repugnant to the purview of the statute renders it equally nugatory and void as a repugnant saving clause; and it is difficult to say why the act should be destroyed by the one, and not by the other, or why the proviso and the saving clause, when inconsistent with the body of the act, should not both of them be equally rejected.”

5. Rex v. Jones, 7 Exch. 586; Reg. v. Brown, 17 Q. B. 833; 79 E. C. L. 833; Sewell v. Taylor, 7 C. B. N. S. 160; 97 E. C. L. 160; Skinner v. Usher, L. R., 7 Q. B. 423; De Londo's Case, 2 East P. C. 1098; Wiseman v. Cotton, 1 Lev. 80; Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 790; Rex v. Manchester Water Works, 1 B. & C. 630; 8 E. C. L. 266; Woodward v. London R. Co., 3 Exch. Div. 121; Arthur v. Moller, 97 U. S. 368; U. S. v. Weise, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 72; Com. v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 66 Pa. St. 81; Hilke v. Eisinbeis, 104 Pa. St.

powder, does not apply to a person who has gunpowder for a temporary use only, a carrier for instance; the kind of "having" contemplated by the act being made manifest by the word "keeping" with which it is associated.¹ And a statute declaring a fraudulent "gift, delivery, or transfer" of property to be an act of bankruptcy, does not apply to a "delivery" to a bailee for safe custody; the reference being obviously to such deliveries or transfers as are of the nature of a gift—in other words, to such only as change the ownership of the property.² Again, where a statute prohibited the "taking or destroying" the spawn of fish, it was held not to embrace a "taking" for the purpose of removal to another bed, as the word "destroying" with which "taking" was associated indicated that the "taking" inhibited was of a mischievous or dishonest character.³ The terms "equity of redemption," "improvements," "voluntary," and others equally familiar, have, by force of the words with which they were associated, been given a meaning different from their strict legal sense.⁴

514; Holman's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 502; Carter v. Peak, 138 Mass. 439.

This, it has been observed in reference to Rex v. Melling, 1 Vent. 225, was a rule adopted by Lord Hale, and was no pedantic or inconsiderate expression in falling from him, but was intended to convey, in short terms, the grounds upon which he formed his judgments. Broom's Leg. Max. (8th ed.) 588.

The statute 1 Vict., ch. 85, made it felony to "shoot, cut, stab, or wound," and the latter term was held to be restricted, by the words which preceded it, to injuries inflicted by an instrument, and hence to bite off a finger or a nose, or to burn the face with vitriol, was not a wound within the meaning of the act. Reg. v. Harris, 7 C. & P. 446; 32 E. C. L. 578; Rex v. Stevens, 1 Moo. C. C. 409.

In a statute concerning houses of "public refreshment, resort, and entertainment," the word "entertainment" was construed to mean something contributing to the enjoyment of the refreshment, and not a theatrical, musical, or other similar performance. Muir v. Keay, L. R., 10 Q. B. 594.

An act which exempted "magnates and noblemen" from tithes, was held not to extend to an ecclesiastical magnate, such as a dean, but to include only magnates of a noble kind. Warden v. Dean of St. Paul's, 4 Price 65.

The statute 5 & 6 Wm. IV, ch. 75, § 9, made the receipt of "parochial relief or other alms" a disqualification for the municipal franchise. It was held that the words "other alms," referred to parochial alms and did not include alms received from a charitable institution. Reg. v. Litchfield, 2 Q. B. 870; 42 E. C. L. 870.

1. Biggs v. Mitchell, 2 B. & S. 523; 110 E. C. L. 523.

So where an act prohibited the "having or conveying" anything suspected of being stolen and not satisfactorily accounted for, the former expression was held to be limited by the latter, and did not, therefore, apply to the possession in a house. Hadley v. Perks, L. R., 1 Q. B. 444.

2. Isitt v. Beeston, 4 Exch. 159; Cotton v. James, Mov. & Mal. 273.

3. Bridger v. Richardson, 2 M. & S. 568. And under an act making it penal to "take or kill" fish without the permission of the proprietor of the fishery, a similar kind of taking was held to have been intended. Rex v. Mallinson, 2 Burr. 679.

4. "Equity of Redemption."—Pennsylvania act, April 22, 1856 (2 Bright. Purd. 1064, par. 14), is in the following language: "No right of entry shall accrue or actions be maintained for a specific performance of any contract for the sale of any real estate, or for damages for non-compliance with any such contract, or to enforce any equity of redemption, after re-entry made for any condition broken, or to enforce any implied or resulting trust as to realty, but within five years after such contract was made or such equity or trust accrued, with the right of entry, unless such contract shall give a longer time for its performance, or there has been, in part, a

The most frequent application of this rule is found where specific and generic terms of the same nature are employed in the same act, the latter following the former. While, in the abstract, general terms are to be given their natural and full signification,¹ yet where they follow specific words of a like nature they take their meaning from the latter, and are presumed to embrace only things or persons of the kind designated by them.² Thus, an act declaring that certain affidavits shall not be invalidated by "cleri-substantial performance, or such contract, equity of redemption, or trust, shall have been acknowledged, by writing, to subsist, by the party to be charged therewith, within the same period." It was held that the words "to enforce an equity of redemption" construed—as they must be—in connection with the words "after re-entry made for any condition broken," could not refer to a mortgagor's right in the premises mortgaged, but only to cases such as those arising upon the rights of a purchaser under a ground-rent deed, after re-entry by the grantor for non-payment of rent; and, therefore, that the provision in no wise affected the rights of mortgagors, nor made any change in the rule previously existing, allowing a deed absolute on its face to be shown by parol to be a mortgage. Harper's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 315; Ballentine v. White, 77 Pa. St. 20.

"Improvements."—In Schenley's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 98, the question was the existence of a mechanics' lien upon an ordinary dwelling house under the Pennsylvania act, Feb. 17, 1858 (2 Bright. Purd. 1029, pl. 23), providing for a mechanics' lien on all "improvements, engines, pumps, machinery, screens and fixtures erected, repaired or put in by mechanics, machinists, persons or material-men entering liens thereon;" and Agnew, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Though the word 'improvements' is large enough, under ordinary circumstances, to include a house or private dwelling, it is manifest by its connection in this act with the words engine, pumps, machinery, screens and fixtures . . . that this word was not intended to authorize the creation of liens upon ordinary houses or dwellings of tenants independently of the works indicated by the other expressions used in connection with the word 'improvements.' These words have clear reference to the work erected on colliery leases, which are quite numerous, and are of great value and importance in the counties of Luzerne and Schuylkill;"—the two counties to which the statute was originally made applicable.

"Right."—20 & 21 Vict., ch. 147, § 53, after authorizing the construction of jetties in a certain river, contained the proviso that it should not take away any "right," claim, privilege, franchise or immunity to which the occupiers of land on the banks were entitled. It was held that the word "right" was, on account of the associated words, limited to vested rights of property, and did not include the right of navigation which the occupiers enjoyed not otherwise than the public generally. Kearns v. Cordwainers' Co., 6 C. B. N. S. 388; 95 E. C. L. 386.

"Right of Common."—Under the Statute, 2 & 3 Wm. IV, ch. 71, the phrase "any right of common" is restricted by the words which follow, "or other profit or benefit to be taken and enjoyed from or upon any land," so as not to embrace rights in gross, but only those ordinary rights of common and profit à prendre which are in some way appurtenant to the land and limited to the wants of a dominant tenant. Shuttleworth v. LeFleming, 19 C. B. N. S. 687; 11 E. C. L. 687.

"Voluntary."—An annuity act excepted from its general provisions any "voluntary annuity granted without regard to pecuniary consideration." The word "voluntary" was held to be employed, not in its common legal sense, as without consideration, but as without pecuniary consideration. Crespigny v. Wittenoom, 4 T. R. 790.

1. For example, the language "any bond or other specialty," in a statute limiting the time for instituting actions, includes every kind of specialty. Cork, etc., R. Co. v. Goode, 13 C. B. 836; 76 E. C. L. 835.

So the grant of a right to shoot, hunt and fish, embraces all things usually the subject of such sport. Jeffreys v. Evans, 19 C. B. N. S. 264; 115 E. C. L. 263.

2. This branch of the subject is fully cal or other defects," refers to clerical or formal defects of like description only.¹ So an act exempting from execution the tools, etc., of any "mechanic, miner, or other person," does not include a judgment debtor who is a farmer.²

But the object of the rule in question being not to defeat, but to ascertain and effectuate the legislative intent, it will not be applied where the application would be in the face of the evident meaning of the framers of the law.³ Accordingly, where the obvious purpose of an act was to prevent a desecration of the Sabbath by restraining the doing of those things which are offensive to a Christian community, the prohibition against "horse racing, cock fighting, or playing cards, or games of any kind" on Sunday, was held to embrace baseball.⁴ Nor does the rule obtain where the specific words signify subjects greatly different from one another, for here the general expression might very consistently treated under the titles OTHER, vol. 17, p. 278; OTHERWISE, vol. 17, p. 285, where a large collection of cases, and many illustrations, will be found.

1. Duanesburgh v. Jenkins, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 574.

2. Bevitt v. Crandall, 19 Wis. 581.

3. State v. Williams, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 474; Com. v. Percival, 4 Leigh (Va.) 150; Foster v. Blount, 18 Ala. 687. In this latter case it was said that the rule is one of construction to ascertain the intention of the legislature, and when that is clear the courts are bound by it. If they were to restrict the meaning of general words when the framers of the law by the use of them intended to embrace other persons or things not embraced by the particular words, they annul the law instead of executing it.

In Willis v. Mabon, 48 Minn. 140, it was held that the Minnesota laws of 1889, ch. 30, § 1, amending the insolvent laws of 1881, and providing that the "release of any debtor under this act shall not operate to discharge any other party liable as surety, guarantor, or otherwise for the same debt," includes stockholders who are liable for the debts of the corporation. And in the opinion, it is said that the doctrine of ejusdem generis is but a rule of construction to aid in ascertaining the meaning of the legislature, and does not warrant a court in confining the operation of the statute within narrower limits than intended by the law-maker. The general object of an act sometimes requires that the final general terms shall not be restricted in meaning by its more specific predecessors.

Where the question was whether a forfeit bond given to secure the running of a horse race was within a statute which read that "all notes and bonds for the payment of money won by gaming or playing at cards, dice, or any game or games, shall be void and of no effect," it was held that the intention of the legislature to use general words sufficient to embrace all modes of gaming was made evident by the words "or any other game or games" following "or playing at cards or dice;" thereby intending to prohibit all fashions and modes of gaming. Shropshire v. Glascock, 4 Mo. 536. This case has been approved in Boynton v. Curle, 4 Mo. 599; Eubanks v. State, 5 Mo. 450; Hayden v. Little, 35 Mo. 418.

Section 9 of Ohio act, March 8, 1831, provides "That if any person shall abuse any judge or justice of the peace, resist or abuse any sheriff, constable or other officer in the execution of his office," etc. It was contended that the words "or other officer" should be restricted, on account of the connection in which they were used, in their meaning to officers connected with the administration of justice under the direction of the courts. But the court held that the words, considering the mischief sought to be remedied—to wit, abuse of, or resistance to, public officers engaged in the execution of their offices—should be construed to embrace ministerial as well as judicial officers generally, other than those named in the statute, and, therefore, a supervisor of roads and highways. Woodworth v. State, 26 Ohio St. 196.

4. State v. Williams, 35 Mo. App. 541.

add one more variety; in such case, the general term must receive its natural and wide meaning. For example, where an act forbade the conveyance into any prison, with intent to facilitate the escape of a prisoner, of "any mask, dress, or other disguise, or any letter, or any other article or thing," the last general terms were held to include anything whatsoever that might aid a prisoner in escaping—a crowbar.¹ Nor does it apply when the particular words exhaust a whole genus; in that case the general term is held to refer to a larger class.²

b. INFERIOR DOES NOT INCLUDE SUPERIOR.—Statutes which treat of persons or things of an inferior degree cannot, by any general words, be extended to those of a superior degree.³ For instance, a statute treating of "deans, parsons, vicars, and others having spiritual promotion," does not extend to bishops—deans being the highest persons named, and bishops being of a still higher rank.⁴ So an act levying duties upon "copper, brass, pewter, tin, and all other metals not enumerated," includes under the general expression only metals inferior to those mentioned, and not gold or silver, which are commonly known as "precious" metals.⁵ Again, a statute relating to indictments before justices of the peace and "others having power to take indictments," does not apply to the superior courts.⁶ Where, however, the consequence of thus restricting the general words would be that they would have no effect at all, they must be construed to extend to persons or things superior in degree to those enumerated. Upon this principle, a statute limiting the time for the institution of "every possessory, ancestral, mixed, or other action," has been held to include a real action.⁷

1. Reg. v. Payne, L. R., 1 C. C. 27.

2. Fenwick v. Schmalz, 3 C. P. 316; Ellis v. Murray, 28 Miss. 129. See infra, this title, Inferior Does Not Include Superior.

3. Hall v. Byrne, 2 Ill. 140; Lyndon v. Standbridge, 2 H. & N. 51; Ailesbury v. Pattison, 1 Dougl. 28; Woodworth v. Paine, 1 Ill. 374; 1 Bl. Com. 88; Broom's Legal Maxims (8th ed.) 650.

Statute 31 Hen. VIII, ch. 3, exempting from tithes all lands which should come to the crown by "dissolution, renouncing, relinquishing, forfeiture, giving up, or by any other means," had the effect of exempting lands which came to the crown by these or any other inferior means, but not those which came to the crown by an act of Parliament, which is the highest manner of conveyance that can be. 2 Insts. 457.

The statute which prohibited salmon fishing in the waters of certain enumerated streams, and "all other waters wherein salmon is taken," was construed as including by these general words, only rivers inferior to those mentioned, and, therefore, as not including the river Thames. 2 Insts. 478.

4. Archbishop of Canterbury's Case, 2 Rep. 46b; Copland v. Powell, 1 Bing. 373; 8 E. C. L. 552.

5. Per Parke, B., in Casher v. Holmes, 2 B. & Ad. 592; 22 E. C. L. 146.

6. 2 Insts. 478.

7. Chapman v. Woodruff, 34 Ga. 98; Ellis v. Murray, 28 Miss. 129. In the latter case it was contended that as real actions were omitted from the statute, and were of higher dignity than those actions enumerated, they could not be included in the words "other action." But the court held otherwise, and said: "Though it is generally true that a statute which treats of things or persons of an inferior degree cannot, by any general words, be extended to those of a superior degree, yet when all those of an inferior degree are embraced by the

c. REDDENDA SINGULA SINGULIS.— Words or clauses in a statute, where the sense requires it, and in furtherance of the legislative intention, are to be taken distributively, reddenda singula singulis.¹ They are thus applied to the subject-matter to which they appear by the context most properly to relate, and to which they are indeed most applicable. Thus, in the construction of the words, “for money or other good consideration, paid or given,” the word “paid” must be referred to “money,” and “given,” to “consideration.”² Other illustrations of the maxim will be found in the notes.³ express words used and there are still general words, they must be applied to things of a higher degree than those enumerated, for otherwise there would be nothing for the general words to operate upon, and effect could not be given to all the words. Here, there are no inferior actions to those embraced in the words ‘possessory, ancestral or mixed actions,’ except, perhaps, the proceeding of unlawful detainer or forcible entry and detainer, the limitation to which is regulated by another statute. Unless the words ‘other action’ embrace those of a higher degree than those enumerated, they become nugatory; and a construction producing such a result cannot be given, upon well settled and familiar principles.”

The statute 52 Hen. III, ch. 19, speaks of “courts baron or other courts,” and it was held that the words “the courts” embraced the courts of record at Westminster, for otherwise they would be given no effect, there being no courts inferior to those enumerated. 2 Insts. 137.

In Bishop on Stat. Cr. (8th ed.), § 246b, the author observes that the rule first stated above accords with the workings of the human mind; that a writer who specifies certain things, adding a general clause, mentions, as of course, the highest things, and some of each class within those which he had in contemplation. Any one can, by experiment, ascertain that his own mind will commonly work so. We reasonably assume, therefore, in construing his language that he did not intend to include things higher than any mentioned, nor of a class outside of those specified; yet the mind does not necessarily in every instance move in this way, and when the court can discern that the mind of the maker of a statute moved otherwise, it should not apply to his work this rule of interpretation.

1. A clause in a statute is said to be construed reddenda singula singulis

(“giving each to each”) when one of two provisions in one sentence is appropriated to one of two objects in another sentence, and the other provision is similarly appropriated to the other object. Sweet’s L. Dict.; Anderson’s L. Dict.

In McIntyre v. Ingraham, 35 Miss. 25, it is said that it is one of the best settled rules of construction that words in different parts of a statute must be referred to their appropriate connection, giving to each in its place its proper force, reddenda singula singulis, and if possible rendering none of them useless or superfluous.

The words “according to the provisions of the said act and of this act” obviously import that the requisitions of two acts (that act itself and another act thereinbefore mentioned), in their respective particulars are to be duly complied with as if the one under its circumstances requires signature to an instrument only, and the other that it be under seal. Potter’s Dwarries 230.

In Reg. v. Cumberworth Hall, 5 Q. B. 484; 48 E. C. L. 482, where the words were “the feeding of a cow by and on the lands,” Patterson, J., said: “I think we must say reddendo singula singulis that the feeding was to be ‘on’ the land while there was food on it and by the owner of the land with pay at other times.”

2. Potter’s Dwarries 230.

3. Massachusetts Stat. of 1884, ch. 212, § 1, provides that “whoever sells or offers for sale, or has in his possession” a lobster less than a certain length “shall forfeit five dollars for every such lobster; and in all prosecutions under this section the possession of any lobster not of the required length shall be prima facie evidence to convict.” And where on the trial of a complaint for having in possession lobsters of less than the required length, it was contended by the defendant that no prosecution could be maintained upon propositions which can be read uno flatu declaring that possession shall cause a penalty to be incurred, and that possession shall be prima facie evidence to convict; that these two propositions became law at the same instant of time, and that there is no resource except to declare the whole section, so far as it relates to the offense of possession, as unmeaning and incapable of enforcement. But this contention was negatived, and Devens, J., for the court, said: "The different portions of a sentence or different sentences are to be referred, respectively, to the other portions or sentences to which we can see they respectively relate. Even if strict grammatical construction should demand otherwise, the maxim of construction reddenda singula singulis is well established, and if the latter clause be construed respective et distributive it will be found that it relates to the first two offenses described in the section and not to the third."

Act of Congress, March 3, 1801, p. 287, § 2, supplementing the Act of Feb. 27, 1801, p. 268, provides that all fines, penalties, and forfeitures accruing under the laws of the states of Maryland and Virginia, which by adoption have become the laws of this district (District of Columbia), shall be recovered with costs, by indictment or information in the name of the United States, or by action of debt in the name of the United States and of the informer. It was held that the act must be construed reddenda singula singulis; that is, where the mode of prosecution under the state laws was by indictment, or information in the name of the commonwealth, it should in future be by indictment or information in the name of the United States; and where by the state laws the mode of prosecution was an action qui tam, or an action of debt in the name of the informer, it should, in future, be an action qui tam in the name of the United States and of the informer, or an action of debt in the name of the informer alone. U. S. v. Simms, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 253.

Statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV, ch. 22, § 44, enacts that "the property of, and in all lands, tenements, hereditaments, buildings and erections, works and other things, which shall have been, or shall hereafter be, purchased, obtained and erected, constructed or made, by or by order of, or which shall be within or under the view, cognizance, or management of any commissioners of sewers, with the several conveniences, etc., shall be and the same are hereby vested in the commissioners of sewers." Adopting this rule of construction, the court held that this section had not the effect of vesting in the commissioners the property in all lands under their view, cognizance, or management, but only vested in them the property in lands purchased by them, and in works and other things under their view, cognizance, and management. Stracey v. Nelson, 12 M. & W. 533.

The first section of Pennsylvania Act May 16, 1861, relating to bankers and brokers, requires a return to be made of the business done, and the second section requires a report of the names composing the firm, or of the individuals engaged in the business. The third section provides that "every banker or broker who shall neglect or refuse to make the return and report required by the first and second sections of this act shall for every such neglect or refusal be subject to a penalty" named. And Agnew, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Adhering, then, to the words of the law, to what did the legislature refer when it said 'shall for every such neglect or refusal be subject to a penalty?' It is to be observed it is the language of reference, and we are therefore, by the words themselves, sent to inquire for the delinquencies referred to. But the moment we start off on this errand, we discover that the reference is to a return, to be found only in the first section, and to a report, provided for only in the second, and that they differ widely. Each is indispensable—the report, that it may be known to the commonwealth who is liable to taxation; the return, that the means of assessing the tax may be furnished. The report is once for all time the party may continue in business; the returns annually until he ceases. It is clear that the offenses being different in kind, independent in act, and distinct in time, each is liable to a punishment. When the legislature therefore said, every such neglect or refusal should be the subject of a penalty, it becomes very plain it did not refer to a joint neglect of several acts impossible of simultaneous performance. Had the word 'every' been omitted, the language might have been dubious, but with it before us, as a part of the very letter of the act, we are admonished by the reference to resort to separate sections to ascertain the neglect or refusal

d. EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS.—The maxim, the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another, is of frequent application in the construction of statutes.¹ Thus, the enumeration of the cases in which creditors are allowed to receive interest excludes other cases;² a grant to corporations of the power to lend money on personal security, precludes them from making loans on any other kind of security;³ a requirement that a license shall be obtained for the sale of specified liquors implies that others may be sold without license;⁴ an expression of the cases in which a married woman may sue, limits her to those referred to, and thus compelled to give the distributive word 'every' a reference to each, reddendum singula singulis." Com. v. Cooke, 50 Pa. St. 201.

Massachusetts Stat. 1825, ch. 114, § 1, providing for a session of the supreme judicial court at Nantucket, recites that the term shall be holden by one or more of the justices of said court, and the court so holden shall have cognizance of all causes, civil and criminal, and of all other matters and things which by law are cognizable by said court, when holden by one or more justices thereof, in any county. Shaw, C. J., for the court, said: "We think this section is to be construed conformably to the maxim reddenda singula singulis, and that when in fact the court is held by one of the justices it shall have cognizance of all matters cognizable by the court when so held in any other county; and when in fact held by three or more, it shall have cognizance of all matters cognizable by the full court in other counties." Coffin v. Hussey, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 289. See also Com. v. Jordan, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 228.

A statute enacted, "It shall and may be lawful for the directors of the Bristol Dock Company, and they are hereby authorized and required, to make a new common sewer, and also to alter and reconstruct all or any of the sewers of the said city, and also to make such other alterations and amendments in the sewers of the city as may or shall be necessary," etc. Applying the maxim in question, the court held that the statute made it obligatory upon the directors to make a new common sewer, but simply empowered, and did not compel, them to alter and reconstruct the other sewers. Rex v. Bristol Dock Co., 6 B. & C. 181; 13 E. C. L. 139.

1. Where the statute enumerated the cases in which the board of county commissioners of roads were authorized to set aside the report of viewers, the court said: "Applying the familiar maxim 'expressio unius est exclusio alterius,' we must hold that there are no others in which it can be implied." Doctor v. Hartman, 74 Ind. 221.

The Stat. 2 Wm. IV, ch. 45, § 27, gave the right of voting in boroughs to every person who occupied either as owner or tenant "any house, warehouse, counting house, shop, or other building, being either separately or jointly with any land" within such city or borough, etc. It was held that under this section two distinct buildings could not be joined together in order to constitute a borough qualification. Tindal, C. J., observed: "The rule expressio unius est exclusio alterius is, I think, applicable here. I cannot see why the legislature should have provided for the joint occupation of a building and land, and not for that of two different buildings if it had been intended that the latter should confer the franchise." Dewhurst v. Fielden, 7 M. & G. 182; 49 E. C. L. 181.

The provisions of the Missouri statute (Wagner's Sts. 328, § 5), authorizing the joinder as defendants of those persons living in the same county or circuit in proceedings to condemn lands for railroads, is equivalent to saying that other persons not residing in said county or circuit cannot be joined with them. Quincy, etc., R. Co. v. Kellogg, 54 Mo. 334. See further Estate of Weeks, 1 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 164; Scovern v. State, 6 Ohio St. 288; Brockett v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Pa. St. 241; Page v. Allen, 58 Pa. St. 338; 98 Am. Dec. 272; Philadelphia v. Davis, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 278; Koch v. Bridges, 45 Miss. 247; Watson v. Corey, 6 Utah 150. See supra, this title, Special Classes—Private and Special, and infra, this title, Repeal.

2. Watkins v. Wassell, 20 Ark. 410.

3. Fowler v. Scully, 72 Pa. St. 456; 13 Am. Rep. 699.

4. Feldman v. Morrison, 1 Ill. App. 460.

cases;¹ subjecting coal mines to the poor rate is a virtual exclusion of other mines;² and a special provision in an act for levying a tax of a fixed per centum excludes the levy of a higher, although necessary, tax;³ so a statute expressly exempting from distress for taxes "arms and accoutrements" makes all other property liable to the distress.⁴ And when a statute defining an offense, designates one class of persons as subject to its penalties, all others are to be deemed as exonerated.⁵

But this maxim is not of universal application; it is always subject to the intention of the legislature as the chief guide to the construction.⁶ Moreover, where the language of the statute may fairly embrace many different cases, and some only are expressly mentioned merely by way of example, others of a similar nature are not thereby excluded.⁷ And if there is some special reason for mentioning one or more things, and none for mentioning others, which are otherwise within the statute, the failure to mention the latter will not necessarily exclude them.⁸ And, again, where the words of the law-maker are general and the statute is merely declaratory of the common law, it may extend to persons and things other than those actually named.⁹ Indeed it has been said that the maxim is too general, and subject to too many exceptions in its application, to govern the construction of criminal statutes.¹⁰ And e converso, the exclusion of one subject or thing in a statute, is, as a general rule, the inclusion of all others. For example, the exclusion of the power of a court to impose a fine of less than a specified amount, gives, by implication, the power to impose a fine for more than that sum.¹¹

11. Retrospective Laws—(See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670; EX POST FACTO LAWS, vol. 7, p. 525; VESTED RIGHTS)—a. DEFINITION.—A retrospective or retroactive law is one which operates upon matters which occurred, or rights and obligations which existed, before the time of enactment.¹² Strictly speaking,

1. Miller v. Miller, 44 Pa. St. 170.
2. Reg. v. Cunningham, 5 East 478. In Potter's Dwarries 221, it is said: "Where certain specific things are taxed, or subjected to any charge, it seems probable that it was intended to exclude everything else, even of a similar nature; and a fortiori, all things different in genus and description from those which are enumerated."

3. U. S. v. Macon County, 99 U.S. 582.
4. Sherwin v. Bugbee, 16 Vt. 439.

The 32d section of the Pennsylvania Act of April 29, 1844, declares that all offices, posts of profit, professions, trades and occupations, except the "occupation of farmers," shall be valued and assessed, and subject to taxation. And it was held that this exception excluded all other exceptions. Miller v. Kirkpatrick, 29 Pa. St. 226. See also Olive Cemetery Co. v. Philadelphia, 93 Pa. St. 129; 39 Am. Rep. 732.

5. Howell v. Stewart, 54 Mo. 400; State v. Jaeger, 63 Mo. 403.

6. Broom's Leg. Max. (8th ed.) 652.

7. Scaggs v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 10 Md. 268; Broom's Leg. Max. (8th ed.) 652.

8. Brown v. Buzan, 24 Ind. 194.

9. 2 Insts. 256; Potter's Dwarries 221.

10. State v. Connor, 7 La. Ann. 379.

11. Hawkins v. People, 106 Ill. 628; Chiles v. State, 2 Tex. App. 36; Drake v. State, 5 Tex. App. 649.

12. In Society, etc. v. Wheeler, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 105, Story, J., said: "Upon principle, every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights, acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disability, in respect to penal laws are retrospective laws as well as those which affect civil and property rights only; but penal laws constitute a specific class known as ex post facto laws, which are discussed elsewhere.¹ Questions of constitutional limitations upon the legislative power to enact laws impairing the obligation of contracts or divesting vested rights are not within the scope of the subject under discussion,² which will be limited to the construction and operation of retrospective laws.³

b. RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.—It may be laid down as a fundamental rule in construing statutes so worded as to admit of a construction which would render them retrospective as well as prospective, that a prospective operation only is to be given, unless a legislative intent to the contrary is declared, or necessarily implied from the circumstances or the language used.⁴ In England, where the Parliament has the power to enact retrospective laws, this rule of construction is applied perhaps more rigorously transactions or considerations already past, must be deemed retrospective."

1. See EX POST FACTO LAWS, vol. 7, p. 525.

2. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 670; VESTED RIGHTS.

3. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, vol. 3, p. 760, for a discussion of the various classes of valid retrospective laws.

4. State v. Sloss, 83 Ala. 93; Engelhardt v. State, 88 Ala. 100; Parsons v. Paine, 26 Ark. 124; Webber v. Clarke, 74 Cal. 11; Goshen v. Stonington, 4 Conn. 209; 10 Am. Dec. 121, and note; Thames Mfg. Co. v. Lathrop, 7 Conn. 550; Perkins v. Perkins, 7 Conn. 558; 18 Am. Dec. 120; McCarthy v. Havis, 23 Fla. 508; State v. Bradford, 36 Ga. 422; Garrett v. Doe, 2 Ill. 335; In re Tuller, 79 Ill. 99; 22 Am. Rep. 164; Russell, etc., Drainage Dist. v. Benson, 125 Ill. 490; Jemison v. Adams County, 130 Ill. 558; Aurora, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Hothouse, 7 Ind. 59; Lucas v. Tucker, 17 Ind. 41; Hopkins v. Jones, 22 Ind. 310; Niklaus v. Conkling, 118 Ind. 289; Maxwell v. Fulton County, 119 Ind. 20; Bartruff v. Remey, 15 Iowa 257; Knoulton v. Redenbaugh, 40 Iowa 114; State v. Crawford, 11 Kan. 32; O'Donoghue v. Akin, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 480; Cumberland, etc., R. Co. v. Washington County Ct., 10 Bush (Ky.) 564; State v. Bermudez, 12 La. 352; Eugenie v. Preval, 2 La. Ann. 121; Reed v. His Creditors, 39 La. Ann. 115; Torrey v. Corliss, 33 Me. 333; Preston v. Drew, 33 Me. 558; 54 Am. Dec. 639; Rogers v. Greenbush, 58 Me. 395; 4 Am. Rep. 292; Deake's Appeal, 80 Me. 50; McGruder v. Carroll, 4 Md. 335; State v.

Norwood, 12 Md. 195; Williar v. Baltimore Butchers', etc., Assoc., 45 Md. 546; Grinder v. Nelson, 9 Gill (Md.) 299; Clark v. Baltimore, 29 Md. 283; Davis v. Clabaugh, 30 Md. 508; Williams v. Johnson, 30 Md. 500; 96 Am. Dec. 613; Herbert v. Gray, 38 Md. 529; Somerset v. Dighton, 12 Mass. 383; Abington v. Duxbury, 105 Mass. 287; Phillips v. New Buffalo, 68 Mich. 217; Kerlinger v. Barnes, 14 Minn. 526; Davidson v. Gaston, 16 Minn. 230; Giles v. Giles, 22 Minn. 348; Brown v. Wilcox, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 127; Gayden v. Bates, Walker (Miss.) 209; Easten v. Van Dorn, Walker (Miss.) 14; Hooker v. Hooker, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 599; Stewart v. Davidson, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 351; Garrett v. Beaumont, 24 Miss. 377; Carson v. Carson, 40 Miss. 349; State v. Thompson, 41 Mo. 25; Williamson v. New Jersey, etc., R. Co., 29 N. J. Eq. 311; Elizabeth v. Hill, 39 N. J. L. 555; Stilphen v. Stilphen, 65 N. H. 126; Amsbry v. Hinds, 48 N. Y. 57; Johnson v. Burrell, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 238; Fairbanks v. Woods, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 329; Wood v. Oakley, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 400; Quinn v. New York, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 595; Wilson v. Baptist Education Soc., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 308; Quackenbush v. Danks, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 128; 1 N. Y. 129; State v. Roosa, 11 Ohio St. 16; Price v. Mott, 52 Pa. St. 315; Dewart v. Purdy, 29 Pa. St. 113; Ellet v. Paxson, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 418; Taylor v. Mitchell, 57 Pa. St. 209; Jordan v. Gower, 57 Tenn. 103; Collins v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 841; Orr v. Rhine, 45 Tex. 345; Rockwall Co. v. Kaufman than in the states of the Union, and particularly if vested rights would be disturbed by giving to the statute a retrospective operation.¹

The time of taking effect, and not the time of enactment, is the time to be taken in determining whether a statute is prospective or retrospective.² Retrospective legislation is prohibited by the constitutions of some of the states.³ There is authority for the view that constitutions operate prospectively unless an intent to the contrary appears.⁴

c. DECLARATORY STATUTES.—The power to interpret and construe statutes rests with the courts and not with the legislature. Courts have resisted constantly legislative efforts to invade the judicial prerogative by means of expository statutes designed to Co., 69 Tex. 172; Farrel v. Pingree, 5 Utah 443; Richmond v. Henrico County, 83 Va. 204; Murdock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 33 W. Va. 407; Stewart v. Vandervort, 34 W. Va. 524; Fowler v. Lewis, 36 W. Va. 112; Finney v. Ackerman, 21 Wis. 268; Seamans v. Carter, 15 Wis. 548; 82 Am. Dec. 696; Schenck v. Peay, Woolw. (U. S.) 175; U. S. v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 736; Osborne v. Detroit, 32 Fed. Rep. 36; Gardner v. U. S., 25 Ct. of Cl. 24; Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 328; Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 172; McEwen v. Den, 24 How. (U. S.) 242; Chew Heong v. U. S., 112 U. S. 536; Twenty Per Cent. Cases, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 179.

1. Young v. Hughes, 4 H. & N. 76; Williams v. Smith, 4 H. & N. 559; Burn v. Carvalho, 4 Nev. & M. 889; Moon v. Durden, 2 Exch. 22; Grosset v. Ogilvie, 5 Bro. P. C. 527; Couch v. Jeffries, 4 Burr. 2460; College of Physicians v. Harrison, 9 B. & C. 524; 17 E. C. L. 433; Pettamberdass v. Thackoorerdass, 5 Moore Ind. App. 109; 7 Moore, P. C. C. 239; 15 Jur. 257; Thompson v. Lack, 3 C. B. 540; Hickson v. Darlow, 52 L. J. Ch. Div. 454; 31 W. R. 362; affirmed 23 Ch. Div. 690; 48 L. T. 449; Evans v. Williams, 2 D. & S. 324; Marsh v. Higgins, 9 C. B. 551; The Ironsides, Lush. 458; Quilter v. Mapleson, 9 Q. B. Div. 672; Marsh v. Higgins, 9 C. B. 551; Evans v. Williams, 2 D. & S. 324; Hickson v. Darlow, 52 L. J. Ch. 454; 31 W. R. 362; 23 Ch. Div. 690; Thompson v. Lack, 3 C. B. 540; 54 E. C. L. 540.

2. Dewart v. Purdy, 29 Pa. St. 113; Bariow v. Gregory, 31 Conn. 261; Medford v. Learned, 16 Mass. 215; State v. Messmore, 14 Wis. 163; Paddon v. Bartlett, 3 Ad. & El. 884; 4 N. & M. 321; 30

E. C. L. 252, 373; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. State, 81 Tex. 572.

3. See the various state constitutions. As to the New Hampshire constitution, see Woart v. Winnick, 3 N. H. 473; 14 Am. Dec. 384; Clark v. Clark, 10 N. H. 380; 34 Am. Dec. 165; Willard v. Harvey, 24 N. H. 344; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; Simpson v. Savings Bank, 56 N. H. 466; as to the Texas constitution, see De Cordova v. Galveston, 4 Tex. 470; as to the Missouri constitution, see State v. Heman, 70 Mo. 441; State v. Greer, 78 Mo. 188; State v. Johnson, 81 Mo. 60; State v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 79 Mo. 420. See also Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Woodward, 4 Colo. 162; Lundin v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 4 Colo. 433; Willoughby v. George, 5 Colo. 80; Thomas v. Scott, 23 La. Ann. 689; Goshorn v. Purcell, 11 Ohio St. 641; State v. Richland Tp., 20 Ohio St. 369; Railroad v. Pounds, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 127; Fisher's Negroes v. Dabbs, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 119; Pickett v. Boyd, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 498; Officer v. Young, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 320; 26 Am. Dec. 268.

4. Cooley's Const. Lim., p. 77, where it is said: "We shall venture also to express the opinion that a constitution should operate prospectively only, unless the words employed show a clear intention that it should have a retrospective effect. . . . And we are aware of no reasons applicable to ordinary legislation which do not, upon this point, apply equally well to constitutions." Judge Cooley cites in support of this proposition Allbyer v. State, 10 Ohio St. 588; State v. Barbee, 3 Ind. 258; Evans v. Phillipi, 117 Pa. St. 226; 2 Am. St. Rep. 655; Pecot v. Police Jury, 41 La. Ann. 706; and refers also to State v. Thompson, 2 Kan. 432; Slack v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 13 B.

have a retroactive operation. While the legislature by a declaratory statute may change an existing law,¹ it cannot by such a statute reverse judicial decisions² or inject into an existing statute a meaning which the courts have declared that it did not possess.³

d. STATUTES AFFECTING JUDICIAL PROCEDURE. — Statutes which are designed to change the mode of judicial procedure, where such change relates to the method of enforcing a right, and

Mon. (Ky.) 1; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 153; New Central Coal Co. v. George's Creek Coal, etc., Co., 37 Md. 557; and criticises as obiter the language used by the court in Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; 5 Am. Dec. 291, from which a contrary rule might be inferred. See also Indiana County v. Agricultural Soc., 85 Pa. St. 357; Lehigh Iron Co. v. Lower Macungie Township, 81 Pa. St. 482; Brown v. State, 23 Md. 503; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 453; Douglass v. Harrisville, 9 W. Va. 162; 27 Am. Rep. 548.

1. Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 327.

2. Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 224; Sanders v. Cabaniss, 43 Ala. 173; People v. Frisbie, 26 Cal. 135; Young v. State Bank, 4 Ind. 301; 58 Am. Dec. 630; Beebe v. State, 6 Ind. 501; 63 Am. Dec. 391; Lanier v. Gallatas, 13 La. Ann. 175; Lewis v. Webb, 3 Me. 326; Durham v. Lewiston, 4 Me. 140; Atkinson v. Dunlap, 50 Me. 111; Baltimore v. Horn, 26 Md. 194; Moser v. White, 29 Mich. 59; Lawson v. Jeffries, 47 Miss. 686; 12 Am. Rep. 342; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 199; De Chastellux v. Fairchild, 15 Pa. St. 18; Bates v. Kimball, 2 Chip. (Vt.) 77; Staniford v. Barry, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 314; 15 Am. Dec. 691; Ratcliff v. Anderson, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 105; 31 Am. Rep. 716; Syndor v. Palmer, 32 Wis. 406. But see Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 421, where it was held that an act of Congress declaring a bridge over the Ohio River to be a lawful structure, superseded a previous decree of the court declaring it an obstruction to navigation and ordering its removal.

3. Greenough v. Greenough, 11 Pa. St. 489; 51 Am. Dec. 567; Reiser v. William Tell Sav., etc., Association, 39 Pa. St. 137; Haley v. Philadelphia, 68 Pa. St. 45; 8 Am. Rep. 153; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; 5 Am. Dec. 291; Salters v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 338; James v. Rowland, 52 Md. 462;

Calhoun v. McLendon, 42 Ga. 405; McNichol v. United States, etc., Agency, 74 Mo. 457. See also Postmaster-Gen'l v. Early, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 148; Todd v. Clapp, 118 Mass. 495.

In Salters v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 338, Walworth, Ch., said: "In England, where there is no constitutional limit to the powers of Parliament, a declaratory law forms a new rule of decision, and is valid and binding upon the courts, not only as to cases which may subsequently occur, but also as to pre-existing and vested rights. But even there the courts will not give a statute a retrospective operation, so as to deprive a party of a vested right, unless the language of the law is so plain and explicit as to render it impossible to put any other construction upon it. In this country, where the legislative power is limited by written constitutions, declaratory laws, so far as they operate upon vested rights, can have no legal effect in depriving an individual of his rights, or to change the rule of construction as to pre-existing law. Courts will treat such laws with all the respect which is due to them as an expression of the opinion of the individual members of the legislature as to what the rule of law previously was. But beyond that they can have no binding effect; and if the judge is satisfied the legislative construction is wrong, he is bound to disregard it."

In Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; 5 Am. Dec. 291, Kent, C. J., after a careful review of the ancient and modern authorities on retrospective laws in their relation to vested rights, said: "It is equally inadmissible to consider the act as declaring how the former statutes were to be construed, as to cases already existing. If this interpretation was to be considered as giving the former acts a new meaning, it then becomes a new rule, and is to have the same effect as any other newly created statute. But if it be considered as an exposition of the former acts for the information and government of the

does not affect the right itself, are construed to apply to causes of action which accrued before enactment as well as to those to accrue thereafter.¹ And such statutes are generally held to apply also to actions pending at the time of enactment,² although it courts in the decision of causes before them, it would then be taking cognizance of a judicial question. This could not possibly have been the meaning of the act, for the power that makes is not the power to construe a law. It is a well-settled axiom that the union of these two powers is tyranny. Theorists and practical statesmen concur in this opinion."

In Reiser v. William Tell Sav., etc., Association, 39 Pa. St. 137, it appeared that the legislature of Pennsylvania passed an act in 1859 by which they assumed to interpret an act of the legislature of the same state passed in the year 1850. The act of 1859 came before the court for construction, and, in the course of the opinion, Lowrie, C. J., said: "It is therefore, in its very terms, an expository act. It is an interpretation by one legislature, of a statute written by another legislature nine years before; and therefore an adjudication of the private rights which have arisen under it. And yet the former legislature said nothing like this, and nothing from which this could be inferred. The legislature have certainly no such authority over us as to change the laws of language. If given language does not express a given meaning, they may give us other language that does; but this will not change the meaning of the former language. In the very nature of language that is impossible. It is with, and by virtue of the new expressions, that we get the new meaning; and the meaning of the law being the law itself, the law can be no older than the effectual expression of it. We speak, of course, only of statute laws, for customary or common law must be in actual operation before it can be authoritatively ascertained and expressed. . . . We have no expressions in the act of 1850, to justify the interpretation put upon it by the act of 1859. Yet we understand the legislature of 1859 is directing us to adopt this interpretation, and therefore to abandon the interpretation which the judiciary department of the government has declared to be the true one, and to decide according to the act of 1859, the private rights which have arisen under the act of 1850. This we cannot do."

But in Gray v. Chicago, etc., R. Co.,

10 Wall. (U. S.) 454, it was held that an act of Congress to legalize a bridge across a navigable river, passed pending a suit to remove the bridge as a nuisance, gave the rule of decision for the court at the final hearing.

1. Wright v. Hale, 6 H. & N. 227; Costa Rica v. Erlanger, 3 Ch. Div. 69; The Dumfries, Swab. 63; Atty. Gen'l v. Sillem, 10 H. L. 704; Warner v. Murdoch, 4 Ch. Div. 752; Cornish v. Hockin, 1 El. & Bl. 602; 72 E. C. L. 602; Kimbray v. Draper, L. R., 3 Q. B. 163; Warne v. Beresford, 2 M. & W. 848; The Alexander Larsen, 1 W. Rob. 288; The Ironsides, Lush. 458; Boodle v. Davis, 8 Exch. 351; Binns v. Hey, 1 D. & L. 66; Brooks v. Bockett, 9 Q. B. 847; 58 E. C. L. 846; Scadding v. Eyles, 9 Q. B. 858; 58 E. C. L. 856; Watton v. Watton, L. R., 1 P. & M. 227; Weldon v. Winslow, L. R., 13 Q. B. Div. 784; Gardner v. Lucas, 3 App. Cas. 582; Coosa River Steamboat Co. v. Barclay, 30 Ala. 120; Buckingham v. Moss, 40 Conn. 461; Rowen v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 364; Logan v. Logan, 77 Ind. 558; Collier v. State, 10 Ind. 58; Dobbins v. First Nat. Bank, 112 Ill. 553; Winslow v. People, 117 Ill. 152; Harlan v. Sigler, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 39; Kossuth County v. Wallace, 60 Iowa 508; State v. Shreves, 81 Iowa 615; Leavenworth Coal Co. v. Barber, 47 Kan. 29; Morton v. Valentine, 15 La. Ann. 150; Wood v. Westborough, 140 Mass. 403; Com. v. Hall, 97 Mass. 570; Berry v. Clary, 77 Me. 482; Excelsior Mfg. Co. v. Keyser, 62 Miss. 155; Jones v. Davis, 6 Neb. 33; Lawrence R. Co. v. Mahoning County, 35 Ohio St. 1; People v. Ulster County, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 85; Ball v. Bullard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 141; Underhill v. Manhattan R. Co., 27 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 478; Judkins v. Taffe (Oregon, 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 221; Bennett v. Taffe (Oregon, 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 223; Lane v. White, 140 Pa. St. 99; Lane v. Nelson, 79 Pa. St. 407; Richardson v. Cook, 37 Vt. 599; 88 Am. Dec. 622; Murray v. Mattison, 63 Vt. 479; Bredenburg v. Bardin (S. Car. 1892), 15 S. E. Rep. 372; Sampeyreac v. U. S., 7 Pet. (U. S.) 222.

2. Bensley v. Ellis, 39 Cal. 309; People v. Mortimer, 46 Cal. 114; Willis v. Finch- has been held that such actions are presumed to be exempt from their operation unless the contrary intent appears.¹

So statutes changing forms of actions,² making new rules as to parties and pleadings,³ and changing the rules of evidence in civil causes,⁴ will, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition of retrospective legislation, be construed liberally.

c. REMEDIAL AND CURATIVE STATUTES.—In the construction of remedial and curative acts, such, for example, as are intended to correct the mistakes of public officials or private individuals, the rule that statutes are to have prospective operation only unless the contrary intent appears, serves as the general rule of construction, although the courts apply the rule to such statutes with somewhat less strictness than to others.⁵ And where the language plainly shows the legislative intent that the statute should have a retrospective operation, and the omission to be cured is some act with which the legislature might have dispensed by a prior statute, the courts will so construe the act as to give it the retrospective operation intended.⁶ But it has been held that statutes, which are remedial in their nature and do not disturb er, 68 Ga. 444; Indianapolis v. Imberry, 17 Ind. 175; Slocum v. Fayette County, 61 Iowa 169; State v. Shreves, 81 Iowa 615; Walston v. Com., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 15; Gill v. Wells, 59 Md. 492; McNamara v. Minnesota Cent. R. Co., 12 Minn. 388; Underhill v. Manhattan R. Co., 27 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 478; Judkins v. Taffe (Oregon, 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 221; Bennett v. Taffe (Oregon, 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 223; Lane v. White, 140 Pa. St. 99; In re Koch's Estate, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 338; State v. Manning, 14 Tex. 403; Murray v. Mattison, 63 Vt. 479; Lee v. Buckheit, 49 Wis. 54; Rosenthal v. Wehe, 58 Wis. 621; Larkin v. Saffarans, 15 Fed. Rep. 147; Untermeyer v. Freund, 50 Fed. Rep. 77; Singer v. Hasson, 50 L. T. N. S. 326.

1. State v. Smith, 38 Conn. 397; Rowell v. B., etc., R. Co., 59 N. H. 35; Trist v. Cabenas, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 143; Merwin v. Ballard, 66 N. Car. 398; Stiles v. Murphy, 4 Ohio St. 92; Mabry v. Baxter, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 682.

2. In re Protestant Episcopal, etc., School, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 161; Broadhus v. Broadhus, 10 Bush (Ky.) 299; Baldwin v. Newark, 38 N. J. L. 158; Thayer v. Seavey, 11 Me. 284.

3. Augusta v. Bank of Augusta, 49 Me. 507; Lockett v. Usry, 28 Ga. 345; Hepburn v. Curts, 7 Watts (Pa.) 300; 32 Am. Dec. 760; Palmore v. State, 29 Ark. 248; Grinder v. Nelson, 9 Gill (Md.) 299; Crawford v. Branch Bank, 7 How. (U. S.) 279.

4. Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 505; 23 Am. Rep. 381; Goshen v. Richmond, 4 Allen (Mass.) 458; Monson v. Palmer, 8 Allen (Mass.) 551; Howard v. Moot, 64 N. Y. 262; Belcher v. Mhoon, 47 Miss. 613; Rutland v. Copes, 15 Rich. (S. Car.) 84; Rich v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 304; Fales v. Wadsworth, 23 Me. 553; Foster v. Gray, 22 Pa. St. 9; Mann v. Eckford, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 502; McCurtie v. Stevens, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 527; Ralston v. Lothain, 18 Ind. 303; West v. Creditors, 1 La. Ann. 365.

5. Journey v. Gibson, 56 Pa. St. 57; Lambertson v. Hogan, 2 Pa. St. 22; Cunningham's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 546; White v. Crawford, 84 Pa. St. 433; Chalker v. Ives, 55 Pa. St. 81; Hastings v. Lane, 15 Me. 134; Shallow v. Salem, 136 Mass. 136; Forster v. Forster, 129 Mass. 559; Gerry v. Stoneham, 1 Allen (Mass.) 319; James v. Rowland, 52 Md. 462; Moser v. White, 29 Mich. 59; People v. Moore, 1 Idaho N. S. 662; Marsh v. Chesnut, 14 Ill. 223; Parsons v. Paine, 26 Ark. 124; Dean v. Charlton, 27 Wis. 522; Bernier v. Becker, 37 Ohio St. 72; Citizens' Gas Light Co. v. State, 44 N. J. L. 648; Linn v. Scott, 3 Tex. 67; People v. Ulster County, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 83; Quinn v. New York, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 595.

6. Palmer v. Fitts, 51 Ala. 489; Reis v. Graff, 51 Cal. 86; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220; Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; King v. Course, 25 Ind. 202; People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17; 2 vested rights, are to be construed liberally, even though retrospective in their operation, in order to accomplish the beneficent purpose for which they were enacted.¹

12. Mandatory or Directory—a. IN GENERAL.—When a statute requires that an act shall be performed, or performed in a particular manner, without expressly declaring what shall be the consequence of non-compliance, the question arises what intention is to be attributed by inference to the legislature. Of course, where

Am. Rep. 278; Bennett v. Fisher, 26 Iowa 497; Newman v. Samuels, 17 Iowa 528; Jones v. Berkshire, 15 Iowa 248; 83 Am. Dec. 412; McMillan v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304; Police Jury v. Shreveport, 5 La. Ann. 661; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228; 15 Am. Rep. 202; People v. Ingham County, 20 Mich. 95; Portage County v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 121 Mass. 460; State v. Union, 33 N. J. L. 350; State v. Guttenberg, 38 N. J. L. 419; People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551; People v. Ingersoll, 58 N. Y. 1; 17 Am. Rep. 178; People v. McDonald, 69 N. Y. 362; People v. Batchellor, 53 N. Y. 128; 13 Am. Rep. 480; Belo v. Forsythe County, 76 N. Car. 489; Butler v. Toledo, 5 Ohio St. 225; Journeay v. Gibson, 56 Pa. St. 57; Blount v. Janesville, 31 Wis. 648; Single v. Marathon County, 38 Wis. 363; State v. Tappen, 29 Wis. 664; Mills v. Charleton, 29 Wis. 400; 9 Am. Rep. 578.

Irregularities in Exercise of the Power of Taxation.—Musselman v. Logansport, 29 Ind. 533; Zanesville v. Richards, 5 Ohio St. 589; Boardman v. Beckwith, 18 Iowa 292; Cowgill v. Long, 15 Ill. 202; Lennon v. New York, 55 N. Y. 361; Thames Mfg. Co. v. Lathrop, 7 Conn. 550; People v. Todd, 23 Cal. 181; Iowa Railroad Land Co. v. Soper, 39 Iowa 112; Wilson v. Buckman, 13 Minn. 441; McCoy v. Michew, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 386; Montgomery v. Meredith, 17 Pa. St. 42; Stewart v. Shoenfelt, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 360; Williston v. Colkett, 9 Pa. St. 38; Brevoort v. Detroit, 24 Mich. 322; May v. Holdridge, 23 Wis. 93; Hasbrouck v. Milwaukee, 13 Wis. 37; 80 Am. Dec. 718; People v. Seymour, 16 Cal. 332; 76 Am. Dec. 521; State v. Newark, 27 N. J. L. 185; Barnet v. Barnet, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 72; Beach v. Walker, 6 Conn. 190; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 627; Brewster v. Syracuse, 19 N. Y. 116; Carpenter v. Pennsylvania, 17 How. (U. S.) 456; DePauw v. New Albany, 22 Ind. 204; New Orleans v. Poutz, 14 La. Ann. 866; New Orleans v. Cordevielle, 13 La.

Ann. 268; New Orleans v. Locke, 14 La. Ann. 867; Litchfield v. McComber, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 288; Stockdale v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 20 Wall. (U. S.) 323.

The legislature may authorize taxation to meet expenses which were unauthorized when they were incurred. Weister v. Hade, 52 Pa. St. 474; People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551; Ritchie v. Franklin County, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 67; Kenosha v. Lamson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 477; Steines v. Franklin County, 48 Mo. 167; Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Marion County, 36 Mo. 294; Barton County Co. v. Walser, 47 Mo. 189; Johnson v. Campbell, 49 Ill. 316. See also State v. Harris, 17 Ohio St. 608; State v. Demarest, 32 N. J. L. 528; State v. Jackson, 31 N. J. L. 189; State v. Reed, 31 N. J. L. 133; Stewart v. Warren, 37 Conn. 225; Bartholomew v. Harwinton, 33 Conn. 408; Kunkle v. Franklin, 13 Minn. 127; 97 Am. Dec. 226; Comer v. Folsom, 13 Minn. 219.

Acts of municipal corporations which require legislative consent may be made valid by retrospective acts. Fisk v. Kenosha, 26 Wis. 23; Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475; Bartholomew County v. Bright, 18 Ind. 93; Walpole v. Elliott, 18 Ind. 258; 81 Am. Dec. 358; Brown v. New York, 63 N. Y. 239.

1. In Ex parte Buckley, 53 Ala. 55, the court, after referring to laws which impair vested rights, said: "There are other statutes which when operating retrospectively, have not incurred judicial condemnation, and to which a liberal construction for the consummation of the just and beneficent purposes in view has been freely accorded. Such statutes are intended to remedy a mischief, promote public justice, correct innocent mistakes into which parties may have fallen, cure irregularities, or give effect to the acts and contracts of individuals fairly done and made."

In People v. Ulster County, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 83, the court, after stating the general rule, said: "The only exception to this rule is that referred to by the aim and purpose of the law-making power would be plainly defeated if the command to do the thing in a particular manner did not imply an inhibition to do it in any other, no doubt can be entertained as to the mandatory character of the statute.¹ And where compliance is made in terms a condition precedent to the validity of what is done, the neglect of the statutory requirement would obviously be fatal.² But there are statutes containing no such indication of the intention of the legislature, in many of which the forms, conditions, and other attendant circumstances prescribed by the statute have been adjudged essential to the act or thing regulated by it; while in others such prescriptions have been deemed simply directory, the neglect of which did not affect its legality nor involve any other consequence than a liability to penalty, if any were imposed, for breach of the statute; and, generally speaking, the fact that there is no remedy for non-compli-

Chancellor Kent (1 Com. 455, 2d ed.), in which he says: 'But this doctrine is not understood to apply to remedial statutes, which may be of a retrospective nature, provided they do not impair contracts or disturb absolute vested rights, and only go to confirm rights already existing, and in furtherance of the remedy, and adding to the means of enforcing existing obligations.' As authority for this exception, he cites Underwood v. Lilly (10 S. & R. (Pa.) 101); Tate v. Stooltzfoos (16 S. & R. (Pa.) 35; 16 Am. Dec. 546); Bleakney v. Farmers', etc., Bank (17 S. & R. (Pa.) 64; 17 Am. Dec. 635); Foster v. Essex Bank (16 Mass. 245; 8 Am. Dec. 135); Locke v. Dane (9 Mass. 360). After reviewing and criticising the cases cited by Chancellor Kent, the court continued: "In all such cases, the acts must, of necessity, be interpreted retrospectively. But upon the authority of the cases cited, in this state and in England, unless the act contains, in terms or by necessary implication, language of intent to apply retrospectively, must be held to apply prospectively only. It thus appears, from the cases reviewed, that even remedial statutes are not excepted from the general rule, except in those cases where no other construction can be given without leaving the enactment of no effect; or where such a retrospective construction is a necessary implication from the language employed."

1. The provision of the statute, 18 & 19 Vict., ch. 122 (known as the Metropolitan Building act), that the walls of buildings shall be constructed of brick, stone or other incombustible material, though containing no prohibitory terms, clearly prohibits by implication, and makes illegal, their construction with any other material. Stevens v. Gourley, 7 C. B. N. S. 99; 97 E. C. L. 97.

And under a law which required the governor to receive written sealed bids until a certain day, it was held that all bids received after that day must be rejected. Webster v. French, 12 Ill. 302.

Where a special act in relation to the presentation of certain claims against the state, otherwise not allowable, required them to be presented within a certain time, and therefore made a distinction between such claims and ordinary ones as to the time of presentment, it was held that the presumption was that such limitation as to time was material, and necessary to be followed. Corbett v. Bradley, 7 Nev. 106.

2. Verona's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 83. As when, for example, the deed of a married woman was to take effect when the certificate of her acknowledgment of it was filed. Jolly v. Hancock, 7 Exch. 820. Or where it was provided that no appeal should be entertained unless certain rules were conformed to. In re Dickinson, 51 L. J. Ch. D. 736.

So, when a statute provides, that when a city council shall deem an improvement necessary, they shall so declare by resolution, the declaration of the necessity for the improvement is a condition precedent to subsequent action, and not simply a step in the course of the proceedings, prescribed with a view to a regular, orderly, and prompt transaction of the business in the prog-ance, is no impediment to such a construction.¹ Although the propriety of ever treating the provisions of any statute as directory merely has been sometimes questioned, nevertheless the right of courts to do so seems justifiable in principle, and is abundantly established by authority.²

b. AFFIRMATIVE AND NEGATIVE TERMS.—It is, in general, true that negative terms in a statute show a legislative intent to make the provision imperative, requiring a strict performance in respect of both time and manner.³ Yet as a rule of universal application, this cannot be relied upon, as provisions framed in ress of which such step is to be taken. Hoyt v. East Saginaw, 19 Mich. 39.

1. Thus, the statutes in reference to the times and places of holding quarter sessions are construed to be directory. Rex v. Leicester, 7 B. & C. 6; 14 E. C. L. 3. Yet it would be difficult to say that there would be any remedy against the justices for holding them at any other times or places than those prescribed by the statutes. Baron Parke in Gwynne v. Burnell, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 7; 29 E. C. L. 228.

2. In Koch v. Bridges, 45 Miss. 247, it was said that getting rid of a statutory provision by calling it directory is not only unsatisfactory on account of the rule itself, but it is the exercise of a dispensing power by the courts which approaches so near legislative discretion that it ought to be exercised with reluctance, and only in extraordinary cases where great public mischief would otherwise occur or important private interests demand the application of the rule. There is no more propriety in dispensing with one positive requirement than another; a whole statute may be thus dispensed with when in the way of the caprice or will of a judge. And, besides, it vests a discretionary power in the ministerial officers of the law which is dangerous to private rights; and the public inconvenience, occasioned by the want of uniformity in the mode of exercising a power, is a strong reason for bridling this discretion. And in Bowman v. Blythe, 7 El. & Bl. 47; 90 E. C. L. 46, Baron Martin, in concurring in the opinion of the court, said: "I will only add that, though I do not question that, in construing acts, language, seemingly positive, may sometimes be read as directory, yet such a construction is not to be lightly adopted, and never, when as in this case, it would really be to make a new law instead of that made by the legislature."

Mr. Justice Hebard, in Briggs v.

Georgia, 15 Vt. 72, very justly observes: "I am not well satisfied with the summary mode of getting rid of a statutory provision by calling it directory. If one positive requirement and provision of a statute may be avoided in that way, we see no reason why another may not."

And in Hoyt v. East Saginaw, 19 Mich. 39, Chief Justice Cooley says: "The courts in their anxiety to sustain the action of public officers, where irregularities have occurred without the intervention of bad faith, have gone to the extreme in holding legislative enactments to be merely directory, and have perhaps sometimes made decisions which dispensed with those things which the legislature intended as essentials. The duty of the courts is to examine the statute carefully with a view to giving the legislative intention effect; and they ought to sustain defective proceedings only in those cases where it is fairly inferable that they observed that intent more nearly by sustaining them than by setting them aside on account of the omitted formality."

The difficulty in fixing any settled, discriminate point between a mandatory and directory statute, led Lord Penzance, in Howard v. Bodington, 2 P. Div. 203, to observe: "I believe, as far as any rule is concerned, you cannot safely go further than that in each case you must look to the subject-matter, consider the importance of the provision that has been disregarded, and the relation of that provision to the general object intended to be secured by the act, and upon a review of the case in that aspect, decide whether the matter is what is called imperative or only directory."

3. Stayton v. Hulings, 7 Ind. 144; Pond v. Negus, 3 Mass. 230; 3 Am. Dec. 131; Torrey v. Millbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64; Koch v. Bridges, 45 Miss. 247; Hurford v. Omaha, 4 Neb. 336.

"It has been asked," observes Lord

Tenterden, in Rex v. Leicester, 7 B. & C. 12; 14 E. C. L. 3, "what language will make a statute imperative, if the 54 Geo. III, ch. 84, be not so? Negative words would have given it that effect, but those used here are in the affirmative." And Taunton, J., in Pearse v. Morrice, 2 Ad. & El. 94; 29 E. C. L. 42, says: "I understand the distinction between directory and imperative statutes to be, that a clause is directory when the provisions contain mere matter of direction and nothing more; but not so, where they are followed by such words as are used here, viz., that anything done contrary to such provisions shall be 'null and void to all intents.' These words give a direct, positive and absolute prohibition. If they are not obligatory, I cannot conceive to myself any words which can have a prohibitory force."

In Reg. v. Sneyd, 9 Dowl. P. C. 1001, where the statute under consideration required overseers to be appointed by the justices within a certain time, Coleridge, J., in giving judgment, says: "Although the appointment is required to be made by the 54 Geo. III, ch. 91, within fourteen days after the 25th of March, yet the general rule is that where such a provision is introduced, unless there are negative words in the statute providing that the appointment shall not take place afterwards, such a provision is to be taken as directory. That was the construction put upon 43 Eliz., ch. 3, and writs of mandamus have been issued requiring magistrates to make appointments of overseers, the issue of which writs must have proceeded on the ground that the words of the statute were directory. No negative words are introduced into this statute; therefore, its language must be regarded merely as directory." A similar consequence was held by Tindal, C. J., in Cole v. Green, 6 M. & G. 872, to result from the absence of negative or prohibitory words in a local paving act.

The provision of the charter of the city of New York, New York Laws, 1857, ch. 446, § 7, that "All resolutions and reports of committees which shall recommend any specific improvement involving the appropriation of public money or the taxing or assessing the citizens of the city shall be published immediately after the adjournment of the board, under the authority of the board, in all the newspapers employed by the corporation, and shall not be passed until after notice has been published at least two days," was held to be mandatory, rendering void an ordinance or resolution not so published, and an assessment in pursuance thereof. Petition of Douglas, 46 N. Y. 42; 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 161; reversing 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 174; 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 84; 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 201.

The board of health of Philadelphia was authorized to appoint officers and fix their compensation. One B. was appointed clerk in 1858. The board in 1855 fixed the clerk's compensation at two thousand dollars after January, 1856. The council appropriated for the payment of the clerk's salary only fourteen hundred dollars per annum. The Pennsylvania act of April 21, 1858, directed that no debt, etc., should be binding on the city unless authorized by law or ordinance, and there being a sufficient previous appropriation made by council, it was held that B. could not recover beyond fourteen hundred dollars. Bladen v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. St. 464.

The provisions of the Wisconsin Registry Law (§ 7, ch. 445, Wisconsin Laws of 1864), which forbid the vote of any person to be received at any annual election in that state unless his name be on the register, made on a previous day, or unless he shall furnish the board of inspectors a certain affidavit and certain specified proof of his residence in the district, are imperative, and all votes received in violation of these provisions will be rejected by the court in an action to try title to an office. State v. Hilmantel, 21 Wis. 574. In delivering the opinion of the court in this case, Dixon, C. J., said: "And next it is to be observed that it is a negative statute. It has been said on very high authority that negative words will make a statute imperative. Dwarris on Statutes 715. The words of the act are 'no vote shall be received at any annual election in this state, unless,' etc. It is difficult to conceive any language more strongly imperative than this." This ruling was followed in State v. Stumpf, 23 Wis. 630.

And in Re Election of McDonough, 105 Pa. St. 488, the provisions of the Pennsylvania Registry Law of January 30, 1874, Pamph. Laws 31, that the election officers shall permit no man to vote who is unregistered until he produces the required proof of residence, etc., and that such person shall produce the required proof at the time he offers to vote, was held to be mandatory.

negative language have been adjudged to be directory merely.¹ Nevertheless, it is undoubtedly true that a design to make a provision merely directory is more rarely to be found under negative words.² On the other hand, the absence of negative words from a statute is not always conclusive of an intention that the provision is to be regarded as directory simply, as affirmative words, if absolute, explicit, and peremptory, showing that no discretion was intended to be given, may, and often have been held to, render the statute mandatory.³ And it seems to be agreed that affirmative expressions that introduce a new rule imply a negative of all that is not within the purview.⁴

1. Potter's Dwaris, p. 224.

In Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 170, the statute provided in substance, that no vote shall be received at any state election if the name of the person offering to vote be not on the register, unless such person shall furnish to the judges of election his affidavit that he is an inhabitant of the district, and entitled to vote therein, and prove by the oath of a householder and registered voter of the district that he knows such person to be an inhabitant of the district. It was held, however, that the statute in this regard was directory, and that a vote of a registered voter received by the judges of election on his own affidavit, will not be rejected because the other proof of his qualification was made by a person not a householder and registered voter. This ruling was followed in Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 498.

It should be observed that similar statutes have been, in other states, held to be mandatory. See last note.

And in Margate Pier Co. v. Hannan, 3 B. & A. 266, it was held by the king's bench that the usual provision in the commission of the peace that no magistrate named in it shall be capable of acting or authorized to act unless he shall have taken the oath required by law, would lead to intolerable inconvenience and injustice, if it were imperative and struck with invalidity every act of an unqualified justice. It was pointed out that if his acts were held void, all persons who acted in the execution of a warrant issued by him would act without authority. A constable who arrested, and a jailer who received an arrested person under it, would be trespassers. Resistance to them would be lawful; everything done by them would be unlawful; and a constable and the persons aiding him might become amenable even to a charge of murder for acting under an authority which they reasonably considered themselves bound to obey, and of the invalidity of which they were wholly ignorant. Such consequences could not reasonably have been supposed to have been intended. The interests of the public require that the acts should be sustained, and the just conclusion was that the legislature intended by the prohibition only to impose a penalty for its infringement.

2. Bishop Stat. Cr., § 255a.

3. Koch v. Bridges, 45 Miss. 247; District Tp. v. Dubuque, 7 Iowa 276; Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418.

In Cooley's Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 89, it is said: "There are cases where whether a statute was to be regarded as merely directory or not, was made to depend upon the employing or failing to employ negative words plainly importing that the act should be done in a particular manner or time, and not otherwise. The use of such words is often conclusive of an intent to impose a limitation, but their absence is by no means equally conclusive that the statute was not designed to be mandatory."

Where the language of the statute was that "the forms of proceedings set forth in the schedule annexed shall be used," Lord Kenyon observed: "I cannot say that these words are merely directory," and a material variance from the forms prescribed was held fatal. Davidson v. Gill, 1 East 64.

And in Cohen v. Hoff, 2 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 661, Nott, J., said that "affirmative words may and often do imply a negative of what is not affirmed as strongly as if expressed."

When the statute fixing the salary of a public officer, declared it to be a county charge and that the supervisors "shall audit and allow it" as it fell due, it was held to be imperative, leaving no discretion in the matter to the supervisors. Morris v. People, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 381.

4. Stradling v. Morgan, Hob. 298;

c. STATUTES PRESCRIBING TIME AND MODE OF PROCEEDING BY PUBLIC OFFICERS.—Statutory prescriptions in regard to the time, form, and mode of proceeding by public functionaries are generally directory, as they are not of the essence of the thing to be done, but are given simply with a view to secure system, uniformity, and dispatch in the conduct of public business.¹ This rule, however, must be taken subject to the principles stated in the foregoing section.

Statutes requiring a sheriff upon a sale of real estate to file a Plowd. 206; 9 Bacon's Abr. Statutes (G); District Tp. v. Dubuque, 7 Iowa 276; U. S. v. Case of Hair Pencils, 1 Paine (U. S.) 406.

1. Rex v. Ingram, 2 Salk. 593; Smith v. Jones, 1 B. & Ad. 334; Reg. v. Ingall, 2 Q. B. Div. 199; Nowell v. Worcester, 9 Exch. 467; Bonar v. Mitchell, 5 Exch. 415; Whitney v. Emmett, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 303; Shaw v. Orr, 30 Iowa 355; Wilson v. Bank of Alabama, 3 La. Ann. 196; New Orleans v. St. Romes, 9 La. Ann. 573; Bell v. Taylor, 37 La. Ann. 56; Com'rs v. Chase, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 37; Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 41; Ex parte Kellogg, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 372; Ex parte Johnson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 424; Bloom v. Burdick, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 130; 37 Am. Dec. 299; Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 587; Gossard v. Vaught, 10 Kan. 165; St. Louis County Ct. v. Sparks, 10 Mo. 119; 45 Am. Dec. 355; McKune v. Weller, 11 Cal. 54; Hart v. Plum, 14 Cal. 149; People v. Murray, 15 Cal. 221; Tuohy v. Chase, 30 Cal. 525; People v. Lake County, 33 Cal. 487; State v. Click, 2 Ala. 26; Walker v. Chapman, 22 Ala. 116; Savage v. Walshe, 26 Ala. 619; Limestone County v. Rather, 48 Ala. 433; State v. Smith, 67 Me. 328; Wendel v. Durbin, 26 Wis. 390; Lackawana, etc., Coal Co. v. Little Wolfe, 38 Wis. 152; Fifield v. Marinette County, 62 Wis. 532.

In Holland v. Osgood, 8 Vt. 276; Corliss v. Corliss, 8 Vt. 373; People v. Cook, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 259, it is laid down as a rule that statutes directing the mode of proceeding by public officers are directory and are not to be regarded as essential to the validity of the proceedings themselves, "unless it be so declared in the statute." And in a subsequent part of the opinion, in the last case above cited, it is said: "And we have already seen by reference to the adjudications that statutes directing the mode of proceedings by public officers are regarded as directory unless there is something in the statute itself which plainly shows a different intent."

In Jones v. State, 1 Kan. 259, Cobb, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, says, in reference to the foregoing: "The rule first mentioned appears to us inaccurate. The words 'unless it be so declared in the statute' seem to require an express declaration that the provision is essential however important and essential a just view of the policy of the statute may show such provision to be. The rule secondly stated contains probably all that the learned judge intended to say in the first, and as a general proposition is doubtless correct. But the intent to make such provision essential may appear as well by the general scope and policy of the statute as by direct averment. In other words, unless a fair consideration of the statute shows that the legislature intended compliance with the provision in relation to the manner to be essential to the validity of the proceeding, it is to be regarded as directory merely. In statutes of this class as well as all others, the will of the legislature expressed in the statute is the law, and is to be ascertained by all legitimate methods of interpretation."

And this is in accord with the view entertained by Judge Cooley. He says: "This rule" (referring to People v. Cook, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 290), "strikes us as very general and as likely to include within its scope, in many cases, things which are of the very essence of the proceedings." Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 89.

And on the same page he points out that in another case (People v. Schermerhorn, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 540, 558), the same court observes: "Statutory requisitions are deemed directory only when they relate to some immaterial matter where a compliance is a matter of convenience rather than of substance."

Mr. Sedgwick states the rule in these certificate of sale in the clerk's office,¹ a judge trying a case without a jury to render his decision,² a referee to make his report,³ a county commissioner of schools to be appointed,⁴ sealed proposals for state work to be deposited in the office of the secre-terms: "Where the statute directs an act to be done in a certain way at a certain time, and a strict compliance as to time or form does not appear to the judicial mind to be essential, the proceedings are held valid, though the command of the statute has been disregarded. The statute in such a case is said to be directory." Sedgwick's Stat. & Const. Law 368. Nowhere is the correct rule more forcibly expressed than in State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 292, where the court said: "Where there is no substantial reason why the thing to be done might not as well be done after the time prescribed as before—no presumption that by allowing it to be so done it may work an injury or wrong—nothing in the act itself, or in other acts relating to the same subject-matter indicating that the legislature did not intend that it should rather be done after the time prescribed than not to be done at all; there the courts assume that the intention was that if not done within the time prescribed, it might be done afterwards. But when any of these reasons intervene there the limit is established."

"There is," said Lord Mansfield, in Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 44, "a known distinction between the circumstances which are of the essence of a thing required to be done by an act of Parliament, and clauses merely directory. The precise time in many instances is not of the essence."

1. Jackson v. Young, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 267; 15 Am. Dec. 473.

A statute requiring that a certified copy of the proceedings of commissioners in condemnation proceedings to be delivered or transmitted to the clerk of the district court within twenty days from the rendition of the report, is directory to the clerk of the county court. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wilder, 17 Kan. 239.

By section 6 of Michigan Laws of 1865, p. 145, it is provided that the township clerks shall certify on or before the first Monday of October in each year to the supervisor of their township the amount of the town indebtedness growing out of the payment of bounties, etc. Where the certificate was not given until after the first Monday but before the second Monday, it was held that the law must be considered so far directory, and that the certificate was equally valid, given as it was after the first but before the second Monday. Smith v. Crittenden, 16 Mich. 152.

The provision of New York Laws 1865, ch. 381, § 4, requiring the Croton Aqueduct Board to file a copy of the map showing the plan of drainage of the sewerage districts in New York city with the clerk of the common council, in the absence of any provision prohibiting the contracting of the work until the filing of such copy, is only directory, and an omission so to do does not vitiate the assessment. In re New York Protestant Episcopal Public School, 47 N. Y. 556.

2. As, for example, that the judge shall give his decision on or before the first day of the term succeeding that in which the cause was submitted. Rawsons v. Parsons, 6 Mich. 400. Or before judgment pronounced. Fraser v. Willey, 2 Fla. 116.

And the provisions of a statute in regard to proceedings by attachment against non-resident debtors requiring the judge to make and file his report within twenty days and the trustees to have their appointment recorded within one month after it was made, are directory merely. Wood v. Chapin, 13 N. Y. 514; 67 Am. Dec. 62.

When a cause is submitted in term time by consent entered of record "for a decree in vacation under the statute," the chancellor may render his decree after the expiration of the ninety days prescribed by the statute. Session Laws of Alabama 1873, p. 58; Revised Code, §§ 717 & 3470; and such decree being valid he has no power to vacate and annul it at a subsequent term. Ex parte Holding, 56 Ala. 458.

3. In re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 200.

4. Neal v. Burrows, 34 Ark. 49. In Reg. v. Sneyd, 9 Dowl. P. C. 101, the justices in petty sessions were required to appoint overseers within fourteen days after the 25th of March, and appointments made after the time prescribed were adjudged valid, the statute being regarded as directory in the point of time.

In People v. Allen, 6 Wend. (N. Y.)

tary of state,¹ the comptroller to institute suits against delinquent collectors²—within a specified time, have severally been adjudged directory. And a similar construction has been given to statutes requiring a sheriff to levy an attachment in the presence of two credible witnesses;³ to exhaust the property of the principal before seizing that of the surety;⁴ judges of certain courts to sign their minutes;⁵ in certain cases to file their decisions in writing;⁶ a clerk to advertise the time to which the court adjourns;⁷ marriages to be solemnized before twelve witnesses,

486, the statute under consideration declared that "the commanding officer of each brigade of infantry shall on or before the first day of June in each year appoint a brigade court-martial." The appointment was made in July, and was held valid. And Marcy, J., for the court, after stating the general rule substantially as laid down in the text above, observed: "So it may be said of this case, that as there is nothing in the nature of the power showing that it might not be as effectually exercised after the first day of June as before, and as the act giving it contains no prohibition to exercise it after that period, the naming that day was a mere direction to the officer in relation to the manner of executing his duty. There is nothing in the nature of the power given, or in the manner of giving it, that justifies the inference that the time was mentioned as a limitation."

The provision of the second section of the act of Congress of 1860 in relation to the time within which selections of swamp lands are to be made by a state, is directory, and a state loses no rights by not complying strictly therewith. Gaston v. Stott, 5 Oregon 48.

1. Free Press Assoc. v. Nichols, 45 Vt. 8.

2. Walker v. Chapman, 22 Ala. 116. The statute, 13 Hen. IV. ch. 7, requiring justices to try rioters "within a month" after the riot, was held directory—not limiting the authority of the justices to that space of time. Rex v. Ingram, 2 Salk. 593.

3. Davidson v. Kuhn, 1 Disney (Ohio) 405.

4. Atkinson v. Rhea, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 59; Cheatham v. Brien, 3 Head (Tenn.) 552.

The Texas statute (Paschal's Digest, art. 3775), which provides that if the defendant in execution shall fail or refuse to point out property when the same is in the county, the levy shall be made first on the personal or movable property, and then on uncultivated lands, and lastly on improved lands, is directory, and though the failure to make the levy as required by statute might be sufficient in a proper case properly presented to set aside the levy or to render the officer liable in damages, yet the sale would not necessarily be void. Pearson v. Flanagan, 52 Tex. 266.

And a statute which requires the sale of land under execution, when it consists of known lots or parcels, to be made separately and not in gross, is directory; and though a sale made in gross is voidable at the instance of the party aggrieved, it is not void. Cunningham v. Cassidy, 17 N. Y. 276.

5. And the minutes, although not so signed, are to be considered valid until it is shown that they have been disapproved by the court. Talbot County v. House, 20 Ga. 328.

A statute requiring the court to so limit the time of sentence of a convict that his term of imprisonment in the state prison shall expire between March and November, is directory, and non-compliance with the requirement does not render the sentence void. Miller v. Finkle, 1 Parker Cr. (N. Y.) 374.

6. Stewart v. Slater, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 83.

7. Wise v. State, 34 Ga. 348. In this case it was held that § 3165 of the Code of Georgia, providing that the clerk of the superior court, when informed by the presiding judge that it is not possible for him to attend the regular term of said court, from some unavoidable cause, which shall be expressed in the order of the journal, shall adjourn such court to such time as the judge may direct, and shall advertise the same at the courthouse of the county in which said court is to be held, and one or more times in a public gazette, was directory to the clerk, and if not complied with by him, the court might still be held at the time fixed in the order of adjournment, and a party not prejudiced and the certificates thereof registered, and the banns published; ¹ the vote of a city council to be by ayes and nays; ² the minutes of the board of supervisors to be read and signed; ³ overseers to prepare alphabetical lists of voters and sign the same; ⁴ certain officers to take deeds of trust on real estate to secure the repayment of loans of school funds; ⁵ an execution against a married woman to direct the levy and collection of the amount against her from her separate property and not otherwise; ⁶ prescribing the form and manner of docketing judgments so as to create a lien on real estate and a priority as to subsequent judgments; ⁷ providing that commissioners to locate a county seat shall meet at a time and place named, a majority to constitute a quorum, by the omission of the clerk may not complain.

In Marchant v. Langworthy, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 646, it was held that an annual meeting of the inhabitants of a school district, is valid, notwithstanding the clerk omits to give notice of it, provided the time and place for holding it was duly fixed at the next preceding annual meeting, and the clerk acts in good faith. The foundation of the meeting is the order of the previous annual meeting, not the posting of the notice by the clerk. The former is indispensable; but not the latter.

1. Rodebaugh v. Sanks, 2 Watts (Pa.) 9. And in Rex v. Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29; 2 M. & R. 230; 15 E. C. L. 151, where a marriage was solemnized by license, one of the contracting parties being a minor, whose father was living, and did not consent to the marriage, it was nevertheless held valid, the statute requiring consent being regarded as directory.

2. Striker v. Kelly, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 9.

3. Arthur v. Adam, 49 Miss. 404.

4. The statute was held directory, as to the signing, and it was said obiter that a departure from an alphabetical order would not invalidate the list. Morgan v. Parry, 17 C.B.334; 84 E.C.L.334.

And the same is true in regard to the time of preparing the list. To hold that an act which required an officer to prepare and deliver to another officer a list of voters on or before a certain day under a penalty, made a list and delivery on a later day invalid would, in effect, put it in the power of the person charged with the duty of preparing it to disfranchise the electors; a conclusion too unreasonable for acceptance. Reg. v. Rochester, 7 El. & Bl. 910; 90 E. C. L. 909; Hunt v. Hibbs, 5 H. & N. 123; Morgan v. Parry, 17 C. B. 334; 84 E.

C. L. 334; Brumfitt v. Bremmer, 9 C. B. N. S. 1; 99 E. C. L. 1; Reg. v. Loft-house, L. R., 1 Q. B. 433; Reg. v. In-gall, 2 Q. B. Div. 199.

That portion of the third section of the Louisiana act of 1852 (an act providing for the subscription by parishes and municipal corporations of the state to the stock of corporations undertaking internal improvements) which requires that the police jury or municipal corporation shall cause to be furnished to the commissioners of election a proper certified list of the authorized voters, is directory merely, and a failure to furnish such a list cannot be regarded as a condition precedent to the validity of the subscription. New Orleans v. St. Rome, 9 La. Ann. 573.

5. Gaines v. Faris, 39 Miss. 403. In this case a note given for such loans, not secured by a deed of trust, was held valid.

So when the statute required a bond to secure the rent of a public bridge, a promissory note given in lieu thereof was adjudged valid. Central Bank v. Kendrick, Dudley (Ga.) 66.

6. Thompson v. Sargent, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 452.

7. Sears v. Burnham, 17 N. Y. 448. In this case the statute required the clerk, at the time of filing the record, to enter in an alphabetical docket a statement of the judgment, containing, among other things, the hour and the day of entering such docket, and provided that "no judgment shall affect any land, tenements, real estate or chattels real, or have any preference as against other judgment creditors, purchasers or mortgagees, until the record thereof be filed and docketed as herein directed." The clerk in entering the transcript of a judgment in the docket, by an error, entered the judgment as of and that they may adjourn to some other place and time, and may adjourn from day to day until the completion of the business before them.¹

If a statute directing the issuing of a warrant against a defaulting collector is, in point of time, directory as to the principal, it is likewise directory in respect to those to be incidentally affected by it.²

Statutes prescribing the time and manner of summoning and selecting jurors;³ the form of bonds of city, county, and municipal officers, and the time of giving same;⁴ and the time of tak-

the 15th of March, 1842, instead of the 15th of March, 1841. It was held that the provisions of the statute were directory merely, and the judgment a valid lien upon the lands sought to be charged, and the judgment creditor did not lose his right of preference as against subsequent judgment creditors.

1. And in Edwards v. Hall, 30 Ark. 31, it was further held that the commissioners have the power to elect a chairman and empower him to fix the time of the next meeting.

2. Looney v. Hughes, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 605; affirmed 26 N. Y. 516.

3. The New York statute relative to balloting for jurors (Sess. 49, ch. 309, § 4), is merely directory, and a violation thereof is no ground for moving to set aside a verdict, unless the verdict is objected to at the time, or there is some abuse or injury to the party moving. Cole v. Perry, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 584. And to the same effect are State v. Carney, 20 Iowa 82; State v. Gillick, 7 Iowa 287. In this latter case the departure from the statute consisted in the clerk's placing the ballots, unfolded, in a hat without top or cover, instead of folded and in a box to be kept for the purpose, as required by law.

In Johnson v. State, 33 Miss. 363, the provision of the local act of Mississippi, 1856, which enacts that grand jurors "shall be summoned at least five days before the first day of the court" at which their attendance is required, was held directory to the sheriff, and for the convenience of the jurors, and not essential to be followed in order to constitute a legal grand jury. To the same effect are Weeks v. State, 31 Miss. 490; State v. Pitts, 58 Mo. 566.

A similar ruling was made on a statute requiring the jury to be selected on the first Monday of July, but which, however, was not chosen until the 8th of August. Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243.

And where the statute required that venires for grand jurors should be issued at least forty days before the second Monday of September annually, a venire issued after the expiration of that time, but in season for service by the proper officer, in accordance with the provision of the statute, was held valid. State v. Smith, 67 Me. 328.

The provisions of the Arkansas criminal code of practice for the protection of jurors from improper influences, viz., that the officer in charge of the jury shall be sworn to keep them together, and to suffer no person to communicate with them on any subject connected with the trial during the adjournment of court; that the court shall admonish them at its adjournment that it is their duty to permit no one to communicate with them on any matter connected with the trial, to hold no conversation among themselves on any subject connected with the trial, to form or express no opinion thereon until the cause is finally submitted to them, are merely directory and cautionary, and a failure to comply therewith will not absolutely or without some evidence of prejudice or injury to the defendant in consequence of the omission, vitiate the verdict or afford ground for a new trial. Thompson v. State, 26 Ark. 323. See JURY AND JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 318, where the question is fully treated.

4. McBee v. Hoke, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 138; Boykin v. State, 50 Miss. 375.

The time so far as the validity of the bond is concerned is merely directory when the statute does not negative its validity if filed at a later time. The giving of a bond is mandatory; the time when it is to be given is directory. Duntley v. Davis, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 229; State v. Churchill, 41 Mo. 41.

And in Chicago v. Gage, 95 Ill. 593; 35 Am. Rep. 182, it is said: "The essence of the thing to be done, that upon which the rights of the public depend, is ing official oaths and the officers by whom they are to be administered,¹ are generally deemed directory.

Provisions concerning the conduct of elections, and the time for certifying the returns, will be held directory except where they are of such a character that a failure to comply therewith will have the effect of preventing or obstructing the complete expression of the popular will.²

the giving of the bond, not the precise manner in which it is done."

In People v. Holley, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 481, it was held that the omission of the sheriff elect to execute his official bond within twenty days after receiving notification of his election as required by statute, did not subject him to the forfeiture of his office as the provision in regard to the time was directory.

But in Texas, it is held that the statute requiring a party elected to office to qualify within a prescribed time will be construed as directory only in a case where, from reasons beyond his control, he cannot qualify within the time allowed, but such construction will not be in any case of neglect or refusal to qualify. Flatan v. State, 56 Tex. 93. See BONDS, vol. 2, p. 448; PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 378, where the question is discussed at length.

1. In Howland v. Luce, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 135, it was held not to be necessary for the clerk of a school district to take the oath prescribed by law within fifteen days from the time of appointment; it is sufficient if he qualifies before any official act is done by him. See also In re Mohawk, etc., R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 143.

And in Canniff v. New York, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 430, the provision of the charter of the city of New York that every person appointed to office under the city government, shall take an oath before the mayor, was held to be directory, and if the oath cannot be so taken, some other officer may administer it. See OATH, vol. 16, p. 1017; PUBLIC OFFICERS, vol. 19, p. 378, for a full treatment of the subject.

2. People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; 97 Am. Dec. 141; Speed v. Hartwell, 12 Mich. 508; People v. Sackett, 14 Mich. 320; People v. Witherell, 14 Mich. 48; People v. Livingston, 79 N. Y. 279; Weil v. Calhoun, 25 Fed. Rep. 865; State v. Baltimore County, 29 Md. 516; Bowles v. Smith (Mo. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 101; Duncan v. Shenk, 109 Ind. 26.

In McCrary on Elections, § 200, it is said that statutes concerning the manner of conducting elections are generally directory, unless a non-compliance is expressly declared to be fatal to the validity of the election, or will change or render doubtful the result.

In Holland v. Davies, 36 Ark. 446, where the statute required the polls to be open until sundown, the closing thereof about two hours before that time was held not to be ground for setting aside the election, in the absence of proof of obstruction or impediment to a fair expression of the popular will. See also Sweepston v. Barton, 39 Ark. 549. And in People v. Cook, 8 N. Y. 69, the outer door of the room where the election was held was closed at sunset as required by statute, but voters already in the room were permitted to vote afterwards; and it was held that the provision in respect to the time of closing the polls was directory, and therefore the election must be deemed valid, in the absence of proof that legal voters were excluded by the closing of the door, or illegal votes were received after sundown. And it was further held that the requirement, that the inspectors, after taking the oath, should appoint two clerks, was directory, and if none could be procured, the election would still be valid—the duties ordinarily to be performed by the clerks, devolving upon the inspectors. That there were no register poll lists at an election; that the judges and clerks did not take any oath; and that there was not transmitted with the returns to the county auditor a list of the qualified voters of the election district, does not invalidate the election or the returns. Taylor v. Taylor, 10 Minn. 107. A statute specifying the manner in which ballots shall be kept after the election, is directory. People v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233.

Where ward inspectors were required by statute to certify the result of the ward elections on the day subsequent to the closing of the poll, or sooner, a certificate not made until the second day thereafter was held valid. Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 41. See also

Statutes requiring the instructions of the court to be delivered to the jury in writing are in some jurisdictions deemed directory, in others, mandatory.¹

Provisions in regard to the assessment and collection of taxes, and the measures preliminary thereto, which are intended for the protection of the tax-payer, to insure an equality of taxation, and

People v. Peck, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 604; 27 Am. Dec. 104.

Sections 10, 18, 64, of the general election law of Kansas (Gen. Sts., ch. 36) relating to the challenging of persons offering to vote, right of candidate and electors to be present in the room where the vote is received, and prohibiting the keeping and selling of intoxicating liquors at the election polls, are directory, and a disregard of them will not necessarily vitiate an election. Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 569.

The board of canvassers may not reject the poll book on account of its being transmitted to the clerk through one not an elective officer. Willeford v. State, 43 Ark. 62.

In Fry v. Booth, 19 Ohio St. 25, the statute under consideration provided that at elections held thereunder, the polls should be opened between the hours of six and ten A. M., and closed at six P. M. of the same day. At a general election for state and county officers held under the act, the judges of election in several townships, at the hour of twelve at noon, after making proclamation to the voters present to that effect, adjourned the election, closed the polls, went away from the place of election to dinner, and after an absence of about one hour, returned to the place of election, reopened the polls, and kept them open during the residue of the day. And the court said: "It was no doubt the intention of the legislature that the polls should remain open during the entire day of the election, between the hours specified in the statute for opening and closing, and good policy as well as the convenience of the voters would seem to require that this legislative intent should be observed. But we are not prepared to say that the closing of the polls for the hour spent at dinner, by the officers of the election, in these three townships, under the circumstances disclosed in this record, is, in law, sufficient to invalidate the election, and disfranchise the voters who did deposit their ballots in the boxes. The statute in this respect may be regarded as directory, and a departure from the strict observance of its provisions does not necessarily invalidate the election, where it appears that no fraud has been practiced and no substantial right violated." See ELECTIONS, vol. 6, p. 255.

1. In Reid v. Reid, 11 Tex. 585; Boone v. Thompson, 17 Tex. 606; Chapman v. Sneed, 17 Tex. 428; Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Dunlavy, 56 Tex. 256, where the language of the statute was simply that "the charge shall be in writing," the provision was held directory, and a violation thereof not assignable as error.

But in Head v. Langworthy, 15 Iowa 235; Hardin v. Helton, 50 Ind. 320; Miller v. Hampton, 37 Ala. 342; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hammer, 85 Ill. 526; Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 636; Mason City Bank v. Kent, 57 Ga. 285; Householder v. Granby, 40 Ohio St. 430; Penberthy v. Lee, 51 Wis. 261, the statutes were adjudged mandatory.

But it should be observed that some of the statutes which are held mandatory contain negative terms, or are otherwise so expressive of command as to leave no room for doubt as to the legislative intent and are subject to the principles stated above. See supra, this title, Negative and Affirmative Terms.

Thus, the statute before the court in Penberthy v. Lee, 51 Wis. 261, provides substantially that the judge shall reduce his charge to writing before giving it to the jury, and a failure to do so shall, on appeal, work a reversal of the judgment rendered upon the verdict, unless a charge in writing is waived by counsel at the commencement of the trial. The court said: "The object of the statute is to enable a suitor in court to preserve of record the precise language of the instructions given by the court to the jury, and thus to avoid the danger of inaccuracy which the suitor would be exposed to if the charge is not reduced to writing until the bill of exceptions is settled. The statute is mandatory in terms. If its requirements are disregarded, its mandate is, 'the judgment shall be reversed.'"

And in Dixon v. State, 13 Fla. 636.

to prevent a sacrifice of his property, are mandatory; while, on the other hand, those intended simply for the guidance of the officers and to promote the efficiency of their work are directory.¹

d. CONFERRING POWERS, PRIVILEGES, OR IMMUNITIES.—A very marked distinction exists between statutes imposing a public duty, such as are discussed in the preceding section, and those conferring powers, privileges, or immunities. Generally speaking, the former are, as has been seen, deemed directory merely, and very justly so, as, apart from the fact that their prescriptions as to the time, manner, etc., of performance are ordinarily not of the essence of the thing required to be done, it would be inequitable to permit parties to suffer by the dereliction of public officers over whose conduct they have no control. But in the latter class these considerations do not obtain, and it is held that where a statute confers a power, privilege, or immuthe act provided that "charges made by judges to juries in all criminal cases, shall be reduced to writing and filed in the case, and shall be exclusively on points of law; and that any violation of this section shall be deemed and construed to be error from which a writ of error may be prayed as of right." See INSTRUCTIONS, vol. 11, p. 236.

1. Doughty v. Hope, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 594; Welker v. Potter, 18 Ohio St. 85; Marsh v. Chesnut, 14 Ill. 223; Wheeler v. Chicago, 24 Ill. 105; 76 Am. Dec. 736; Sibley v. Smith, 2 Mich. 487; Magee v. Com., 46 Pa. St. 358; Pittsburg v. Coursin, 74 Pa. St. 400; Thames Mfg. Co. v. Lathrop, 7 Conn. 550; State v. Metz, 31 N. J. L. 378; State v. Camden, 39 N. J. L. 620; Gale v. Mead, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 160; State v. Harris, 17 Ohio St. 608; Pond v. Ne-gus, 3 Mass. 230; 3 Am. Dec. 131; Chesnut v. Elliott, 61 Miss. 569. See generally TAXATION.

The rule which has been very generally followed in determining what provisions of statutes of this class are mandatory, and therefore conditions precedent to the legality and validity of the proceeding, and those which are directory merely, and do not constitute conditions, was laid down by Chief Justice Shaw in Torrey v. Millbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64. He said: "One rule is very plain and well settled, that all those measures which are intended for the security of the citizen, for insuring an equality of taxation, and to enable every one to know with reasonable certainty for what polls and for what real estate he is taxed, and for what all those who are liable with him are taxed, are conditions precedent, and if they are not observed he is not legally taxed, and he may resist it in any of the modes authorized by law for contesting the validity of the tax. But many regulations are made by statute and designed for the information of assessors and officers, and intended to promote method, system, and uniformity in the modes of proceeding, the compliance or non-compliance with which does in no respect affect the rights of tax-paying citizens. These may be considered directory. Officers may be liable to legal animadversion, perhaps to punishment for not observing them, but their observance is not a condition precedent to the validity of the tax." In this case the assessor's list of valuation and assessment of polls and estates did not exhibit in distinct columns the "true value of real estate" and the "reduced value" as required by statute, but contained a column of the "value" (and the like as to personal estate), and it was held that the irregularity did not render the valuation and assessment void, as the provision was designed to promote system in the modes of proceeding by the officer, and was not intended for the security of the taxpayer.

But where a statute provided that taxes on real estate shall be assessed to the owners, and separate tracts or parcels shall be separately described and valued as far as practicable, and a party owning three separate parcels of land in the same town was taxed for one by distinct assessment and description, and for the other two without any description and without separate assessments, and for non-payment of the tax a part of the first property was sold for the tax on the three parcels; it was held that this provision was for the benefit of the taxpayer and was mandatory, and that the assessment, and consequently the levy and sale, were illegal. Young v. Joslin, 13 R. I. 675.

The provision of the Illinois statute of 1861, that the notice and the application for judgment against delinquent lands shall be to the June term of the court is mandatory and not directory merely, and an application, at a different term, and judgment will not be sustained; and judgment and sale under such circumstances are void and may be attacked collaterally. The ground of the decision was that the design of the statute was that all persons owning lands in the county, looking to the law for their rights, might know certainly when the application would be made, and make such defense as the law entitled them to make, and show cause, if they could, why judgment should not be rendered against their land.

So, of § 43, ch. 242, New York Laws 1823, requiring the comptroller to publish notices stating when the time for the redemption of land sold for taxes will expire, is mandatory and unless complied with, the comptroller's deed passes no title. And it was said in the opinion of the court that it was plain that this provision was for the protection of the landowner whose premises were sold for taxes. It was clearly designed to notify him, if he were ignorant of the sale before, or if he had forgotten, of his peril of losing his property, if he failed to pay, losing it absolutely; in such cases, it is the settled rule that the provision must be complied with or no title passes. See also Cruger v. Dougherty, 43 N. Y. 107.

In Case v. Dean, 16 Mich. 12, the one-mill tax required to be assessed for township, library, and school purposes by the Michigan Comp. Laws, § 2350, was not placed on the tax roll in the column of school taxes as required by law and did not appear by the roll to have been assessed at all. But the amount of taxes stated in the column of state, county, and township taxes was too much, according to the valuation and amount to be raised, by just the amount of a one-mill tax on the valuation of the tracts. It was held that the jury were not at liberty, for the purpose of sustaining the tax title, to find that the one-mill school tax had been added to or included in the state, county, and township taxes, but that the excess in the column of the latter taxes could not be thus explained and that the sale of the land for the taxes was thereby rendered void. The statute requiring this one-mill tax to be stated in the column of school taxes is not merely directory but mandatory; being intended, among other purposes, for the benefit of the tax-payer to enable him to distinguish to this extent the different kind of taxes he should be called upon to pay, and their respective amounts.

In Clark v. Crane, 5 Mich. 151; 71 Am. Dec. 776, where the statute under consideration required the assessors to attach to the assessment roll a certificate stating that they had estimated the real estate "at what we believe to be the true cash value thereof," a certificate stating that they had assessed the real estate "at a sum which, for the purpose of assessing, we believe to be the true value thereof," was held fatally defective. Manning, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Some parts of the tax law are directory, while others are mandatory and must be substantially complied with to give validity to a tax. The law requires all property to be assessed 'at its true cash value.' The object of this, doubtless, is to insure equality of taxation. There cannot be equality of taxation without equality of assessment; and there can be no equality of assessment where all property is not assessed by the same standard, and that standard, the law has wisely fixed, in the present case, and not left to the discretion of the assessors. The object of the certificate appears to be twofold: to authenticate the assessment and to secure this equality in taxation; and with a view to this last object, the assessors are required to state in their certificate that they have assessed the property mentioned in the assessment roll at what they believe to be the true cash value thereof. If this be the object, and we can see no other, the tax-payer alone is interested in this part of the law. It is for his protection. He, and not the public; the other party interested in the tax, is the loser, if his property is assessed at more than it should be. The public neither gain nor lose by this inequality, however great, in the assessment. It is different with the tax-payer. He pays more or less tax than he should pay when his property is assessed at a sum above or below its

nity, the formalities or conditions which it prescribes for its acquisition are imperative, in the sense that non-observance of any of them is fatal to the benefit sought.¹ Thus, the requirements of our copyright laws, as to depositing a copy of the title-page in the proper office, publishing notice of entry, and delivering a copy of the work to the proper officer within the time named, are mandatory; and in England, similar requirements are considered indispensable pre-requisites to a perfect title.² Where an act authorizing the confinement of lunatics prohibited their reception in asylums without medical certificates in a given form, setting forth certain particulars, and among them, the street and number of the house where the supposed lunatic was examined, a certificate which omitted the street and number of the house where the examination took place, was held insufficient to justify the detention of the lunatic.³ The innkeeper whose common-law liability for the goods of his guests is limited, if he posts up a notice as required by the statute, does not obtain the exoneration, if his notice is inaccurate in any material particular.⁴ The same cash value. He has a right to know, not only that his property has not been assessed at more than its cash value, but that the property of no other taxpayer has been assessed at less than its cash value; for, in either case, his tax would be increased and he be made to pay more than he should. The certificate furnishes him with this knowledge, and it is for his protection the certificate is required to state that the property mentioned in the assessment roll has been estimated at its true cash value, and what the law requires to be done for the protection of the tax-payer is mandatory, and cannot be regarded as directory merely."

1. Per Lord Denman, Caldow v. Pixell, 2 C. P. Div. 562. See also cases cited under the section next preceding.

2. Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 591; Ewer v. Coxe, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 487; Jollie v. Jaques, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 615; Baker v. Taylor, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 82. But in an early case, similar provisions were regarded as simply directory, and not essential requisites for securing the copyright. Nichols v. Ruggles, 3 Day (Conn.) 158; 3 Am. Dec. 262.

Under the statute that no proprietor of the copyright should be entitled to sue for the infringement thereof, unless he had made an entry at Stationer's Hall of the title and time of the first publication of the book and the name and residence of the publisher, it was held that a suit was not maintainable where the date of publication was not stated truly, or only the month was stated; or the publishers were not described correctly, that is, neither by the style of the firm nor by the names of the individual partners. Low v. Routledge, 33 L. J. Ch. 725; Mathieson v. Harrod, L. R., 7 Eq. 270; Henderson v. Maxwell, 5 Ch. Div. 892.

So where an act gave to the designers of prints the sole right of printing them for fourteen years after the date of publication, adding "which (day) shall be truly engraved with the name of the proprietor on each plate," it was held that the neglect to conform to this provision was fatal to the copyright. Newton v. Cowie, 4 Bing. 234; 13 E. C. L. 412.

3. Reg. v. Pinder, 24 L. J. Q. B. 148.

4. Section 1 of 26 & 27 Vict., ch. 41, provides that no innkeeper shall be liable to make good to any guest any loss of, or injury to, property brought to his inn to a greater amount, etc., except in the following cases: "Where such property shall have been stolen, lost, or injured, through the willful act, default, or neglect of such innkeeper, or any servant in his employ. Section 3 requires the innkeeper to exhibit a copy of section 1 in a conspicuous part of the hall or entrance to his inn, otherwise he may not claim the protection of section 1. The defendant, an innkeeper, caused a paper, purporting to be a copy of section 1, to be exhibited in the hall or entrance to his inn, but the principles are applicable to corporations in regard to the formalities prescribed for the exercise of the powers conferred upon them.¹

c. REGULATING JUDICIAL PROCEDURE.—Where authority to proceed in courts is conferred by statute, and where the manner of obtaining jurisdiction is prescribed by statute, the mode of proceeding is mandatory and must be strictly conformed to, otherwise the proceeding will be void.² For example, if a statute authorizing an appeal requires the fulfillment of certain conditions, such as entering into recognizances, and giving notice of appeal, non-compliance on the part of the party will be fatal to the appeal.³

There are instances where a like imperative effect has been given to statutes, even where the observance of the formalities was not a condition exacted of the party seeking the benefit of paper was unintentionally misprinted, and the sentence stood: "Where such property shall have been stolen, lost, or injured through the willful default or neglect of such innkeeper, or any servant in his employ"—omitting the word "act" after "willful." In an action against the innkeeper by a guest for property stolen from his bedroom, it was held that the requirement as to notice was mandatory, and that the notice was not such as was contemplated by the law and, therefore, the claim for protection under the statute must fail and the case be dealt with as though the statute had never been passed. Spice v. Bacon, 2 Exch. Div. 463.

1. Hurford v. Omaha, 4 Neb. 336. The Public Health act of 1848 authorizing the local board to enter into all contracts necessary to carry the act into execution, provides certain formalities, among which is that every contract shall be under the seal of the board. And it was held that a contract unsealed was inoperative against the board. And it was said that the power to contract so as to make it binding could not have been exercised if it had not been given by the act; and being entirely a creature of the statute, it could not be exercised in any other manner than that prescribed by the statute. Frend v. Dennett, 4 C. B. N. S. 576. And to the same effect is Cope v. Thames Haven Dock, etc., Co., 6 Ry. Cas. 83; 18 L. J. Exch. 345.

An act which authorized commissioners to curb and pave streets, etc., in a certain district, and gave a lien on the property adjacent for the expenses incurred, contained a proviso that the curbing, etc., should not exceed "three squares at one time." It was held that the proviso could not be regarded as merely directory, but was a limitation of authority, and that the commissioners had no claim for expenditures when the improvement exceeded the limit allowed by the statute. District of Kensington v. Keith, 2 Pa. St. 218.

And under a law authorizing a municipality to grade on the application of a majority of lot-holders on the street, to assess the cost, and enter a lien against the lots abutting on it, it was held that an application by such majority was a condition precedent to the exercise of the power by the council. Pittsburgh v. Walter, 69 Pa. St. 265.

Iowa Code, § 457, provides that cities "shall have power to make regulations against danger from accident by fire, to establish fire districts, and on petition of the owners of two-thirds of the grounds included in any square or block to prohibit the erection thereon of any building, or addition to any building, unless the outer walls thereof be made of brick," etc. It was held that a city, under this provision, could not prohibit the erection of wooden buildings within the limits designated, except on petition of the owners of two-thirds of the grounds; the statutory requirement being mandatory. Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67 Iowa 210; 56 Am. Rep. 341.

2. Norwegian Street, 81 Pa. St. 349.

3. Reg. v. Oxfordshire, 1 M. & S. 446; Reg. v. Carnarvon, 4 B. & Ald. 86; 6 E. C. L. 401; Rex v. Bond, 6 Ad. & El. 905; 33 E. C. L. 242; Seymour v. Judd, 2 N. Y. 465; Mays v. King, 28 Ala. 690; Coffman v. Davanay, 2 How.

the statute, but a duty imposed upon the court or public officer in the exercise of authority conferred upon him. Thus, a statute providing that every warrant issued by a court should be under its seal was held imperative—an omission in this particular invalidating the commitment, and subjecting the person, who had procured it without seeing to it that the court performed its duty of sealing it, to an action for damages to the party aggrieved.¹

f. PARTICULAR WORDS—"SHALL," "MAY," "MUST."—The general principles determining whether a provision in a statute shall be taken as mandatory or directory have been discussed in (Miss.) 854. Compare McCarver v. Jenkins, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 629.

Under the Pennsylvania act of April 1, 1874, a writ of certiorari to a court of quarter session in the matter of the proceedings to vacate and relocate a township road, must be taken within two years from the date of the confirmation of the report of the viewers appointed by the court. And a writ taken more than two years from such date will be quashed. In re Road in Salem Tp., 103 Pa. St. 250.

Construing sections 348 and 337 of the California Practice act together, they provide that an appeal is not effectual for any purpose unless an undertaking be filed, or a deposit made with the clerk within five days after filing the notice. A failure to so file the undertaking or make the deposit will be fatal to the appeal, and it must be dismissed. Elliott v. Chapman, 15 Cal. 383.

When an appeal is claimed from a verdict or judgment rendered in the district court of Maine, and time is given under the statute of that state of 1831, ch. 505, to enter into a recognizance to prosecute the appeal before a justice appointed for that purpose, the recognizance must not only be taken, but must be filed in the clerk's office within ten days after the adjournment of the court, or the appeal cannot be sustained. Knight v. Bean, 18 Me. 219.

General Stat. Minnesota, § 131, p. 467, provides that, "before issuing the writ (of attachment), the judge or court commissioner shall require a bond on the part of the plaintiff with sufficient sureties, conditioned that if the defendant recovers judgment the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant and all damages which he may sustain by reason of the attachment not exceeding the penalty of the bond." It was held that this section was not to be regarded as directory, but there must be a bond with a penalty and a condition, and with two or more sureties. Blake v. Sherman, 12 Minn. 420.

Where the notice to a non-resident defendant to appear was published in the state paper and in another paper different from the one directed by the court, although published at the same place, it was held that an order pro confesso entered against the non-resident defendant who had not appeared, was irregular. And it was said by the court: "The right to an order pro confesso against the defendant who has been proceeded against as a non-resident and who has not appeared, is derived from the statute alone, and to entitle the plaintiff to it he must pursue strictly the steps which the same prescribes. The statute requires the notice to appear, to be published in the state paper and such other paper as the court shall direct." Brisbane v. Peabody, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 109. See APPEAL, vol. 1, p. 616.

1. Ex parte Van Sandan, 1 De G. 303. See generally WARRANTS.

The statute of 5 Eliz., ch. 5, provided that the writ de contumace capiendo shall be brought into the queen's bench and be there opened in the presence of the justices. An omission of this apparently idle ceremony was deemed fatal to the validity of an arrest made in pursuance of the writ though it had been enrolled in the crown office. In re Dale, 7 App. 240.

A statute requiring the person serving a summons to indorse the date of service upon it was held mandatory in Wendel v. Durbin, 26 Wis. 390. But see Hester v. Keith, 1 Ala. 316.

If commissioners authorized to fix the boundaries of a parish, were required by the act to advertise the boundaries which they fixed, and to insert them in their award, and the act declared that the boundaries "so fixed" should be conclusive, a variation between the boundaries set forth in the the foregoing sections. In the notes will be found a list of cases in which the word "shall," as controlled by the subject or context of the statute, has been held to be mandatory, and another in which it has been held to be directory.¹ Elsewhere in this work award, and those advertised would vitiate the award, as the requisites of the act would not have been complied with. Rex v. Washbrook, 4 B. & C. 732; 10 E. C. L. 451. See supra, this title, Statutes Prescribing Time and Mode of Proceeding by Public Officers.

1. In the following cases "shall," as used in statutes and constitutions, has been construed to be imperative or mandatory: United States, Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S. 170; Ex parte Jordan, 94 U. S. 248; The China, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 53; French v. Edwards, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 506; Alabama, Tuscaloosa Bridge Co. v. Olmstead, 41 Ala. 9; Weaver v. Lapsley, 43 Ala. 224; Arkansas, State v. Johnson, 26 Ark. 281; School Dist. v. Bennett, 52 Ark. 515; California, Weill v. Kenfield, 54 Cal. 111; Kenfield v. Irwin, 52 Cal. 164; Georgia, Prothro v. Orr, 12 Ga. 36; 1 Am. Law. Reg. 612; Illinois, Webster v. French, 12 Ill. 301; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; 58 Am. Dec. 571; People v. Starne, 35 Ill. 121; People v. National Sav. Bank, 129 Ill. 618; Indiana, Indiana Cent. R. Co. v. Potts, 7 Ind. 681; Smith v. Noe, 30 Ind. 125; Phelps v. Osgood, 34 Ind. 152; Bush v. Bush, 46 Ind. 83; Nietert v. Trentman, 104 Ind. 398; Iowa, Koehler v. Hill, 60 Iowa 543; Kansas, Shawnee Co. v. Carter, 2 Kan. 115; Darling v. Rodgers, 7 Kan. 592; Robinson v. Perry, 17 Kan. 248; Kentucky, Varney v. Justice, 86 Ky. 596; Maryland, McPherson v. Leonard, 29 Md. 377; Massachusetts, Phillips v. Fadden, 125 Mass. 198; Eames v. Johnson, 4 Allen (Mass.) 384; Michigan, Clark v. Crane, 5 Mich. 151; 71 Am. Dec. 776; Minnesota, Ramsey Co. v. Heeman, 2 Minn. 330; State v. Smith, 22 Minn. 222; Mississippi, Butler v. Craig, 27 Miss. 628; 61 Am. Dec. 527; Shulherr v. Bordeaux, 64 Miss. 59; Missouri, McGee v. Porter, 14 Mo. 612; 55 Am. Dec. 129; State v. Miller, 45 Mo. 495; West v. Ross, 53 Mo. 350; Nebraska, State v. Lancaster, 6 Neb. 474; Nevada, Corbett v. Bradley, 7 Nev. 106; State v. Rogers, 10 Nev. 254; 21 Am. Rep. 738; State v. Fuffy, 19 Nev. 391; New Hampshire, Jones v. Lane, 63 N. H. 331; New Jersey, Buck v. Danzenbacher, 37 N. J. L. 361; State v. Newark, 28 N. J. L. 498; Morris Aqueduct v. Jones, 36 N. J. L. 206; State v. Mayor, etc., of Hoboken, 38 N. J. L. 110; New York, People v. Hills, 35 N. Y. 449; People v. Board of Assessors, 39 N. Y. 81; Petition of Douglass, 46 N. Y. 42; In re Smith, 52 N. Y. 256; In re Anderson, 60 N. Y. 457; People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 177; Morris v. People, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 381; Wood v. Brown, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 428; Ohio, Bloom v. Xenia, 32 Ohio St. 461; McGill v. State, 34 Ohio St. 264; Ex parte Falk, 42 Ohio St. 640; State v. Kiesewetter, 45 Ohio St. 254; Rhode Island, Young v. Joslin, 13 R. I. 675; Texas, Giddings v. San Antonio, 47 Tex. 548; 26 Am. Rep. 321; Peck v. San Antonio, 51 Tex. 490; Fontaine v. State, 69 Tex. 510; West Virginia, Lemons v. State, 4 W. Va. 755; 6 Am. Rep. 293; Wisconsin, State v. Merri-man, 6 Wis. 14; State v. Hilmantel, 21 Wis. 566; State v. Dousman, 28 Wis. 541; State v. Pierce, 35 Wis. 93; England, Cooke v. New River Co., 38 Ch. Div. 61.

In the following cases "shall" has been construed to be discretionary or directory: United States, Wallamet, etc., Co. v. Kittredge, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 44; West Wisconsin R. Co. v. Foley, 94 U. S. 103; Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Hecht, 95 U. S. 168; Alabama, State v. Click, 2 Ala. 26; Limestone Co. v. Rather, 48 Ala. 433; Arkansas, Little Rock v. Willis, 27 Ark. 572; Edwards v. Hall, 30 Ark. 31; Neal v. Burrows, 34 Ark. 491; California, Washington v. Page, 4 Cal. 388; Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 315; People v. San Luis Obispo Co. (Cal. 1875), 3 Cent. L. J. 192; Connecticut, Colt v. Eves, 12 Conn. 243; Donovan's Appeal, 40 Conn. 154; Illinois, Cook v. Hunt, 24 Ill. 550; Whalin v. Maccomb, 76 Ill. 49; Tobin v. People, 101 Ill. 123; Indiana, State v. McGinley, 4 Ind. 11; Kentucky, Railroad Co. v. Warren Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 711; Anderson v. Winfree, 85 Ky. 597; Louisiana, New Orleans v. St. Romes, 9 La. Ann. 573; Maryland, State v. County Com'rs, 29 Md. 516; County Com'rs v. Mee-kins, 50 Md. 42; Massachusetts, Pond v. Negus, 3 Mass. 230; 3 Am. Dec. 131; Fanning v. Com., 120 Mass. 388; Torrey v. Milbury, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 64; Williams v. School District No. 1, 21

Pick. (Mass.) 75; Lowell v. Hadley, 8 Met. (Mass.) 180; Jones v. Varney, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 137; Michigan, Parks v. Goodwin, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 56; Mississippi, Cason v. Cason, 31 Miss. 578; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; Missouri, State v. Murtens, 14 Mo. 94; Cape Girardeau v. Riley, 52 Mo. 424; 14 Am. Rep. 427; Montana, Grant v. Spencer, 1 Mont. 136; New Jersey, Ludlow v. Ludlow, 4 N. J. L. 394; Morrell v. Buckley, 20 N. J. L. 667; Morris Canal v. Van Vorst, 21 N. J. L. 114; Sooy v. State, 38 N. J. L. 324; New York, Striker v. Kelly, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 9; In re Mohawk, etc., R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 135; Gale v. Mead, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 160; Ex parte Heath, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 42; People v. Peck, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 604; 27 Am. Rep. 104; People v. Batchelor, 53 N. Y. 128; 13 Am. Rep. 480; Beal v. Finch, 11 N. Y. 138; Jackson v. Young, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 269; 15 Am. Dec. 473; Ex parte Elmendorf, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 693; People v. Ulster Co., 34 N. Y. 268; In re Kings Co. El. R. Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.) 234; Juliard v. Rathbone, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 101; People v. Cook, 8 N. Y. 89; 59 Am. Dec. 451; Rawson v. Van Ripper, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 370; Ohio, State v. West, 3 Ohio St. 509; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 476; Pim v. Nicholson, 6 Ohio St. 176; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573; Fry v. Booth, 19 Ohio St. 25; State v. Covington, 29 Ohio St. 116; Oshe v. State, 37 Ohio St. 500; Weil v. State, 46 Ohio St. 450; Pennsylvania, Erie Academy v. Erie, 31 Pa. St. 515; Texas, Edwards v. James, 13 Tex. 52; Wisconsin, State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 291; Cameron v. Cameron, 15 Wis. 1; 82 Am. Dec. 652; State v. Stumpf, 21 Wis. 579; Lackawanna Iron, etc., Co. v. Little Wolf, 38 Wis. 152; State v. Davidson, 32 Wis. 120; State v. Pierce, 35 Wis. 93.

English Cases.—A careful English authority formulates the following rules upon an exhaustive study of the English cases: "Whenever a statute declares that a thing 'shall' be done, a natural and proper meaning is that a peremptory mandate is enjoined. But where the thing has reference to the time or formality of completing any public act, not being a step in litigation, or accusation; or, the time or formality of creating an executed contract whereof the benefit has been, or but for their own act, might be, received by individuals or private companies or private corporations, the enactment will generally be regarded as merely directory, unless there be words making the thing done void if not done in accordance with the prescribed requirements." Stroud's Jud. Dict. And in support of these propositions, the learned author cites the following cases:

